However, of the approximately £730 million of direct taxes repaid to charities in the UK in 1997–98, around £680 million was repaid to charities in England, Wales and Northern Ireland. And of the approximately £250 million exemption from inheritance tax of transfers to charities on death in 1997–98, around £220 million was for estates in England and Wales. Of the approximately £600 million business rate relief in 1997–98, around £520 million was for charities in England and Wales.

It is not possible to give a reliable breakdown of the remainder of the reliefs from direct taxes, or of the estimated cost of £200 million for reliefs from VAT through a variety of zero rates and exemptions.

Public Consultations

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if his Department follows Cabinet Office guidance on how to conduct public consultations. [73959]

Ms Hewitt: The Treasury conducts public consultations on a variety of issues with interested parties in a number of ways. The Treasury seeks to follow the best practice principles set out in the CO guidance on "How to conduct written consultation exercises". Less formal consultations, such as the recent regional series of Productivity Road Shows, are also conducted by the Treasury.

Financial Services and Markets Bill

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the jurisdictions referred to in paragraph 2–2 of the Financial Services and Markets Bill Progress report, published by Her Majesty's Treasury in March 1999. [76062]

Ms Hewitt: Both the Treasury and the FSA frequently have meetings with Government officials and regulatory bodies from other key jurisdictions. Many recent contacts have expressed a positive interest in and sought detailed information on the UK reforms.

Credit Suisse First Boston

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the circumstances surrounding the dismissal of James Archer, David Crisanti and Adrian Ezra by Credit Suisse First Boston are being investigated by the Financial Services regulator. [77076]

Ms Hewitt: As a matter of policy the UK Financial Regulators do not comment on the existence of any investigation that may be taking place until it is appropriate to make public details of an investigation that has been carried out.

VAT (Domestic Fuel)

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect on emission levels of the reduction of VAT on domestic fuel. [76381]

Ms Hewitt: The Government estimate that the reduction in VAT on domestic fuel and power from 8 per cent. to 5 per cent. announced in the July 1997 Budget, will increase annual carbon dioxide emissions in 2010 by 240,000 tonnes of carbon, all other things being equal.

Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those people he has appointed to public bodies since 1 November 1998, indicating the positions to which they have been appointed and if they receive remuneration. [76465]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested is as follows.

Public body	Name	Position	Whether remunerated
Financial Services Authority	Moira Black CBE	Member	Yes
	Gillian Nott	Member	Yes
	Shamit Saggar	Member	Yes
Policy Holders Protection Board	Andrew Young	Member	Yes

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each Department the level of funds that are, according to paragraph 4.22 of the Comprehensive Spending Review, (i) allocated for the delivery of services and (ii) non-allocated, for each of the years from 1997–98 to 2001–02. [68390]

Mr. Milburn: All funds allocated in the Comprehensive Spending Review are for the delivery of modern, efficient and effective public services. Challenging objectives and targets for the delivery of these services were set out in individual departments' service agreements and published in "Public Service for the Future" (Cm 4181), along with their allocations for 1997–98 to 2001–02.

Environmental Tax Reform

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into public attitudes to environmental tax reform. [74818]

Ms Hewitt: The Government are committed to exploring the scope for using economic instruments to secure environmental objectives, as set out in the Statement of Intent on Environmental Taxation published in July 1997. This commitment has been taken forward in an open and consultative way with the publication of a number of consultation documents on environmental tax issues.

The 1999 Budget included the largest ever package of environmental tax reforms. These reforms followed detailed research and full consultation with all interested parties. This package will make a substantial contribution to the Government's aim of protecting the environment, now and for future generations.

Euro Banknotes

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what action he is taking to ensure that the Bank of England is not disadvantaged in competition for future printing of euro banknotes by the United Kingdom's position outside the euro zone; and if he will make a statement; [75460]

(2) what plans he has to improve the competitive position of the Bank of England in the printing of banknotes; and if he will make a statement. [75461]

Ms Hewitt: The Bank's competitive position is already excellent and their involvement in preparatory work will ensure they are not competitively disadvantaged.

Public Sector Debt

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the level of net public sector debt per capita in each of the last 25 years for which figures are available. [74876]

Ms Hewitt: The table shows the figures requested.

Public sector net debt per capita

Year	Net debt (£ billion)[1]	Population (thousands)[2]	Net debt per capita (£)
1971	38.7	55,928	692

Money Transfers (Jersey)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the administration of Jersey about the use of companies based in Jersey for the money transfers by the Russian Central Bank; and if he will make a statement. [76631]

Ms Hewitt: Treasury officials have been briefed by the Jersey authorities about press allegations concerning a Jersey based company FIMACO used by the Central Bank of the Russian Federation to manage assets. Regulation of the financial services industry and company registration in Jersey is the responsibility of the Jersey Financial Services Commission.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many civil servants in his Department have been invited to waive the Working Time Directive requirement to work less than 48 hours a week on 17 consecutive weeks; how many civil servants in his Department have refused to waive the requirement; and what is the total cost of compliance with the Directive. [76798]

Ms Hewitt: 58 staff in HM Treasury have been invited to waive the Working Time Directive requirement to work less than 48 hours a week. To date, 31 staff have signed an agreement to disapply this limit and nine staff have refused. Compliance costs are not kept centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Euro Coins

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 2 March 1999, Official Report, columns 643–44, on euro coins, what sanctions against those who damage or destroy the image of the euro are provided for by the reproduction regime; and if he will make a statement. [75637]

Ms Hewitt: Enforcement of the copyright in the common face design of euro coins will be ensured by participating member states or, in the case of non-participating member states, by the Commission, according to national legislation and in compliance with an agreed reproduction regime.

Single Currency

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the economic advantages of remaining outside the single currency; and what account he has taken of these in formulating policy on economic and monetary union. [73599]

Ms Hewitt: In his statement to the House of Commons on 27 October 1997, Official Report, columns 583–85, the Chancellor of the Exchequer set out the Government's policy on Economic and Monetary Union. He said that the potential benefits for Britain of a successful single currency are obvious in terms of trade, transparency of costs and currency stability. The determining factor as to whether Britain joins a single currency is the national economic interest and whether the economic case for doing so is clear and unambiguous.

Electronic Red Boxes

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will name the Ministers in his Department who are regular users of electronic Red Boxes. [76178]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given to him by the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 16 March 1999, Official Report, columns 651–52.

Select Committee Reports

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean) and the hon. Member for Chingford and Woodford Green (Mr. Duncan Smith) of 16 March 1999, Official Report, columns 641–42, from whom the PPS to the Chancellor received the draft Social Security Committee report. [78157]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Chingford and Woodford Green (Mr. Duncan Smith) on 16 March 1999, Official Report, columns 641–42.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensioners

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many pensioners will benefit from the uprating of the minimum income for pensioners in line with earnings at the next benefit uprating; and what this number is as a proportion of the total number of pensioners receiving the basic state pension; [78039]

(2) how many pensioners will become eligible for income support directly as a result of the uprating of the minimum income for pensioners. [78040]

Mr. Timms: The information is not currently available. The information will be available as soon as the forecasts on which the requested figures are based have been published in the Departmental Report on 30 March. I will write to the hon. Member after publication of this Report.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the uprating of the minimum income for pensioners will be in line with earnings at each annual uprating. [78038]

Mr. Timms: We have made it clear that our aim is to uprate the Minimum Income Guarantee in line with average earnings over time as resources allow. The increase next April will provide a further boost to the incomes of the least well-off among today's pensioners on top of this year's increase of three times the rate of inflation. We will review the economic situation and make decisions for future years at the appropriate time.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioner households have weekly incomes of (a) £65 to £70, (b) £71 to £75, (c) £76 to £80, (d) £81 to £85, (e) £86 to £90 and (f) over £90 in the case of single pensioner households, and of (i) £110 to £120, (ii) £121 to £130, (iii) £131 to £140, (d) £141 to £150 and (e) over £150 in the case of pensioner couples. [78041]

Mr. Timms: The information is in the tables.

Number of single pensioners in selected income bands

Range of income	Number of single pensioners (Thousands)
£65 to £70	180
£71 to £75	200
£76 to £80	220
£81 to £85	130
£86 to £90	130
Over £90	3,080

Number of pensioner couples in selected income bands

Range of income	Number of pensioner couples (Thousands)
£110 to £120	80
£121 to £130	80
£131 to £140	110
£141 to £150	160
Over £150	2,100

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10,000, although they are not necessarily accurate to that degree.
2. 'Income' refers to the net weekly income of the single or couple.
3. Pensioners are defined as single (non-cohabiting) people over State pension age (65 and over for men, 60 and over for women), and couples (married or cohabiting) where the head is over State pension age.
4. Estimates are based on incomes reported in the 1996/97 Family Resources Survey, uprated to April 1998 prices.

Disablement Pension (Asbestosis)

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) men and (b) women, broken down by occupation, (i) are in receipt of a disablement pension for asbestosis and (ii) were made an award in the last year for which figures are available. [69932]

Mr. Bayley [pursuant to his reply, 15 February 1999, c. 535–36]: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Labourers in mining, construction, manufacturing and transport	96	96	0

Notes:

1. Figures are not available by occupation or attributable agent for the total numbers of people receiving benefit related to asbestos.
2. Asbestos related diseases that are prescribed for the purposes of industrial injuries Disablement Benefit are Pneumoconiosis (prescribed disease D1), where the attributable agent is asbestos; Diffuse mesothelioma (prescribed disease D3); Carcinoma of the lung (prescribed disease D8); and Bilateral diffuse pleural thickening (prescribed disease D9). The table shows new diagnoses for benefit purposes of these asbestos-related diseases, which have attracted an award of benefit in the 1997-98 year, by gender and occupation.

Widows' Benefits

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost of (a) delaying the halving of the additional pension payments for widows whose spouse dies after 5 April 2000 until 2010, (b) delaying the reduction of the additional pension payments for widows whose spouse dies after 5 April 2000 and instead reducing the payments by 10 per cent. each year until 2004 and (c) delaying the reduction of the additional pension payments for widows whose spouse dies after 5 April 2000 until 2010 and then reducing the payments by 10 per cent. each year up until 2014. [75664]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 9 March 1999]: The information is in the table.

£ million

	Cumulative cost	Continuing cost per annum
	2000-09	2010	2020	2030	2040	2050
(a)	5,620	1,130	740	350	110	20
(b)	1,710	180	130	50	10	0
(c)	5,620	1,190	950	470	150	30

Notes:

1. Costs are supplied by the Government Actuary's Department.
2. No allowance has been made for income related benefit offsets.
3. Costs are rounded to nearest £10 million and are presented in 1998-99 benefit rates.
4. Costs include SERPS pension paid to widows and widowers above the state pension age and to widows below state pension age.
5. The estimates are based on current legislation.
6. Real earnings growth of 1.5 per cent. has been assumed.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to amend the housing benefit system. [77738]

Angela Eagle: Our aim is to modernise Housing Benefit so that it is fairer, better administered, secure and promotes the incentive to work. A Housing Green paper will be published later this year which will discuss options for reforms to Housing Benefit within the context of housing policy.

Single Gateway

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what budgets have been allocated for each of the three phases of the Single Gateway pilot schemes. [78115]

Angela Eagle: The additional funding for the 12 single Work-Focused Gateway pilots, that is the amount allocated on top of that which would be required to administer benefits in the pilot areas under the current arrangements, has been allocated as follows:

£ million

Year	Allocation
1998-2000	32.49
2001-02	23.07

These amounts do not differentiate between the three phases. They include information technology and capital expenditure over the period of the pilots. The funding allocation for 1998–99 and 1999–2000 has been combined.

Unclaimed Benefits

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) of 8 March 1999, Official Report, column 52, on unclaimed benefits, what factors caused the error in the data; and when he expects to conclude his review of relevant data. [77995]

Angela Eagle: Take up of income related benefits is calculated by comparing an estimate of the number of people entitled to, but not receiving, each benefit with the number of people known to be claiming it.

The error was caused by a failure to include, in our calculations of entitlement, payments to widows from a deceased spouse's former employer (widows occupational pension). The failure occurred when these payments were first recorded separately from other occupational pensions in the Family Resources Survey, from which these estimates are made.

This caused the Department's statisticians to under-estimate the incomes of some pensioners, leading to an over-estimation of benefit entitlement. This resulted in an over-estimation of the numbers of pensioners not claiming Income Support to which they are entitled.

We expect to publish a revised set of figures for 1996–97 in May.

Bereavement Benefits

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost of increasing the disregard in the bereavement benefits to (a) £20, (b) £30, (c) £40 and (d) £50. [78031]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the table.

The estimated total costs of increasing the proposed disregard for Widowed Parent's Allowance

£ million

WPA disregard in all benefits	Year 1	Year 2	Year 3	Long run
£20	15	15	15	10
£30	25	25	25	15
£40	40	40	40	25
£50	55	55	55	35

Notes:

1. The proposed disregard for Widowed Parents Allowance is £10 for Income Support and £15 for Housing Benefit, Council Tax Benefit and Working Families Tax Credit. The figures estimate the cost of increasing these rates for these benefits to the requested levels.
2. The estimates presented are broad orders of magnitude. They are rounded to the nearest £5 million and are our best estimate of the cost of increasing the disregards, but are nonetheless subject to a degree of uncertainty.
3. Estimates use information from the 1996–97 Family Resources Survey, the Income Support Quarterly Statistical Enquiry and forecasts from the Government Actuary's Department. The offset ratio is assumed to remain constant across the years in order to provide illustrative estimates.

Green Transport Plan

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what involvement fleet managers have had in drawing up his Department's Green Transport Plan. [77968]

Angela Eagle: The Department's Environment Officer is also the Department's fleet manager and had considerable involvement in developing the 27 Departmental Green Transport Plans which will be in place by 31 March 1999.

Miners (Compensation Payments)

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if social security benefits previously paid out will be recoverable from the compensation payments recently announced for miners suffering from (a) emphysema, (b) bronchitis and (c) vibration white finger; and if he will make a statement. [78137]

Mr. Bayley: It has been a long standing principle that victims of personal injury or disease should not be compensated twice for the same need. Consequently compensation paid to miners for loss of past earnings, cost of care and loss of mobility may be reduced to take account of the liability to repay benefits paid in respect of the disease in question. Compensation for pain and suffering will be paid in full.

Disability Allowance Review

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) for what period disability living allowance recipients whose cases were examined by the Benefit Integrity Project will be excluded from the new checking regime; [77889]

(2) what estimates he has made of the likely level of savings or increased expenditure arising from the new disability allowance review regime. [77891]

Mr. Bayley: We are committed to achieving a coherent, fair and sensitive system for the delivery of Disability Living Allowance (DLA). This will encompass new methods of claiming and periodic inquiry arrangements to be applied ultimately to all cases in payment. The Benefits Agency is working to establish the proper frequency with which individuals should be asked about their current needs so that, in the future, inquiries can be made at the most appropriate time and new claimants can be advised from the outset when inquiries are likely to be made in their case. Developmental work is well underway, in consultation with organisations of, and for, disabled people.

As a first step in the process, a prototype periodic inquiry system will be introduced in April 1999 for existing DLA cases, followed in the Summer by trials to test new ways of handling claims for DLA and Attendance Allowance (AA). Both strands of work will be closely monitored and evaluated. Developments and data from each strand will be used to design the final overall process.

People whose cases were examined under the Benefit Integrity Project (BIP) will not, at the outset, be subject to the new periodic inquiry arrangements. Once the full new system is introduced, they are likely to be allocated a periodic inquiry frequency on the same basis as new claimants for DLA and AA. It is, however, too early to provide details.

We have made it clear that the main objective of these changes is to ensure that benefit is being paid properly. They are not savings driven. There will be additional administrative costs as the new inquiry process develops. The effect of the new processes on programme spending will be factored into the expenditure forecasts in the normal way.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Global Services and JMT Charlesworth Ltd.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what meetings his Department have had with Global Services and JMT Charlesworth Ltd.; what were the terms of the grants made to these companies over the past two years; and if he will make a statement. [71805]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 16 February 1999]: JMT Charlesworth applied in 1997 to the British Chambers of Commerce (BCC) for a DTI funded Export Marketing

Research Scheme grant. The grants are open to British companies with fewer than 500 employees wishing to research specific overseas markets and are payable after the work has been successfully completed. The company received a grant of just over £1,000 from BCC following their study of the market for used, refurbished trucks for sale to Eritrea and Ethiopia.

Mansion House Speech

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received following his speech at the Mansion House on 2 February. [75180]

Mr. Byers: Several.

Trade Promotion

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the last occasion on which a Government Minister led a trade delegation to (a) Lithuania, (b) Malawi, (c) Malaysia and (d) Mauritius; and what future trade delegations are planned. [76544]

Mr. Wilson: (a) Lithuania—I will be leading a trade mission to Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania from 26 to 30 April 1999. The mission will look at opportunities for British companies in ports and railways development and it is hoped that more than 15 high level British companies will take part in the mission. This is the first occasion that a Government Minister has led a trade delegation to the Baltic States during this administration.

(b) Malawi—There have been no Minister-led trade delegations by a Government Minister in this Administration and none are currently planned.

(c) Malaysia—The last occasion on which a Government Minister led a trade delegation to Malaysia was in September 1995 by the then President of the Board of Trade, Ian Lang.

Thirteen DTI sponsored trade missions are planned during FY 1999–2000.

(d) Mauritius—There have been no trade delegations led by a Government Minister in this Administration. Future DTI supported outward trade missions to Mauritius are planned for July 1999, November 1999 and March 2000.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the last occasion on which a Government Minister led a trade delegation to (a) Kazakhstan, (b) Kyrgyzstan, (c) Lebanon and (d) Lesotho; and what future trade delegations are planned. [76541]

Mr. Wilson: (a-b) The last occasion on which a Government Minister led a trade delegation to Kazakhstan and/or Kyrgyzstan was when Viscount Goschen, then Minister for Aviation and Shipping, led a delegation to Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan and Uzbekistan between 9–16 September 1995.

There are no firm plans for future trade delegations led by a Minister to visit either country. The Department of Trade and Industry plans to support 4 trade missions to Kazakhstan in 1999–2000, two of which will visit Kyrgyzstan. They are as follows:

Date	Trade missions
April 1999	Agricultural sector working group mission to Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan and Uzbekistan
October 1999	Infrastructure and Energy projects Directorate oil and gas trade mission to Kazakhstan
October 1999	British Water Trade mission to Kazakhstan
March 2000	British Consultants Trade mission to Kazakhstan and Kyrgyzstan

Additionally, the Chairman of the British Overseas Trade Board will be visiting Central Asia in September with a trade mission. He is expected to include Kyrgyzstan in the visit.

(c) The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, my hon. Friend the Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale), led a mission of British Water companies to Lebanon in December 1998. My Department plans to support five trade missions to Lebanon in the financial year 1999–2000:

Date	Trade missions
11–24 April 1999	Business Link Gloucester
18–22 May 1999	Middle East Association
3–15 October 1999	Business Link Milton Keynes
16–24 November 1999	Nottingham Chamber of Commerce and Industry
January 2000	Birmingham Chamber of Commerce and Industry

(d) There have been no Minister-led trade delegations to Lesotho and there are no plans for one in the future.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the last occasion on which a Government Minister led a trade delegation to (a) Colombia, (b) Cuba, (c) Cyprus, (d) Dominica and (e) the Dominican Republic; and what future trade delegations are planned. [76526]

Mr. Wilson: The then Minister for Trade led a trade delegation to Colombia in 1996. There are no plans for another Minister-led trade delegation in the near future. The following trade missions are planned:

Date	Trade missions
May 1999	ABHI/LATAG
September 1999	British and Colombian Chamber of Commerce
November 1999	London Chamber of Commerce
March 2000	Northern Development Company

The then Minister for Science and Technology led a trade delegation to Cuba in 1994. I will be leading a trade delegation in April 1999 and the Caribbean Trade Advisory Group (CARITAG) are planning a trade mission in June.

There have been no recent Minister-led trade delegations to Cyprus, Dominica or the Dominican Republic and none is planned in the near future.

The London Chamber of Commerce and Industry are planning a trade mission to Cyprus in September 1999 and CARITAG are organising a trade mission to the Dominican Republic in June 1999.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the last occasion on which a Government Minister led a trade delegation to (a) Peru, (b) Qatar, (c) Saudi Arabia and (d) Singapore; and what future trade delegations are planned. [76556]

Mr. Wilson: The information is as follows:

Peru

The last occasion a Government Minister led a trade delegation to Peru was November 1996.

My Department plans to support four trade missions to Peru in the financial year 1999–2000:

	Date
BEAMA	14–18 June 1999
Birmingham Chamber of Commerce	27 September–1 October 1999

Northern Ireland Chamber of Commerce and Industry and the British Consultants Bureau	20–22 November 1999
Birmingham Chamber of Commerce and Industry	January 2000 (tbc)

Kenya

There have been no recent Minister-led trade delegations to Kenya.

My Department is planning to support one trade mission to Kenya in the financial year 1999–2000.

Business Link Sussex 1–10 February 2000.

Kuwait

There have been no recent Minister-led trade delegations to Kuwait. However, Kuwait has been visited by many UK Ministers and I plan to visit next month.

My Department plans to support three trade missions to Kuwait in the financial year 1999–2000.

	Date
Birmingham Chamber of Commerce and Industry	11–13 September 1999
Sheffield International Trade Centre	2–4 November 1999
Middle East Association	18–21 February 2000

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the last occasion on which a Government Minister led a trade delegation to (a) Ecuador, (b) Egypt, (c) Estonia and (d) Gambia; and what future trade delegations are planned. [76529]

Mr. Wilson: The information is as follows:

Ecuador

There have been no recent Minister-led trade delegations to Ecuador.

My Department has no plans to support any trade missions to Ecuador.

Egypt

I led a trade delegation to Egypt in February 1999.

My Department is planning to support eight trade missions to Egypt in the financial year 1999–2000:

	Date
North Staffordshire Chamber of Commerce	16–20 May 1999
Northern Ireland Chamber of Commerce and Industry	June 1999
Business Link Sussex	12–16 September 1999
South of England Exporters Association	19–29 September 1999
Northern Ireland Development Company	28 November–2 December 1999
London Chamber of Commerce	30 January–3 February 2000
The Guage and Toolmakers Association	February 2000
Business Link Barnsley and Doncaster	Date to be confirmed

Estonia

I will be leading a trade mission to Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania from 26 to 30 April 1999. The mission will look at opportunities for British companies in ports and railways development and it is hoped that more than 15 high level British companies will take part in the mission.

No other trade missions are being passed by my Department.

Gambia

There have been no recent Minister-led trade delegations to the Gambia.

My Department has no plans to support any trade missions to the Gambia.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the last occasion on which a Government Minister led a trade delegation to (a) Algeria, (b) Argentina, (c) Australia, (d) Bahrain and (e) Bangladesh; and what future trade delegations are planned. [76520]

Mr. Wilson: There has been no Minister-led trade mission to Algeria during the past 10 years. There are no trade missions planned for Algeria.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Transport in London, led a trade delegation to Argentina in July 1998. There are 8 trade missions planned to Argentina during the next financial year:

	Date
Trade International Northern Ireland	April 1999
Latin American Trade Advisory Group/ABHI	May 1999
Northern Development Company	May 1999
Mid Yorkshire Chamber of Commerce and Industry	July 1999
Southern Derbyshire Chamber/BL North Derbyshire	September 1999
Birmingham Chamber of Industry and Commerce	November 1999
British Argentine Chamber of Commerce	November 1999
London Chamber of Commerce and Industry	March 2000

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Wales, my hon. Friend the Member for Neath (Mr. Hain) led a trade mission to Australia in October last year. The following 12 missions are planned for the coming year:

	Date
The Northern Offshore Federation	19–23 April 1999
The Sports Industries Federation	21–25 June 1999
Association of British Healthcare Industries	5–9 July 1999
Business Link Sussex	30 August–3 September 1999

Australia and New Zealand Trade Advisory Committee (ANZTAC)	22–26 November 1999
Liverpool Chamber of Commerce and Industry	7–11 February 2000
Business Link Shropshire	13–17 March 2000
Birmingham Chamber of Commerce and Industry	20–24 March 2000
The Scottish Council Development and Industry (SCDI)	date not yet decided

My hon. Friend the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs opened a British Week event in November last year in Bangladesh. One trade mission is planned this year:

Birmingham Chamber of Commerce and Industry
6–13 November 1999.

The last visit by a Minister to Bahrain was undertaken by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment, the hon. Member for Leeds, East (Mr. Mudie), in November 1997. The following four missions are planned for the coming year:

	Date
Coventry and Worcester Chamber of Commerce	28–30 September 1999
Thames Valley Chamber of Commerce International	22–24 January 2000
Middle East Association	22–25 February 2000
Rotherham Business Link	5–8 April 2000

I commend the hon. Member to the Overseas Trade Services website (http://www.dti.gov.uk/ots) on which a list of future missions, seminars and trade fairs is displayed for all our major markets.

Sombrero Island

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 9 December 1998, Official Report, column 199, on the island of Sombrero, if he will make a statement about officials' discussions with the Government of Anguilla. [76629]

Mr. Battle: Officials from the British National Space Centre are in contact with the Government of Anguilla on the outer space aspects of the request by the US company Beal Aerospace to lease Sombrero Island for the purpose of launching commercial satellites. A meeting was held in London on 10 December between UK Government Departments and representatives of the Governor and Government of Anguilla to discuss the process and timetable for considering the application. Representatives of Beal Aerospace and of the Non-Governmental Organisations were also present.

I understand that subsequent discussions have also been held by officials of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office with the Government of Anguilla on this and on other aspects of this unique proposal. My officials continue to be in contact when appropriate.

Discussions are continuing on the full implications of the project.

Ilisu Dam, Turkey

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria are applied by the Export Credits Guarantee Department in reaching decisions on giving support for the Ilisu Dam project in Turkey. [77133]

Mr. Wilson: The Export Credits Guarantee Department will employ its normal underwriting criteria to ensure that the provision of support for this project involves an acceptable risk. Part of the underwriting process involves looking, with other Export Credit Agencies, at environmental issues, including social issues, such as the resettlement of the local population and protection of cultural heritage, as well as the economic and political risks involved. Ministers will be consulted.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish a full environmental and social impact assessment before granting export credit insurance for British firms involved in the Ilisu Dam project in Turkey. [77079]

Mr. Wilson: I do not propose to publish a full environmental and social assessment on this project. We are working on the basis of documents which have been produced by other parties to the project and which are not our property. However, we shall be reviewing very carefully the environmental and social aspects of this project.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will adopt World Bank policies on (a) environmental assessment, (b) involuntary resettlement and (c) the protection of cultural heritage for the screening of projects receiving support from the Export Credits Guarantee Department. [77132]

Mr. Wilson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 11 February 1999, Official Report, columns 410–11.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if it is part of the standard procedure that projects considered for support by the Export Credits Guarantee Department are assessed in respect of their compliance with the OECD's guidelines for the conduct of multinational enterprises. [77081]

Mr. Wilson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 11 February 1999, Official Report, columns 410–11. ECGD is aware of the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises, but it is not part of its normal underwriting procedures to assess compliance with these. HMG (through DTI) are currently engaged, together with their OECD partners, in the review of the Guidelines. One of the issues under discussion is the broader question of how Governments can encourage greater awareness and observance.

One of the main aims of the procedures ECGD is developing is to raise the awareness of UK exporters, investors and overseas buyers of environmental issues.

Waste Tyres

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what safe forms of disposal for waste tyres the Government are promoting. [75963]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 16 March 1999]: There are a number of options for handling waste tyres. These options include retreading a used tyre to give it another life, energy recovery in the form of electricity generation or as fuel in cement kilns, recycling and re-use. The Government believe that all these options have an important role to play in meeting the 100 per cent. recovery target for waste tyres that the EU landfill Directive will bring. Together with industry, in the form of the Government/Industry Scrap Tyre Working Group, we are considering what steps may be necessary to improve our scrap tyre recovery performance from its level of 74 per cent. in 1997 to the target of 100 per cent., which it is anticipated we will need to achieve by 2003.

Soft Timbers

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the tonnage of soft timbers imported from (a) Latvia, (b) Lithuania and (c) Estonia during each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [77200]

Mr. Wilson: It is possible to differentiate most, but not all, imported timbers between softwood and other timber. For those categories which can be distinguished, available figures for the imports of softwood from the Baltic States are:

(thousand metric tons)

	1995	1996	1997
Latvia	352	449	718
Lithuania	38	73	97
Estonia	68	93	161

Source:
Eurostat Intra & Extra EU Trade

The figures cover Standard International Trade Classification (Rev3) 247.30, 247.40, 248.20 and 248.30.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the output figures of softwoods for the UK timber industry over each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [77201]

Mr. Wilson: Information on the output of UK sawmills is available in "Product Sales and Trade, PRA17", published by the Office for National Statistics. A copy is held in the Library of the House. The latest year for which data is available is 1996.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what reports he has assessed of illegal dumping of imported softwoods onto the UK market; and if he will make a statement. [77205]

Mr. Wilson: I am aware of the difficulties being experienced by the UK soft wood industry and have had discussions with their representatives. However, it is the responsibility of the European Commission to investigate complaints about allegedly dumped imports into the EU. So far as I am aware the industry has not made a complaint to the European Commission about the dumping of soft wood.

Pains Wessex

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the licensed production agreements that Pains Wessex has established in other countries, indicating the products which the agreements cover. [77238]

Dr. Howells: Companies wishing to license overseas production of their products do not require DTI approval, nor are they required to notify DTI of agreements entered into.

However, I would also refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Small Firms, Trade and Industry on 12 January 1999, Official Report, columns 149–50.

Wind Turbines

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 1 March 1999, Official Report, column 571, on the potential inclusion of offshore wind energy in NFFO, if he will introduce a support scheme for long-term investment in wind turbine manufacture. [77271]

Mr. Battle: The Government are already supporting the commercial development of wind energy in the UK under the Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation (NFFO). At 31 December 1998, there were 58 wind projects operational, comprising 138 MW Declared Net Capacity. In addition, a further 69 wind projects, comprising 368 MW of capacity were contracted under NFFO-5 which I announced last September.

Support for manufacturers for research and development of wind turbine technology is available under my Department's New and Renewable Energy Programme. As referred to in my answer of 17 March 1999, Official Report, columns 700–01, total DTI expenditure on wind energy projects in 1997–98 was £1.5 million.

Support under the Department's Regional Selective Assistance (RSA) scheme is also available. This is a discretionary scheme aimed at attracting investment and creating/safeguarding jobs in the Assisted Areas. Guidance notes and application forms for this scheme can be obtained from local Business Links or Government Offices.

Prison Labour

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the Governments his Department made representations to in 1998 on the use of prison labour in the manufacture of goods imported into the United Kingdom. [77600]

Mr. Wilson: My Department has neither made nor received representations about the import of prison made goods.

Argentina

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the visits made to Argentina in 1998 by Ministers in his Department. [77599]

Mr. Wilson: There were no visits to Argentina by Ministers in my Department during 1998.

Northern Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what checks are made on goods imported into the United Kingdom to ensure they were not manufactured in the occupied area of Northern Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [77601]

Mr. Wilson: None.

Export Promotion Directorate

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many visits abroad have been made by officials in the Export Promotion Directorate since 1 January. [77746]

Mr. Wilson: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff are employed in his Department's Export Promotion Directorate; and of these how many are (a) women and (b) from ethnic minorities. [77745]

Mr. Wilson: The Department currently employs 632 staff in the Export Promotion Directorates, of these (a) 255 are female and (b) 118 are known to be from ethnic minorities.

Exports (Gulf States)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his Department's export promotion activities in (a) Oman, (b) Bahrain, (c) Saudi Arabia and (d) the UAE. [77744]

Mr. Wilson: Our export promotion activities for these markets are contained in the Markets and Sectors Matrix, published on 4 March, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. We provide a range of help for exporters to all these markets, including targeted market information, market research services and, where appropriate, support for missions and trade fairs.

Petrol Retail Prices

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the percentage change in pre-tax petrol retail prices over the last two years. [78007]

Mr. Battle: Excluding duty and VAT, unleaded petrol prices have fallen by 32 per cent. between February 1997 and February 1999.

Oil Prices

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the percentage change in oil prices over the last two years. [78109]

Mr. Battle: The average price of crude oil, acquired by UK refineries, fell by 53 per cent. between February 1997 and February 1999.

Gas-fired Power Stations

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will (a) list the consents he has refused for gas-fired power stations and (b) estimate the proposed investments in each station by those applying for the consents. [78013]

Mr. Battle: In accordance with the policy set out in the White Paper entitled "Conclusions of The Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation and Government Response to fourth and fifth Reports of the Trade and Industry Committee" (Cm 4071) the following proposals have not been granted clearance:

Barking—154 MW (black start and open cycle gas turbine plant)

AES Partington—380 MW (combined cycle gas turbine plant)

Keadby II—770 MW (combined cycle gas turbine plant)

Spalding—800 MW (combined cycle gas turbine plant)

Fleetwood—1,000 MW (combined cycle gas turbine plant).

The level of investment involved is a commercial matter for the companies.

Energy Regulator

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what preparations are being made by the Energy Regulator in respect of his responsibilities under the Competition Act 1998; what increase in staff is required; and what action is being taken to co-ordinate policy with the Director General of Fair Trading. [77688]

Mr. Battle: The Office of Gas Supply (Ofgas) and Office of Electricity Regulation (OFFER) are members of the Concurrency Working Party (CWP), chaired by the Office of Fair Trading. The CWP is working to ensure that a consistent approach is being taken by all regulators on areas of training, internal procedures for the investigation of cases, IT requirements and guidance for industry. At present it is unclear if further staff will be required in Ofgas and OFFER to undertake work resulting from the prohibitions in the Competition Act coming into force in March 2000.

Naturally, the Director General of Electricity and Gas Supply is aware of the need to ensure that the appropriate level of trained staff is in place to deal with these new responsibilities. A guideline, "Concurrent Application to Regulated Industries", which deals with how regulators work with the Director General of Fair Trading (DGFT) and with each other, has been produced by the CWP and issued by the DGFT. In February, the DTI issued a consultation document "Concurrency: consultation on the possible need and scope for regulations".

New Roads and Street Works Act 1991

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many representations from local authorities complaining about the provisions of the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991 he has received since 1 May 1997. [78056]

Mr. Battle: My Department has received one representation from a local authority.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Civil Court Fees

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what estimate he has made of the cost to the Legal Aid Fund of civil court fees in the next financial year; [77344]

(2) what is the estimated cost to the Legal Aid Fund of civil court fees in (a) the current and (b) each of the last three financial years. [77345]

Mr. Hoon: As I told my hon. Friend on 8 February 1999, Official Report, column 14, the Legal Aid board does not record separately the amounts paid from the Legal Aid Fund in respect of civil court fees; court fees are recorded under the general heading of 'disbursements'. Therefore no reliable estimate of the cost to legal aid of civil court fees is possible.

County Courts

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department how many county courts are due for closure in the current financial year. [77350]

Mr. Hoon: Seven county courts have closed during the current financial year. No further closures are planned for the remainder of this financial year.

Access to Justice

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the recommendations made by the Law Commission in its 1994 report "Administrative Law, Judicial Review and Statutory Appeals" and by Lord Woolf in Chapter 18 of his 1996 report "Access to Justice". [77082]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor has decided to establish a full Review of the High Court 'Crown Office List', which includes, for example, habeas corpus and the judicial review of administrative decisions. The Review, under the chairmanship of Sir Jeffery Bowman, will be fundamental. It will consider, not only the recommendations made by the Law Commission and Lord Woolf, but also the Rules, procedures, jurisdiction, organisation and work of the Crown Office List.

Green Transport Plan

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what involvement fleet managers have had in drawing up his Department's Green Transport Plan. [77962]

Mr. Hoon: There are separate Green Transport Plans for the Headquarters of the Lord Chancellor's Department, the Court Service and the Public Trust Office. All fleet managers have been consulted in drawing up the plans.

Freemasons

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what the latest figures are for the declaration of membership of the freemasons among the judiciary, together with the numbers from whom replies have not yet been received; and if he will break down the figures between (a) the professional judiciary and magistrates and (b) men and women. [78053]

Mr. Hoon: All serving members of the judiciary were invited by the Lord Chancellor to declare on a voluntary basis whether they were freemasons. Responses are still being processed and analysed. The latest figures available are given in the table, but these remain subject to revision in the light of new replies and further analysis. In addition, all new appointees to judicial office are now required as a condition of appointment to state whether or not they are freemasons, and if not, required to notify the Lord Chancellor if they subsequently join. Declarations obtained from new appointees are also in the process of being collated.

DEFENCE

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's estimate was of the cost of answering the question from the hon. Member for Chichester of 17 March 1999, Official Report, column 689, concerning the waiving of the working time directive (Ref. 76811); and if he will provide a breakdown. [78048]

Mr. Spellar: The cost to my Department's budget of answering individual parliamentary questions is not held centrally, however, the advisory cost of limit answering a parliamentary question is £500.

Compensation Claims

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Mid-Norfolk (Mr. Simpson) of 21 January 1999, Official Report, column 529, on outstanding compensation cases, if he will indicate the year of submission of each claim for compensation on the grounds of (a) post-traumatic stress disorder and (b) physical injury; and if he will categorise them according to the geographical region where it is alleged the injuries were sustained. [78174]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 22 March 1999]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 8 February 1999, Official Report, column 17.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer on Iraq of 18 March 1999, Official Report, column 810, what evidence he has received of Saddam Hussein attempting to use his air force in 1999 for repressing his own people; and to which people he is referring. [78367]

Mr. George Robertson: The no-fly-zones were established in April 1991 (north) and August 1992 (south) in support of UN Security Council Resolution 688 which condemned Saddam Hussein's brutal repression of his own people. This repression involved extensive use of helicopter gun ships against the Kurdish minority in the north as well as both fixed wing aircraft and helicopter gun ships against Sh'ia muslims in the south. Since the end of December 1998, over 170 Iraqi aircraft have violated the no-fly zones. Coalition patrols have successfully prevented any of these aircraft from attacking the Kurdish minority in the northern no-fly zone or the Sh'ia muslims in the southern no-fly zone. However, given the extensive history of brutality by Saddam's regime, there is no reason to believe that he would not resume these tactics were we to cease patrols.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 18 March 1999, Official Report, column 811, on no-fly zones, what agreement he has sought from the UN that Rules of Engagement should be entirely a national matter. [78364]

Mr. George Robertson: None.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the approximate weight of ordnance fired against targets in Iraq on Tuesday 16 March. [78249]

Mr. George Robertson: UK forces did not launch or drop any ordnance against Iraqi targets on 16 March.

Military Exports (Private Flights)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what records are kept regarding the export of military, police or security goods from RAF airfields by private companies. [77245]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

Customs declarations are lodged for exports from military airfields of goods originating in the UK on the same basis as exports from civil airports. They are retained for a minimum period of three years.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Departmental Report

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Attorney-General when he expects his 1999 departmental report to be published. [78497]

The Attorney-General: I can confirm that copies of my departmental report have been placed in the Libraries of the House today.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Jack: To ask the Attorney-General what proportions of cases put by the police to the Crown Prosecution Service for prosecution are rejected. [76343]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service discontinued 12 per cent. of cases completed in magistrates courts in 1998, almost unchanged from the figure recorded for each of the four preceding years.

More than half of discontinued cases are unable to proceed because witnesses fail to appear in court, refuse to give evidence, or change their evidence; defendants produce documents proving their innocence in motoring cases on the day of the trial; evidence is excluded because of irregularities in its collection; or there are gaps in the prosecution case which cannot be filled by the police. In these circumstances, the Crown Prosecution Service has no choice but to discontinue proceedings.

The number of cases discontinued against the opinion of the police is very small; a survey conducted in 1994 showed that the police objected to discontinuance on only 4 per cent. of occasions when they were consulted.

Hamilton v Al Fayed Case

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Attorney-General what factors underlay the decision of the Solicitor General to intervene in the Hamilton v Al Fayed case. [77739]

The Solicitor-General: The Attorney-General intervened before the Court of Appeal in this case, on behalf of the Speaker and the Authorities of the House of Commons, as it raised fundamental constitutional issues as to the respective jurisdictions of Parliament and the Courts. It was important that such issues should not be decided by default. The Speaker and Authorities of the House of Commons have a direct interest in protecting the privileges of the House, which were directly in issue in the appeal.

Before deciding whether to intervene, the Attorney-General took into account the judgment of Mr. Justice Popplewell in the High Court, together with representations made to him following that judgment by the Clerk of the House.

PRIME MINISTER

Al Shifa

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 10 March 1999, Official Report, columns 364–65, on the Al Shifa factory, if he will identify the international terrorists to whom he refers. [77103]

The Prime Minister: The US Government have stated that they took action against international terrorist groups which had played a key role in the US embassy bombings in Kenya and Tanzania. They had reason to believe that these groups were planning further terrorist attacks against US and other citizens.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 10 March 1999, Official Report, columns 364–65, on Al Shifa, what discussions he has held with the US Administration since the strike on Al Shifa concerning the compelling evidence that the plant was being used for the production of chemical weapons materials. [77104]

The Prime Minister: It is established practice under section 1(c) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information not to disclose or discuss information received in confidence from foreign governments.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 10 March 1999, Official Report, column 364–65, on Al Shifa, to which places he was referring, as the bases for terrorist organisations. [77105]

The Prime Minister: The US Government have stated that their airstrikes last August against targets in Afghanistan and Sudan were against camps and facilities linked with groups who had played a key role in the US embassy bombings in Kenya and Tanzania killing over 200 innocent people.

WALES

Green Transport Plan

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what involvement fleet managers have had in drawing up his Department's Green Transport Plan. [77964]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The Welsh Office does not run a large fleet of vehicles and therefore does not have a Fleet Manager. However, the Department's car purchasing and hiring arrangements reflect a concern for the environment. Current practice is to replace petrol driven vehicles with those fitted with catalytic converters and run on unleaded petrol. All vehicles are regularly serviced and fuel consumption, mileage and maintenance costs are closely monitored. These policies will be reflected in the Department's Green Transport Plan.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

SSA Formula

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has received the final report of the independent review of the standard spending assessment formula; and if he will make a statement. [78532]

Mr. Michael: Yes, I have placed copies of the report in the Library of the House.

The Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government Finance will meet on 29 March to consider how the report's recommendation should be taken forward, although final decisions on changes to the formula for 2000–01 and later years will be for the National Assembly for Wales and local government, through the Partnership Council.

Driving Wales Forward

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the cost of implementing the potential road programme identified in Driving Wales Forward; and if he will make a statement. [78573]

Mr. Hain: I am placing copies of tables in the Library of the House which give the requested information on a constant price base up to the year 2011–12.

The tables cover maintenance expenditure, schemes for making better use of the network, safety schemes and small scale improvements, as well as the major schemes included in the "short term" programme set out in Driving Wales Forward. That document also announced the Government's intention of undertaking corridor studies in relation to several other major road schemes in the programme inherited from the previous administration. The cost of implementing those schemes has been included in order to show the full potential costs of the trunk road programme.

Following the transfer of functions, decisions on whether these or any other schemes should proceed will be matters for the National Assembly.

Road Noise

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will adopt noise reduction criteria as they apply in England for road schemes in Wales. [78574]

Mr. Hain: A preliminary analysis of the criteria adopted to deal with the worst problems of noise on English trunk roads indicates that no trunk road sites in Wales currently suffer from noise levels sufficiently high to meet those criteria. We will be extending our analysis of noise levels adjacent to the trunk road network in Wales and considering the scope for adapting the criteria to meet specific Welsh circumstances.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

IT Services

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chairman of the Information Committee what estimate he has made of the savings to public funds which could be generated by the central provision of information technology services and equipment for hon. Members' offices. [77932]

Mr. Allan: Last year, the Information Committee conducted an inquiry into options for provision of IT services and equipment for Members. The Committee's report (HC, 1998–99, 76) was published on 18 December 1998. The Committee did not find convincing evidence for savings to public funds from central provision of IT. It did receive evidence that more value could be gained from the same investment if there were more co-ordination of purchases. It therefore recommended that a catalogue of standard equipment should be negotiated with suppliers and made available to Members. This catalogue is now in preparation and is expected to be published before the summer recess.

SCOTLAND

Farm Support

12. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of the farming industry to discuss support for Scottish farms. [76317]

Mr. Dewar: I last met representatives of the farming industry on 4 March at the SNFU annual dinner at which I spoke.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Beef Ban

13. Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Scottish Parliament will have the power to lift the beef-on-the-bone ban in Scotland. [76318]

Mr. Galbraith: Yes, from 1 July 1999 this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Salmon Anaemia

14. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he has taken to tackle the spread of infective salmon anaemia in the salmon farming industry. [76319]

Mr. Macdonald: We are obliged by European law to eradicate the disease and we have put in place monitoring and control measures designed to that end. It is encouraging that the last confirmed outbreak was in September of last year but there are no grounds for complacency and we shall continue to monitor and maintain the control measures.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Social Exclusion

15. Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to tackle the problems of those who suffer social exclusion, despite living within areas of general affluence. [76320]

Mr. Macdonald: We are committed to tackling poverty and exclusion wherever it occurs. Initiatives like the New Deal, the Working Families Tax Credit, the National Minimum Wage and the highest ever increase in Child Benefit and the minimum income guarantee for all pensioners, index-linked to average earnings will help individuals and families in every community in Scotland.

From 1 July 1999 action taken forward under the social inclusion strategy will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

22. Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to ensure that financial support is provided to enable voluntary organisations which provide community services relevant to social exclusion to continue to function and to plan ahead. [76327]

Mr. Galbraith: The importance of voluntary organisations in helping to deliver the range of policies aimed at tackling social exclusion in Scotland is already recognised in the high level of funding which is provided by the Government. Scottish Office funding for the sector totals nearly £283 million a year, with £23 million in direct aid and a further £260 million provided through other funded agencies. These funds support organisations working in the fields of social welfare, health promotion, homelessness, the provision of social housing, rural poverty and urban deprivation.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

National Grid for Learning

16. Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the national grid for learning. [76321]

Mrs. Liddell: Building the NGfL in Scotland began in 1998 and good progress is being made towards achieving the published targets by 2002.

From 1 July this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Sentences (Women)

17. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Association of Sheriffs in Scotland concerning sentencing policy for women. [76322]

Mr. McLeish: I meet Sheriffs regularly and discuss various matters. Of course, sentencing is a matter for the courts. The Government's role is to ensure that the courts have a range of effective disposals for offenders. We have set up a project in Glasgow under the chairmanship of Professor Sheila McLean to tackle the particular issues related to female offenders. We have introduced Supervised Attendance Orders to all sheriff and district courts throughout Scotland, to ensure that an alternative to custody for fine default is always available.

From 1 July 1999 this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Low Pay

18. Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the incidence of low pay in Scotland. [76323]

Mr. Macdonald: The Government's commitment to helping the low paid is reflected in the introduction of the National Minimum Wage on 1 April. It is estimated that the National Minimum Wage will benefit 157,000 employees in Scotland.

Lockerbie

19. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress he has made towards organising a trial in relation to the Lockerbie affair; and if he will make a statement. [76324]

Mr. McLeish: Construction work on the prison which will be used to house the accused temporarily after their arrival is now complete. Design work for the remainder of the site is well advanced.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Empty Homes Initiative

20. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of Scottish local government to discuss the empty homes initiative. [76325]

Mr. Macdonald: My officials have recently met on a number of occasions with other members of the Empty Homes Initiative Advisory Group to assess bids for funding under the Initiative. The Advisory Group includes two Scottish local government representatives nominated by the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Bed Blocking

21. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received anent the problem of bed blocking. [76326]

Mr. Galbraith: Since the beginning of this year I have dealt with 5 letters and 6 Parliamentary Questions relating in whole or in part to the question of delayed discharge from NHS continuing care.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Poverty

23. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his policies to reduce the number of people in Scotland who are living in poverty, as defined by his Department. [76328]

Mr. Macdonald: The Government are taking forward a wide-ranging and well-resourced programme of action to tackle poverty and social exclusion in Scotland. Our programme is described in detail in the report "Social Inclusion: Opening the door to a better Scotland", published on 1 March. Further action will be taken forward under our social inclusion strategy, published on the same day.

Manufacturing Industry

24. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with the Scottish Trades Union Congress relating to the performance of the Scottish manufacturing industry. [76329]

Mr. Macdonald: My right hon. Friend's last formal meeting with the Scottish Trades Union Congress was on 18 January, during which a range of issues affecting the Scottish manufacturing industry were discussed. Ministers and officials are, of course, also in regular informal contact with the STUC.

Genetically Modified Food

25. Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many local authorities have banned the use of genetically modified foods in schools. [76330]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Secretary of State for Scotland

26. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the role of the Secretary of State for Scotland will be at Westminster following the establishment of the Scottish Parliament and Executive. [76331]

Mr. Dewar: The Government set out their proposals for the role of the Secretary of State for Scotland after devolution in the White Paper, "Scotland's Parliament" (cm 3658). The Secretary of State will focus on promoting communication between the Scottish Parliament and Ministers on the one hand and the UK Parliament and Government on the other on matters of mutual interest; and on representing Scottish interests in reserved areas.

New Deal

27. Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the numbers of young people entering (a) full-time jobs and (b) further education, as a result of the new deal. [76332]

Mr. Macdonald: Figures to the end of December 1998 show that 5,700 young people had secured jobs, the vast majority of which were full-time and a further 2,549 had entered the full-time education or training option.

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people (a) entered and (b) completed the New Deal scheme in (i) 1997 and (ii) 1998. [77832]

Mr. Dewar: The New Deal programmes for young people and those aged 25 and over began in 1998. Figures to the end of December 1998 show that 22,700 young people and 6,900 people aged 25 and over entered the programmes.

By the end of December 1998, 8,500 young people and 1,200 people aged 25 and over had left the New Deal programme, 44 per cent. of whom had moved into jobs.

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people have obtained full-time employment as a result of the New Deal scheme. [77833]

Mr. Dewar: Figures to the end of December 1998 show that 5,700 young people and 470 long-term unemployed people aged 25 and over had secured jobs, the vast majority of which were full-time.

EU Structural Funds

28. Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with ministerial colleagues on the next programme for European Union structural funds. [76333]

Mr. Macdonald: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has been closely involved with ministerial colleagues developing and agreeing the UK negotiating priorities on Structural Funds reform. In addition, the Secretary of State has met with the German Minister responsible for Structural Funds reform in January. I have met with the appropriate Swedish Minister twice and the Finnish Minister once in recent months. The Secretary of State discussed Structural Funds reform with Commissioner Wulf-Mathies early last year and I have followed that up with a further meeting in January.

Scottish Beef

29. Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the progress he has made in promoting Scottish beef. [76334]

Mr. Macdonald: The Government are making every effort in conjunction with the industry to re-establish the market for Scotch beef in Europe. My noble Friend the Minister for Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries in Scotland led a successful industry mission to Italy earlier this month. Italy was one of the best markets for Scotch beef before the export ban.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Departmental Drinks

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what stocks of (a) wine, (b) spirits and (c) beer and other alcoholic beverages are held by his Department; what is their value in each case; and if he will make a statement. [74244]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 3 March 1999]: The following represents the total stocks of wines, spirits and beers and other alcoholic beverages held in the hospitality cabinets of all 7 Scottish Office Ministers in St. Andrew's House, Victoria Quay, Meridian Court and Dover House:

Total purchase price (£)

	Ministerial drinks cabinets	Stocks held centrally for dinners and receptions
Wines	27.75	1,225.90
Spirits	265.28	776.59
Beers and other alcoholic beverages	56.83	286.34

These costs are part of the provision of £75,000 made for hospitality in The Scottish Office for the current financial year. That provision, of course, also covers the other more significant costs associated with hospitality, i.e. food, catering staff costs, venue hire, flowers, etc., of all official receptions, lunches and dinners hosted by The Scottish Office during 1998–99. I consider this to be reasonable provision for maintaining acceptable standards of hospitality for official visitors and guests, including representatives of foreign Governments.

Timber Industry

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures his Department has taken to assist the UK timber industry since May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [77202]

Mr. Macdonald: Scottish Office support to assist the timber industry in Scotland is channelled through the Enterprise Network. I have asked the Chairmen of Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise to write to the hon. Member.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Primary Class Sizes

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of children in primary 1 classrooms in Scotland who will benefit from the extra funding to reduce class sizes to 30 pupils or under from summer 1999. [76314]

Mrs. Liddell: This Government have already reduced by more than 5,000 the number of primary 1, 2 and 3 children educated in classes with more than 30 pupils. By working together with authorities and providing new money—£4 million this year and a further £48 million over the next three years—we will meet our commitment that no 5, 6 or 7 year old will be educated in a class of more than 30 by August 2001.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Sentencing Policy

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the members of the committee established under Lord MacLean to review the sentencing and treatment of serious violent and sexual offenders. [78296]

Mr. McLeish [pursuant to his reply, 19 March 1999, c. 841]: The membership details in the previous reply were incorrectly reproduced.

The following have accepted my invitation to serve on Lord MacLean's Committee:

Mr. Andrew Brown, Chief Constable, Grampian Police

Mr. David Burns QC, Advocate

Dr. Derek Chiswick, Consultant Psychiatrist, Edinburgh Healthcare NHS Trust

Professor David Cooke, Professor of Forensic Psychology, Glasgow Caledonian University

Mr. David Crawford, Head of Operations, Social Work Department, Renfrewshire Council

Ms Jeane Freeman, Parole Board member, Chief Executive, APEX

Professor Christopher Gane, Professor of Scots Law, University of Aberdeen

Mr. William Gilchrist, Regional Procurator Fiscal, North Strathclyde

Mr. Roger Houchin, Governor, Barlinnie Prison

Mr. Murray Macara, Solicitor Advocate, Beltrami and Co.

Mr. Jamie Malcolm, Nursing Officer, Mental Welfare Commission for Scotland

Dr. Linda Treliving, Consultant Psychotherapist, Dundee Healthcare NHS Trust

Sheriff Charles Stoddart, Director of Judicial Studies.

Arrangements for taking evidence will be announced later.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Law Centres (North Yorkshire)

35. Mr. Grogan: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the provision of law centres in North Yorkshire. [76340]

Mr. Hoon: There are currently no law centres in North Yorkshire. The Lord Chancellor's Department is not directly responsible for the provision of law centres. They are not-for-profit organisations established within communities in response to particular needs, and funded from a number of different sources. The Department has provided grant support to a small number of law centres since the 1970s.

Immigration Adjudicators

36. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to ensure the effective use of immigration adjudicators' time while explanatory statements from the Home Office are delayed. [76341]

Mr. Hoon: The adjudicators plan to use this opportunity to reduce the number of outstanding cases, to undertake training and to assist the Immigration Appeal Tribunal.

Legal Aid

37. Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what measures he is taking to ensure that the proposed reduction in approved legal aid practices does not result in geographical inequality of access to legal aid. [76344]

Mr. Hoon: We are intent on providing access to quality assured legal service providers for those who qualify for help from public funds. Over seven thousand firms have already applied to join the bid panel for the first round of contracts. We expect to let over five thousand for family work alone. Comprehensive coverage will be achieved by matching legal provision to community need. There will not be a shortage of providers and the needs of all geographical areas will be catered for.

Immigration Appellate Authorities

38. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he is taking to encourage more women to apply for appointment as regional adjudicators to the immigration appellate authorities. [76345]

Mr. Hoon: My right hon. and noble Friend the Lord Chancellor wishes to see more women appointed to all levels of the judiciary, including the Immigration Appellate Authority. His guiding principle remains that judicial appointments are made solely on merit. He has already announced a number of measures designed to encourage more applications from women practitioners, including more flexible arrangements for some part-time judicial sittings and the development of work-shadowing and mentoring schemes.

Magistrates Court, Lichfield

39. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will visit Lichfield to meet the Lichfield Magistrates Bench to discuss the dispensing of justice in Lichfield; and if he will make a statement. [76346]

Mr. Hoon: I am always willing to consider any invitation to meet magistrates.

Magistrates courts are locally managed by magistrates courts committees under the provisions of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997. It is for each Magistrates Courts Committee to decide how best to deploy its resources in order to carry out its statutory responsibility to provide an efficient and effective service to court users. Decisions concerning the future and number of magistrates courts in their area are for the relevant MCC to determine. A local authority that contributes financially may appeal to the Lord Chancellor against a proposed closure. The procedure for such appeals is set out in section 56 of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997. In the absence of an appeal, however, the Lord Chancellor plays no part in the process.

Young Offenders

40. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the average time taken from charging to conviction for juveniles in (a) April 1997 and (b) at the latest date for which figures are available. [76347]

Mr. Hoon: The exact information requested is not available. Information on delay in Crown Court proceedings is not available broken down between juvenile and adult defendants, and therefore this answer includes only information on magistrates' courts.

The Lord Chancellor's Department Time Intervals Survey collects information on the duration of criminal cases completed in magistrates' courts in sample weeks of each February, June and October. The date of conviction is not available; instead the answer is based on the date of completion, which includes sentence, dismissal, committal, discontinuance and other final decisions in magistrates' courts.

The accompanying table gives average times from charge to completion for defendants in indictable cases in the Youth Court. Seasonal variations in the figures mean that assessments of trends are best made between surveys conducted at the same time of year.

Average number of days from charge to completion for charged defendants in indictable cases in the Youth Court, 1997 and 1998

Year	Survey	Average number of days from charge to completion
1997	February	101
1997	June	93
1997	October	90
1998	February	91
1998	June	81
1998	October	80

Notes:
1. Excludes summonsed defendants.
2. Cases where offence to charge was over 10 years, or where charge to first listing or first listing to completion was over 1 year, are excluded from the analysis.

Public Appointments

41. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department for how many public appointments the Lord Chancellor is responsible; and how many such appointments he has made since he took office. [76348]

Mr. Hoon: The latest edition of the Cabinet Office publication, "Public Bodies", specifies that, as at 1 September 1998, there are 1,818 non-judicial positions in non-departmental public bodies for which the Lord Chancellor is responsible.

The Lord Chancellor has made 496 appointments to NDPBs since he came to office on 2 May 1997. This number does not include other appointments, such as judicial appointments; or appointments the Lord Chancellor may make to bodies for which other Ministers are responsible.

Dispute Resolution Arrangements

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to promote alternative dispute resolution; and if he will make a statement. [77872]

Mr. Hoon: This Government's radical programme of reform to modernise the civil justice system will encourage the use of alternative dispute resolution in appropriate cases through the exercise of the courts' new case management powers, the reform of civil legal aid, and the development of the Community Legal Service. What further steps, if any, should be undertaken to promote alternative dispute resolution is a matter currently under consideration.

Environmental Offences (Sentencing and Fines)

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what guidelines have been issued to magistrates in respect of appropriate sentences and fines for those committing environmental offences. [77674]

Mr. Hoon: Guidelines for magistrates are in the form of judgments by the higher courts, or contained in the guidelines issued by the Magistrates Association. Local benches may also formulate guidelines for local use. I am not aware of any guidelines for magistrates on environmental offences other than those which have been issued in the Nottinghamshire Magistrates Courts Service.

Judges

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to review the retirement age of judges; and if he will make a statement. [77868]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor has no plans to review the retirement age of judges. The retirement age was changed by the Judicial Pensions and Retirement Act 1993, which came into force on 31 March 1995. This Act established a normal compulsory retirement age of 70 (except where a lower age is specified in the statutory conditions of tenure for a particular office) for all judicial office holders initially appointed on or after that date, subject to a power given to the Lord Chancellor to extend or re-extend service for a year at a time up to a limit of 75. Under the transitional provisions, judges appointed before 31 March 1995 retain their pre-existing retirement age.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) House of Lords judges, (b) Court of Appeal judges, (c) High Court judges, (d) circuit judges, (e) District judges and High Court masters and (f) stipendiary magistrates are presently serving; and of those, how many and what percentage in each case (i) are women, (ii) are from ethnic minorities, (iii) have Oxbridge degrees, (iv) had public school education and (v) were Queen's Counsel before appointment. [77866]

Mr. Hoon: The available information is set out in the table.

Figures showing the number of judicial officer holders who have Oxbridge degrees, had a public school education or were Queen's Counsel before appointment are not available. Information of this kind is held on individual person records and is not collated centrally. It could therefore be obtained only at disproportionate cost. In any event, the information would be incomplete as details of secondary education are no longer collected.

	In post 1 March 1999	Women		Ethnic Minorities[1]
		Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage
(a) House of Lords Judges	12	0	0	0	0
(b) Court of Appeal Judges	35	1	2.9	0	0
(c) High Court Judges	98	7	7.1	0	0
(d) Circuit Judges	562	36	6.4	4	0.7
(e) District Judges	379	52	13.7	5	1.3
& High Court Masters	24	0	0	0	0
	403	52	12.9	5	1.2
(f) Stipendiary Magistrates Metropolitan & Provincial	93	13	14	1	1.1

[1] Details of ethnic origin are provided on a voluntary basis and have been collected only since October 1991.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the average (i) age and (ii) length of professional experience on appointment of (a) High Court and (b) circuit judges currently serving. [77867]

Mr. Hoon: There are currently 98 High Court judges. Their average age is 59 years and on appointment their average length of professional experience since they were called to the Bar or admitted as a solicitor was 28 years. There are currently 562 Circuit Judges. Their average age is 58 years and their average length of professional experience on appointment was 26 years.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what formal training (a) House of Lords judges, (b) Court of Appeal judges, (c) High Court judges, (d) circuit judges, (e) district judges, (f) High Court masters and (g) part-time judges in categories (c) to (f) have in each case received on the new civil justice system to be introduced in April 1999. [77871]

Mr. Hoon: Judicial training is the responsibility of the Judicial Studies Board (JSB), which is an independent non-departmental public body and is chaired by Lord Justice Henry.

The JSB held a series of residential seminars on the new civil justice procedures during January and February 1999 which were attended by nearly all full-time judges exercising civil jurisdiction. Those attending comprised 29 Court of Appeal judges, 83 High Court judges, 352 circuit judges, 387 district judges and 20 High Court masters and registrars. A separate seminar was held on 15 March for judges of the technology and construction court.

The JSB will hold a series of 22 one day seminars in April, May and June 1999 on the new civil justice procedures which will be attended by all 1,400 part-time judges exercising civil jurisdiction, and by those few full-time judges who were unable to attend the residential seminars.

The JSB has not given training to House of Lords judges.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what arrangements are in place to monitor judicial competence and performance; what plans he has to review these arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [77869]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor believes that any such arrangements must strike an appropriate balance between the obligations of the judiciary to the public and the overriding constitutional principle of judicial independence which means that judges must be able to determine each case fairly and on its merits, without fear of improper intervention. Almost all judicial decisions are subject to appeal or review enabling higher courts to comment on or redress judicial decisions or conduct. The work of part-time judges provides opportunities for their performance and, therefore, their suitability for appointment to full-time office to be assessed. The Lord Chancellor has decided to review the scope for refining and improving the arrangements for the appraisal of part-time judicial office holders, and in that context has endorsed a pilot scheme involving more structured arrangements for the performance appraisal of deputy District Judges which he hopes to extend in due course.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what arrangements are in place to provide continuing education for judges; what plans he has to review those arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [77870]

Mr. Hoon: Judicial education is the responsibility of the Judicial Studies Board (JSB), which is an independent non-departmental public body and is chaired by Lord Justice Henry.

The JSB provides continuing education for judges through a programme of seminars on criminal, civil and family law which are attended by Circuit Judges, District Judges, Stipendiary Magistrates, Recorders, Assistant Recorders, Deputy District Judges and acting Stipendiary Magistrates. In general, full- and part-time Judges attend training courses run by the JSB every three years.

The JSB draws up a strategy, covering three years, which is reviewed annually. In the light of the strategy the JSB draws up an annual plan. Both the strategy and annual plan are sent to the Lord Chancellor, who considers the performance targets and allocates resources to the JSB in the light of the plans and the overall resources available to him.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Gene Patenting

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of gene patenting. [74830]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 5 March 1999]: The Patents Act 1977 lays down the requirements which must be met to obtain patents for inventions in all fields of technology. Patents may be obtained for inventions which are new, not obvious and have industrial applicability. However, the Act excludes certain matter from patent rights. This includes plant and animal varieties and discoveries where there is no accompanying technical step, such as the mere discovery that a gene exists in nature. Any patent can be challenged before the courts, on the grounds that it does not meet the requirements laid down by the Patents Act. In July 1998, an EC Directive on the Legal Protection of Biotechnological Inventions was adopted. This Directive clarifies and harmonises the patent legislation as it applies to biotechnological inventions in all Member States. However, the Directive will not change what is and what is not currently patentable in the United Kingdom.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list by title the unpublished reports into aspects of genetic modification which are held by his Department. [75099]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 8 March 1999]: It is not the practice of Governments to release details of information relating to internal policy analysis, as is made clear in the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

BMW

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will ensure that, as a condition for any grant, BMW will sell cars in the UK at prices equal to or below the prices charged for the same cars elsewhere in the European Union. [76758]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 15 March 1999]: The offer of support for Longbridge is based upon being satisfied that the project will meet a number of key criteria, including the improvement of skills levels, improvements in productivity and the securing of substantial investment by BMW. It would be inappropriate, however, to place individual competitive restraints on Rover/BMW as a condition of any aid package.

A recent report by the European Commission on car prices in the European Union showed that price differences had significantly decreased since the previous report but that the UK continued to be the most expensive market for many models. We shall be encouraging the Commission, as part of the evaluation on the cars block exemption, to identify the reasons for these price differences.

Packaging Proposals

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment he has made of the impact on costs to industry of Post Office proposals for the packaging of veterinary, medical and other samples; [77224]

(2) what clarification his Department has received from the Post Office of packaging requirements for pathological specimens; and if he will make a statement. [77225]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 17 March 1999]: This is an operational matter for the Post Office, which is proposing to introduce changes in transport and packaging requirements for diagnostic specimens and infectious substances in order to ensure compliance with national and international requirements on the safe transport of these substances. Discussions are continuing between officials of the Post Office, the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, the Health and Safety Executive and the Civil Aviation Authority to ensure both that the requirements for the safe transport of infectious and diagnostic substances are met and that costs to industry are minimised.

Renewable Energy Sources

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department is preparing a White Paper on renewables; and if he will make a statement. [77901]

Mr. Battle: I plan to publish a consultation document on my review of renewable energy shortly, which will analyse the status and prospects for renewables, and present options for developing renewables further.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what reports he has received from British Nuclear Fuels in respect of its current collaboration with Pangea Resources to establish a repository for high level nuclear waste in Australia. [77979]

Mr. Battle: BNFL's involvement in the Pangea project is a matter for the company's management. They have kept my Department in touch with developments from time to time.

European Scrutiny Committee

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if (a) Ministers, (b) special advisers and (c) civil servants saw the European Scrutiny Committee questions brief in advance of the appearance of the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for North Swindon (Mr. Wills), before the Committee on 16 February. [77847]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 19 March 1999]: Neither Ministers, special advisers nor civil servants saw the European Scrutiny Committee questions brief in advance of my appearance. However, it has been a common but not universal practice over a long period for Committees to agree to give officials an indication of the broad areas they intend to cover at the hearing to ensure that the evidence session is as effective and productive as possible. I was informed of the likely broad areas of questioning in advance of the European Scrutiny Committee hearing on Tuesday 16 February.

Clothing and Textile Industry

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what help his Department is providing to the United Kingdom textile industry to assist it to compete. [77470]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 18 March 1999]: The DTI is currently funding around twenty projects to encourage the growth and competitiveness of the UK textiles and clothing industry. These projects cover research into product innovation and development, design, education and training, benchmarking and the development of supply chain partnerships. In addition, 770 textiles, clothing and footwear companies benefited from trade fair support last year. My Department is also supporting the recently formed industry-led Textiles and Clothing Strategy Group, which aims to develop a strategy for the long term sustainable development of the industry.

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many meetings there have been of the clothing and textile industry actions group; on what dates; who was in attendance; what progress has been made; and if he will make a statement; [77897]

(2) what issues are being considered by the Textiles and Clothing Strategy Group. [77899]

Mr. Battle: The Textiles and Clothing Strategy Group (TCSG) is an industry-led body resulting from a joint management/union initiative. It is looking at long-term competitiveness issues affecting the UK textiles and clothing industry. In response to a request to the Chairman of the TCSG, James McAdam CBE (BATC), I am able to say that the TCSG meets on a monthly basis and, over the coming months, intends to look at a number of issues including: international productivity comparisons, supply chain relations, human resources (training, recruitment and skills), product development, investment, technological development, and design and marketing. As well as James McAdam, the membership of the TCSG includes Peter Aubusson (Courtaulds Textiles), Peter Booth (TGWU), Des Farrell (GMB), Paul Gates (KFAT), Professor Dick Horrocks (Bolton Institute), David Sutcliffe OBE DL (Benson Turner) and John Wilson (BATC). My Department is represented on the group by Brian Hopson, the Director of Consumer Goods and Business Services.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of (a) businesses and (b) British oil companies operating in the North Sea which have adequately dealt with the millennium bug to date. [77694]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The offshore oil industry together with the other key UK utilities and services are providing regular public reports on their state of Y2K compliance through the Action 2000-National Infrastructure Forum arrangements, and also via the Action 2000 and UKOOA Internet sites.

DTI, acting through UKOOA, the trade body which represents UK offshore oil operators, has asked companies to provide assessments of their state of Y2K preparedness. All these assessments are either being carried out by peer group reviewers or by entirely independent organisations. In addition WS Atkins have been appointed by DTI to provide an independent validation of the results of these assessments. WS Atkins aim to report their findings to DTI in early April, so they can be included in the presentation which the DTI will make to the National Infrastructure Forum meeting on 21 April.

An analysis of the first completed assessments already shows the majority of the companies to be in the "blue" category (the assessment has not identified any risks of material disruption). The activities which remain in the "amber" category (the assessment indicates that there is some risk of material disruption, but that there is an agreed containment plan to rectify shortcomings) relate to outstanding work on external dependencies, staffing and contingency plans which are scheduled for completion by end October.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the adequacy of measures taken to deal with the millennium bug in Britain's (a) nuclear and (b) conventional power stations. [77691]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The Office of Electricity Regulation announced the findings of an independent assessment of the whole electricity industry on 17 March. The results show that the sector is on course to beat the millennium bug.

74 per cent. of generation plant is judged to already have Action 2000 "blue" status, meaning that the assessment has not identified any risks of material disruption. Most remaining compliance work is expected to be completed by the end of June, with a few systems programmed for later completion, by September. The assessors were satisfied that sufficient resources were available for this work to be completed in time for the millennium.

The Nuclear Industries Inspectorate, the UK body responsible for regulating the safe operation of Nuclear Generating Stations, has carried out a full assessment of nuclear plant and is satisfied that this plant will function safely over the century date change period.

My Department is closely monitoring the preparations being made in the electricity sector for the millennium.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Government Codes and Cypher School

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the following documents relating to the Government Codes and Cypher School's work in the Second World War will be released to the Public Record Office: the history or histories of (a) Hut 8 or German naval machine systems by C. H. O. S. Alexander, (b) the organisation and evolution of British naval sigint, by F. L. Birch, (c) the organisation and uses of naval special sigint, (d) the handling of naval special intelligence, (e) German naval signals intelligence, by Miss M. E. Storey, (f) Hut 6 and (g) 15K cryptography (Abwehr machine cyphers); and if he will make a statement. [75133]

Mr. Robin Cook: GCHQ maintains a document review unit which handles the release to the Public Record Office of potentially sensitive material, including the work of the Government Codes and Cypher School. GCHQ has been able to identify all the documents referred to except: "The organisation and uses of naval special sigint", "15K cryptography (Abwehr machine cyphers)" and "The German Navy's use of Special Intelligence by McMahon". The other documents referred to by the right hon. Member have been considered for release in the past but contained information the disclosure of which at the time would have been damaging to national security, and have, for that reason, not been released.

A version of the "History of hut 8 by A. A. Mahon" has been released in the United States.

Documents are reviewed in the light of the degree of public interest in their release, and of advice from the PRO. I have asked that the documents in question be reviewed before the end of the year. I will write to the right hon. Member when the review is complete.

Foreign Media Articles

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he gave prior approval to the article by the hon. Member for Rotherham (Mr. MacShane) published in Le Monde on 3 March. [75478]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 8 March 1999]: The views expressed by my hon. Friend the Member for Rotherham (Mr. MacShane) in the article are his own.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when (a) telegram 277 regarding Sierra Leone, (b) his Department's daily bulletins regarding the scope of the arms embargo in Sierra Leone and (c) the text of the Commonwealth Heads of Government Conference communiqué were first brought to his attention. [75808]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 9 March 1999]: Telegram 277 contains guidance for media inquiries on UN Resolution 1132. This and FCO Daily Bulletins are not operational papers and would not have been drawn to my attention at the time they issued. I would not have seen these papers until some time after the arrival of the letter from S. J. Berwin and Co. dated 24 April 1998. In October 1997, I attended the CHOGM which produced the Communiqué in question.

Government Communications Headquarters

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answers of 15 February 1999, Official Report, column 579, on Government communications headquarters, when he expects the final cost of the compensation packages to be established. [76301]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 15 March 1999]: I refer to my earlier answers to the hon. Member on 1 February 1999, Official Report, column 493 [66489] and 15 February 1999, Official Report, column 579 [69380].

Gibraltar

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the implications for his policy in respect of extending the franchise to the people of Gibraltar for elections to the European Parliament, of the determination of the European Court of Human Rights of 18 February; and if he will make a statement. [77188]

Ms Quin [holding answer 17 March 1999]: I refer my hon. Friend to the replies I gave to the hon. Member for Romsey (Mr. Colvin) on 17 March 1999, Official Report, column 681 [76637] and 18 March 1999, Official Report, columns 760–61 [76638].

EU Budget Contribution

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will (a) list the funding from the EU affected by the UK's abatement and (b) state the amount of required matched funding and the adjustments which had been made as a result of the abatement, for the last year for which figures are available. [78335]

Ms Quin: The UK abatement is one year in arrears and is, broadly, two thirds of the difference between what the UK contributes to the EU budget and what is received. It is deducted from the resources side of the budget, so reduces contributions rather than receipts. There is no requirement for matched funding linked to the abatement.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Electronic Red Boxes

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will name the Ministers in her Department who are regular users of electronic Red Boxes. [76182]

Marjorie Mowlam: None at present. I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 16 March 1999, Official Report, columns 651–52.

Prisoners (Accelerated Release)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will update her answer of 3 November 1998, Official Report, column 488, on prisoners to indicate how many prisoners applied to the Prison Sentence Review Commission for an accelerated release date by 31 December 1998; in how many cases the Commission made a determination; and for unsuccessful applications, what reasons were given. [78158]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 22 March 1999]: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Sentence Review Commissioners. I have asked them to arrange for a reply to be given.

CABINET OFFICE

People's Panel

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office on how many occasions members of the People's Panel have been used as a source of membership of focus groups; and if he will provide details of each occasion. [78339]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Members of the People's Panel have been used as a source of membership for focus groups on two occasions earlier this year. Details are as follows:

The Women's Unit commissioned 24 focus groups as part of a wider programme of consultation with women—Listening to Women. The focus groups explored a broad range of priorities women felt important to their lives, and probed in-depth their opinion on specific topics, such as women's incomes. The Women's Unit has particular interest in teenage girls and this research included 6 focus groups with this age-group in order to inform the Unit's policy area with the views of girls themselves.

The Department for Education and Employment commissioned six focus groups to investigate parents' attitudes towards value added information in school performance tables. The research will be used to inform the development of value added measures for publication in the performance tables.

SOCIAL SECURITY

National Insurance

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the amount paid in National Insurance, excluding contributions to SERPS, as a percentage of national income for each income decile of the working population for (a) 1997–98 (b) 2002–03 and (c) 2007–08 and (d) each 10 years to 2047–48; what impact he estimates the changes will have on the re-distributive nature of national insurance contributions; and if he will make a statement. [74176]

Mr. Timms: Information is not available in the form requested because Class 1 National Insurance contributions are not separable into elements for SERPS or for the other benefits paid out of the National Insurance Fund. The information that is available is in the table and relates to gross Class 1 contributions as a percentage of all employed earnings by earnings decile. This takes account of the changes to the structure of Class 1 contributions announced in the Chancellor's 1998 and 1999 Budgets.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many residents in Hammersmith and Fulham are in receipt of disability living allowance; and of those how many have had their benefits (a) reduced and (b) removed by the Benefit Integrity Project. [77841]

Mr. Bayley: The administration of Disability Living Allowance is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Iain Coleman, dated 22 March 1999:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many residents in Hammersmith and Fulham are in receipt of Disability Living Allowance, and of those how many have had their benefits (a) reduced and (b) removed by the Benefit Integrity Project.

The number of people in the London Borough of Hammersmith and Fulham who are in receipt of Disability Living Allowance, as at 31 May 1998 is 4,338.

The information concerning how many of these have had their benefits reduced or removed by the Benefit Integrity Project is not available. To provide geographical information routinely would incur high costs and disrupt the processing of ongoing case work.

You may find it helpful to know that a monthly statistical report can be found in the House of Commons Library.

Welfare Reform

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list those respondents to the welfare reform Green Paper, "New Ambitions for our Country: A New Contract for Welfare", who (a) requested the abolition of means testing and (b) called for means testing to be extended to all benefits. [77540]

Mr. Timms: The Welfare Reform Green Paper, "New Ambitions for our Country: A New Contract for Welfare" (CM 3805), set out the framework for welfare reform, based on eight principles, together with a range of success measures. Views were invited on the contents of the Green Paper, specifically on those principles and success measures. The information gathered from the responses was categorised to reflect this. As views were not specifically sought on means testing and it did not feature in the guiding principles or success measures, a list of those who commented on it is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

A list of those organisations and academics who responded to the exercise, excluding those who requested confidentiality, has been placed in the Library. Copies of these responses are available on request from the Department. We have also placed in the Library a summary of responses.

Benefit Fraud

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost of benefit fraud in Scotland in each year since 1992 in (a) cash terms and (b) 1998–99 prices. [77769]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

The Green Paper "Beating Fraud is Everyone's Business: securing the future" set out the difficulties of measuring a covert activity such as fraud.

Estimated fraud in Great Britain

	Amount
Confirmed fraud	2
Strong suspicion of fraud	3
Low suspicion of fraud	2

Kali Mountford: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will publish his strategy for combating fraud in social security. [78576]

Mr. Darling: I am publishing today "A New Contract for Welfare—Safeguarding Social Security", which sets out the Government's strategy for reducing fraud and error in the Social Security system.

When we came into office far too much money was being lost through fraud and error. Targets were set to find fraud but not to stop it happening, and safeguarding Social Security was too often an afterthought rather than an integral part of processing claims.

We are determined to focus on a single goal—reducing the amount of fraud and error. We will achieve this by getting payments right in the first place, keeping them right throughout the claim and putting mistakes right when we find them. We will make sure that we have a suitable range of sanctions, including prosecutions, to make those who steal Social Security realise that crime does not pay.

We have already made a good start and have set clear goals against which our success can be judged. By tightening the gateways to benefit and requiring more supporting evidence before benefit is paid we expect to save £1 billion in Income Support alone over this Parliament. We are providing an extra £100 million to local authorities so that they can make tougher checks on Housing Benefit. We are making greater use of new technology to share information between the agencies and councils paying benefits to improve service and to avoid duplication. We are helping local authorities to prosecute more cases of Housing Benefit fraud and have launched an independent review of how best to tackle the threats to Social Security from organised fraud.

We shall keep checking that our plans are working and we will review local performance to trace how well we are doing in each area. We have set a challenging target to reduce by 30 per cent., losses from fraud and error in Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance, by 31 March 2007, with at least a 10 per cent. reduction by 31 March 2002. This will take sustained effort by all staff delivering Social Security. We know that they will rise to the challenge.

Our strategy builds on the work set out in the Green Paper published last July "Beating Fraud Is Everyone's Business: securing the future" (Cm 4012). The responses we had to the Green Paper were largely supportive and I am placing a summary of these in the Library today.

We are determined to root out fraud and reduce error in the Social Security system. It will be a tough job, but for the first time we have a systematic and deliverable strategy to reduce the losses from fraud and error and safeguard Social Security.

Housing Benefit (Scotland)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of expenditure on housing benefit in Scotland in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99, for (i) public sector tenants, (ii) housing association tenants and (iii) other private sector tenants. [78213]

Angela Eagle: The information is not yet available. The information will be available after the publication of the Departmental Report on 30 March 1999. I will write to the hon. and learned Member when the information is available.

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what evaluation he has made of the effectiveness of the training undertaken by staff conducting Benefit Integrity Project interviews. [77890]

Mr. Bayley: The training of Benefits Agency Staff is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 22 March 1999:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what evaluation he has made of the effectiveness of the training undertaken by staff conducting Benefit Integrity Project interviews.

The Benefits Agency is committed to high quality training and all training courses, including those delivered to Benefit Integrity Project staff, are evaluated on an ongoing basis with training needs under continual review.

All training events, including refresher training undertaken with input from the Disablement Income Group (DIG), have been separately evaluated for their effectiveness. Post-course evaluation questionnaires are completed by all staff and post-training workshops have been carried out. This information has been used to further improve the training.

The findings of the evaluation were that the training:

sufficiently equipped the visiting staff to be able to carry out the visits focused on good practices

reinforced the purpose of the project

Managers accompany visiting staff on a number of visits each year to ensure that the training principles have been assimilated. There has been much positive feedback from customers on how the visits have been carried out.

DIG has prepared a report for the Benefits Agency that summarises their input into the training. They have made valuable suggestions for the future. We will be using their findings and our own evaluation to develop training for staff who will be working on the new periodic enquiry process from April 1999.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to amend regulation 81 of the Jobseeker's Allowance Regulations 1996; and if he will make a statement. [78244]

Angela Eagle: We currently have no plans to amend regulation 81 of the Jobseeker's Allowance Regulations.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Food Control

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much money was provided in the standard spending assessment in each year between 1989–90 and 1998–99 for enforcement of the law in relation to food control. [77523]

Ms Armstrong: The information requested is not available.

Standard spending assessments cover the whole range of local authority services. Specific amounts are not identified for enforcement in relation to the law on food control. The level of resources for enforcement of food control legislation is a matter for individual local authorities.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the preparedness of local authorities and emergency services in Gloucestershire for dealing with the millennium bug; and if he will make a statement. [77484]

Ms Armstrong: It is each authority's responsibility, for which they are accountable to their local people, to ensure they are adequately prepared for the Millennium Bug and have proper plans in place for the emergency services. Independent assessment of the state of preparedness is being carried out by auditors and the Audit Commission, which, in June, will be naming any council which is not making sufficient progress. We have also appointed teams in the Government Offices to help councils to prepare for the Millennium Bug, and to report on the state of preparedness of the local government sector to Action 2000's National Infrastructure Forum.

Road Surfaces

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to hold trials of the use of shredded tyres in new road surfaces. [77424]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There are no proposals for trials of surfacings incorporating shredded tyres within new road surfaces on the Department's trunk roads. New road surfaces are being developed with shredded tyres forming part of their composition. The Highways Agency is working closely with surfacing manufacturers and local authority associations to develop further the scope for using recycled tyres in road surfaces and in other highways applications. The materials will be subjected to trials when capable of meeting the required levels of performance for safety and durability.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what use is made of recycled material from car tyres in road surfaces; and if he will make a statement. [77825]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Recycled material from car tyres is not currently used in road surfaces specified for the Department's trunk roads. New road surfaces are being developed with shredded tyres forming part of their composition. The Highways Agency is working closely with surfacing manufacturers and local authority associations to develop further the scope for using recycled tyres in road surfaces and in other highways applications. The materials will be subjected to trials when capable of meeting the required levels of performance for safety and durability.

Environmental Rights Convention

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to ratify the Convention on Environmental Rights signed at the Aarhus Conference in Denmark on 25 June 1998. [77656]

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress made following the signing of the Aarhus Convention on environmental rights in June 1998; and whether Britain will have ratified the Convention in time to be involved in the first meeting of signatories in Moldova in April. [78014]

Mr. Meale: We intend to ratify the Convention on Access to Information, Public Participation in Decision-Making and Access to Justice in Environmental Matters (the Aarhus Convention) as soon as we have the necessary measures in place to implement its provisions. In particular, that requires new legislation on access to environmental information. We are considering including measures in the forthcoming Freedom of Information Bill to implement the access to information provisions of the Convention.

The United Kingdom will play a full part in the first meeting of signatories to the Convention in Moldova in April, which will discuss a work programme on follow-up to the Convention. The United Kingdom has offered to host a workshop as part of that work programme.

The Convention will come into force when sixteen countries have ratified it. That is not expected to be until 2000 at the earliest. The Convention Secretariat is not aware that any country has yet ratified.

Residential Leasehold Reform

Mr. Darvill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Government plan to consult on the proposal contained in the consultation paper, "Residential Leasehold Reform in England and Wales", to give to leaseholders of houses a similar right of first refusal to that of qualifying tenants in blocks of flats. [77650]

Mr. Raynsford: We must first consider all the responses to the existing consultation paper, which are still being received. We expect to proceed with further consultation later in the year.

Mr. Darvill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what form the consultation about the technical details of the Government's proposal to create a new right for a majority of the leaseholders in a block of flats to take over the management of the block will take; and when that consultation will take place. [77651]

Mr. Raynsford: We will issue a consultation paper on the new right to manage once we have decided on the main issues of principle in the light of the responses to our existing paper. I would expect that to be later this year.

Mr. Darvill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has carried out on the numbers of former local authority tenants who have acquired leasehold flats under the right to buy legislation and are now unable to resell their homes on the open market; and if he will publish the results of that research. [77649]

Mr. Raynsford: My Department carried out two research studies which were published by HMSO in 1995 as Housing Research Reports, "The Resale of Former Council Homes" and "Leaseholders and Service Charges in Former Local Authority Flats". Copies of both reports and summaries are in the Library of the House.

The Department has been carrying out further research into leaseholders of social landlords since 1996 as part of the Survey of English Housing. The Survey involves an annual sample of around 1 in 1,000 households and has collected data only on 256 leasehold properties which had been purchased from a local authority by a sitting tenant; and of these, only 18 had put their home on the market at some time since purchase. We shall publish results once we have statistically significant information.

Rent Assessment Panels

Mr. Darvill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) when he plans to publish the result of the financial management and policy review of rent assessment panels in England; [77653]

(2) when he expects to complete his consideration of the future of the Leasehold Valuation Tribunal following the financial management and policy review of rent assessment panels in England. [77652]

Mr. Raynsford: We intend to publish a report on the outcome of the first phase of the financial management and policy review of rent assessment panels in England by the summer. This phase will involve examining the role of the panels and their functions, assessing the extent to which these are necessary and considering options for achieving best value. We will, as part of the review, be considering all aspects of the operation of the leasehold valuation tribunals.

RAF East Camp Site, Colindale

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to make a decision on the planning application for the RAF East Camp site, Colindale. [77865]

Mr. Caborn: Shortly.

Barnet Football Club

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to make a decision on the planning application for Barnet Football Club at Copthall Stadium. [77873]

Mr. Caborn: Shortly.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what criteria are used to assess bids for agencies seeking appointment to installerships under the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme with particular reference to (a) pricing of measures, (b) quality of work, (c) customer care provisions and (d) training opportunities; and if he will make a statement. [77657]

Mr. Meale: The Home Energy Efficiency Scheme (HEES) is managed for the Department under contract by Eaga Ltd. As part of the contract, Eaga is responsible for the appointment of installers to carry out work in designated areas under the scheme. Installers seeking appointment are required to demonstrate that they can meet the required standard of quality of work and customer care, and have the appropriately qualified and trained staff. Those meeting these criteria are then assessed on the basis of price.

To maintain quality standards, Eaga inspect 5 per cent. of jobs done by installers. Additionally, there is an 8 month probationary period for newly appointed and re-appointed installers. The recent National Audit Office report on HEES confirmed the high quality of work achieved by the scheme.

A51, Cheshire

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received about the need for by-passes around villages on the A51 in Cheshire; and if he will make a statement. [77608]

Dr. Reid: Since the Government's Roads Review, "A New Deal for Trunk Roads in England", was published last July, written representations have been received via the right hon. Member, from my hon. Friend the Member for City of Chester (Ms Russell), and from several local residents. In addition a report has been compiled by the A51 Environmental Group that also makes representations on this issue.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received about the need for (a) reducing traffic volume, (b) lowering traffic speed and (c) decreasing the number of heavy goods vehicles on the A51 in Cheshire; and if he will make a statement. [77607]

Dr. Reid: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Lawrie Haynes, to write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Sir Alastair Goodlad, dated 23 March 1999:

The Minister for Transport, Dr John Reid, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning representations received about the need for reducing traffic volume, lowering traffic speed and decreasing the number of heavy goods vehicles on the A51 in Cheshire.

We have received written representations covering all three issues from eight local residents. We have also received a copy of a report prepared by the A51 Environmental Group, which covers these points.

As you know, the Highways Agency is carrying out two studies involving the A51. Firstly, a study of the full length of the road in Cheshire to identify where measures may be required to address safety problems either at specific locations or on the road as a whole. Secondly, a review of all villages on the Cheshire trunk roads to identify and place in order of priority, any locations that would benefit from new or improved traffic calming measures. We expect to have the results of both studies shortly.

The A51 provides a direct link for traffic travelling between the M6 and Chester, North Wales and Merseyside. A number of residents have suggested that Heavy Goods Vehicles should be signed to use the longer route provided by the M6, M56 and M53 rather than using the A51. We have considered this carefully but have no plans to change the existing signing.

The A51/A500 Chester to the M6 is one of the trunk routes identified as non-core and one which would be more appropriately managed by the local highway authority. Responsibility for non-core roads is to be transferred to local highway authorities by means of detrunking. I understand that the Government will be announcing a final decision on the split of the network into core and non-core routes as soon as possible.

If the A51/A500 is confirmed as a non-core route to be detrunked, then from 1 April 2000 the Agency will only initiate further improvements that we consider necessary to keep the route in a safe and serviceable condition. It will be for the local highway authority, in this case Cheshire County Council, to consider the need for other improvements in the context of their Local Transport Plan. Provisional plans covering the period 2000/01—2004/05 are to be submitted by the end of July.

Halon

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what research his Department has commissioned to study the level of halon 1202 emissions to the atmosphere; [77595]

(2) what action his Department will take to encourage the international community to include halon 1202 in the list of chemicals controlled by the Montreal protocol. [77594]

Mr. Meale: My Department commissions research at the University of East Anglia to analyse air samples from the archive at Cape Grim in Tasmania. They have made the first measurements of the atmospheric concentration of halon 1202 anywhere in the world. Although the concentration of halon 1202 is currently very low (0.05 parts per trillion), it is growing very rapidly, some 17 per cent. per year in 1998. We also commission routine measurements of the background concentrations of halons at Mace Head in the Republic of Ireland as part of the International Global Atmospheric Gases Experiment. Halon 1202 concentrations are currently below the limit of detectability of the instrumentation in place but instrument development is taking place to cover this substance.

As there is little information on the source of halon 1202 emissions, the United Kingdom and other Parties to the Montreal Protocol have requested the Protocol's Technical and Economic Assessment Panel and Science Assessment Panel to identify the source and availability of this substance and report back to the Parties by 2001. This information will enable Parties to take a decision to decide whether it is necessary to control this substance under the Protocol.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what action his Department is taking to help developing countries fulfil the Montreal Protocol ban on halon 1211 production by 2005; [77592]

(2) what steps his Department is taking to help the Chinese Government fulfil the Montreal Protocol ban on halon 1211 production by 2005. [77593]

Mr. Meale: China, together with other developing countries, is committed under the Montreal Protocol to phasing out the production and consumption of halons by 2010. Assistance is available for developing countries under the Protocol's Multilateral Fund to meet their commitments. To this end, US$ 62 million has been provided from the Fund to enable China to phase out halon production, as a result of which China has given a commitment to stop production of halon 1211 by 2006, four years earlier than required under the Protocol. The United Kingdom currently contributes in the region of £6.5 million per year to the Multilateral Fund.

Business Rates

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what modelling he has done of local authority costs incurred in implementing the procedures for localising elements of the business rate as set out in the Local Government White Paper. [77677]

Ms Armstrong: Local authorities already have a statutory duty to consult businesses. The proposals in the White Paper, in respect of local authorities' responsibility to listen to their communities, require authorities to make such consultation arrangements effective. The partnership arrangements between business and local authorities needed for the localisation scheme will be based on these effective consultation arrangements. In addition, local authorities will be given the maximum flexibility to agree both suitable partnership arrangements for their areas, and the methods for securing the endorsement of these arrangements by business. The additional costs arising from the localisation scheme are expected to be small, but we will discuss with the Local Government Association any concerns it may have. A consultation paper is to be issued shortly.

EU Fraud

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what (a) discussions he has had and (b) proposals his Department has put forward at Council of Ministers' meetings in respect of EU fraud; and if he will make a statement. [77779]

Mr. Meale [holding answer 19 March 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary on 19 March 1999, Official Report, columns 858–59.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to amend the planning regulations in order to help the UK to meet its targets for renewable energy generation. [77944]

Mr. Raynsford: None. I am satisfied that the existing regulatory framework is adequate.

Ofwat

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what preparations are being made by Ofwat in respect of his responsibilities under the Competition Act 1998; what increase in staff is required; and what action is being taken to co-ordinate policy with the Director General of Fair Trading. [77687]

Mr. Meale [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The Director General of Water Services is currently preparing guidelines on the application of the Competition Act 1998 to the water industry to be published later this year. I understand that he is considering, but has yet to determine, what increase in staff might be required in respect of his new responsibilities. The Office of Water Services (Ofwat) is a member of the Concurrency Working Party (CWP), comprising representatives from the Office of Fair Trading and those regulators having concurrent functions, which is working to ensure a co-ordinated approach to the application of the 1998 Act. Guidelines on the application and enforcement of the Act have been prepared by the CWP and issued by the Director General of Fair Trading (DGFT). In February, the Department of Trade and Industry issued a consultation document "Concurrency: consultation on the possible need and scope for regulations" on the Secretary of State's powers to make regulations for the purpose of co-ordinating the functions exercisable by the DGFT and the regulators.

EC Transport Council

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the agenda for the forthcoming EC Transport Council of 29 March. [78393]

Dr. Reid: The proposed agenda for the 29 March Transport Council comprises the following items:

1. Adoption of the agenda
2. Approval of "A" points

Inland transport

3. Railways policy
4. Combined transport
5. Working time in the road transport sector

Air transport

6. Modernisation of the Warsaw system on airline liability

Measures concerning all modes of transport

7. Amendments to Trans-European Network guidelines

8. Satellite navigation systems ("Galileo")

9. Other business.

Water Charges (Pensioners)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action the Government plans to take to assist pensioners with the payment of water charges, with particular reference to those who cannot have water meters installed for technical reasons. [77695]

Mr. Meale: Under proposals in the Water Industry Bill, currently before Parliament, household water customers would have a new entitlement to be charged on a measured basis without paying any initial costs for the installation of a meter. Customers using water only for basic domestic purposes who opted for a measured basis of charging and found that this did not suit their needs would have the opportunity within the first 12 months to revert to unmeasured charging. These proposals will benefit households using little water including many pensioners.

In a small minority of cases it may not be possible to fit a meter because it would be not reasonably practicable or would involve unreasonable expense to do so. In such cases the Government would expect a water company to make an alternative charging arrangement for customers who asked to pay on a measured basis.

The Government propose to consult later this year on what guidance should be issued and regulations made governing the provisions of companies' charges schemes.

Leasehold Reform

Mr. G[illegible]omas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Env[illegible]t, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has for reforming the law in respect of leaseholds. [76342]

Mr. Raynsford: We propose to make it easier and simpler for leaseholders of flats to exercise their right to collective enfranchisement, give leaseholders a new "no-fault" right to manage, improve the standards of residential leasehold management and stamp out specific abuses examples of which have been brought to our attention. Further details are set out in our consultation paper on residential leasehold reform, a copy of which is in the Library.

Private Hire Vehicles

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects the consultation document on the implementation of the Private Hire Vehicles (London) Act 1998 to be published. [78362]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We intend shortly to publish, jointly with the Public Carriage Office, a consultation document on the licensing of minicab operators in London.

Bus Policy

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will publish his detailed proposals on bus policy following the White Paper, A New Deal for Transport, Better for Everyone. [78531]

Mr. Prescott: I have today published a bus policy document which sets out the Government's proposals for a comprehensive range of measures to ensure that the bus can play its full role in an integrated transport policy. The document invites comments on specific measures for implementation. Copies of the document are in the Library and are available in the Vote Office.

Local Government

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to publish the draft bill on political management structures and the new ethical framework for local government; and if he will make a statement. [78575]

Mr. Prescott: I intend tomorrow to lay before the House a paper describing new forms of local governance, and including a draft of a Bill making provision for them. If enacted, the Bill would transform local government's political management structures and ethical framework. Local people would be able to choose forms of local governance with strong leadership for communities, powerful roles for all councillors, and high standards of conduct.

Trunk Roads

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the outcome of consultation with Regional Planning Bodies on the study programme proposed in "A New Deal for Trunk Roads in England"; and if he will announce the final programme of studies. [78577]

Dr. Reid: The consultation exercise with Regional Planning Bodies, launched on 10 December 1998, is now complete and we have received representations from all the regions. We want to take the studies forward in partnership with Regional Planning Bodies in order to ensure that they are closely integrated with regional planning objectives. The study programme reflects regional priorities and will feed into the development of regional transport strategies as part of regional planning guidance. I am pleased that the responses we have received are generally in favour of our approach and, in particular, our determination to examine the contribution that all modes can make to the problems of congestion, environment and safety within the study areas.

I am now able to announce the final study programme which takes into account many of the Regional Planning Bodies' proposals, and to give more details about the timing of the studies.

The studies are divided into two categories—full multi-modal studies which will be taken forward by the Government Offices for the Regions in consultation with regional partners, and roads based studies which, although they will take account of the contributions which can be made by other modes, are primarily directed at specific points on individual roads, and which will be led by the Highways Agency.

Work on most of the studies in Tranche 1 will begin this spring, with all of them commencing by the autumn. The length of time it will take to complete each study will vary depending on the complexity of the issues, but we expect that they will take, on average, 2 years to complete. As a first step, steering groups will be established, chaired by the Government Offices and to include representatives from the Regional Planning Bodies, and other regional partners, to finalise the terms of reference for each study and the timescale for delivery. Tranche 2 studies need not wait for tranche 1 studies to be completed, and we expect to begin work on these in 2000–01.

The multi-modal studies are not a one off exercise. As we described in the recently published draft planning policy guidance note 11 (PPGII) "Regional Planning", multi-modal studies of transport problems will be one of the major inputs to the development of Regional Transport Strategies. Therefore in the future we expect Regional Planning Bodies, rather than central Government, to commission and lead their own multi-modal studies. From some of the additional studies proposed by the Regional Planning Bodies, we have identified a provisional third tranche of studies which could be taken forward in this way. The case for a study of the A1 North of Newcastle will depend on the outcome of the current Highways Agency route management study.

Planning Guidance (Housing)

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when his Department will publish new planning policy guidelines on housing; and if he will make a statement. [78607]

Mr. Caborn: We have today published for public consultation a new version of Planning Policy Guidance note 3: Housing (PPG3). This is another major step in delivering our commitment to revitalise our towns and cities and to protect our countryside from unnecessary development. Our aim is to achieve nothing less than an urban renaissance. Copies of the new PPG3 have been placed in the Library and are available in the Vote Office.

The guidance emphasises the importance of making the best use of previously developed urban land and existing buildings in order to achieve our 60 per cent. land recycling target. This will minimise the use of green-field sites, encourage urban regeneration and help create more sustainable patterns of development. Local planning authorities are also advised to provide a greater choice of housing to meet the nation's changing housing needs, and to promote mixed development.

We propose to introduce a sequential approach to the choice of sites. Local planning authorities will be required to consider using previously developed land and buildings before releasing green-field sites for development.

Local planning authorities are also required to consider the capacity of the urban area to accommodate additional development. The guidance proposes the use of higher densities, reduced car parking and the release for housing of excess land held for other types of development. The Government are also looking for an improved quality of development and are therefore looking for improved urban design, better layouts and wider choice of sizes and types of housing. They advise developers and local authorities to place the needs of people before cars in designing the layout of residential developments. Creating a more attractive residential environment must be a central aim for new development.

The Government recognise that not all additional housing development can be accommodated on previously developed sites. The next most sustainable option is to develop urban extensions, making use of existing infrastructure and public transport links.

The new draft PPG3 represents a major departure in content and style from the previous planning guidance and is an essential toolkit for planning for housing in the new Millennium.

Public Rights of Way

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what (a) percentage and (b) length of public rights of way are open to (i) horseriders and (ii) cyclists in each county in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [76882]

Mr. Meacher [pursuant to his reply, 15 March 1999, c. 468–69]: The figures contained a miscalculation. The second part of the reply should have read:

"England and Wales have an estimated total of 130,000 miles (209,000km) of rights of way, of which over 29,000 miles (47,000km) or 22 per cent. may be used lawfully by horseriders and cyclists".

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Stations

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police stations there were in the Metropolitan Police force area in (a) 1980 and (b) each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [77289]

Kate Hoey: The Receiver for the Metropolitan Police District (MPD) tells me that there were 164 police stations in the MPD in 1980.

There are 152 police stations and 38 police offices currently. In 1998, the numbers were the same. In 1997, there were 157 police stations and 39 police offices.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many new police stations were built or are planned to be built in England in 1999. [77349]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is not collected centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. The police estate, in England and Wales, consists of some 7,000 properties and includes around 2,000 police stations. Police authorities have local discretion to build police stations within the resources available to them.

The Audit Commission Report "Action Stations—Improving the management of the Police Estate", published on 17 March, found that better estate management will deliver more effective policing, save money and better serve the public.

Police Cameras

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the total expenditure of police cameras per force in each of the last three years; what was the average number of fines issued per camera in each police force; and if he will make a statement; [77306]

(2) how many police cameras were in use in each police force on the last date for which figures are available and in each of the previous three years; and if he will make a statement. [77290]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is not available centrally. Road traffic law enforcement is an operational matter for individual chief officers of police and they decide whether to employ such technology in the light of their local conditions and policing priorities. The 1996 Police Research Group paper "Cost benefit analysis of traffic light and speed cameras" provides a snapshot of the numbers of sites and costs for such cameras in service with ten forces at that time. A copy is in the Library.

Police Expenditure

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total expenditure per police force in each of the last five years; what amount and proportion of that expenditure was spent on police pensions; what was the real terms change in total expenditure apart from police pensions per police force; what is the expected change in the proportion of total police spending which will be spent on pensions in each of the next three years; and if he will make a statement. [77288]

Mr. Boateng: The information is set out in the tables.

Table 1: Police pensions and total expenditure 1994–95 to 1998–99

Policing (Human Rights)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the recommendations of the Justice report "Under Surveillance: Covert Policing and Human Rights Standards". [77292]

Mr. Boateng: I have invited members of Justice to meet me so that they can put directly to me their views on the present legal structures relating to police surveillance and how they believe it is affected by the European Convention on Human Rights. Their views will form part of the consideration which is currently being given to whether further changes are needed to the existing framework of controls.

Police (Cleveland)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate by how much the Lancet Inquiry will increase the precept for policing payable by residents of Cleveland in the next year; on what calculation this is based; and if he will make a statement. [77270]

Mr. Boateng: I understand from the Chief Constable that the Cleveland Police Authority has set a budget for 1999–2000 of £83.3 million which is an increase of 3.6 per cent. over 1998–99. This will mean an increase in the police precept on the council tax of 29.2 per cent. or £14 per year in 1999–2000 for Band D properties.

I understand that the increase in the precept for 1999–2000 is not as a result of Operation Lancer but is required to maintain an acceptable number of police officers and to meet other unavoidable expenditure for police pay increases and pensions.

It is a matter for the Chief Constable to determine how to use the resources available. The Cleveland Constabulary achieved significant savings in 1998–99 of £2.7 million. This has made it possible for the force to absorb the costs of Operation Lancet within existing resources.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the cost of the Lancet Inquiry into alleged corruption in the Cleveland police force; and if he will make a statement. [77269]

Mr. Boateng: I understand from Cleveland Constabulary that the estimated cost of Operation Lancet up to 31 March 1999 is £1.24 million.

The major part of the inquiry is being undertaken by officers from the Cleveland force, for whom provision has already been made in the budget. The costs arising from the involvement of the Northamptonshire Officers and Mr. Timpson, the Chief Constable of Warwickshire Constabulary who is in charge of the investigation, have also been found from within the Cleveland budget.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects that Inspector Ray Mallon of the Cleveland Police will cease being suspended; and if he will make a statement. [77266]

Mr. Boateng: Matters involving the suspension of police officers are governed by The Police (Discipline) Regulations 1985. An officer may be suspended from the force by his chief officer where it appears that he may have committed a disciplinary offence. Unless the chief officer decides otherwise, the suspension will continue until either it is decided not to bring disciplinary charges or the case has been resolved.

This is entirely a matter for the Chief Officer concerned—in this instance the Chief Constable of Cleveland Constabulary. It would be wrong of me to comment on this matter whilst the investigation is underway.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress of the Lancet Inquiry into alleged police corruption in Cleveland; when he expects completion of its work; and if he will make a statement. [77268]

Mr. Boateng: This is a wide-ranging inquiry and is one of the largest supervised by the Police Complaints Authority (PCA). There has been close consultation with the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) throughout. A major file on drugs-related issues was delivered to the CPS on 4 December 1998 and is now with Treasury Counsel. I understand that a number of possible criminal and disciplinary matters are still being addressed and eight officers remained suspended from duty.

The length of the investigation is a matter for the investigation officer and the PCA.

Firearms (Compensation)

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many claims for compensation are still outstanding under the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997; what percentage of the total number of claims this represents. [77320]

Mr. Boateng: Payment offers have been made on all but around 420 claims which cannot yet be fully processed, mainly because the required evidence of value of the surrendered guns and ancillary equipment has not yet been provided. This represents less than 1 per cent. of the claims received. There are around 6,000 outstanding offers of payment awaiting a response from the claimant before a final payment can be made. The bulk of these should be cleared within the next few days.

Association of Chief Police Officers

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans next to meet the officers of the Association of Chief Police Officers. [77347]

Mr. Boateng: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary regularly meets officers of the Association of Chief Police Officers on both a formal and informal basis.

Police Recruitment (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to increase ethnic minority recruitment in the police service. [77348]

Mr. Boateng: Individual targets will be set for each force for the recruitment, retention and progression of ethnic minority officers. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary is chairing a National Conference on the Recruitment, Retention and Progression of Black and Asian Officers in April for chief constables and police authority chairs. The Conference will be addressing issues such as: force recruitment; promotion schemes and personnel practice.

Diarmuid O'Neill

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the investigation of the death of Diarmuid O'Neill in Hammersmith. [77794]

Kate Hoey: The Commissioner of the Metropolitan police tells me that the report of the police investigation into the death of Diarmuid O'Neill, which was supervised by the Police Complaints Authority, was sent to the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) on 20 November 1998. As at 17 March 1999, no decisions had been taken by the CPS about whether criminal charges should be brought.

Police Officers (Hammersmith and Fulham)

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were stationed at (a) Hammersmith and (b) Fulham police stations (i) on 1 May 1997 and (ii) at the latest available date. [77793]

Kate Hoey: The Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police tells me that the information is not available for the first date specified, but that it is available for 1 July 1997, and as at 18 March 1999, as follows:

Number of officers as at	Hammersmith	Fulham
1 July 1997	333.52	226.13
18 March 1999	301.22	215.16

Thai House and Siam Sauna

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Chief Constable of Northamptonshire into the release of the name of a person who declined to assist with inquiries into suspected breaches of employment and immigration law at the Thai House and Sian Sauna in November. [77659]

Mr. Boateng: The Chief Constable of Northamptonshire Constabulary has taken steps to establish whether there is any basis for an inquiry into whether the release of the name of a person who declined to assist with inquiries. I am assured that should any member of his staff be shown to have been involved in leaking information to the media about the raid on a Northampton Thai massage parlour they will be severely dealt with.

At the moment there is no evidence to suggest that this leak did come from within his force but, should this position change, the Chief Constable will immediately instigate an inquiry and do everything possible to find out who is responsible.

Arson Prevention Bureau

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what support has been offered by his Department for the Arson Prevention Bureau for (a) the next financial year and (b) the last three financial years. [77609]

Mr. George Howarth: The Home Office has a strong working relationship with the Arson Prevention Bureau. Graham Meldrum, Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Fire Services and I gave keynote addresses at two if its important events last year and officials are in regular contact with the Bureau to discuss its programme of activities. In addition, a Home Office official has been loaned to the Bureau since December 1996. The first year of that posting (December 1996-November 1997) was funded in full by the Home Office.

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced earlier this month his intention to publish shortly the outcome of a Home Office study which has reviewed current arrangements for combating arson. We expect to continue to work closely with the Arson Prevention Bureau to take that initiative forward.

Persistent Offenders

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 2 March 1999, Official Report, column 637, what plans he has to make available to the public the data upon which the benchmark figure of 142 days from arrest to sentence for persistent young offenders was based. [77544]

Mr. Boateng: The methodology used to calculate the benchmark figure of 142 days, set out in my answer of 2 March 1999, Official Report, column 637, was set out in the Lord Chancellor's Department Information Bulletin 1/98, published by the Government Statistical Service in May 1998. At paragraph 13, the Bulletin states that:

> Persistent Young Offenders and sentence dates were identified using data from the Police National Computer. Details of arrest dates (or laying of information) for these offenders were obtained by means of a survey of Police Force records. The survey included around 1,500 occasions on which persistent young offenders were sentenced in 1996.

The Bulletin also provided a contact point for further information about the data on which the calculation was based and for requests for further analysis of the data. A copy of the Bulletin was placed in the Library at the time of publication.

The methodology was also set out in a written answer to the hon. Member for Poole (Mr. Syms) on 2 November 1998, Official Report, column 389.

Criminal Offences (EU)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 12 March 1999, Official Report, columns 379–80, if he will make a statement on the nature of his Department's concerns about the provisions on interception of telecommunications in Council Document 13144/98. [77542]

Mr. Straw: The provisions relating to interception of communications in the draft Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters between the member states of the European Union are currently under negotiation. The United Kingdom is negotiating on the basis that the Convention should apply to criminal investigations carried out by the Police Service and Her Majesty's Customs, and not to the operations of our security and intelligence agencies. We are also keen to ensure that the Convention does not impose unnecessary burdens on the operations of the United Kingdom's law enforcement agencies. A detailed explanation of the Government's concerns has been submitted to the European Scrutiny Committees.

Schengen Agreement

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those Schengen provisions which will be adopted by the United Kingdom, stating for each provision the reasons why it is considered necessary. [77640]

Kate Hoey: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply of 12 March 1999, Official Report, columns 380–81, to the right hon. Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean).

EU Conventions

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the Conventions of the European Union (a) agreed and (b) in draft relating to (i) police co-operation and (ii) judicial and court procedures together with their Treaty base, their purpose and scope. [77613]

Kate Hoey: I would refer my hon. Friend to the answer given him by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Gateshead, East and Washington, West (Ms Quin), on 1 July 1997, Official Report, columns 74–76, and by me on 19 November 1998, Official Report, columns 729–31. All the conventions listed were based on Article K3 of the Treaty on European Union. He may also wish to be aware that political agreement was reached on the draft Eurodac Convention at the Justice and Home Affairs Council on 3–4 December 1998.

Gypsies

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many instances have been reported to the police of gypsies trespassing on private property in the last year in England and Wales. [77828]

Mr. Boateng: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Corruption Convention

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason Her Majesty's Government have not ratified the Council of Europe Criminal law convention on corruption; and if he will make a statement. [77989]

Mr. Boateng: The United Kingdom signed the Convention on 27 January 1999 and was one of the first States to do so. We are currently considering, in the context of a review of our legislation dealing with corruption, whether, and if so what, changes to domestic criminal law will be needed to enable us to ratify the Convention.

Metropolitan Police District

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what transitional arrangements he plans to make in respect of the costs arising from the realignment of the Metropolitan Police District boundary with the Greater London administrative boundary. [77814]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The allocation of police grant for 1999/2000 includes special payments of £2 million, £3 million and £7 million to Essex Police Authority, Hertfordshire Police Authority and Surrey Police Authority respectively for transitional costs arising from the changes to the Metropolitan Police District boundary. We would consider any transitional cost bids made for 2000–01.

Women's Royal Voluntary Service

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review funding for the WRVS in the light of Government policy not to assist charities' core activities. [77925]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 22 March 1999]: There is no Government-wide policy not to fund charities' core activities. During 1999, the Home Office will lead the preparation of a code of good practice on funding, to underpin the recent Compact with the voluntary sector. The code will be a vehicle for developing a cross-departmental approach to strategic funding. In the case of the Women's Royal Voluntary Service (WRVS), funding was formally reviewed in 1997. One of the review's conclusions was that, as a national exemplar for the involvement of volunteers, WRVS supported Home Office objectives and should continue to receive strategic funding.

Freemasons

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in implementing the Government's proposals for registering membership of the freemasons in the police, prison and probation services in respect of (i) the establishment of the voluntary register, (ii) the introduction of compulsory registration for new appointments or appointments on promotion and (iii) the arrangements for making the information available to the public. [78052]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 22 March 1999]: Home Office officials are currently working with the Association of Chief Police Officers to set up voluntary registers for existing staff in line with my commitment to the Home Affairs Committee on 20 October 1998. Arrangements for the other categories of occupation affected by the policy, including the Prison and Probation Services, will be implemented once the internal registration arrangements for the Police Service have been set up and are in operation.

Once voluntary registers are in place for existing office holders, we will move swiftly to make arrangements for new staff and existing staff transferring between posts.

The disclosure of Freemasonry membership by office holders and employees in the categories of occupation affected by the policy is entirely voluntary at present. Lawful publication of information about Freemasonry membership disclosed voluntarily will require the informed consent of those who have disclosed that information which can be given only once the precise nature of the publication arrangements has been determined.

Stephen Lawrence Inquiry Report

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the Government's response to the Stephen Lawrence Inquiry report; and if he will make a statement. [78580]

Mr. Straw: I am today publishing an Action Plan setting out how the Government propose that the Report's recommendations will be taken forward. For each of the areas covered by the recommendations of the Inquiry, the plan sets out the main programme of work, who will have the lead responsibility for taking the work forward, and how we will review and assess the outcomes of the work. This is the beginning of the process, and we will revise and develop the plan as the work proceeds. There will be a full day's debate in the House on these issues on Monday 29 March.

Serious Crime Warrants

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to implement the recommendation, in the report of the Interception of Communications Commissioner for 1997, that nominated officials in the law enforcement agencies be permitted to modify serious crime warrants on behalf of the Secretary of State where the warrants are specifically endorsed to permit it. [78581]

Mr. Straw: I intend to implement the change, as recommended by the Interception Commissioner, on 1 April. Thereafter, nominated senior officials in the intercepting agencies will be empowered to modify existing interception warrants by the insertion of new addresses in urgent cases. This is in accordance with section 5(4) of the Interception of Communications Act 1985.

The change will not enable officials to issue interception warrants against new targets. Interception warrants may only lawfully be issued by (or on the express authorisation of) the Secretary of State.

WPC Fletcher

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his oral statement of 16 March 1999, Official Report, column 1016, on the case of WPC Fletcher, for what reasons the inquiries by the Metropolitan Police have taken longer than anticipated. [78242]

Mr. Straw: The Metropolitan Police review of the evidence surrounding the murder of WPC Fletcher has involved a number of complex international lines of inquiry which have taken longer to resolve than was originally anticipated. The timetable has often been dependent on the contribution of overseas authorities. I am assured that the police have pursued their inquiries as quickly as is possible and that the final report on their review of the case will be ready in the near future.

HEALTH

Elderly People (Care)

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many elderly people were accommodated in (a) private sector and (b) local authority care homes in each region in each of the last 30 years; [75918]

(2) how many elderly people were accommodated in (a) private sector care homes and (b) local authority care homes in (i) Devon, (ii) Torbay and (iii) Plymouth in each of the last 30 years. [75921]

Mr. Hutton: Information on the number of people accommodated in homes for the elderly in England, for the period 1983 to 1996 in Devon, for the period 1987 to 1996, is given in the table. It is not possible to provide a consistent series for earlier years or by region because of changes in regional boundaries and changes in the methods of data collection.

Medical Staff (Ethnic Origin)

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of (a) nursing and (b) medical staff in (i) mental health clinics and (ii) hospitals in the United Kingdom for the last five years; and if he will give a breakdown by ethnicity. [75948]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 11 March 1999]: The information requested is not available in the format requested. The table shows the numbers of National Health Service Hospital and Community Health Service nursing and medical staff working in the psychiatry area of work by ethnic origin.

NHS Hospital and Community Health Service (HCHS): nursing and medical staff working in the psychiatry area of work[1] by ethnic origin—England as at 30 September of each year

Notes:
1. A new classification of the non-medical workforce was introduced in 1995. Therefore, information for 1993 and 1994 is not directly comparable with the later years.
2. Ethnicity figures for nursing and medical staff should be treated with caution as a small proportion of staff do not declare their ethnic origin.

Care Services

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list by region and for each of the last five years the amount spent by each health authority on home care (a) in total and (b) as a percentage of special transitional grants; [76480]

(2) if he will list by region and for each of the last five years the amounts spent by each health authority on care services bought from the independent sector (a) in total and (b) as a percentage of special transitional grants. [76481]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 15 March 1999]: Total special transitional grant funding to local authorities in England for 1993–94 to 1997–98 was:

Year	£ million
1993–94	565
1994–95	736
1995–96	647
1997–98	325

Over the same period, the reported gross local authority expenditure on (a) personal social services and (b) on home care was:

£ million

Year	(a) Personal social services	(b) Home care
1993–94	6,728	729
1994–95	7,503	923
1995–96	8,393	1,028
1996–97	9,263	1,130

Note:
These data are not yet available for 1997–98.

Figures for individual local authorities have been placed in the Library.

Data on the proportion of personal social services expenditure spent in the independent sector are not held centrally.

Smoking

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of his budget was spent on education in schools about the dangers caused by smoking in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [77549]

Ms Jowell: Smoking education in schools is an integral part of the National Curriculum and is, therefore, the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment.

The Department spent £3 million over the past three years in the 'Respect' programme addressing children aged 11 to 15 years old but not in a school context.

Edgware Community Hospital

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to be able to make an announcement in response to the Edgware Community Hospital full business case. [77861]

Mr. Denham: Barnet Healthcare National Health Service Trust is currently preparing a Full Business Case for the development of Edgware Community Hospital. This is expected to be completed shortly. It will then be submitted for assessment by the National Health Service Executive in accordance with the established business case process.

HIV-AIDS

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the prevalence of (a) HIV and (b) AIDS in young adults in each region. [77664]

Ms Jowell: The estimates of prevalence of AIDS cases and diagnosed HIV infections in young adults (15 to 24 years) in each region at the end of 1997 are shown in the table.

Healthy Workplace Initiative

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to promote the Healthy Workplace Initiative. [77772]

Ms Jowell: I announced the launch of the Healthy Workplace Initiative in England on 9 March. The Healthy Workplace Initiative is jointly sponsored by the Department and the Health and Safety Executive. It carries the message that

"Improving Health Is Everybody's Business".

As part of this Initiative, the Department has signed a statement of intent with the Health and Safety Commission/Executive. The partnership embodied in this statement lays a foundation for working across a number of areas. For example, we are currently consulting with employers, trade unions and workplace organisations about identifying good practice in tackling the impact of back pain in the workplace.

The statement of intent aims to secure and improve the health of people at work by:

identifying and promoting examples of good practice for handling key workplace health issues, such as back pain, and disseminating the results in usable forms; making available appropriate and up to date information which reflects available evidence and uses all forms of media; encouraging better access to services and helping to provide a bridge between prevention, treatment and rehabilitation, and helping to promote compliance with relevant workplace legislation.

We intend to expand this partnership to include other Government Departments by asking them to become partners in the healthy workplace initiative.

We will shortly be contacting 100,000 workplace organisations of every kind, large and small, public and private, encouraging them to sign up to the initiative and share our vision of a healthier workplace.

Mental Health (Children)

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what investment the Government plan to make over the next three years for helping children with (a) mental health problems, (b) attention deficit disorder, (c) phobias and (d) depression. [77752]

Mr. Hutton: We are making an additional £84 million available over 3 years from April 1999 to improve provision of appropriate, high quality care and treatment for children and young people by building up locally based child and adolescent mental health services. These services address a range of child and adolescent mental health problems including emotional and behavioural disorders such as attention deficit disorder, phobias and depression.

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many repeat cervical smears were taken as a result of inadequate smears in the last year for which figures are available. [77564]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 22 March 1999]: 4.4 million smear tests were taken in 1997–98. 184,111 invitations for repeat smears were issued following an inadequate smear test.

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women died from cervical cancer in the United Kingdom, and what was the percentage of PAP tests falsely diagnosed as positive, in the last year for which figures are available. [77563]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 22 March 1999]: In 1997 there were 1,612 deaths from cervical cancer in the United Kingdom.

The cervical smear test is not a diagnostic test for cancer. It looks for cervical abnormalities which if left undetected and untreated might lead to cervical cancer. Some abnormalities, particularly less serious ones, will disappear without treatment. It is not possible to say how many women who have an abnormal result and subsequent treatment would have gone on to develop cervical cancer.

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated detection rate for cervical cancers of the human papellonavirus test used in conjunction with the PAP test; what trials are taking place within the NHS of HPV testing; and if he will make a statement. [77565]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 22 March 1999]: Research undertaken by the Imperial Cancer Research Fund in 1995 suggests that the PAP test used in conjunction with the human papellonavirus (HPV) test will detect 90 per cent. of cervical abnormalities.

There are a number of trials of HPV testing for cervical abnormalities underway, including the TOMBOLA study funded by the Medical Research Council. These trials are designed to clarify the role of the HPV test within the National Health Service cervical screening programme including an assessment of its specifity (false positive rate).

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a copy of the model clause on penalty payments for major Private Finance Initiative hospital schemes. [78377]

Mr. Denham: The payment mechanisms, which include the substance of any withholding or deduction of payments to private sector partners for their under performance, are negotiated individually for each scheme within guidelines set out by the National Health Service Executive. The payment mechanism for each scheme is described in its Full Business Case (FBC); copies of the FBCs for the major schemes that have reached financial close have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to evaluate the efficiency and effectiveness with which the contracts for those PFI schemes that have been completed were carried out; what his conclusions were; and in what ways those conclusions contributed to the negotiations over the major acute sector hospital PFI schemes selected to continue towards financial close under the first prioritisation exercise. [78338]

Mr. Denham: All the private finance initiative schemes taken forward under this Government, including the major acute hospital scheme selected under the first prioritisation exercise, have been closely monitored by the National Health Service Executive. Any lessons to be learnt from each scheme which reaches financial close are identified and disseminated through the NHS Executive's regional offices. In addition, we will shortly be issuing guidance to the NHS on the private finance initiative process.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 10 March 1999, Official Report, columns 298–99, on capital projects, if he will estimate the cost of collecting information on schemes with a capital cost of less than £10 million; and if he will make it his policy to do so. [78336]

Mr. Denham: At the moment the number, type and capital value of private finance initiative projects with a capital value of between £1 million and £10 million is monitored by the National Health Service Executive for internal management purposes. The NHS Executive will introduce within the next three months a formal central data collection system for all PFI schemes with a capital value above £1 million. This will enable accurate and reliable data to be made publicly available. I will write to the hon. Member with the information as soon as it is available.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the conditions for payment of penalties in the South Buckinghamshire (Wycombe site) Private Finance Initiative scheme. [78400]

Mr. Denham: Details of the payment mechanism for the withholding or deduction of payments to South Buckinghamshire National Health Service Trust's private sector partner under their private finance initiative contract are contained in the full business case and contract summary for the scheme. These documents were released and made publicly available in June 1997, but due to an administrative error copies were not placed in the Library, as they should have been. South Buckinghamshire NHS Trust have undertaken to send copies of these documents to the Library within the next two weeks.

Sexual and Reproductive Health

Mr. Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the Government's approach to sexual and reproductive health. [78709]

Ms Jowell: I have today announced that the Government will be developing an integrated strategy that covers the whole of sexual and reproductive health. This will tackle the continuing increase in the growth of sexually transmitted infections, particularly among teenagers and gay men, and the highest level of teenage conceptions in Western Europe. Proposals will be developed on the basis of extensive consultation with the range of professionals and organisations whose support will be vital to achieving effective action. We will publish the strategy next year.

Evesham Community Hospital

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the future role of and services provided at Evesham Community Hospital. [78112]

Mr. Denham: Worcestershire Health Authority's strategy for providing more health care in a community setting gives a significant role for all of the county's community hospitals, including Evesham. The health authority's aim is to preserve local facilities in a way that is affordable and compatible with their overall strategy for health provision in the new millennium.

The future role of Evesham Community Hospital will be as a central focus for the delivery of high quality community care services which reflect the needs of the local population and provide local access.

Diagnostic Devices

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by (a) manufacturer and (b) product name, each current application for point of care diagnostic devices for inclusion in Part IX of the Drug Tariff. [77696]

Mr. Denham: All matters concerning applications for listing Part IX of the Drug Tariff are confidential unless the applicant chooses to reveal them.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Exhibition Centres and Galleries

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the funds made available by his Department to (a) local, (b) national and (c) regional (i) exhibition centres and (ii) galleries in 1998–99. [74509]

Mr. Alan Howarth: My Department allocated the following grant-in-aid to the national galleries in 1998–99:

(i) National Gallery, £18.6 million, of which £0.7 million was allocated to maintain free admission;

(ii) National Portrait Gallery, £5.0 million, of which £0.3 million was allocated to maintain free admission;

(iii) Tate Gallery, £19.2 million, of which £1.0 million was allocated to maintain free admission.

The National Museums and Galleries on Merseyside, which includes the Walker Art Gallery and the Lady Lever Art Gallery, received £12.7 million grant-in-aid in 1998–99. Funds have since been allocated to allow free admission for children from April 1999 and for pensioners from April 2000. The 8-pass will also be held at its present level of £3 per year.

Funds were also provided for a number of national and non-national museums.

My Department also provided £8.9 million to the Museums and Galleries Commission in 1998–99. This organisation funds the network of Area Museum Councils in England which in turn contribute to the funding of a number of museums and galleries.

My Department allocated £186 million to the Arts Council for England in 1997–98, £12.5 million of which was spent on the Visual Arts. This money was distributed by the Arts Council's Visual Arts Department (£5.5 million) and by the 10 Regional Arts Boards (£7.0 million). An exact breakdown of spend into local, regional and national exhibition centres and galleries can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The figures for 1998–99 are not yet available.

Exhibition centres are not directly funded by my Department at local, regional or national level.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many civil servants in his Department have been invited to waive the Working Time Directive requirement to work less than 48 hours a week on 17 consecutive weeks; how many civil servants in his Department have refused to waive the requirement; and what is the total cost of compliance with the Directive. [76812]

Mr. Chris Smith: All staff in my Department have been issued with guidance on the Working Time Directive and two staff have signed an agreement to disapply the 48 hour limit.

The standard terms and conditions of service for staff employed by my Department are well within the limits set by the Working Time Regulations. The Regulations do not require employers to keep records of the number of workers who refuse to sign an opt-out agreement and no central records are kept by my Department. Compliance costs are not kept centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Lottery Funding

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much per capita has been allocated from the Millennium Fund to each region of the United Kingdom. [77663]

Mr. Chris Smith: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall write to the hon. Member in my capacity as Chairman of the Commission and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Performing Rights Society

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received from composers concerning the abolition of the Performing Rights Society subsidy; and if he will make a statement. [78179]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 22 March 1999]: I have received no representations from composers about the Performing Rights Society's decision to phase out its classical music subsidy. I have, however, received three letters from others on this issue.

TV Licence Concessions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will estimate the cost of extending the current TV licence concessions for sheltered accommodation to all people of pensionable age. [77892]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The estimated cost of providing £5 television licences for all pensioner-only households would be £447 million a year. There are no plans at present for such a concession. The current review of the future of the BBC licence fee after 2002 includes a detailed consideration of the structure of the existing concessionary licence scheme and whether a suitable alternative structure could be available.

National Lottery Commission

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if meetings of the National Lottery Commission will be held in public; [78168]

(2) what plans there are to publish the minutes of meetings of the National Lottery Commission. [78180]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 22 March 1999]: This is a matter, under statute, for the National Lottery Commission and I will ask the Chairman to write to the hon. Member once the Commission has been formally established on 1 April. Copies of his reply will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Indonesia

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department is taking to assist in (a) the development of sustainable forest management and (b) the preservation of orangutan habitats in Indonesia; and if she will make a statement. [77646]

Mr. Foulkes: The Department for International Development's (DFID) aim is to help poor people in developing countries gain long-term benefits from their trees, while also helping secure the global environmental benefits that forests offer. Our approach to the problem of deforestation is to support work to improve the sustainable management of forest resources in ways that lead to a range of benefits to poor communities. For the world's poor, trees and forests are a vital part of everyday survival: forests give 2,000 million people fuel to cook with; in the tropics, forests meet a large part of the needs of several hundred million people from wood products and food to medicine and income; trees increase poor farmers' security as they smooth out seasonal flows of produce and provide a reserve of capital for emergencies; forests help agriculture and fisheries by recycling nutrients, stabilising soil and influencing local and global climate; and in 18 African countries, forests represent over 10 per cent. of GDP.

The Department's approach towards forestry is explained in the recent publication "Forests Matter" and our activities are set out in the pamphlet "Forest Sector Projects", which is being revised and will be placed in the Library of the House in due course. DFID is currently working on over 150 projects with partners in 34 countries.

We are directly assisting the Government of Indonesia and the people living in the forests to develop better ways of managing the forest resource sustainably. We have helped pilot approaches at provincial level that give poor people more of a say in forest management. We are now exploring with international agencies and representatives of forest users possible changes to forest sector policy. Our aim is to ensure that degradation of the forests is reversed and that poor people who live in and around the forests derive more benefits from the way they are managed. This will give wildlife dependent on the forest, including orang-utans, a better chance of survival.

HIV

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to offer aid to South African medical workers to combat the HIV problem. [78127]

Mr. Foulkes: DFID has helped South African efforts to combat HIV/AIDS since 1995. £10 million has been provided to support the national AIDS control programme, a condom social marketing programme and community based initiatives aimed at changing sexual behaviour, especially in high risk groups. Tackling AIDS is a key priority of DFID's new development partnership with South Africa. We plan to work with other donors to support regional action to strengthen the capacity of Southern Africa Development Community member countries to combat the epidemic.

DFID also supports South Africa's essential drugs programme which makes available short courses of antiretrovirals to medical workers (especially surgeons, midwives and dentists) affected by needlestick injuries when operating on/treating HIV positive patients as a way of reducing the risk of transmission of HIV to medical workers.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money she has allocated in the last year for which figures are available for Third World countries to combat the HIV problem. [78126]

Mr. Foulkes: In the financial year 1997–98, £43 million of Britain's overseas development budget was spent on activities directly related to the problem of HIV/AIDS in the developing world. More recent figures are not yet available.

Biodiversity

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with the Department of Trade and Industry, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions concerning loss of biodiversity among traditional crop varieties for Third World farmers. [78361]

Mr. Foulkes: The Department for International Development (DFID) officials have frequently discussed the loss of biodiversity among traditional crop varieties of Third World farmers with the Department of Trade and Industry, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions. Our objective is to ensure that this important issue is taken fully into account in all relevant aspects of the UK's international policies. In particular we, along with these departments, actively contribute to the UK participation in meetings under the Convention on Biological Diversity. The Convention's multi-year work programme on agriculture biodiversity specifically recognises and seeks to support the significant contribution that traditional farming communities have made to the conservation and enhancement of biodiversity and the importance of traditional varieties.

Our officials are also actively involved in the UK participation at the FAO Commission on Genetic Resources which oversees the implementation of the Global Plan of Action on Plant Genetic Resources for Food and Agriculture. The Global Plan of Action includes measures to halt the loss of biodiversity among traditional crop varieties in developing countries.

We will be actively concerned to ensure that the conservation of agricultural biodiversity in developing countries is taken fully into account in relevant negotiations under the WTO and within the EU.

Biotechnology

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has made to the World Trade Organisation about the effects of biotechnology on developing countries. [78360]

Mr. Foulkes: The Department for International Development (DFID) is actively involved in discussions with Department of Trade and Industry (DTI), Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food (MAFF) and Department of the Environment, Transport and Regions (DETR) to ensure that developing country interests in the effects of biotechnology are properly accounted for in World Trade Organisation (WTO) negotiations. In addition we are working with international agencies to build the capacity of developing countries to represent their own interests in the WTO.

All WTO members have an opportunity in the preparatory process for a new round of trade negotiations to set out any concerns they may have regarding existing WTO agreements. We will be working to ensure that specific points are taken forward appropriately.

GM Crops

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what discussions she has had with the Department of Trade and Industry, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions concerning terminator gene technology; [78375]

(2) what discussions she has had with other Government departments concerning the effect of genetically modified crops on the agriculture of developing countries. [78376]

Mr. Foulkes: The Department for International Development (DFID) officials have had a number of discussions with the Department of Trade and Industry, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions (DETR) concerning the effect of genetically modified crops, including the so-called terminator gene technology, on the agriculture of developing countries, in particular through DFID's membership of the Interdepartmental Group on Genetic Modification Technology (IGGMOT).

Officials also actively supported the UK contribution to debate on the issue of terminator gene technology at the Fourth Conference of the Parties to the Biodiversity Convention in May 1998, which urged Parties to consider a precautionary approach and undertook, through its technical subsidiary body, to examine the consequences of this technology and to elaborate scientifically based advice.

We will shortly be publishing a statement on DFID policy towards Genetically Modified Organisms (GMOs) and developing countries, reflecting the precautionary approach and outlining the action we intend to take, in consultation with other Government Departments, on this issue in the future. DFID will also continue to work with DETR and other Government Departments successfully to conclude the negotiation of a Biosafety Protocol to the Convention on Biological Diversity, which would lay down international rules and procedures covering the transboundary movement of GMOs and help build the capacity of developing countries in related safety issues.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Task Forces

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish a list of (1) task forces and (2) policy reviews established by his Department since May 1997 which (a) had external members recruited by way of public advertisement, and details of any person so appointed and (b) engaged in public consultation exercises, and the form that these took. [74466]

Mr. Mudie: The information requested is available only at disproportionate cost.

Reading Age (Children)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what was the average reading age of children leaving primary school in each of the last 10 years; [74766]

(2) in each of the last 10 years, what proportion of children leaving primary school had a reading age of 11 or above. [74769]

Ms Estelle Morris: The reading age of pupils is not collected centrally. The typical eleven year old is expected to achieve level four in the Key Stage 2 National Curriculum assessment tests. In the 1998 Reading test, 71 per cent. of pupils achieved level four, or above. This compares with 68 per cent. of pupils in 1997, the earliest year in which the reading test results were available.

Class Sizes

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will list by (a) region and (b) local authority the (i) percentage and (ii) number of (1) Key Stage 1, (2) Key Stage 2 and (3) all pupils in maintained primary schools, who were in classes of more than 30 pupils in (i) January 1996, (ii) January 1997, (iii) January 1998, (iv) September 1998 and (v) January 1999; [74743]

(2) if he will list by (i) region and (ii) local education authority the average class size for (a) all pupils, (b) Key Stage 1 and (c) Key Stage 2 pupils in maintained primary schools in (i) January 1996, (ii) January 1997, (iii) January 1998, (iv) September 1998 and (v) January 1999. [74744]

Ms Estelle Morris: The available information on classes taught by one teacher in maintained primary schools is shown in the tables, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total value nationwide of (a) bids made by and (b) grants made to local education authorities in (i) 1998–99 and (ii) 1999–2000, for the revenue cost of meeting the class size pledge. [77570]

Ms Estelle Morris: For 1998–99, local education authorities submitted bids totalling £65.135 million and received £21.32 million in grants. For 1999–2000, there was no bidding process and authorities' revenue needs were established in the context of discussions of their implementation plans. We have recently announced grants to local education authorities of £71.882 million in total for 1999–2000.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the values of the (a) bids made by and (b) grants made to each local education authority in (i) 1998–99 and (ii) 1999–2000, for the revenue cost of meeting the class size pledge. [77569]

Ms Estelle Morris: The information requested is set out in the following table. For 1999–2000, no bids are listed as there was no bidding process and authorities' revenue needs were established in the context of discussions of their implementation plans.

Millennium Compliance

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how much money has been allocated to provide free Bug-buster courses for small and medium-sized enterprises; [75255]

(2) how many small and medium-sized enterprises have completed Bug-buster training courses; [75256]

(3) how many accredited training providers are offering Bug-buster courses funded by his Department to small and medium-sized enterprises; [75257]

(4) what plans he has for the future funding of the free delivery of Bug-buster courses for small and medium-sized enterprises. [75258]

Mr. Mudie: £26 million was allocated to provide Bug-buster training courses. As at 5 March, 24,774 people had started training, 22,376 of these had completed, and a further 9,474 had booked places. There are 180 accredited providers offering training under the scheme.

When the free programme ends, training will continue to be available at commercial prices. The average cost per business of a two day Bug-buster course will come to about £750 per trainee, which is a sound investment compared to the potential financial damage posed by the Millennium Bug.

The Government have made a significant investment in developing the courses, establishing the accreditation process and quality assuring the training, and this will continue. Small and medium-sized enterprises can also get help and advice on Year 2000 issues from their local Business Link.

Individual Learning Accounts

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many individual learning accounts have been created to date; and at what cost. [76436]

Mr. Mudie: To date, around 3,000 individual learning accounts have been opened, through 15 development projects led by TECs. The DfEE contributed £816,000 to these projects; this funding was used to test out a range of processes, systems and marketing approaches to help inform the final framework. The National Framework will be launched in 2000, from which time Individual Learning Accounts will be widely available.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to limit the amounts (a) individuals and their families and (b) employers can invest in individual learning accounts free of tax; and if he will make a statement. [77884]

Mr. Mudie: There are no plans to limit the amount an individual and/or their family can contribute to the individual's individual learning account (ILA), although the incentives will be available only on the first £500 spent on eligible courses in any one year.

There are no plans to limit the tax-free contributions that employers can invest in their employees' ILAs provided that the employers contribute to the ILAs of their lowest paid employees on similar terms and the contribution can only be used to pay for eligible learning.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which financial institution will handle individual learning accounts; and what will be the administration fee for each separate account. [77883]

Mr. Mudie: The national framework for individual learning accounts is still under development. It will be ready for launch in April 2000. We hope that a range of financial institutions will be involved in the provision of accounts. At this stage it is too early to say which financial institutions will be involved or how administration arrangements will work—currently our discussions are commercial in confidence. We plan to publish detailed arrangements for the national framework later this year.

Ministerial Meetings (US)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many times Ministers in his Department have met their counterparts in the US Government since 1 June 1998; and if he will list the dates and locations of each meeting, the Ministers involved on each occasion, and the name of the US counterpart at each meeting. [77122]

Mr. Mudie: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Employment, Welfare to Work and Equal Opportunities met his US counterpart, Alexis Herman, at the G8 conference in Washington in February this year. No other such meetings have taken place since 1 June 1998.

Operational Licences

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for (a) small and medium-sized enterprises and (b) larger companies (i) all licences and permits issued by his Department and its agencies to companies permitting them to carry out their business, (ii) the cost of each such licence or permit in (A) 1997–98 and (B) 1999–2000 and (iii) the current number of companies which are in receipt of each such licence or permit. [76847]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 16 March 1999]: (i) The Department grants Training and Enterprise Councils (TECs) and Chambers of Commerce, Training and Enterprise (CCTEs) licences to operate as TEC/CCTEs in their agreed operational area. These organisations are small or medium sized enterprises.

(ii) The TECs/CCTE licence is free of charge.

(iii) There are 72 licensed TEC/CCTEs in England.

Employment Service

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish Employment Service performance data in relation to the annual performance agreement targets on a quarterly basis. [77352]

Mr. Andrew Smith: A summary of Employment Service performance against its Annual Performance Agreement targets will be published on a quarterly basis in future, starting with the first quarter of the 1999–2000 operational year. Performance for the 1998–99 operational year as a whole will be published in the Employment Service Annual Report and Accounts before the summer recess.

Employment Service Direct

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people called Employment Service Direct in the latest period for which figures are available; what proportion of callers were (i) unemployed and (ii) employed; and what were the placings rates into jobs. [77351]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Responsibility for the subject of these questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Foster to Mr. John Healey, dated 18 March 1999.

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked Leigh Lewis to reply to your question about how many people have called Employment Service Direct in the latest period for which figures are available, the proportion of callers who were unemployed and employed and the placings rate into jobs. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to Mr. Lewis as Chief Executive of the Employment Service. I am replying in his absence.

The most recent figures show that almost 53,000 calls were made to Employment Service Direct during the week ending Saturday 13 March. Some 95 per cent. of these calls were from unemployed people. During the same week the Service placed over 1,300 people into work. Since its introduction on 4 January Employment Service Direct has received more than 480,000 calls resulting, so far, in over 9,000 job placings. Some 98 per cent. of these were of unemployed people. Further placings are likely to occur as a result of calls already made as the results of job interviews and submissions become available.

I hope this is helpful.

Public Bodies

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Cannock Chase (Dr. Wright), of 8 March 1999, Official Report, column 71, about non-departmental public bodies, for what reasons the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority declined to make its minutes available to a member of the public on 9 March. [77296]

Mr. Mudie: My answer did not differentiate between bodies which publish or make available to the public minutes of meetings and those that publish or make available summary reports of meetings. The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority declined to make available the minutes of its meetings when asked, as it does not publish these. The Authority does, however, publish summary reports of its meetings, as outlined in my pursuant reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Cannock Chase (Dr. Wright), 17 March 1999, Official Report, column 691.

School Books

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will set out the process by which each category of school will receive the £2,000 for books announced in the Budget. [77434]

Ms Estelle Morris: Each local education authority will pay £20 per pupil to schools with 100 pupils or fewer, and at least £2,000 to schools with more than 100 pupils.

Smoking

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of his Department's budget is spent on education in schools about the dangers caused by smoking; and if he will make a statement. [77588]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The dangers of smoking form a vital part of education about drugs. We are supporting £7 million of expenditure this year through the Standards Fund programme, to assist primary and secondary schools and the youth service to deliver effective education about drugs, including alcohol and tobacco. This is 1.1 per cent. of the £627 million of expenditure being supported in total through the Standards Fund programme this year, which includes a range of grants that reflect the Government's central priority of raising standards in our schools, as set out in the "Excellence in Schools" White Paper. We will also be providing increased support of £7.5 million for drug education through the Standards Fund programme in each of the next three years.

History Teaching (Ethnic Minority Backgrounds)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement about the teaching in schools of the history of the backgrounds of ethnic minorities in the United Kingdom. [77644]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The National Curriculum sets the framework for teaching in schools, within which individual schools and teachers determine detailed delivery. National Curriculum history includes a number of study units covering British, European and world history. This presents a good deal of scope for schools to teach aspects of history relevant to the backgrounds of ethnic minority communities in the UK.

Free School Meals

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate his Department has made of the number of schoolchildren who would be eligible for free school meals, but whose parents provide packed lunches instead. [77665]

Mr. Charles Clarke: These figures are not collected centrally.

Lone Parents (Hammersmith and Fulham)

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many lone parents in the unit of delivery covering Hammersmith and Fulham (a) are currently in receipt of benefit, (b) have been requested to attend interviews with respect to the New Deal, (c) have undergone such interviews and (d) have secured employment as a consequence. [77840]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Responsibility for the subject of this question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Foster to Mr. Iain Coleman, dated 23 March 1999:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked Leigh Lewis to reply to your question on lone parents in the unit of delivery covering Hammersmith and Fulham. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to Mr. Lewis as Chief Executive of the Agency. I am replying in his absence.

The New Deal for Lone Parents is targeted at those parents on Income Support whose children are of school age. It is open also to those with younger children who put themselves forward. The number of lone parents in receipt of Income Support for Hammersmith and Fulham stood at 4,000 in August 1998. This information is based on the Local Authority boundaries.

I am unable to provide the information you sought on the number of lone parents requested to attend interviews for the New Deal. This is because information on the volume of letters issued is currently only available nationally. I should point out that the contact letter sent to lone parents under the New Deal for Lone Parents is not a request for them to attend an interview. Participation is voluntary and lone parents may choose to get in touch with a New Deal Personal Adviser when it suits their circumstances. The letter aims to make lone parents aware of the New Deal and to encourage them to contact an adviser if they want support in returning to work.

Unfortunately, New Deal for Lone Parents figures are not formally available at this stage from Employment Service Districts. I, therefore, asked for a special exercise to be carried out to produce these figures. In February the number of lone parents that had initial interviews in Hammersmith and Fulham Jobcentres was 177. The number of lone parents who have secured employment in that period as a result of New Deal for Lone Parents was 46.

I hope this is helpful.

EU Fraud

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what (a) discussions he has had and (b) proposals his Department has put forward at Council of Ministers' meetings in respect of EU fraud; and if he will make a statement. [77776]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 19 March 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary, 19 March 1999, Official Report, columns 858–59.

Chelmsford Jobcentre

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the number of vacancies notified to the Chelmsford Jobcentre in each of the last six months for which figures are available. [77813]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 22 March 1999]: Responsibility for the subject of this question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Foster to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 19 March 1999:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked Leigh Lewis to reply direct to your question about the number of job vacancies notified to Chelmsford Jobcentre in each of the last six months. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to Mr. Lewis as Chief Executive of the Agency. I am replying in his absence.

Vacancies notified to Chelmsford Jobcentre were:

	Vacancies
September 1998	791
October 1998	1,120
November 1998	1,005
December 1998	531
January 1999	338
February 1999	581

I hope this is helpful.

New Deal

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans the Government have to extend the New Deal for the long-term unemployed to those unemployed for less than two years. [77632]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 22 March 1999]: Unemployed people aged 25 or more who face particular disadvantages in the labour market can already gain early access to the New Deal, after 12 months of unemployment. We are also running 28 New Deal pilot schemes for this age group, including one in Coventry, which will test the effectiveness of intervening more generally after 12 and 18 months of unemployment. These will be very carefully evaluated and we will be looking closely at what lessons can be drawn for the future.

A number of measures available under the New Deal, such as work based learning for adults, are also available to people unemployed for less than two years.

Early-years Education

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to the oral answer to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) of 18 March 1999, Official Report, column 1257, if he will publish a breakdown of the £8 billion of expenditure on pre-schools and early years education. [78248]

Ms Hodge: The estimate of some £8 billion invested in early education and childcare in England in 1998–99 and over the next three years takes into account Sure Start; local education authority expenditure on provision for under 5s; DfEE grant for nursery education provision;

DfEE childcare programmes; the childcare tax credit; local authority expenditure on the regulation and inspection of day care facilities; New Opportunities Fund expenditure on out of school childcare and expenditure by FE colleges on childcare training. Because of the different funding streams involved and the number of detailed decisions still to be taken by a variety of different agencies, it is not possible to give detailed figures at this stage.

TREASURY

Married Couples Allowance

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many taxpayers were affected by the restriction of the married couples allowance to 10 per cent. announced in the 1998 Budget; and what is the average cost per taxpayer. [70655]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 February 1999]: In his Budget on 9 March 1999, Official Report, columns 173–90, the Chancellor announced the continuing phasing out of the married couples allowance and its replacement by the new Children's Tax Credit to support families when they need it most, when they are bringing up their children. This will make 4½ million families better off.

Social Fund

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what will be the relationship between the access to Social Fund grants and loans made available to recipients of family credit and that available to recipients of the working families tax credit. [71505]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 16 February 1999]: Recipients of Family Credit have access to Social Fund Maternity and Funeral Payments. However, the increased generosity of the Working Families Tax Credit will mean that support provided through the tax credit could go considerably further up the income distribution than with Family Credit. The Government are therefore considering whether, in the future, it will still be appropriate to passport all WFTC claimants onto these additional benefits.

Housing Benefit

Ms Kelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of people in receipt of housing benefit who will become eligible for the working families tax credit after 1 April in (i) Bolton, (ii) the North West and (iii) England. [75633]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated number of families in England in receipt of both Housing Benefit and Working Families Tax Credit is 190,000 in 1999–2000. No reliable estimates are available for numbers in either Bolton or the North-West.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate on the basis of the forecast interest rates used in the Inland Revenue Press Release IR2, the average income tax relief cost per borrower as a result of his proposal to abolish mortgage interest relief in 2000–01. [77129]

Dawn Primarolo: As the Chancellor noted in his Budget statement, mortgage interest relief is worth an average of £2.50 a week.

Taxpayers

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of taxpayers in 1998–99 whose taxable income is between £1,500 and £4,300. [76944]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 16 March 1999]: There are around 4.4 million income taxpayers in 1998–99 with taxable income between £1,500 and £4,300.

Budget Implications

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list for each parliamentary constituency in the United Kingdom the number of families who will be (a) better off and (b) worse off as a result of each individual Budget measure announced by the Chancellor in his 1999 Budget statement; [76786]

(2) if he will list for each parliamentary constituency in the United Kingdom the effect for each financial year from 1999–2000 to 2001–02 on (a) an average family, (b) an average pensioner, (c) an average married couple with no dependent children, and (d) a single income taxpayer on average earnings of each Budget measure introduced by the Chancellor in his (i) 1999, (ii) 1998 and (iii) 1997 Budget Statements. [76787]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answers 16 March 1999]: Information is not available on the effect of individual Budget measures by constituency.

Childrens Tax Credit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the childrens tax credit will be paid by means of the PAYE code. [77220]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 17 March 1999]: As for other income tax reliefs and allowances, relief for the childrens tax credit would generally be given to people in employment by means of their Pay As You Earn code.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if persons entitled to the childrens tax credit will be required to claim the credit. [77221]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 17 March 1999]: As for other income tax reliefs and allowances, people with an entitlement to the childrens tax credit will be able to make a claim for relief.

Population (Local Authority Areas)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the estimated population of each local authority area for each of the years since 1989. [77525]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Martyn Jones, dated 23 March 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on the estimated population of each local authority area.

ONS produce mid-year population estimates for local authority areas in England and Wales. Total population figures for each local authority area are published and the most recent publication relates to mid-1997. The attached list gives details of where those population estimates have been published.

ONS have also published estimates at the local authority level for the United Kingdom for years from 1990 to 1996 in Regional Trends (numbers 27 to 33). For Northern Ireland and Scotland the mid-year population estimates for 1989 and 1997 are given in the tables.

Euro

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the measures, and their objectives, which require, under article 109(5) of the Treaty of Union, the unanimous agreement of the United Kingdom and those states already participating in the euro area. [77661]

Ms Hewitt: In accordance with Article 109L(5) of the EC Treaty the Council would adopt the rate at which Sterling would be fixed irrevocably against the euro. The rate would require the unanimous agreement of the participating Member States and the UK. The Council, acting under the same procedure would also take the other measures necessary for the introduction of the euro in the UK, including the detailed transitional arrangements.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps are being taken to ensure that euro coins minted throughout the EU can be used in vending machines. [77647]

Ms Hewitt: EU Mint Directors, in association with member states, are developing a quality management system for euro coins. This will include procedures for regular consultation with the vending machine industry for testing vending mechanisms.

VAT (Care for the Elderly)

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to remove VAT on care for the elderly in cases where social services sub-contract the service and instruct the sub-contractor to recover the cost directly from the elderly. [77934]

Dawn Primarolo: Services performed or supervised by qualified nurses are exempt from VAT where those services are predominantly for the medical needs of the patient.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those measures in the Budget which will assist the United Kingdom in conforming to his five economic tests for joining EMU. [77895]

Ms Hewitt: The Government have said that the UK economy needs a period of economic stability in order to demonstrate settled and sustainable convergence. The Budget reinforces economic stability by keeping the public finances under control, while allowing fiscal policy to support the economy in the next phase of the cycle. The measures contained in the Budget to raise productivity and increase employment opportunities for all will also improve the flexibility of the UK economy to adapt to economic change. These measures are in the national economic interest. Preparations should be made in this Parliament so that, should the economic tests be met, a decision to join a successful single currency can be made early in the next Parliament.

Employment

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the impact of a 1 per cent. increase in wages on employment levels. [77888]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 19 March 1999]: The impact on employment would depend on why wages increased, and how employers, employees and others in the labour force responded to the increase in wages. For example, an increase in wages reflecting higher productivity need not have any effect on employment.

Community Projects

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is his policy to apply the guidance in VAT Information Sheet 4/98-Local Authorities, Community Projects and VAT Recovery, to contracts entered into after 31 March 1999. [78287]

Dawn Primarolo: Yes. Expanded guidance is given in VAT Information Sheet 1/99.

Revenue Statistics

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing (a) actual tax revenue and (b) national insurance revenue in each of the past three years, adjusted for inflation; and what estimates he has made for such revenues in the forthcoming year. [77626]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 22 March 1999]: Figures for tax revenues are published in table S24 of Financial Statistics. Figures for the GDP deflator are published in table 2.1 of Economic Trends. Forecasts of tax revenues were published in table B10 of the March 1999 Financial Statement and Budget Report.

Departmental Reports

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the 1999 departmental reports to be published. [78425]

Mr. Milburn: Publication dates for the 1999 departmental reports will be as follows:

	Departments
Tuesday 23 March	Department of Health Law Officers' departments
Wednesday 24 March	Department for Education and Employment
Thursday 25 March	Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions Cabinet Office
Friday 26 March	Home Office Ministry of Defence Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food
Monday 29 March	HM Treasury and Chancellor's departments Department for Culture, Media and Sport
Tuesday 30 March	Inland Revenue HM Customs & Excise Department of Social Security Scottish Office Welsh Office Northern Ireland Office Department for International Development Department of Trade and Industry Lord Chancellor's Department
Wednesday 31 March	Main Estimates (for each department) Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses Foreign and Commonwealth Office

Tax Law Rewrite Project

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Tax Law Rewrite project. [78572]

Dawn Primarolo: I am pleased to announce that the Tax Law Rewrite project continues to make very good progress. The Inland Revenue will be publishing on 30 March the project's fourth Exposure Draft, which contains draft clauses on the trading income of individuals. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of the House on that day.

This latest publication includes rewritten legislation covering the rules for calculating the profits of a trade, the basis period rules and the rules on farming. I would strongly encourage anyone with an interest in these areas to participate fully in the consultation process, which is key to the success of the project.

Fuel Oil Duty

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated additional yield from the increase in fuel oil duty in the Budget for (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01. [77457]

Ms Hewitt: HM Customs and Excise estimate the additional yield, compared to an indexed base, from the increase in fuel oil duty to be £15 million in 1999–2000 and £25 million in 2000–01.

Shipping (Taxation)

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) by what date he has asked Lord Alexander to produce his report on the taxation of shipping; and if that report will be published; [76845]

(2) what terms of reference he has set for Lord Alexander's review of shipping taxation; [76844]

(3) when Lord Alexander has been asked to complete his review of shipping taxation; [76912]

(4) if the review of shipping taxation by Lord Alexander will consider matters relating to (a) social security contributions, (b) income tax contributions and (c) linkages to training; [76913]

(5) what assistance will be provided to Lord Alexander by the Government during his review of shipping taxation; and if officials from the Inland Revenue will assist Lord Alexander during the review; [76846]

(6) if the review of shipping taxation by Lord Alexander has considered taxation regimes other than the proposed tonnage tax; [77087]

(7) what plans he has to introduce the changes in shipping taxation recommended by Lord Alexander in this session's Finance Bill. [77086]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answers 15 and 16 March 1999]: The scope of the inquiry is set out in the terms of reference, which are:

"To conduct an independent study of the case for, and the design of, a lower rate ring-fenced tonnage-based tax and additional enhanced training incentives, for the shipping industry, taking account of the Government's objectives for UK shipping, and the national and international tax and competitiveness issues involved, concluding as soon as is practical."

Lord Alexander will have access to officials from all relevant departments. It would of course be premature to consider any changes to the taxation of shipping in advance of Lord Alexander's report.

Budget Publications

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many copies of Her Majesty's Treasury Budget Summary, "Budget 99, Building a Stronger Economic Future for Britain", have been (a) printed and (b) sent out by his Department; what was the cost of (i) printing and (ii) postage to where they have been sent; and if he will make a statement. [77299]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 18 March 1999]: 1.5 million Budget summary leaflets have been printed and distributed at a cost of £100,000 for printing and postage.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the titles of the documents which his Department has issued to Ministers to explain the Budget to the press and general public. [77323]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 18 March 1999]: The documents include the Budget 99 Report, the Budget 99 leaflet, a consultation document on the Climate Change Levy and the following Press Notices:

Exchange Rates (Employment)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his assessment of the effects on United Kingdom employment of the change in the value of the (a) Deutschmark and (b) euro relative to the pound sterling since 1 May 1997. [77590]

Ms Hewitt: The effects of exchange rate changes cannot be reliably isolated from the other influences on UK employment. Since the second quarter of 1997 total employment is estimated to have increased by 503,000 to stand at its highest ever recorded level.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Abattoirs (Inspection Charges)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will change inspection charges for abattoirs from hourly rates to charges based on throughput-headage payments. [66159]

Mr. Rooker: Although harmonised EU rules lay down standard charges for hygiene inspections in slaughterhouses and cutting plants, the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) is required under Treasury rules to recover the full costs of the services it provides to its customers, be they fresh meat premises or the Government. As the major part of the MHS costs are the time costs arising from the deployment of MHS inspection staff in fresh meat premises, MHS charges are set on a 'per hour' basis since this basis accurately reflects the real costs of providing the inspection service in individual abattoirs and cutting plants. It also encourages operators of such businesses to plan and execute their operations efficiently. In those small premises with only low throughputs of animals or meat, the average inspection charge per animal or tonne of meat will inevitably be higher than in those high throughput premises which are operated efficiently since the latter will inevitably benefit from economies of scale. Any alternative charging system, based solely on throughput of animals or meat, would simply result in large abattoirs or cutting plants having to subsidise the small businesses. The EU Charges Directive precludes Member State Governments from subsidising hygiene inspection costs.

In relation to charges for the enforcement of specified risk material controls, we have already acknowledged that charges based on throughput rather than an hourly rate could bring benefits to small low-throughput abattoirs and announced that officials have been asked to consider the feasibility of altering the basis of these charges. However any such change would require amendments to the legislation recently laid before Parliament to enable these charges to be levied.

Genetically Modified Food

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list consents he has given, specifying under what legal authority, for cultivation of genetically modified crops for (a) research and (b) sale; and for each consent the name of (i) applicant, (ii) company and (iii) owner, if different, (1) the area of (A) enclosed and (B) open tillage of the crop, and (2) its location; the purpose of (x) research and (y) sale, together with any purchaser if known, and the period of permission. [72563]

Mr. Rooker: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment on 19 March 1999, Official Report, column 879.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the genetically modified foods, crops or seeds, for which licence applications are pending which contain a translator enhancer. [73019]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 25 February 1999]: Although translator enhancers are found widely in nature, they have not been added as part of the modification for the only GM food under consideration in the EU which has been recommended for approval by the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes (genetically modified (GM) tomato products). In the case of GM green-hearted and radicchio rosso chicory, the only other pending applications which have been considered by the ACNFP, the committee did not recommend approval because, among other reasons, the molecular data were incomplete. Copies of the ACNFP's advice on both products is available in the Library of the House.

The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions hold details of applications pending under EC Regulation 90/220 for GM crops and seeds. I have asked the Ministry of the Environment to provide details of any applications which contain translator enhancers.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to require those responsible for the production of genetically modified foods to take out adequate insurance to cover compensation claims for any resulting damage to human health. [75108]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 8 March 1999]: All genetically modified (GM) foods are subject to a full and rigorous safety assessment to ensure that they are as safe as their non-GM counterpart before approval. Whilst it is a criminal offence under the Food Safety Act 1990 to sell any food which is injurious to health or unfit for human consumption, insurance arrangements are a matter for individual companies.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to require genetically-modified food manufacturers to demonstrate clinical efficacy through clinical trials before being permitted to make claims regarding the alleged health advantages of such foods; and if he will make a statement. [76510]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 16 March 1999]: Clinical efficacy forms part of the assessment procedure for all new drugs and therefore applies to any substances, including those which have the appearance of foods, where medicinal claims are made, that is that they will prevent, treat or cure a human disease. Any GM foods, where such claims are not being made (which includes all those currently on the market), are subject to different, but equally strict, safety assessment criteria based on establishing that they do not present a danger to the public; as well as the requirements that the public are not misled in any way about them; and that they do not disadvantage the public in terms of their nutritional content.

Claims that foods may have beneficial health (but not medicinal) effects may be made so long as they are accurate and do not mislead consumers. A voluntary Code of Practice for validation of all health claims relating to food is being developed by a joint body comprising representatives from consumer groups, food law enforcement authorities and industry.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will announce a new labelling regime for genetically modified foods; and if he will make a statement. [77537]

Mr. Rooker: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for East Lothian (Mr. Home Robertson) on 18 March 1999, Official Report, column 814.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what unlicensed genetically modified soya has formed part of the ingredients of products on sale in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [77261]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 18 March 1999]: None. Recent press reports that the Worcester Trading Standards Department had detected a non-approved genetically (GM) soya ingredient related to a sample of material that entered the country before May 1997, the composition of which could not be verified analytically. There is therefore no evidence that non-approved GM material is entering the food supply. In 1997, the only GM soya grown commercially in the USA was Monsanto's Round-up Ready soya. This is the approved soya currently being used in food in the UK.

European Scrutiny Committee

Mr. Trend: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Donoughue, had in his possession the questions which he was going to be asked by the European Scrutiny Committee on Wednesday 10 February before the meeting took place. [75718]

Mr. Rooker: The House of Commons European Scrutiny Committee sitting held on 10 February posed a wide range of questions. The Parliamentary Secretary was aware at a briefing session two days before the meeting what were the main policy areas which would attract questions from the Committee. However, he did not know many of the questions that were to be raised.

Having some knowledge in advance of the Committee's main questions helped the Parliamentary Secretary to reply promptly and in as informative a way as possible, for the benefit of the Committee. It is helpful to the Committee. It can avoid the need for copious follow up correspondence. It is not expected by, nor necessary to, Ministers.

My noble Friend the Parliamentary Secretary informs me he did not know at the time of the particular contacts between officials of the Scrutiny Committee and of MAFF: he did not ask for nor initiate them and played no part in the preparation of his brief. This contact was initiated by officials of the Scrutiny Committee. It is a common, though not universal, practice which also obtained under previous Administrations.

Imported Foods

Mr. Gray: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about powers to ban importation of foods whose production standards are illegal in this country. [74696]

Mr. Rooker: All imported foods are subject to general and specific regulations covering food safety and quality. Responsibility for enforcing these regulations lies with port health and local authorities. Ministers have special powers if, under exceptional circumstances, it is necessary to enforce these regulations.

Cattle Bones

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the organs, tissues and fluids to which the cells produced in cattle bones may migrate. [76224]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 12 March 1999]: The hon. Member may be aware that the cells produced in bone marrow contribute to the cell composition of blood and lymph tissues. They may thus be widely distributed through the body. In the context of BSE, a large number of fluids and tissues from cattle, particularly those which enter the human food chain, have been tested for infectivity. Those which may be potentially infected are statutorily required to be removed from the food chain.

Communications (Farmers)

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he has taken to allow farmers (a) to communicate with his Department and (b) to provide details for the various forms required via e-mail. [76218]

Mr. Morley: We have in place a number of measures designed to help farmers communicate with my Department and its IT systems more easily.

Under the Cattle Tracing System, movements of cattle can be communicated electronically to MAFF, particularly via markets and abattoirs.

On CAP Schemes, we are trialling the electronic submission of application forms. This will be available following on from the introduction next year of a new IT system for IACS. More immediately, we are about to introduce a facility for farmers to receive payments under these schemes via BACS.

We are also working on a number of other areas to consider electronic communications with the farmer—cattle passport application forms; health certification of animals for export purposes; and electronic submission of agricultural census and survey forms. As a precursor to this we are asking farmers via the 1999 June Census to provide an e-mail address if applicable.

My hon. Friend will also be interested to note that over 200 of my Department's forms are available on the MAFF Website, some as specimens and others to be printed off for completion. Generally, however, electronic submission of completed forms awaits further development, to safeguard matters such as physical and financial security.

Biotechnical Industry

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many unminuted pre-arranged meetings occurred between (a) himself, (b) Ministers in his Department and (c) his officials and representatives of the biotechnical industry sector since 1 May 1998. [74837]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 5 March 1999]: I and my officials are in regular contact with representatives of all those with an interest in biotechnology—including environmental groups, consumer groups and biotechnology companies.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many representations his Department has received from the United States Government on genetically modified organisms since 1 May 1997; on what dates each representation was received; in what form each representation was made; and from which United States department each originated. [77121]

Mr. Rooker: Details of ministerial meetings with the US government and this Department are provided in my answer of 18 March 1999, Official Report, column 819.

Officials maintain bilateral relations with their opposite numbers in a number of other Governments, including that of the US, and also with officials in their Embassies in the UK. The UK's commitment to a science based approach to biotechnology which protects public health and the environment is made clear in all discussions about this technology.

Food Safety

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all those (a) food and (b) health food products on which he has received advice from his civil servants since 1 May 1997 as being a cause for concern. [76651]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 15 March 1999]: Ministers receive advice on a wide range of issues relating to the composition and labelling of food and health food products. Details of each occasion on which this happened could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for each year since 1990 the statutory codes of practice that have been issued, pursuant to section 40 of the Food Safety Act 1990. [77502]

Mr. Rooker: There are currently 20 Codes of Practice, a full list and copies of these are available from the Library of the House.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what procedure he has in place to ensure that his Department knows when the rates of (a) food sampling and (b) food analysis by local authorities, in relation to their statutory duties on food law, fall during the course of any given year; [77513]

(2) if he will list the categories of information that have been supplied by local authorities in response to requests under section 41 of the Food Safety Act 1990; [77506]

(3) what information he collects from local authorities, in relation to their statutory duties to enforce food law, about their levels of (a) food sampling and (b) food analysis; [77514]

(4) what use he has made of the powers provided by section 41 of the Food Safety Act 1990; [77508]

(5) what information he collects from local authorities, in relation to their statutory duties to enforce food law, about the scopes of analysis and examination undertaken by public analysts. [77507]

Mr. Rooker: Statistics covering many areas of food control, including sampling, are compiled by the Ministry from returns required to be submitted by local authorities in the United Kingdom under section 41 of the Food Safety Act 1990 as part of the information for the annual return we are required to make to the Commission under article 14 of the Council Directive on the Official Control of Foodstuffs. A copy of the latest return was recently placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what guidance has been issued by the Joint Food Safety and Standards Group of his Department and the Department of Health to local authorities with respect to their statutory obligations to sample foods; [77505]

(2) if he will list for each year since 1989 all the occasions on which his Department and the Department of Health issued guidance to local authorities on the numbers of samples to be taken with respect to their statutory obligations to sample foods; [77504]

(3) what steps he has taken to ensure that local authorities have (a) constructed and (b) implemented proper sampling programmes in relation to food law; [77517]

(4) what powers he has to prevent the rates of (a) food sampling and (b) food analysis by local authorities, in relation to their statutory duties on food law, falling (i) during any given year and (ii) in successive years; [77510]

(5) if he will publish for each year since 1989 what his Department's and the Department of Health's guidance was to local authorities with respect to their statutory obligations to ensure that samples of foods were properly analysed by public analysts; [77519]

(6) if he will publish for each year since 1989 what his Department's and the Department of Health's guidance was to local authorities on the numbers of samples to be taken with respect to their statutory obligations to sample food; [77503]

(7) what powers he has to direct local authorities, in relation to their statutory duties on food law, to maintain a minimum level of (a) food sampling and (b) food analysis; [77511]

(8) if he will list each occasion on which he has exercised the powers, under section 42 of the Food Safety Act 1990, to direct local authorities to undertake adequate and satisfactory sampling of food; [77518]

Mr. Rooker: Responsibility for enforcement of food law rests with the relevant food authorities throughout the UK. All local authorities determine their sampling and inspection programmes in the light of local circumstances and guidance provided in the Codes of Practice issued by the Ministry and the Department of Health under section 40 of the Food Safety Act 1990. While section 40 (2)(a) of the Act imposes a legal obligation on food authorities to have regard to the Codes, it does not impose an obligation to comply with them.

Farm Produce (Charter Mark)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce a quality charter mark for farm produce from the North West Region. [77527]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 18 March 1999]: Quality Assurance Schemes for farm produce which go beyond statutory requirements are for the industry to take forward in light of their assessment of market conditions.

Dairy Products

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what impact he expects the agreed Agenda 2000 package to have on (a) consumer prices for milk and (b) other dairy products in the United Kingdom. [77453]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 18 March 1999]: The provisional agreement by the EU Agriculture Council on 11 March to the Agenda 2000 CAP reform package will result in a 15% reduction in support prices for butter and skimmed milk powder, over a period of three years beginning in 2003. As a consequence, the aggregate value of UK milk consumption, measured at farmgate prices, is estimated to fall by some £400 million a year by the end of the period. This will mean that consumers will benefit from lower retail prices for milk and dairy products than would otherwise obtain. If all the savings are passed to consumers, the effect will be approximately equivalent to 4% of the retail price of a pint of liquid milk, and 8% of the retail price of butter.

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of the retail price for milk in the United Kingdom was accounted for by the raw milk price in January (a) 1997, (b) 1998, and (c) 1999. [77451]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 18 March 1999]: The farmgate price of milk accounted for 38.1 per cent. of the retail price in January 1997, 32.7 per cent. in January 1998 and 32.1 per cent. in January 1999. The percentages in January 1998 and 1999 are much the same as in the early 1990s. The real price spread—the difference between the retail price and the farmgate price adjusted for inflation—fell by 2 per cent. between January 1997 and January 1999.

Animal Feeding Stuffs

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how much money was (a) spent in 1989–90 to 1997–98 and (b) allocated in 1998–99 by each individual local authority on the sampling and analysis of animal feeding stuffs in relation to statutory duties to enforce the provisions of the law controlling animal feeding stuffs; [77500]

(2) how much money was (a) spent between 1989–90 and 1997–98 and (b) allocated in 1998–99 by each local authority on the sampling and analysis of animal feeding stuffs for veterinary medicaments in relation to statutory duties to enforce the provisions of the law controlling animal feeding stuffs. [77501]

Mr. Rooker: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what powers he has to direct local authorities properly to discharge their duties under the Agriculture Act 1970 in relation to the taking and submitting for analysis of samples of animal feeding stuffs. [77515]

Mr. Rooker: The powers to direct local authorities to discharge properly their duties in respect of sampling and analysis of animal feeding stuffs can be found at section 67, of Part IV of the Agriculture Act 1970.

Under section 67 of Part IV of the Agriculture Act 1970, the Minister can obtain a report from each enforcement authority on the way the legislation is being enforced in its area. This report can include information supplied by the agricultural analyst to the authority. If this Part of the Act is not enforced sufficiently, by an enforcement authority, the Minister can appoint one or more inspectors to undertake the enforcement duties of that authority. Such costs shall be repaid by the enforcement authority.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the Government consulted the Association of Public Analysts about the proposed transfer of the duty to sample animal feeding stuffs for analysis for veterinary medicines from local authorities to the Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain. [77521]

Mr. Rooker: Yes. A wide range of interests, including the Association of Public Analysts, was consulted by the Veterinary Medicines Directorate on 10 October 1997 about proposals for the Medicated Feedingstuffs Regulations 1998.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the duty to sample animal feedingstuffs for analysis for veterinary medicines was transferred from local authorities to the Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain. [77520]

Mr. Rooker: Responsibility transferred to the Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain on 6 May 1998, when the Medicated Feedingstuffs Regulations 1998 came into force.

Monsanto New Leaf Potatoes

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy in respect of the importation from the United States of Monsanto's New Leaf potatoes. [77307]

Mr. Rooker: As Monsanto's New Leaf potatoes are genetically modified and have not been approved under the EC Novel Foods Regulation (258/97) and EC Regulation 90/220, their importation into the European Union would be illegal. MAFF has drawn this to the attention of processed potato importers.

Animals for Slaughter

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reasons Her Majesty's Government have not ratified the Convention of the Council of Europe for the protection of animals for slaughter; and if he will make a statement. [77606]

Mr. Morley: The Government fully intend to ratify the Convention and I am pleased to confirm that arrangements to do so are now nearly complete. Legislation implementing the Convention's provisions (and EU Directive 93/119) has been in place throughout the UK since 1996, but it has also been necessary to obtain the views of the authorities of the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man in order that ratification can take place.

Meadowlands

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to assess the report of the Council for the Protection of Rural England concerning the disappearance of meadow and grasslands. [77667]

Mr. Morley: As a recent CPRE publication explains, meadow and grasslands may be lost for a number of reasons. MAFF officials are working closely with the statutory environmental agencies to develop workable proposals for the implementation of particular provisions of the EU Directive on environmental impact assessment (EIA). Those provisions apply to all types of uncultivated land or semi-natural areas, but only where projects to bring such land into intensive agricultural use give rise to significant environmental effects.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to introduce protection for meadowland. [77529]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 18 March 1999]: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food is working closely with the statutory environmental agencies to develop workable proposals. The objective is to improve protection of the environment without imposing over-bureaucratic controls on farmers.

Food Standards Agency

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact of the proposed Food Standards Agency levy on farm shops. [77530]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 18 March 1999]: The purpose of the current consultation exercise is to elicit views on the impact of the proposed levy on all types of food premises that would fall within its scope. We will consider carefully the implications for farm shops in the light of the responses we receive.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will replace the proposed flat rate for the proposed Food Standards Agency levy with a sliding scale based on size of operation. [77532]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 18 March 1999]: Public consultation on the proposed levy ends on 24 March. We will not reach final decisions on the proposed flat rate or any other aspects of the proposals until we have considered carefully all the responses we receive.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce a minimum size below which shops will be exempt from paying the proposed Food Standards Agency levy. [77531]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 18 March 1999]: The proposals, on which we are currently consulting, envisage exemptions for premises on which the only food sales are wrapped confectionery, soft drinks, crisps and similar wrapped products. Premises not required to register with the local authority under the Food Premises (Registration) Regulations 1991 would also be exempt. The public consultation period ends on 24 March, and we will not reach any final decisions on exemptions or any other aspects of the proposals until we have considered all the responses carefully.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will apply the proposed Food Standards Agency levy to food producers. [77533]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 18 March 1999]: The proposals on which we are currently consulting are for the proposed levy to apply to food retail and retail catering premises required to register with the local authority under the Food Premises (Registration) Regulations 1991. We will not reach final decisions until we have considered carefully all the responses we receive.

Mrs. May: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate how many people will be employed at the Food Standards Agency; and what the consequential changes will be to staff numbers in terms of (a) actual numbers and (b) establishment in his Department. [77557]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 19 March 1999]: The Food Standards Agency is expected to employ around 500 HQ staff, plus some 1,500 staff in the Meat Hygiene Service, and also have small numbers of staff based in executive branches in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Some 315 core MAFF posts and 1,500 from the Meat Hygiene Service are expected to transfer to the Agency, together with other posts currently in the Department of Health, the Scottish, Welsh and Northern Ireland Departments.

Pig Farmers

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what help he is giving to pig farmers in the United Kingdom; what assessment he has made of the impact the recent proposals to reform the Common Agricultural Policy will have on pig farmers; what plans he has to implement the recommendations contained in the Agriculture Committee's report, the UK Pig Industry (HC 87) Session 1998–99; and if he will make a statement. [77454]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 19 March 1999]: At EU level, I supported improvements in export refunds and the introduction of a private storage aid scheme. Within the UK, I miss no opportunity to make it known that the British pig industry produces a quality product to high welfare and other standards. Although pig farmers are not directly affected by the CAP reform exercise, they will benefit from the substantial reduction in cereal prices, as feed is their main costs. I welcome the Agriculture Select Committee's report on the UK Pig Industry to which the Government will shortly submit their response.

Sheep Exports

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the monetary value in (i) 1997 and (ii) 1998 of live lambs and sheep exported from the UK for (a) slaughter and (b) further fattening; and if he will make a statement. [77949]

Mr. Morley: The split for the value of UK exports of live lambs and sheep between those going for slaughter and further fattening is not readily available. However it is estimated that the total value of UK exports of live lambs and sheep was £84m in 1997 and £71m in 1998. these figures include exports from Northern Ireland to the Irish Republic. The value of exports from Great Britain to all other destinations is estimated to have been £23m in 1997 and £26m in 1998, of which approximately 90% went for further fattening and the remainder for slaughter.

Abattoirs

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will allow abattoirs to operate under the rules of the Date Based Export Scheme for part of each week whilst operating normally on other days. [78022]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 22 March 1999]: European Commission Decision 98/692/EC, which governs the Data-based Export Scheme (DBES), requires that the only cattle DBES abattoirs may slaughter are those that are eligible for the scheme. However, DBES abattoirs may slaughter sheep and pigs, to which the DBES controls would not apply.

Cattle Passports

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of cattle passports have been incorrectly issued in the past six months. [78019]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The percentage of cattle passports incorrectly issued in the last six months is not available. However, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend for South Derbyshire (Mr. Todd) on 18 March 1999, Official Report, column 816.

Beef Ban

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to be able to lift the ban on the sale of beef on the bone. [78117]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 22 March 1999]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Wirral, South (Mr. Chapman) by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 4 February 1999, Official Report, columns 1077–78.

Milk Marketing Council

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will permit expenditure by the Milk Marketing Council on generic advertising. [78025]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The functions of the Milk Development Council are set out in the Milk Development Council Order 1995. These functions do not permit expenditure by the Council on generic advertising. My right hon. Friend is, however, open to representations by the dairy farming industry on changing the functions of the Milk Development Council.

Sea Anglers

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what estimate he has made of the numbers of anglers who fish from charter boats off the south Devon coast; how many fish they catch; and how their catches affect fish stocks in the area; [77566]

(2) if he will list each EU country which applies quotas and species bans to its recreational fishermen; and if he will make a statement. [77567]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 22 March 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 15 December 1998, Official Report, column 500.

Grants (Diversification)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what grants are available from (a) Her Majesty's Government and (b) the European Union to farmers in (i) Lancashire and (ii) Chorley to help them to diversify. [78118]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 22 March 1999]: Funding to encourage a wide range of agricultural activities, including farm diversification, is available in the six areas designated to receive assistance under the English Objective 5B Structural Fund Programmes. The Northern Uplands Objective 5b area includes parts of Lancashire but does not include Chorley. No grant aid for farm diversification is available outside the designated areas.

The Rural Development Commission (RDC), which is the Government Agency responsible for promoting economic and social development in rural England, can provide redundant building grants in priority Rural Development Areas, including parts of Lancashire. These grants can help owners to renovate and bring back into productive use, buildings which are lying idle and semi-derelict, or which are becoming redundant for their current use. The buildings must be used for business purposes once renovation works are complete, with the aim of providing new job opportunities, or protecting existing jobs. As from 1 April these grants will be available from the new Regional Development Agencies.

Milk Quotas

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reason the EU decided not to enlarge United Kingdom milk quotas until 2003. [78020]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The agreement reached by EU Agriculture Ministers on 11 March delayed cutting milk support prices until 2003 as a means of reducing the overall costs of the Agenda 2000 reform package. Consequently, the introduction of direct payments and general increases in milk quota will also be delayed until 2003. However, some specific increases in milk quota, including an increase for Northern Ireland, will be introduced in 2000–01 and 2001–02.

Milk

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what comparative assessment he has made of investment in modernisation of the milk processing industry in the United Kingdom and (a) other EU Member States and (b) other countries which export milk products to the United Kingdom; [78194]

(2) what analysis he has made of the effect of vertical integration on the competitiveness of milk production and milk processing in the United Kingdom milk and milk products industry in relation to (a) other EU Member States and (b) other nations which export milk products to the United Kingdom; [78196]

(3) what analysis he has made of the competitiveness of the United Kingdom milk and milk products industry in relation to (a) national industries in each of the EU Member States and (b) other nationally-structured milk and milk product industries. [78199]

Mr. Rooker: The Department has not undertaken any such detailed comparative analysis.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what projections he has made of the growth or decline of the United Kingdom milk and milk products industry over the next (a) five, (b) 10 and (c) 15 years. [78198]

Mr. Rooker: The size of the United Kingdom milk and milk products industry is constrained by milk quotas. In the period up to 2006 the output of the UK milk and milk products industry can be expected to increase in line with the increases in the UK milk quota agreed as part of the Agenda 2000 reforms of the Common Agricultural Policy. In the longer term, the size of the UK milk and milk products industry will depend on the decisions of the EU Council of Agriculture Ministers as to the shape of the EU dairy regime beyond 2006.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which countries exported (a) milk and (b) processed milk products to the United Kingdom in each year from 1995 to date; and what was the value of the imports from each country in each year. [78201]

Mr. Rooker: The available information is shown in the following table.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the likely impact on the United Kingdom milk and milk products industry of the proposed enlargement of the European Union. [78197]

Mr. Rooker: Enlargement would afford the United Kingdom milk and milk products industry unrestricted access to the markets of those countries which accede to the European Union. Equally, as part of the single market, the milk processing industries of the acceding countries would have access to the markets of the existing EU member states.

Badgers

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will announce the next areas to be brought into the randomised badger culling trial. [78578]

Mr. Rooker: Using the criteria set out in their report of last July, the Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB has now identified the third triplet of trial areas. It is located in east Cornwall, and work will begin there shortly.

Intervention Board

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the Next Steps Review of the Intervention Board. [78579]

Mr. Nick Brown: In accordance with the Government's policy on periodic reviews of executive agencies, Agricultural Ministers have agreed that the Intervention Board should commence a thorough evaluation of Agency status in March and produce a report in July 1999. In the light of ongoing issues such as devolution and the reform of the Common Agricultural Policy, the reconsideration of the prior options element of the review has been deferred until March 2001.

In order to ensure that all matters are considered fully, comments regarding the performance of the Intervention Board since April 1993, which should be provided by 30 April 1999, would be welcomed from interested parties. The contact point at the Intervention Board for inquiries and correspondence is:

Mrs. A. K. Parker

Farmers (North-West)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will provide further support to farmers in the North West. [77528]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 18 March 1999]: The package of measures provisionally agreed in Brussels recently represented a good deal for UK farmers, especially those from the hills.

In addition, beef and sheep farmers are likely to benefit from compulsory compensation as a result of the effects of the introduction of the euro on direct payments. We hope to announce details of this shortly.

Food Sampling

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what access the Review of the Public Analyst Arrangements in England and Wales had to information about the sampling and analysis of food samples held by local authorities; and what restrictions were placed on the publication of that information. [77951]

Mr. Rooker: The Public Analyst Review Team sought information through submissions from interested parties, including local authorities and public analysts, and the Review Team visited a number of authorities and sought information from them directly during those visits. Some of the information relating to their enforcement activities was given in confidence. The Review Report and any non-confidential information gathered has been placed in the Library of the House.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Palace Lifts

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee if the Committee will investigate the possibility of increasing the speed of lifts within the Palace. [78254]

Sir Sydney Chapman: The Parliamentary Works Directorate has a rolling programme of lift machinery modernisation. Five lifts in the Palace are to be refurbished in 1999. When new machinery is installed the lift winding speed can be adjusted and I have asked the Director of Parliamentary Works to ensure that speeds are carefully set with regard to both the convenience and the comfort of users. Door speeds are generally set so as not to inconvenience any users with disabilities.

WALES

Crickhowell House

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the cost of furnishing Crickhowell House for the Welsh Assembly; and if he will make a statement. [77462]

Mr. Hain: The current estimated cost of furnishing Crickhowell House for the Assembly is £2 million. This is included in the estimate for establishing the Assembly stated in the Explanatory and Financial Memorandum to the Government of Wales Bill.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for what reason no external assessment has been made of the plans of his Department for millennium compliance. [78461]

Mr. Hain: Independent assessment of the Welsh Office's Year 2000 programme is being undertaken by the Department's Internal Audit Service, who report separately to the Permanent Secretary from the staff responsible for implementing the compliance programme.

The content of the programme was audited at inception and progress against established activities is reviewed on a regular basis. Internal Audit are free to recommend changes to the programme as they see fit.

Duplicating this effort by employing external assessors is unnecessary and would add additional costs to the compliance programme.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

EU Project Appraisal

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when was the last time that (a) the ALA and (b) the EDF Committee of the European Commission completely rejected a proposed project (i) on any subject and (ii) on environmental and social grounds; what was the title of the project; and what were the grounds for the objections. [77930]

Mr. Foulkes: The Asia and Latin America (ALA) and European Development Fund (EDF) committees have not completely rejected any proposal within the last 12 months. Such rejection is rare for three reasons. A proposal cannot be blocked by a single member state acting alone. Secondly, if the commission senses that there is wide opposition to a project, it may choose to voluntarily withdraw the proposal from the agenda. Finally, in order to secure sufficient support from member states to proceed, the Commission may undertake to revise aspects of its proposals to take account of the views expressed by member states. In the last 12 months, the following projects have either been withdrawn or blocked as a result of pressure applied by the member states.

Date/Project	Action taken	Reason
July 1998
IGAD—fisheries	Withdrawn	Regional instability
Guinea Bissau—(3 projects)	Withdrawn	Insecurity
September 1998
Ivory Coast—Decentralisation Programme (1st presentation)	Blocked	Insufficient poverty focus/lack of specific outputs
December 1998
Kenya—northern corridor	Blocked	Maintenance concerns
Ivory Coast—Decentralisation Programme (2nd presentation)	Blocked	Insufficient poverty focus
March 1999
Haiti—Direct Budged Aid	Withdrawn	Political circumstances in Haiti
Haiti—Rural development	Withdrawn	Political circumstances in Haiti

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when was the last time that (a) the ALA and (b) the EDF Committee of the European Commission demanded that an independent (i) environmental impact assessment should be conducted before a project was given approval and (ii) evaluation be conducted on a Commission (1) project and (2) programme that was currently under implementation or had recently been completed. [77931]

Mr. Foulkes: During the last 12 months neither committee has demanded an independent Environmental Impact Appraisal as a pre-condition to approval. The Commission is required to undertake Environment Impact Appraisal screening as part of its project appraisal process and environmental issues are often raised at Committee meetings. For example, at the last European Development Fund (EDF) Committee on 17–18 March 1999, the UK raised environmental issues on 4 out of the 9 projects under consideration. Monitoring and evaluation arrangements are normally agreed when project proposals are submitted to the Committees for consideration. At the last EDF Committee, the UK raised the question of evaluation with regard to 3 projects.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Vehicles (Accidents)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 15 March 1999, Official Report, column 495, if he will rank police forces according to the number of accidents in 1997–98 involving police vehicles which resulted in injury and death. [78203]

Mr. Boateng: Ranking of police forces by number of accidents involving police vehicles would be misleading, as many different factors can affect the figures, such as force size and local road conditions. For accidents during pursuits and emergency responses broken down by force, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Eltham (Mr. Efford) on 18 January 1999, Official Report, column 334.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what meetings he has had regarding the reorganisation of Lunar House and the introduction of a new computer system to deal with immigration and asylum applications; what representations he has received about delays in the provision of immigration services; and if he will make a statement. [78245]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 23 March 1999]: I have had a number of meetings regarding the reorganisation of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate and will continue to do so. I have received representations about the current delays there from hon. Members, from interest groups and from the business community. I am, therefore, taking a close personal interest in improving the level of service.

The Home Secretary and I recently met with officials from the Immigration and Nationality Directorate and Siemens Business Services to discuss the casework programme. Siemens Business Services have reiterated their commitment to working in partnership to deliver the major modernisation programme as a whole.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to improve the situation for clients at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate in Croydon. [77346]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The reorganisation in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate in Croydon has caused significant disruption and delays in the throughput of cases. A number of steps have been taken to improve matters. These include taking on additional staff, running special exercises to target priority cases and providing additional temporary accommodation to the Public Caller Unit to ensure that all callers are seen on the day by a member of staff. In addition, there have been changes in procedure which have resulted in increasing productivity particularly relating to straightforward cases. Extra training has also been provided in certain key areas to ensure maximum flexibility of staff resources and a steady throughput of work.

Police and Immigration Officers

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (i) police officers and (ii) immigration officers were based at each port in England and Wales in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [77280]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Operational deployment of police officers is a matter for the Chief Constable. Details of the number of police based at ports in England and Wales is not collated centrally.

The number of immigration officers, including assistant immigration officers, based at ports in England and Wales as at 1 January 1997, 1998 and 1999 is set out in the table. Immigration officers at some of these locations attend both airports and seaports. Other ports in England and Wales which do not have permanently based staff are covered as required.

We are in the process of appointing over 200 additional immigration officers and assistant immigration officers as part of the package of measures designed to deliver the objectives set out in the Government's White Paper.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is the Government's policy to apply the test of substantial harm set out in the White Paper on freedom of information in its forthcoming Bill on freedom of information. [78258]

Mr. Straw: The Government hope to publish a draft Bill on freedom of information in May. It is our intention to make sure the legislation is clear and easy to use. We are still considering the precise drafting of the Bill to ensure that the principles set out in the White Paper "Your Right to Know" form the basis of the legislation.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Advisory Group on openness in the public sector will be able to consider the progress since 1 May 1997 of proposals for freedom of information legislation. [78343]

Mr. Straw: The purpose of the Group is to advise me on the steps needed to be taken ahead of freedom of information legislation to increase openness in the public sector. I expect the group to submit a report to me before the end of the year making recommendations on how I might facilitate an increase in openness in the public sector as a whole.

The Home Office took over responsibility for freedom of information legislation from the Cabinet Office in the summer of 1998, to enable the policy to be developed alongside other constitutional measures, such as human rights and data protection. Since then, we have devoted a great deal of effort towards translating the White Paper's proposals into a draft Bill. I now hope to publish the draft in May.

Prostitutes (Calling Cards)

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) civil and (b) criminal prosecutions were made in relation to prostitutes calling cards in telephone boxes in 1997 and 1998. [78047]

Mr. Boateng: This information is not readily available. There are several pieces of legislation under which a person may be charged for offences relating to placing prostitutes cards in telephone boxes. Home Office statistics do not indicate which prosecutions relate to prostitutes cards. Civil injunctions are not recorded centrally.

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consult on the possibility of making the placing of prostitutes calling cards in telephone boxes a specific criminal offence. [78046]

Mr. Boateng: Yes. My reply to the right hon. Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean) on 2 March 1999, Official Report, col. 531, said that the Home Office will shortly be issuing a consultation paper on new measures to tackle the problem of prostitutes cards in telephone boxes which will look at options for changing the law to enable those who put cards in telephone boxes to be dealt with more effectively.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason no external assessment has been made of the plans of his Department for millennium compliance. [78462]

Mr. Straw: An external assessment of my Department's Year 2000 programme began earlier this month, to complement an internal assessment recently completed. DBI Associates were awarded a contract to carry out this independent assessment, following a competitive tender exercise. This comprehensive assessment will examine the Year 2000 work carried out within the main Home Office, its executive agencies and the Police Information Technology Organisation, concentrating on business critical processes and business continuity planning. A final report is expected in June.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason no (a) internal and (b) external assessment has been made of the United Kingdom Passport Agency's plans for millennium compliance; and if he will make a statement. [78468]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Passport Agency's plans for millennium compliance are being assessed by independent technical consultants appointed by the Home Office.

The agency's audit needs are assessed every three years and are currently under review. Audit plans will include millennium compliance but will take into account the work of the independent consultants (DBI Associates Ltd.).

Macpherson Report

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people had access to the Macpherson report prior to some of its contents appearing in The Sunday Telegraph; and if he will make a statement. [78480]

Mr. Straw: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for South Cambridgeshire (Mr. Lansley) on 15 March 1999, Official Report, column 492.

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what standard of proof will be required in the leak inquiry into the provision of unauthorised information concerning the Macpherson report to The Sunday Telegraph; and if he will make a statement. [78419]

Mr. Straw: No proof test has been set. My permanent secretary will advise on what course of action might be appropriate, taking account of any weight attached to particular findings by the independent investigator.

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made on the leak inquiry into the provision of unauthorised information concerning the Macpherson report to The Sunday Telegraph; and if he will make a statement. [78418]

Mr. Straw: My permanent secretary expects to receive the independent investigator's conclusions shortly.

EU Fraud

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) discussions he has had and (b) proposals his Department has put forward at Council of Ministers' meetings in respect of EU fraud; and if he will make a statement. [77783]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 19 March 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury gave on 19 March 1999, Official Report, columns 858–59.

Civil Servants (Appraisal)

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the appraisal performance markings awarded to civil servants in 1998 for (a) each agency in his Department and (b) the Department broken down by (i) grade, (ii) gender, (iii) ethnicity, (iv) part-time/full-time working and (v) disability; and for (1) each agency and (2) the Department whether the Cabinet Office's four fifths rule for detecting potential adverse impact was applied to the appraisal markings of civil servants in the 1998 report round. [78149]

Mr. Straw: The available information has been placed in the Library and is set out as follows:

Table 1: performance appraisal markings for the Home Office including the United Kingdom Passport Agency and the Forensic Science Service (but excluding the Prison Service and the Fire Service College which have different appraisal systems) for the reporting year 1996–97 broken down by grade, ethnicity and gender. Information on part-time/full-time working could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Table 2: performance appraisal markings for the Fire Service College in 1998 broken down by gender and part-time/full-time working. There were no ethnic minority or disabled staff working at the College in this period. The total number of staff working at the College is small and to provide figures broken down by grade would risk identifying individuals.

Table 3: performance appraisal markings for the Prison Service in 1998 broken down by gender and ethnicity. Information on part-time/full-time working is not held centrally in the Prison Service and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Table 4: performance appraisal markings for the Prison Service in 1998 broken down by the core grades. (There are many non-standard specialist grades with small numbers of staff in the Prison Service and to provide information broken down by these grades would risk identifying individuals).

Table 5: performance appraisal markings for the Home Office including the United Kingdom Passport Agency and the Forensic Science Service (but excluding the Prison Service and the Fire Service College) for the reporting year 1996–97 showing the spread of box markings among disabled and non-disabled staff.

The four-fifths rule—which is only a guideline, not a statistical test—was not applied to these appraisal markings.

General Pinochet

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what public statements he made in his official capacity prior to 17 October 1998 on the former Government of General Pinochet in Chile; and if he will make a statement. [78420]

Mr. Straw: I have made no such public statements.

Police Research Paper

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost of researching, publishing and distributing the Police Research Series paper, "Face Value? Evaluating the Accuracy of Eyewitness Information". [78478]

Mr. Boateng: The cost of producing the Police Research Series paper "Face Value? Evaluating the Accuracy of Eyewitness Information" was £12,040. This was broken down as follows:

The University of Liverpool was paid £6,916 over a three month period to conduct the work on which the report is based and to produce a draft report; and 3,500 copies of the report were produced along with 2,600 copies of an associated briefing note. Printing costs were £5,124.

3,700 reports or briefing notes were distributed at the time of publication using existing administrative support staff at marginal cost. Postal costs are not calculated for individual reports.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) handguns and (b) accessories, broken down by (i) type and (ii) calibre, have been surrendered to each police force in Great Britain by (A) private citizens, (B) shooting clubs and (C) firearms dealers under the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997; [78153]

(2) how much compensation (a) has been paid and (b) is outstanding in respect of firearms surrendered under the terms of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997; and when he expects the process to be completed. [78154]

Mr. Boateng: Over 162,000 large and small-calibre handguns were surrendered to the police following the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997. I regret that the more detailed information requested is not at present available. A total of £80.3 million has so far been paid in compensation. The total of compensation paid is expected to be in the region of £87 million.

Yemen

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the recent arrest of Abu Hamza al-Masri; and what his policy is in respect of Yemen's request for his deportation. [78131]

Mr. Straw: Abu Hamza al-Masri and two other men were arrested under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 (PTA) on 15 March. I subsequently authorised extensions of detention beyond the initial 48 hours allowed by the Act. On 18 March, all three detainees were released from detention under the PTA, re-arrested under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 and given police bail to return for further questioning in mid-May after further inquiries have been made.

The United Kingdom has no extradition treaty with Yemen. The law contains provision in these circumstances for a special arrangement to be considered. I cannot say what would be the outcome were such an approach to be made by the Yemen, but it would be open to their authorities, if they so wished, to pursue the possibility.

Venezuelan Nationals

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Venezuelan nationals there are in British prisons. [78125]

Mr. George Howarth: The latest available provisional information is for 31 December 1998. On that date, there were 16 Venezuelan nationals (15 males and 1 female) in prisons in England and Wales. Information on the numbers of Venezuelan nationals held in prisons in Scotland and Northern Ireland are available from the Secretary of State for Scotland and Secretary of State for Northern Ireland respectively.

Death Penalty

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons Her Majesty's Government have not ratified the Council of Europe Protocol Number 6 to the convention for the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms concerning the abolition of the death penalty; and if he will make a statement. [77284]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Home Secretary signed Protocol 6 in Strasbourg on 27 January 1999. An Explanatory Memorandum and a Command Paper relating to the ratification process will be laid before the House shortly.

Prison Governors

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisons in England and Wales have had more than three principal governors within the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [77587]

Mr. George Howarth: Bullwood Hall and Maidstone prisons are the only establishments to have had more than three governing governors, including those temporarily in charge, in the last three years.

Asylum Seekers

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce a concession to the Immigration Rules granting asylum seekers from Sierra Leone immediate exceptional leave to remain in the United Kingdom. [77548]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I do not consider that such a policy would be justified at present, but we are keeping the situation in Sierra Leone under continuous close review.

Following a decline in the country situation in December 1998, enforced removals to Sierra Leone were suspended on practical and precautionary grounds. In view of the continued fighting and the rebel invasion into parts of Freetown, consideration of asylum applications was suspended in January 1999.

Appalling human rights violations and destruction have been perpetrated by the rebel forces in Sierra Leone. However, President Kabbah has remained in power and Freetown has recently been secured following action by ECOMOG troops. There are large numbers of internally displaced people in the city. In all the circumstances, it would not be appropriate to resume widescale enforced returns of rejected asylum seekers at this stage. We will consider the viability of making limited returns to Freetown now that the city is secure, but no one will be returned to Sierra Leone unless it is considered safe to do so.

As and when consideration of applications by asylum seekers from Sierra Leone is resumed, they will be considered in accordance with the standing instructions to caseworkers which point, among other things, to the grant of exceptional leave to remain in cases where there are compassionate or humanitarian reasons which merit not requiring the person to return to their country of origin or habitual residence.

Police (Sick Leave)

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the rates of sick leave reported in each police force in each of the last three years. [78391]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is shown in the tables.

Mr. Tangney

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answers of 18 March 1999, Official Report, column 721, and 11 March 1999, Official Report, column 332, on life prisoners, on the basis of what evidence the Parole Board decided that Mr. Tangney fulfilled the conditions that the life sentence prisoner is trustworthy enough not to abscond. [78270]

Mr. George Howarth: The Parole Board recommended that Mr. Tangney be transferred to open conditions on the basis of reports and recommendations from prison and probation staff that Mr. Tangney's attitudes and behaviour had improved to the point where he could be trusted in open conditions. Ministers accepted the Board's recommendation taking account of those reports and recommendations and Mr. Tangney's overall progression in prison, and reduction in risk, since the offence for which his mandatory life sentence was imposed.

Life Prisoners (Transfer)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the minimum period a life sentence prisoner must serve before being considered for transfer to an open prison. [78269]

Mr. George Howarth: The general position is set out in my right hon. Friend's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Wellingborough (Mr. Stinchcombe) on 9 July 1998, Official Report, columns 587–88. The first Parole Board review of a life sentence prisoner's case occurs 3 years, or in the case of a prisoner who has made good progress through his sentence 3½ years, before expiry of the minimum period required for retribution and deterrence, commonly known as the tariff. The tariff varies considerably from case to case.

Prisoner Correspondence

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what regulations govern prisoners writing to addresses registered as Post Office box numbers; and what security considerations apply. [78358]

Mr. George Howarth: Prisoners' correspondence is governed by the Prison Rules, and policy is set out in Prison Standing Order 5 (copies of which are in the Library). Under paragraph 29 of Standing Order 5B, governors have the authority to stop prisoners writing to a Post Office Box. Prisons must be able to identify and check the recipients of prisoners' correspondence, particularly in the case of high risk prisoners and sex offenders.

While this provision will more often apply to individuals using PO Box numbers, it may also be applied to organisations where the governor considers there to be a risk. Some organisations, for example, operate pen-pal schemes for prisoners to make contact with people on the outside. Such schemes may be susceptible to infiltration by sex offenders and paedophiles seeking to network and make contact with vulnerable people. These schemes, therefore, need to be thoroughly vetted. Where the organisations concerned are not able to do this, and the use of a box number precludes prisons from making appropriate checks on the recipients, a governor is within his or her rights to stop prisoners from writing to the organisation.

Detective Superintendent McElroy

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when the Chief Constable of Nottinghamshire expects to make a decision relating to the suspension and investigation of DS McElroy; [78208]

(2) what explanation he has been given for the continued suspension of DS McElroy following the Crown Prosecution Service's decision not to pursue charges; [78212]

(3) what have been the costs of the suspension and investigation of DS McElroy from the Nottinghamshire Constabulary since 10 April 1997; [78206]

(4) if he will refer the case of DS McElroy to the Chief Inspector of Constabulary for a report on (a) the cost and conduct of the investigation, (b) compliance with regulations, (c) the status of the participating witness in the investigation and (d) the impact of the investigation on the explosives case which DS McElroy had been working on; [78209]

(5) what reasons the case of DS McElroy was not referred to the Police Complaints Authority under the Police (Complaints) (Mandatory Referrals etc.) Regulations 1985. [78207]

Mr. Boateng: Disciplinary matters relating to individual officers are the responsibility of chief officers of police. I am told that DS McElroy remains suspended while consideration is given to possible disciplinary proceedings, and that following a complaint by a member of the public, Nottinghamshire Constabulary has referred its handling of the case to the Police Complaints Authority for independent investigation.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Biotechnical Industry

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the biotechnical companies which have placed staff (a) on secondment and (b) on placement within his Department since 1 May 1997. [74840]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 5 March 1999]: Secondments and attachments are part of the Interchange Initiative, which promotes the exchange of people and good practice between the Civil Service and other organisations. All sectors of the economy are involved: Voluntary, Education, Health, Public and Private.

No staff from biotechnical companies have been on either secondment or placement with this Department.

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the studies commissioned by his Department into the potential indirect effect on the environment from the growing of genetically modified crops. [74865]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 5 March 1999]: My Department is in the process of commissioning ecological studies of the diversity and abundance of plants and invertebrates associated with the management of certain genetically modified herbicide tolerant crops compared with equivalent non genetically modified crops to test whether there are any significant differences over a four year period.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many release consents for genetically modified crops trials there have been in each year since 1990. [75110]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 8 March 1999]: Since the current Regulations came into force in February 1993, 154 consents have been issued. The break down per year is as follows:

Year	Applications approved
1993	15
1994	24
1995	40
1996	28
1997	25
1998	22

India (Ministerial Visit)

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to report his assessment of the environmental damage to coral reefs following his recent visit to India and the Maldives. [75543]

Mr. Prescott [holding answer 9 March 1999]: During my visit to the Maldives, I was able to see for myself some of the damage to the coral reefs there, particularly the evidence of the coral bleaching event recorded during April to June last year. This was the worst ever recorded in the Maldives and affected some 95 per cent. of the reefs. On one of the sites that I was shown, over 35 per cent. of the corals were bleached and approximately 40 per cent. were dead.

I was also shown a reef that had been mined for use in the construction of the airport 30 years ago (traditionally in the Maldives, coral has been used as a building material). The extraction of coral had removed the upper 0.5m of reef framework, leaving a bare, flat surface of broken rubble and unconsolidated sediment and had resulted in a loss of live coral cover and associated reef fish. The area covered by live corals was less than 3 per cent. compared with 35 per cent. on nearby unmined reefs.

A BBC crew joined me on these dives and recorded much of what I was shown. The resulting film report was transmitted on BBC News programmes around the world, confirming the point that I had set out to make; that there are clear links between climate change, oceans and land-based sources of pollution.

I intend to continue to highlight this issue and to press for improvement in international co-ordination on oceans matters when I attend the Commission on Sustainable Development in New York next month.

While I was in the Maldives, I was also able to announce continuing UK support for the South Asia region of the Global Coral Reef Monitoring Network. This will evaluate the sustainability of coral reefs; raise community level awareness of coral reef status and resource management issues; and establish regional capability to collect critical monitoring data on coral reefs, coral reefs resource-use and related livelihoods. Coral reef monitoring programmes at key sites will develop a national coral reef database in each country. The programme will provide a foundation for maximising sustainable benefits from coral reef resources for coastal communities, thereby improving livelihoods in coral reef areas in South Asia.

Packaging Waste

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of whether the UK will achieve the targets set under the EU Directive on Packaging Waste; and if he will make a statement. [76983]

Mr. Meacher: As I said in my answer to my hon. Friend on 15 March 1999, Official Report, columns 466–67, the recovery rate for packaging waste is expected to have reached approximately 32 per cent. in 1998 and the interim business targets are designed to enable the UK to achieve the mandatory EC Directive recovery and recycling targets in 2001. Industry itself has reported that there was an oversupply of reprocessing capacity in 1998 compared with the targets that had to be met and this was damaging the market. The increase in the interim business recovery and recycling targets should therefore generate the necessary momentum to enable sufficient activity to be carried out to achieve the 2001 targets. A further consideration was the need for sufficient resources to be directed at generating the necessary collection and reprocessing capacity that will be needed to meet the targets in 2001. With this additional infrastructure in place the UK should be able to meet the mandatory Directive targets.

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will take steps to provide clarification of the definition of imported materials under the packaging waste regulations. [76984]

Mr. Meacher: Guidance on the definition of imported packaging and packaging materials was provided in chapter five of the "Users Guide", issued by my Department in March 1997, a copy of which is in the Library. This continues to reflect the Department's opinion.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on what dates his Department has received representations from the United States Government on genetically modified organisms since 1 May 1997; in what form each representation was made; and from which United States department each originated. [77116]

Mr. Meacher: I would refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Wellingborough (Mr. Stinchcombe) on 1 March 1999, Official Report, column 509. The visit was from a representative of the State Department and took place 25 January 1999.

Global Warming

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what evidence he obtained about global warming during his visit to the Maldives; and what conclusions he has drawn from it. [75691]

Mr. Prescott [holding answer 18 March 1999]: Small island states are especially vulnerable to global warming and its associated effects. During my visit to the Maldives, I heard from the Government and local marine scientists about the effects of global warming, rising sea temperatures and pollution on some of the coral reefs there, and the particular threat that is posed by these phenomena to island states like the Maldives.

I was also able to see some of the damage to the reefs for myself, particularly the evidence of coral bleaching event recorded during April to June last year, the result of high sea-surface temperature caused by El Niño. This was the worst ever recorded in the Maldives and affected some 95 per cent. of the reefs. On one of the sites that I was shown, over 35 per cent. of the corals were bleached and approximately 40 per cent. were dead.

There are clear links between climate change, oceans and land-based sources of pollution—everyone has a part to play in helping to solve the problem. In addition to the ongoing efforts to tackle climate change, I intend to continue to highlight this issue and to press for improved international co-ordination on oceans matters when I attend the Commission on Sustainable Development meeting in New York next month.

Asbestos

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the purpose of the medical examination required by Regulation 16(2) of the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 1987 as amended by the Control of Asbestos at Work (Amendment) Regulations 1998. [77876]

Mr. Meale: Doctors carry out medical examinations under Regulation 16(2) to advise workers on their general fitness for work with asbestos (including their fitness to work wearing respiratory protective equipment), to provide them with information about their current state of respiratory health, to alert workers to early signs of disease, and to warn them about the increased risk of lung cancer for those who smoke and work with asbestos.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what controls will be applied to contractors licensed only to remove asbestos insulation board to prevent them from undertaking any other type of asbestos stripping work. [77877]

Mr. Meale: Contractors are required to give 14 days advance notice of work with asbestos as a condition of their licence. In 1999–2000, the Health and Safety Executive's Field Operations Directorate plan to visit at least 800 notified jobs and also to visit 40 local authorities to deal with risks from asbestos to building and maintenance workers in their properties.

In addition, in 1999–2000 the Directorate has planned for 80,000 preventive inspections in addition to complaint and accident investigations. Inspectors are aware of the importance of asbestos and will be alert to illegal work during such visits.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Health and Safety Executive plans to license contractors who remove only asbestos insulation board under the Asbestos (Licensing) Regulations 1993, as amended by the Asbestos (Licensing) (Amendment) Regulations 1998. [77874]

Mr. Meale: Yes. From 1 August 1999, the regulations will apply to licensed contractors who only work with asbestos insulation board in the same way as they do to those working with asbestos coating and insulation.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the medical examination certificates issued to workers exposed to asbestos under the amended Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 1987 are intended to fulfil the requirements of asbestos laws in all European Union member states. [77875]

Mr. Meale: No. The intention behind the amendment to the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations to issue a medical certificate to both the employer and employee is to prevent the forgery of medical certificates. The UK's requirements for medical surveillance are stricter than the minimum standards laid down by the EU Directive on the protection of workers from the risks related to asbestos at work.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to ban the import, marketing and use of Chrysotile asbestos. [77878]

Mr. Meale: The Government are firmly committed to further restrictions on the importation, supply and use of white asbestos. The Health and Safety Commission has already consulted on proposals to amend the (Asbestos Prohibitions) Regulations and I look forward to receiving its recommendations, taking account of European Developments, in June.

ENTRUST

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 2 December 1998, Official Report, columns 180–81, on ENTRUST, if he will list the 33 projects for the remediation of contaminated land and the sort of remediation undertaken. [77645]

Mr. Meale: According to ENTRUST, the 33 projects are listed in the table.

Organisation	Remediation type	Brief description
1 Action Environment	Decontamination	Reclamation of contaminated land at Plean Country Park (public amenity)
2 Action for Chitterne's Environment	Rubbish removal	Clearing roadside banks (in cutting) of fly-tipped litter and debris at Winterbourne (public amenity)
3 Argyll and Bute Trust	Rubbish removal	Beach cleaning by volunteer bodies, including general flotsam and tanker crude oil residues (public amenity)
4 Beach Watch Bute	Rubbish removal	Beach cleaning, including removal of crude oil residues (public amenity)

Organisation	Remediation type	Brief description
5 Bluebell Railway Trust	Rubbish removal	Reclamation of fly-tipped domestic refuse-filled railway cutting for preserved steam railway (public amenity)
6 Cheshire Environmental Services	Dereliction removal	Reclamation of derelict and contaminated land, formerly a paint works, in Chester (residential)
7 Cheshire Environmental Services	Decontamination	Reclamation of former gasworks site at Bollington, Cheshire (commercial)
8 Cheshire Environmental Services	Decontamination	Removal of heavy-metal contaminated soil at Northwich Victoria football ground (public amenity)
9 Cheshire Environmental Services	Decontamination	Reclamation of contaminated land at former gasworks, Bollington, Cheshire
10 Earth Centre	Decontamination	Removal of heavy metal contamination/dereliction of former collieries (public amenity)
11 Enventure	Dereliction removal	Regeneration of derelict land for Greatwood and Horseclose Millennium Green (public amenity)
12 Greenbank Trust	Restoration	Reclamation of disused quarry for public amenity use (public amenity)
13 Groundwork Blackburn	Dereliction removal	E. Darwen landscape renewal project: reclamation and enhancement of derelict area (public amenity)
14 Groundwork Dearne Valley	Dereliction removal	Site investigation for reclamation of derelict former steel mill (public amenity)
15 Groundwork Erewash Valley	Decontamination	Removal and storage of contaminated waste at former steelworks (public amenity)
16 Groundwork Medway Swale	Decontamination	Remediation of contamination and dereliction at abandoned wharf (public amenity)
17 Levenseat Trust	Dereliction removal	Removal of dereliction at Furth Wanderers football ground and improve landscape (public amenity)
18 Loch Awe Improvement Association	Rubbish removal	'Clean Sweep': removal of litter, shore improvement and provision of litter bins (public amenity)
19 Marybank Partnership (Comharradh Criche)	Dereliction removal	Removal of contamination and dereliction for Western Isles business park (commercial/public amenity)
20 Northern Environmental Projects	Decontamination	Decontamination of land at Ellesmere Old Forge (public amenity)
21 Northern Environmental Projects	Decontamination	Reclamation and decontamination of former colliery at Gresford, near Wrexham (public amenity)

Landfill Levy

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proportion of the net yield of the landfill levy was from local authority payments in each year since it was introduced. [77675]

Mr. Meale: The net yield of the landfill tax was £360 million in 1997–98, the first full year following the introduction of the tax in October 1996. Initial data on waste arisings from the Municipal Waste Survey for England and Wales for 1997–98 will not be available until later this year. In addition, the landfill tax is payable to Customs and Excise by landfill operators on a registered person basis rather than a site specific basis. This makes it difficult to accurately calculate the proportion of landfill tax revenues effectively paid by local authorities.

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the additional financial contribution which will be made by local authorities for each of the years to which the Government have committed itself to escalate the landfill levy by £1 per annum. [77676]

Mr. Meale: The Municipal Waste Survey for England and Wales for 1995–96 and 1996–97 shows that municipal waste arisings were approximately 26 million tonnes per year, of which approximately 22 million tonnes was disposed of to landfill. Until sufficiently reliable data are available for several years, it is not possible to be confident about the trend. This makes it difficult accurately to predict the future cost to local authorities of the announced increases in the landfill tax.

If one assumes that: the majority of the waste will be active, and so taxed at the standard rate of £7 per tonne; and that site operators will pass the tax on in full to their customers; and that the level of waste being disposed of to landfill is broadly in line with figures for 1996–97, the additional financial contribution from local authorities in England and Wales for each incremental increase of £1 would be approximately £22 million. We would, however, expect the tax increases to start to have an effect on the amount of municipal waste sent to landfill, even though there is little evidence so far that the tax has led to a significant change in behaviour. A delayed impact in this area is in line with our expectations.

Fly-tipping

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what statistics his Department collates of the level of (a) commercial fly-tipping and (b) domestic fly-tipping. [77672]

Mr. Meale: My Department does not collate statistics on the fly-tipping of either commercial or domestic waste. However, the Tidy Britain Group has carried out a study into fly-tipping. The study comprised three surveys and one of its main aims was to establish the types, quantities and locations of fly-tipped waste. The third survey was carried out in partnership with the Environment Agency and was published last month. It suggests a modest increase in fly-tipping over the period from 1994–95, but less than was originally feared following the introduction of the landfill tax.

Offshore Industry (Safety)

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to encourage the offshore industry work force to become involved in safety matters. [77940]

Mr. Meale: The promotion of work force involvement is one of the Health and Safety Commission's/Executive's key priorities. As elsewhere, the involvement of the workforce offshore is critical in maintaining and improving safety standards.

The Offshore Installations (Safety Representatives and Safety Committees) Regulations 1989 specify the powers and functions of work force safety representatives, and set out requirements for their election. Installation managers are required to consult safety representatives, to provide them with information and to ensure that they receive adequate training.

HSE's offshore inspectors routinely meet safety representatives when they visit installations and encourage their involvement in safety matters.

Employers and employees are represented on the Health and Safety Commission Oil Industry Advisory Committee. The Committee has produced an award-winning booklet on work force involvement in health and safety, entitled "Play Your Part". This draws on examples of good practice from across the offshore industry. The Committee has also set up a working group to consider the offshore health and safety agenda for the next ten years. One of the issues which it will discuss is the promotion of greater work force involvement.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the implementation by offshore operators of the recommendations of the Cullen Inquiry into the Piper Alpha disaster. [77941]

Mr. Meale: On the recommendation of Lord Cullen, responsibility for offshore health, safety and welfare regulation was transferred in 1991 from the former Department of Energy to the Health and Safety Commission (HSC) and the Health and Safety Executive (HSE). The HSC carried out a fundamental review of arrangements in the light of the 106 recommendations made by Lord Cullen. Action on most of these fell to the regulator and all were implemented in full.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many (a) deaths at work and (b) serious injuries were recorded for the United Kingdom oil and gas extraction industry in each of the years 1978 to date, excluding the deaths as a result of the Piper Alpha disaster. [77978]

Mr. Meale: Figures for the United Kingdom are not readily available. Figures for the oil and gas extraction industry before 1986–87 are not available. The figures for the industry in Great Britain from 1986–87 are shown in the table.

Fatal and major/serious injuries in the oil and gas extraction industry in Great Britain—as reported to all enforcing authorities

Year	Fatal	Major	Total
1986–87[1]	4	92	96
1987–88	9	75	84
1988–89[2]	5	64	69
1989–90	2	75	77
1990–91	12	95	107
1991–92[3]	13	88	101
1992–93	5	82	87
1993–94	1	58	59
1994–95	1	42	43
1995–96	5	45	50
1996–97[4]	2	29	31
1997–98[6]	3	41	44

[1] Injuries reported between 1986–87 and 1995–96 were reported under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations (RIDDOR) 1985 (for onshore injuries) and separate legislation for offshore injuries.

[2] Excludes 167 Piper Alpha fatalities.

[4] Injuries reported from 1996–97 were reported under RIDDOR 1995. Data for 1996–97 are not comparable with previous years due to the introduction of RIDDOR 1995.

[5] Based on information collated in 1998 and published in the Health and Safety Commission's Annual Report for 1997–98, and its 'Health and Safety Statistics 1997–98'. Subsequent information indicates that the reported figure may be 49 and the total 51.

Fuel Duty Increases

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the additional cost to public transport providers in the United Kingdom from the increases in fuel duty in the Budget. [77909]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 22 March 1999]: Public transport provision in the United Kingdom should not be significantly affected as my Department announced following the Budget that the level of fuel duty rebate payable to operators of local bus services would be immediately raised in line with the increase in fuel duty. This equates to a value of around £50 million per annum. The small increase in gas oil duty should only have minimal impact on train operating costs.

Worthing Bypass

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement regarding the prospects for a Worthing bypass; and what new studies have been carried out by his Department on the A27 between Worthing and Lancing. [77911]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 22 March 1999]: Following the Roads Review we announced our proposal, subject to consultation with the regional planning conference, to carry out a study to consider the problems of congestion on the A27 between Worthing and Lancing.

The South East Regional Planning Conference (SERPLAN) has agreed with the Government Office for the South East (GO-SE) proposal that the A27 Worthing to Lancing study should build on existing work to produce recommendations in advance of the completion of the Southampton to Folkestone study. GO-SE will now be undertaking further discussions with SERPLAN and with the most directly affected local authorities, with a view to drawing up terms of reference and a plan for further work. The study will adopt a multi-modal approach and will consider all options for addressing the identified transport problems in the context of the whole corridor.

The Highways Agency has already undertaken a study into options for improving pedestrian facilities on the A27 through Worthing and Lancing. The study identified eight locations where work on refuges could be carried out to benefit pedestrians, and this work has already started.

In addition, the Highways Agency intends to install at least one signal-controlled crossing at one of these locations, following Worthing Borough Council's investigations into possible cycle routes in the area; and in early April work will take place to upgrade the existing crossing at Boundstone College in Lancing, where new guard rails will be provided to give improved visibility for drivers.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to amend section 113 of the Building Act 1984. [78307]

Mr. Raynsford: I have no plans to amend section 113 of the Building Act 1984.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received regarding section 113 of the Building Act 1984 in the last two years. [78308]

Mr. Raynsford: There has been correspondence with one of the hon. Member's constituents about the procedures for prosecutions under section 57 of the Building Act, which are subject to section 113 of that Act.

Green Ministers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what matters were discussed, what conclusions were reached and which Departments were represented by officials at the meeting of Green Ministers on 22 March; and if he will make a statement. [76519]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 23 March 1999]: The Green Ministers Committee met on 22 March. This is the first of three meetings planned for 1999.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Deputy Prime Minister attended the Committee's meeting and we were able to have a very positive discussion of environmental tax reforms in the light of the measures announced in the Budget on 9 March 1999, Official Report, columns 173–90. The meeting also heard that the Government would shortly be able to take another important step forward on sustainable development when the sustainable development strategy for the UK is published shortly.

The Green Ministers Committee also considered and agreed next steps on a number of other important issues. In particular, it agreed:

on the format and outline for its first published report due to be issued in the summer. The report will cover progress in promoting sustainable development across Government; developments in the use of environmental appraisals as part of the policy making process; and, the further progress made across departments to green their operations.

to report to the Cabinet Committee on the Environment on how sustainable development is being reflected in the aims and objectives of departments and their associate bodies. This will also be covered in the published report in the summer.

that an early dialogue should be initiated with the new devolved administrations when they are all up and running to agree on the most effective and appropriate mechanisms for links between the Committee and those administrations.

that departments should take forward work on developing new energy efficiency targets for the public sector to replace the one set for March 2000. The Committee will consider this further later in the year.

15 of the 18 departments were represented by Ministers. The Department of Social Security and the Home Office were represented by officials and the Scottish Office was not represented.

The next meeting of Green Ministers will be held on Tuesday 6 July 1999.

British Railways Board

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library a copy of (a) the job description, (b) the contract, (c) the terms of reference and (d) the letter of appointment of the new Chairman of the British Railways Board. [78344]

Dr. Reid: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is already required by statute to lay before each House a statement of the salary, any allowances, and any pension arrangements of British Railways Board Members, as soon as possible after they are first appointed. In the case of the new Chairman, he will at the same time place copies of the job description, contract and letter of appointment in the Library of each House. The Chairman's terms of reference will be reflected in new formal objectives for the British Railways Board, to be published in due course.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what functions the Chairman of the British Railways Board will have between 1 April and the establishment through legislation of a Strategic Rail Authority other than those functions which presently are performed by the Chairman of the British Railways Board; what budget will be available to him; and if he will make a statement. [78261]

Dr. Reid: The Chairman will lead the shadow Strategic Rail Authority (SRA), working with the new Franchising Director to develop a shadow SRA capability. He will advise Ministers on the strategic development of the railway network within our integrated transport policy, including advice on galvanising investment and on franchising issues. The Government have set a budget of £93 million for the British Railways Board in 1999–2000.

Rail Services

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the financial (a) incentives and (b) disincentives to (i) local authorities and (ii) Railtrack in respect of (1) the reopening of disused lines and stations and (2) the creation of new lines and stations. [78265]

Dr. Reid: None. The Rail Regulator has started a comprehensive reappraisal of the level and structure of access charges. He has made it clear that he wants to use his review to promote investment and growth in rail services, and to improve the performance of the railway network. We have endorsed those objectives. We expect the Rail Regulator to put in place a charging structure which imposes incentives on those in the industry to invest properly in the network.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the average cost charged by (a) British Rail and (b) Railtrack for (i) station reopenings and (ii) reopening track for passenger use expressed on a cost, per mile, for each year from 1980 to date. [78264]

Dr. Reid: This information is not readily available in the form requested.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his policy on the substitution of rail services by bus services; and if he will make a statement. [78260]

Dr. Reid: The Objectives, Instructions and Guidance which we issued to the Franchising Director in November 1997 require him to secure that minimum service levels remain at least broadly comparable to those specified in the current Passenger Service Requirements. Discontinuation of rail services could occur only after comprehensive closure procedures have been exhausted. These powers have been used very rarely and we do not expect that to change.

Rail Passengers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the relationship between the level of rail fares and passenger numbers. [78267]

Ms Glenda Jackson: No research has been either commissioned or evaluated in this area.

A63

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his policy in respect of the implementation of the Highways Agency scheme for the A63 Melton junction improvement. [78256]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Lawrie Haynes, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Norman Baker, dated 24 March 1999:

I have been asked by the Transport Minister, Glenda Jackson, to answer your recent Parliamentary Question about the A63 Melton junction improvement.

The Report which Ministers published in July following the Roads Review, "A New Deal for Trunk Roads in England", said that preparation work would continue on the scheme so that if, after full appraisal and statutory procedures, it were eventually endorsed, it could be taken forward without delay. Ministers announced last December that the next step would be to publish the draft Orders for the scheme in the financial year 2000/01.

Passenger Service Requirement Franchises

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the implications for service levels in excess of PSR franchise requirements of the annual decline in subsidy levels contained in those franchise agreements. [78259]

Dr. Reid: The Secretary of State has made no such assessment.

Rail Franchises

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the generic quality improvements he plans to require to be introduced to existing rail franchises when the opportunity for renegotiation of franchises occurs. [78262]

Dr. Reid: At the National Rail Summit last month, we announced that all requests for franchise renegotiations will be judged against the following six criteria: the train operator's current performance; proposed accelerated or new investment; a willingness to commit to a more demanding enforcement regime and higher quality standards; a willingness to give passengers a greater say in the level and standard of services; and value for the taxpayer.

Squire Regime

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to extend the Squire regime to franchises outside PTA areas; and if he will make a statement. [78263]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There are currently no plans to extend the Squire regime to franchises outside PTA areas.

Strategic Rail Authority

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what (a) powers and (b) responsibilities he plans to give to the Strategic Rail Authority in respect of the creation of new rail links and stations. [78266]

Dr. Reid: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary legislation, the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) will have broad powers to make payments, through grants or by contractual agreements, to achieve its objectives, including the creation of new rail links and stations. It will be able to support or oppose planning applications and orders.

The duties of the SRA will include the preparation of a strategic plan for the development of the railway, including improvements to the network. The SRA will work with other national, regional, and local organisations to promote rail within our integrated transport policy.

Greater London Authority

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those organisations referred to in the White Paper, "A Mayor and Assembly for London" (Cm 3897), for which it was planned to transfer responsibility to the Greater London Authority but for which provision has not been made in the Greater London Authority Bill; and if he will make a statement. [78479]

Mr. Raynsford: The organisations referred to in the White Paper for which it was planned to transfer responsibility to the Greater London Authority but for which provision has not been made in the Greater London Authority Bill are listed as follows:

Centre for Young Musicians

Croydon Tramlink

Docklands Light Railway

London Heritage Forum

London Pension Fund Authority

Woolwich Ferry.

I last week tabled amendments to Part X of the Bill, providing for the establishment of a Cultural Strategy Group for London to replace the London Heritage Forum. We intend to bring forward amendments at a later stage to provide for the GLA taking on responsibility for the LPFA. It is our intention that responsibility for the Docklands Light Railway, Croydon Tramlink and the Woolwich Ferry should transfer to Transport for London, and are considering whether specific provisions are needed in the Bill to provide for this.

In addition, the White Paper raised the question of future responsibility for some London museums currently directly funded by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport and some of the historic properties now managed by English Heritage that were previously the responsibility of the GLC. The White Paper also considered future arrangements for the Theatre Museum and the Museum of Childhood. Following the conclusion of his departmental CSR, the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport has concluded that there should be no change at the present time to the funding arrangements for these bodies, but that the GLA's role in funding the museums should be reviewed in due course. I last week tabled amendments to enable the GLA to provide funding to cultural institutions, including museums, galleries and libraries.

I am discussing the future funding of the CYM—and possible arrangements for the transfer of that funding to the GLA—with my colleagues at the Department for Education and Employment and we will make an announcement as soon as possible. Specific provision is not required in the GLA Bill to achieve any transfer.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reason no external assessment has been made of the plans of (a) his Department, (b) the DVLA and (c) the Highways Agency for millennium compliance; and if he will make a statement. [78463]

Mr. Meale: External consultants are employed by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions to assist in assessing its overall programme for millennium compliance, and by the Highways Agency to assist in assessing its millennium plans. The plans of the Driver and Vehicle Licencing Agency for millennium compliance are being assessed by a team of experienced computer Internal Auditors who are independent of the Agency's millennium projects.

RJB Mining

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his letter to the hon. Member for Linlithgow of 1 March, ME/PSO/2030/99, if he will make a statement on his discussion with RJB Mining on methane emissions from coal mines. [76678]

Mr. Meale: RJB Mining are continuing to investigate the proposed Canadian methodology for reducing methane emissions from coal mining and they are in contact with the relevant research bodies in Canada. The Government will continue to monitor progress with these discussions.

Channel Tunnel Shuttle Service

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on the restriction applied to gas-powered motor vehicles being transported on the Channel Tunnel Shuttle Service; and if he will make a statement. [78342]

Dr. Reid: There have been two recent questions on this subject from the hon. Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell) on 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 341, and the hon. Member for Christchurch (Mr. Chope) on 26 January 1999, Official Report, columns 154–55. There has also been one recent letter to my Department from a member of the public. In addition, the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority has dealt with one recent inquiry.

Eurotunnel will need to obtain safety approval from the bi-national Intergovernmental Commission (acting on the advice of the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority) before they can convey gas—and dual-fuelled vehicles. Subject to this safety approval being granted, the Government would welcome the opening of Shuttle services to these vehicles.

Houses (Multiple Occupation)

Ms Blears: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Government will publish its proposals for licensing of houses in multiple occupation for England and Wales. [78857]

Ms Armstrong: I will publish tomorrow, on 25 March, a consultation paper setting out the Government's proposals for licensing Houses in Multiple Occupation (HMOs) in England. The Under-Secretary of State for Wales, my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, Central (Mr. Jones), will be publishing a similar paper for Wales.

HMOs can be home to some of the most vulnerable in our society, but are often squalid, poorly maintained and potential deathtraps. Our licensing proposals will raise standards and improve safety in HMOs, but without reducing the supply of rented accommodation.

Copies of the consultation papers will be placed in the Library of the House and will be available from the Vote Office.

TREASURY

Vehicle Excise Duty

Dr. Marek: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what environmental factors he considered in determining the capacity of engines of cars below which a reduced rate of vehicle excise duty is to be charged. [78370]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 23 March 1999]: A consultation paper setting out the options for reforming vehicle excise duty (VED), including a reduction in VED for the smallest, cleanest cars, was published on 3 November. The formal consultation period ended on 31 January. The Government considered carefully all representations received in determining the conditions for eligibility to the reduced rate of vehicle excise duty.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cars will attract the reduced rate of vehicle excise duty for cars with engines up to 1100 cc. [78010]

Ms Hewitt: As of September 1998, it is estimated that over 1.8 million cars will be eligible for the reduced rate of vehicle excise duty for cars of 1100cc or less.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue arising from stamp duty, broken down by each rate, and the proportions raised from (a) transactions in residential property and (b) commercial transactions for (i) 1996–97, (ii) 1997–98, (iii) 1998–99 and (iv) 1999–2000. [77189]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 17 March 1999]: The estimates are as follows.

	Net receipts [1] (£ million)
	£60,000	Proportion of total (%) [2]
1996–97
Rate of stamp duty	1%	—
Residential transactions	675	65
Commercial property and land transactions	385	35

[1] Net receipts rounded to nearest £5 million
[2] Proportions rounded to nearest 5 per cent.
[3] In 1997–98 the 1 per cent. rate applied to transfers of all properties over £60,000 before 8 July
[4] Because of time lags, receipts in the first few weeks of the year would relate to transfers charged at the rates which applied in the previous year

Married Couple's Allowance

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many couples currently in receipt of the married couple's allowance (a) have no children, (b) have children all over the age of 16 and (c) have children all over the age of 18 years. [76452]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 March 1999]: About 6.4 million married couples who benefit from the married couple's allowance have no children eligible for child benefit. Another 0.3 million married couples have children eligible for child benefit but who are all over 16. These estimates are based on the Family Expenditure Survey.

Income Tax (Pensioners)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate (a) the number of pensioners who, as a result of the 1999 Budget, will pay income tax at a marginal rate of 10 per cent. and (b) how many of these pensioners have savings income taxable at the 20 per cent. rate; and if he will make a statement on the arrangements for reclaiming overpaid tax in such circumstances. [77003]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 16 March 1999]: It is estimated that some 450,000 women aged 60 and over and men aged 65 and over will have a marginal rate of 10 per cent., and of these around 380,000 have savings taxable at 20 per cent.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate how many pensioners with a marginal rate of income tax of 10 per cent. after 5 April 1999 will have income from savings. [77162]

Dawn Primarolo: It is estimated that some 450,000 men aged 65 or over and women aged 60 or over will have a marginal rate of 10 per cent. Most of these taxpayers are likely to have some savings income, although by no means all of it may be taxable.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate how many pensioners have a marginal rate of income tax of (a) nil, (b) 20 per cent., (c) 23 per cent. and (d) 40 per cent. in 1998–99. [77163]

Dawn Primarolo: The numbers of women aged 60 or over and men aged 65 or over in 1998–99 with different marginal rates of income tax are shown in the table.

Marginal rate (percentage)	Number (Thousand)
0	6,800
20	2,350

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate how many pensioners will have a marginal rate of income tax of (a) nil, (b) 10 per cent., (c) 23 per cent. and (d) 40 per cent. in 1999–2000. [77164]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated number of women aged 60 or over and men aged 65 or over in 1999–2000 with different marginal rates of income tax are shown in the table.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to make the savings income of people of pensionable age subject to the 10p tax rate announced in the Budget. [77893]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The Chancellor announced that the 10p starting rate of income tax is being introduced to improve work incentives and to help make work pay. The 10p rate will be available to pensioners who pay tax on their earnings or pensions. The Budget has taken 200,000 pensioners out of tax. As a result, around two-thirds of pensioners will not pay tax.

Savings income is already taxed favourably. Most savers will continue to enjoy the benefit of the lower rate at 20p on their savings rather than the basic rate at 23p (22p from April 2000). And our introduction of Individual Savings Accounts in April this year means all savers—including pensioners—can invest substantial amounts tax-free each year.

Tourism Industry

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of reducing VAT on hotel room charges; [77479]

(2) what plans he has to use the taxation system to promote the UK tourism industry. [77480]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answers 18 March 1999]: The Government currently have no such plans. UK tourism is enjoying record success and the tourism industry is about to benefit from the long term strategy "Tomorrow's Tourism: a growth industry for the new millennium" recently announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport.

Petrol Smuggling

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the amount of revenue lost to HM Treasury from petrol smuggling during the most recent period for which figures are available. [77482]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 18 March 1999]: HM Customs and Excise do not have sufficient reliable information on which to base a published estimate of the revenue lost through petrol smuggling.

Green Transport Plan

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what involvement fleet managers have had in drawing up his Department's Green Transport Plan. [77967]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The Treasury do not own any fleet vehicles. Ministerial cars are supplied and managed by the Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA).

Road Fuel Duty

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out the assumptions used in calculating the annual saving of carbon if the road fuel duty escalator is maintained at its present level until 2010 as in Customs and Excise Press Notice, C&E11. [78017]

Ms Hewitt: Table 5.1 in the 1999 Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report and Financial Statement and Budget Report contained an environmental appraisal of those Budget measures which were primarily environmental or which are likely to have a significant environmental impact.

The road fuel duty escalator over the period 1996 to 2002 is estimated to reduce annual carbon dioxide emissions by between 2 and 5 million tonnes of carbon in 2010. Footnote 6 of Table 5.1 explains that this estimate is based on the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions "1997 National Road Traffic Forecast" and the methodology set out in "Energy Paper 65" published by the Department of Trade and Industry in 1995.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to continue to implement the road fuel duty escalator in future years; and if he will set a final date for implementation of the duty escalator. [78016]

Ms Hewitt: The road fuel escalator, which provides for duty increases on road fuels of at least 6 per cent. above inflation, shows the Government's continuing commitment to the environment and to the 'polluter pays' principle. It will help the Government to deliver the UK's share of the EU target to reduce emissions of greenhouse gases by 8 per cent. by 2008–2012. Our environmental assessment shows that the escalator, if continued at its present level until 2002, will improve urban air quality and reduce greenhouse gases by between 2 and 5 million tonnes of carbon a year by 2010. The future of the road duty escalator will be considered each year in the Budget.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the annual cost for businesses of the additional fuel duties introduced since 1 May 1997. [76260]

Ms Hewitt: The collection of excise duty is the responsibility of HM Customs and Excise. The annual cost to business of the existing road fuel escalator commitment, inherited from the previous Administration, is estimated to be about £2.5 billion. In addition, Customs estimate that the annual cost of the charges to fuel duties announced in the 1997, 1998 and 1999 Budgets is about £750 million.

Although it was legislated for under the previous Government, the separate rate for ultra-low sulphur diesel did not come into effect until after 1 May 1997 and has therefore been treated as a change since that date.

Critical Illness Insurance

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of companies in the financial services sector which offer critical illness insurance cover; and what steps he is taking to ensure that exclusions are brought to the attention of policy holders. [77660]

Ms Hewitt: The Government do not maintain records of the number of companies which offer critical illness cover. I understand that the Association of British Insurers (ABI) estimate that in 1998 some sixty insurance companies offered critical illness insurance cover in the UK.

To ensure policyholders are aware of exclusions and other terms, the ABI code of practice for the selling of life insurance business, including critical illness insurance, includes an obligation that an intermediary shall at all times conduct business with the utmost good faith and integrity, explaining all essential provisions of the contract and drawing attention to all restrictions applying to the policy. The aim is to ensure that as far as possible the prospective policyholder understands the extent of his insurance cover.

Financial Statement and Budget Report

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which of the items listed in Table 1.11 of the Red Book are also included in public spending figures. [76455]

Mr. Milburn: To ensure consistency with the European System of Accounts 1995, the following measures in Table 1.11 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report, published in March 1999, are scored either in DEL or AME:

3: Research and development tax credit

6: Abolition of Vocational Training Relief

15: Employment Credit

16: Income Support: two week extension for lone parents moving into work

19: Increases in Income Support child premia

20: Increases in Working Families Tax Credit and Disabled Person's Tax Credit

21: Child benefit: indexation of rates and uprating

22: Sure Start Maternity Grant

23: Maternity pay reforms

25: Increase in minimum income guarantee for pensioners

26: £100 Winter Allowance

27: Abolition of mortgage interest relief

39: Energy efficiency measures and support for renewable energy sources.

Mortgage interest relief, the Working Families Tax Credit and Disabled Persons Tax Credit are income tax credits administered by the Inland Revenue and are therefore netted off from income tax receipts when assessing the level of and changes to net taxes and social security contributions.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what measures he has put in place to ensure the spread of best practice on use of the PFI throughout Government; [76398]

(2) what are the criteria on the basis of which decisions about the relative priority of PFI projects are made. [76397]

Mr. Milburn: Recommendation number 4 of the review of the Private Finance Initiative by Sir Malcolm Bates, announced on 23 June 1997, said that the Treasury Taskforce should sign off the commercial viability of all significant projects before the procurement process commences.

A further announcement on 10 February 1998 said that projects would be deemed "significant" for at least one of four reasons: those which are either big, high profile, highly replicable or ground breaking. They are also likely to raise issues that require speedy resolution.

The Taskforce continues to publish a full range of policy statements, technical notes and other guidance on PFI. These are available from Treasury Public Enquiry Unit, the Taskforce website (www.treasury-projects-taskforce.gov.uk) and in CD ROM form.

The Taskforce also maintains a library containing contract documents, case studies and other relevant documentation which those involved in PFI are encouraged to consult.

The Taskforce encourages public sector staff involved in PFI to undertake appropriate training, and has commissioned PricewaterhouseCoopers to manage a Taskforce approved training programme.

Capita in partnership with the Taskforce runs a programme of conferences covering PFI issues of the day.

Alcohol Duty

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to use revenue gained from the abolition of duty free to reduce excise duty on beer. [77603]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government are continuing to press strongly for an extension of duty free sales to allow time for a better successor regime to be developed. In his Budget on 9 March 1999, Official Report, columns 173–90, the Chancellor announced a freeze on beer duty.

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the proposal to reduce indicative limits contained in the Customs and Excise review of alcohol and tobacco duties. [77604]

Mrs. Roche: The recommendation that the Government should consider the need to negotiate changes to the rules regulating the system of minimum indicative levels is currently being considered along with a range of other options designed to tackle fraud and smuggling. It would require the unanimous agreement of all 15 member states to change the rules.

Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate is provided by his Department's Survey of Personal Incomes of (a) the number of people making contributions in excess of £3,600 per year and (b) the average contribution of those persons to (i) personal pensions and (ii) occupational pension schemes. [76244]

Ms Hewitt: Of the 14 million people currently making extra provision to voluntary private pensions above the compulsory minimum, around 2½ per cent. make contributions in excess of £3,600.

Approximate information for those contributions in 1996–97 is in the table.

Contributions in excess of £3,600 per year to pensions

	Number of people	Average contribution (£)
Personal pensions	230,000	8,800
Occupational pensions	120,000	6,200

Notes:

1. Estimates should be treated with caution since contributions to occupational pensions and net personal pension arrangements are not directly measured by the Survey of Personal Incomes and have been modelled from other survey and administrative information.
2. Personal pensions includes contributions to retirement annuity contracts, but excludes 'minimum contributions' by DSS to appropriate personal pension schemes and contributions made by employers.
3. Occupational pensions excludes contributions made by employers, but includes free-standing additional voluntary contributions.
4. Covers contributions made by employees and the self-employed.
5. Includes basic rate tax repaid to scheme administrators in respect of contributions made by employees to personal pensions under net contribution arrangements.
6. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10,000 people and £100 respectively, although they are not necessarily accurate to that degree.

Agricultural Chemicals

Mr. Brake: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to publish the results of his Department's work on taxing (a) fertilisers and (b) pesticides. [74971]

Ms Hewitt: A research report commissioned by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions on the possible impact and design of a tax or charge on pesticides has today been published, together with a list of consultative questions. The Government will consider carefully the views expressed on a number of issues raised in the report in deciding how best to proceed.

EU Soul Programme

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which part of the budget of the Europe Union provides funds for the Soul Programme; how much is devoted to it; by whom it is administered; and what programmes in the United Kingdom it supports. [76773]

Ms Hewitt: I am unaware of any programme by this name.

Euro

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the adoption of the euro would involve the physical movement of any proportion of UK gold reserves to the European Central Bank. [77543]

Ms Hewitt: In accordance with Article 30 of the ESCB Statute and paragraph 10(b) of Protocol No.11 to the EC Treaty, if the UK joined the single currency, the Bank of England would be required to contribute to the foreign reserve assets of the ECB. The Bank of England would be credited by the ECB with a claim equivalent to its contribution, which would be remunerated. The ECB has the right to hold and manage the foreign reserve assets that are transferred to it, but physical movements is not necessary for these purposes.

Rural Building Projects

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with Action with Communities in Rural England on a VAT refund scheme for building projects which have received grant aid from public funds; and if he will make a statement. [78286]

Dawn Primarolo: ACRE made representations in November 1997 to the first phase of the Review of Charity Taxation. These, along with 3,000 other replies, were analysed and informed the Review's consultation document which was published on Budget Day.

Withholding Tax

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the outcome of discussions about the proposed withholding tax at the ECOFIN meeting on 15 March; and if he will make a statement. [78204]

Dawn Primarolo: The Commission gave an informal progress report on its discussions with third countries on adoption of equivalent measures in relation to payments of interest to Community residents. There was no general discussion of the draft Directive on taxation of savings, and no decisions were taken.

Village Halls

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is on the charging of VAT on repairs and improvements to village halls; and if he will make a statement. [78288]

Dawn Primarolo: There is no scope for VAT relief on Village halls under the EC Sixth VAT Directive. Therefore their repair and maintenance is subject to VAT at the standard rate.

Duty Free

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the outcome of discussions about the future of duty free at the ECOFIN meeting on 15 March; and if he will make a statement. [78205]

Dawn Primarolo: At ECOFIN the Presidency proposed a one-off further extension of two and a half years for excise duty free arrangements with VAT being applied from 1 July 1999. Six member states supported this compromise proposal. Six member states and the Commission opposed it. The Presidency concluded that COREPER should be invited to examine the Commission's proposals and report back to the next ECOFIN Council. The UK will continue to press strongly the case for a deferral of the abolition of excise duty free so that better successor regime arrangements can be developed.

Financial Services Regulator

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidelines or advice he has issued concerning the reference of matters subject to investigation by the Financial Services Regulator to the Serious Fraud Office; and if he will make a statement. [76970]

Ms Hewitt: The Treasury has not issued guidance to the Financial Services Authority (FSA) on when to refer matters subject to investigation to the Serious Fraud Office (SFO). The FSA and SFO have long-standing arrangements which ensure that each agency is informed about investigations where the other has an interest and agreed guidelines on the criteria for determining who is best placed to pursue a particular case. They are currently preparing, with other investigative and prosecuting authorities, new guidelines for co-operation to take account of the new powers proposed for the FSA in the Financial Services and Markets Bill.

Valuation Office

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what targets will be set for the Valuation Office Executive Agency for 1999–2000. [78855]

Dawn Primarolo: I have set the following key targets for the Valuation Office in 1999–2000:

Operational

rating

to publish new rating valuation lists by 31 December 1999 to clear 264,500 appeals against the existing rating lists

against the policy, in co-operation with the valuation tribunals, of clearing appeals within 6 months of receipt:

to clear council tax appeals equal to the number received up to a maximum of 80,000

Client and customer services to achieve a further improvement against the Agency's valuation indicator by 1 per cent. to 88 per cent.

to meet timeliness targets in 90 per cent. of cases

Finance and cost efficiency to break even overall after charging for the full cost of chargeable services including notional interest of 6 per cent. on the average working capital.

measurement will be within a tolerance of the greater of 2 per cent. of relevant turnover or £1 million to achieve financial efficiency gains of 4.0 per cent.

Investing in People to achieve Investors in People accreditation by 31 December 1999.

Further details are contained in the Valuation Office's Forward Plan, copies of which will be placed in the Library of the House on publication.

Tax Law Rewrite Project

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what further developments there have been on the Tax Law Rewrite Project. [78963]

Dawn Primarolo: I am pleased to announce that the Tax Law Rewrite project is making very good progress and continues to enjoy wide support. The Inland Revenue have published a document which reviews the recent progress of the project and outlines its work programme for 1999–2000. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

The Steering Committee chaired by Lord Howe of Aberavon carried out a stocktake of the project during 1998. The rewritten legislation has been well received by the main users in the tax community and they are enthusiastic that the project should continue. It is a massive undertaking, but one we are committed to doing well.

Public Expenditure

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what arrangements are being made for in-year control of public expenditure from 1999–2000 onwards; and if he will make a statement. [78856]

Mr. Milburn: I have today written to the Chairman of the Treasury Committee outlining the arrangements the Government are making for in-year control of public expenditure.

The spending control framework announced in the Comprehensive Spending Review establishes a new aggregate, the Department Expenditure Limit, which covers all spending within departments' direct or indirect control. The new arrangements were set out in the 1998 Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report (Cm 3978) and the Comprehensive Spending Review White Paper (Cm 4011).

With effect from 1999–2000 the system of cash limits will be replaced by a single control on each department at the level of the Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL). In future, the disciplines of notifying a control limit to Parliament, reporting changes in that limit, and accounting for any breach will apply at the level of the DEL. Changes in DELs arising from transfers between departments or calls upon and benefits to the DEL Reserve will be notified to Parliament.

Details of this and the increased emphasis on the use of End-Year Flexibility to contain pressures on the DEL will be described in the Introduction to the 1999–2000 Main Supply Estimates which will be presented to the House shortly.

Departments have been encouraged to establish small unallocated provisions within their Departmental Expenditure Limits for 1999–2000 onwards to give them flexibility to manage their budgets and respond to unforeseen pressures in-year. This will help ensure that the three year plans set in the CSR can be adhered to.

Excise Duty and VAT

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the rates of (a) excise duty and (b) VAT on (i) cigarettes and (ii) hand-rolling tobacco in each member state of the European Union, the United States of America and Canada, taking account of the changes in his Budget. [76567]

Mrs. Roche: The information on the European Union is as follows. The information on the United States of America and Canada is not readily available.

	(i) Cigarettes			(ii) Hand-rolling Tobacco
	Excise		VAT	Excise		VAT

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Coal Production

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will publish the report by International Mining Consultants Ltd., prepared as part of the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation, on the prospects for coal production in the United Kingdom for the next 20 years. [78859]

Mr. Battle: I have today placed a copy of the Report in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

This report is a thorough, technical engineering study of the British coal-mining industry. It assesses geological conditions and other extraction issues, to estimate production prospects and costs for coal in the UK. Though it does not attempt to predict the market conditions for coal, it will provide a valuable reference point for all those involved in the industry.

The report should be seen against the background of the measures the Government are taking to remove distortions in the UK electricity market, which will ensure a level playing field for all fuels. The coal industry is getting fairness, not favours—which is what they asked for. The reform programme under way includes:

working on the reform of the electricity trading arrangements in England and Wales; seeking practical opportunities for divestment by major coal-fired generators; pressing ahead with competition in electricity supply for all customers; separating supply and distribution in electricity markets.

resolving the technical issues about the growth of gas, including the proper remuneration of flexible plant; and continuing to press for open energy markets in Europe.

Year 2000 Business Continuity Plan

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reason his Department did not meet the Government's target of producing an initial Year 2000 business continuity plan by January; and if he will make a statement. [78470]

Mr. Wills: Plans to deal with disasters affecting the central Department are well established and have existed for some years. Their review and modification as necessary to deal with potential Year 2000 problems started in late 1998. The broad approach was agreed in mid-December but required confirmation of some technical issues by relevant suppliers. This confirmation was provided by mid-January. Whilst the Business Continuity Plan was therefore agreed by the target date, there had not been sufficient time to document it by then.

The DTI's initial Business Continuity Plan was documented by the end of February and will be updated during 1999 as required.

Timber Protection Costs

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will identify the (a) health, (b) safety and (c) environmental standards which apply to United Kingdom producers of timber which do not apply to similar producers in Baltic states; and if he will make a statement on the impact which such standards have upon United Kingdom costs of production. [74150]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 2 March 1999]: There are many health, safety and environmental standards which apply to the UK forestry and sawmilling industry, the majority of which emanate from European Directives. These have been introduced under the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 and the Environmental Protection Act 1990 among other statutes. Health and Safety standards include those laid down in secondary legislation such as the Provision and Use of Work Equipment Regulations; the Lifting Operations and Lifting Equipment Regulations; the personal Protective Equipment at Work Regulations; the Noise at Work Regulations; and the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health (COSHH) Regulations. While the Government recognise that there may be costs for business associated with higher environmental standards, they do not believe that these costs are significant over the long term in relation to the overall costs of sawmill operations.

Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania have Association Agreements with the EU under which they undertake to align their laws in respect of these standards with EU legislation by 2005, and are receiving assistance from the EU and member states to achieve this earlier in the context of intensifying their preparations for accession to the EU.

Sub-contractors

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce further measures to ensure that contractors meet their obligations to sub-contractors. [75919]

Mr. Byers: There is already in place an extensive framework of commercial law on which parties to a contractual arrangement can seek to rely. Where disputes arise between parties to a contract, it is advisable for them to seek to establish their legal rights and obligations under the arrangements.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received regarding sub-contracting malpractices; and if he will make a statement. [75917]

Mr. Byers: I have not received any representations regarding sub-contracting malpractices in particular.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will oppose the extension of the Working Time Regulations to the self-employed. [76257]

Mr. Byers: There are no proposals to extend the Working Time Directive or the Working Time Regulations specifically to the self-employed.

Trade Promotion

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the last occasion on which a Government Minister led a trade delegation to (a) Ukraine and (b) Uruguay; and what future trade delegations are planned. [76562]

Mr. Wilson: There has been no Ministerially led trade delegation to Ukraine. The then Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the right hon. Member for South-West Norfolk (Mrs. Shephard) visited Uruguay in September/October 1993.

There are no plans at present for a Ministerially led trade delegation to visit Ukraine or Uruguay.

Exports (Pains Wessex)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will list the export licences granted to Pains Wessex (Schermuly) for the export of (a) pyrotechnics, (b) tear gas, (c) plastic baton rounds and (d) anti-personnel fragmentation grenades or components for the above products since 1988 to Malaysia; [77242]

(2) if he will list the export licences granted to Pains Wessex (Schermuly) since 1988 for the export of (a) anti-personnel fragmentation grenades and (b) anti-ambush grenades to Indonesia; [77244]

(3) if he will list the open individual export licences granted to Pains Wessex (Schermuly) in each of the last 10 years. [77243]

Dr. Howells: The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated and the following results were obtained. Between 1 January 1991 and 5 March 1999, no Standard Individual Export Licences, and between 1 January 1994 and 5 March 1999, no Open Individual Export Licences were issued to Schermuly Ltd.

This information should be considered in light of the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roche), the then Minister for Small Firms, Trade and Industry, to my hon. Friend the Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint) on 30 October 1997, Official Report, columns 870–71.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the export licences granted to Pains Wessex for the export of (a) tear gas, (b) plastic baton rounds and (c) anti-personnel fragmentation grenades since 1988. [77241]

Dr. Howells: Inquiries are being made under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. Where confidential information is involved, the parties concerned may be asked if they consent to its disclosure, and this can take some time. I will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible, and place a copy of that letter in the Library of the House.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the licensed production agreements that Pains Wessex has established in other countries, indicating the products which these agreements cover. [77240]

Dr. Howells: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave her on 22 March 1999, Official Report, column 117.

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures will be taken to ensure that employers who contravene the national minimum wage will face a high risk of prosecution. [76046]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 16 March 1999]: The Inland Revenue will enforce the National Minimum Wage on behalf of my Department. The National Minimum Wage Act 1998 contains a number of provisions relating to enforcement, both civil and criminal. Workers will be able to take cases of underpayment to an employment tribunal or a civil court.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to extend the minimum wage provisions to those workers employed over 12 miles offshore. [78239]

Mr. Byers: A draft Order in Council was laid before both Houses of Parliament on 10 March which makes provision for extending the national minimum wage to workers who work or ordinarily work in UK territorial waters. It will also extend the national minimum wage to those who work or ordinarily work in the UK sector of the continental shelf where the work is connected with the exploration or exploitation of the sea-bed of the UK sector of the continental shelf (or its subsoil) or is work in the UK sector connected with the exploration or exploitation of a foreign sector of a cross-boundary petroleum field. Subject to Parliamentary approval and the approval of Her Majesty, it will come into force on 1 May.

Correspondence

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action has been taken regarding the complaints made in respect of a company referred to in the correspondence between the hon. Member for Leicester, East and the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs dated 12 June 1998. [77586]

Dr. Howells: My hon. Friend should be well aware of the Department's long standing policy of not commenting on the affairs of individual companies.

Fireworks

Mr. Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to announce the 1998 figures for firework injuries from all hospital casualty units in Great Britain. [77602]

Dr. Howells: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Plymouth, Sutton (Mrs. Gilroy) on 16 March 1999, Official Report, column 598.

Mortgages

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Bristol, West (Valerie Davey), 10 March 1999, Official Report, columns 263–64, concerning the mortgage market, how he defines unjust interest rates in relation to the provisions on extortionate credit in the Consumer Credit Act 1974. [77448]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 18 March 1999]: Under the terms of the Consumer Credit Act 1974, it is for the Court to decide whether any particular credit agreement is extortionate. Among the factors that the Court may take into account are the prevailing interest rates when the credit bargain was made, the financial pressure the borrower was under at that time and the level of payments.

The research we have commissioned in this area will, amongst other things, look at what indicators can be drawn from past cases on extortionate credit and will also look at types of lending that appear to give rise to problems.

Unsolicited Mail

Dan Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to introduce measures to protect (a) the elderly (b) people with mental health problems and (c) mentally disabled people from the impact of unsolicited direct mail. [77668]

Dr. Howells: The draft Regulations implementing the Distance Selling Directive will provide a mechanism under which consumers can object to receiving unsolicited direct mail in connection with distance contracts, that is one where consumer and supplier do not have face to face contact up to and including the moment when the contract is concluded.

My Department is committed to developing a strategy which offers consumers, especially older and vulnerable people in our society, the protection they need to ensure that they receive fair treatment and that they know about their rights. I will therefore seek to ensure that we explain clearly to consumers, especially the vulnerable, how they can object to receiving unsolicited direct mail.

Dan Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he will take to regulate unsolicited direct mail sent to individuals' homes. [77669]

Dr. Howells: The Department will be issuing in the summer a draft of Regulations to implement the EU Distance Selling Directive (97/7/EC). The Directive requires, among other things, that unsolicited direct mail in connection with distance contracts, that is one where consumer and supplier do not have face to face contact up to and including the moment when the contract is concluded, may be used only where there is no clear objection from the consumer. Thus consumers must have the right to register their objection to receiving such mail and have their objection respected. Member States have to implement the Directive by 4 June 2000. The Department is consulting widely over the best means of implementing the Directive.

Milk Marque

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received on the future of Milk Marque; and if he will make a statement. [77843]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received a number of representations from hon. Members individually and on behalf of constituents. He has also received representations from interested parties and from members of the public.

My right hon. Friend will announce what action, if any, he intends to take when he publishes the report.

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he plans to publish (a) the report of the MMC inquiry into Milk Marque and (b) his Department's response to the report; and if he will set out the terms of reference of the inquiry. [78236]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry will publish the MMC's report as soon as is practicable. I refer my hon. Friend to my previous answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Stroud (Mr. Drew) on 27 November 1998, Official Report, column 36, for the terms of reference of the inquiry.

Milk Market

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to announce his response to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission's inquiry on the milk market. [78021]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 22 March 1999]: My right hon. Friend will publish the MMC's report as soon as is practicable.

Product Liability

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce a statutory mandatory product recall requirement for domestic appliances. [78357]

Dr. Howells: I have no plans to introduce a statutory mandatory product recall requirement for domestic appliances at the present time. However, the DTI is currently working with business to develop a best practice guide to help companies conduct more effective product recalls. The question of a mandatory product recall power is one of the issues likely to be discussed in Europe in the context of the review of the General Product Safety Directive.

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many cases have been brought under the product liability provisions of the Consumer Protection Act 1987; and what level of damages has been awarded by the courts. [78356]

Dr. Howells: There is no central record of cases brought under the product liability provisions of the Consumer Protection Act 1987, which is a civil law process. A search of judgments reported in the Law Reports has revealed two cases brought under the product liability provisions but the judgments concerned preliminary issues. Judgments in the County Court and some judgments in the High Court are not reported.

Travel Companies

Mr. Darvill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 24 February 1999, Official Report, column 316, on travel companies, when he expects the Director General of Fair Trading to complete his discussions with the major travel groups. [77791]

Dr. Howells: The Director General of Fair Trading is continuing his discussions with the major travel groups regarding undertakings on transparency of ownership links. He will provide me with advice in due course and I will make an announcement.

Clothing and Textile Industry

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to revise the guidance notes on country of origin labelling for the United Kingdom clothing industry. [77898]

Mr. Wilson: The Department issued guidance on origin marking in December 1996 at the time that the Trade Descriptions (Place of Production) (Marking) Order 1988 was revoked. This applies not only to the labelling of clothing but to products generally. The guidance remains an accurate reflection of the current statutory requirements. I have no plans to revise it.

Republic of Ireland (Trade)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in the last financial year for which figures are available and in each case estimating the financial sums involved, if he will list (a) the top 10 companies by volume of exports from Great Britain to the Republic of Ireland, (b) the top 10 companies by volume of imports from the Republic of Ireland to Great Britain, (c) the top 10 products in volume exported from Great Britain to the Republic of Ireland and (d) the top 10 products by volume imported from the Republic of Ireland to Great Britain. [78176]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 22 March 1999]: Information on UK companies trade with Ireland is not available from any official sources. Figures for trade by financial year are not readily available, while data in volume terms are not available on an individual country basis.

Information on the top 10 products in value terms for UK exports to Ireland and imports from Ireland in 1998 is given in the following table.

Year 2000 Business Continuity Plans

Mr. Chope: To ask the President of the Council which Government Departments have not yet completed initial business continuity plans for 2000. [78471]

Mrs. Beckett: I refer the hon. Member to the summary tables and quarterly returns which on 16 March I placed in the Libraries of the House following my recent quarterly statement on progress across government in tackling the bug. At that time, 18 Government Departments and Agencies had forecast completion dates for their initial business continuity plans in March or later. Of these, eight have still to complete their initial plans. They are: the Department of Trade and Industry (centre), the Radiocommunications Agency, the Maritime and Coastguard Agency, the Debt Management Office, the Crown Prosecution Service, the Serious Fraud Office, the Public Record Office and the Fisheries Research Services.

Mr. Chope: To ask the President of the Council if she will place copies of all Government Department initial business continuity plans for 2000 in the Library. [78472]

Mrs. Beckett: Information about business continuity plans is included in the latest quarterly returns which I placed in the Libraries of the House following my recent quarterly statement on 16 March. Future quarterly returns will provide more detail, in particular focusing on what plans are in place to ensure the continuity of essential services at the Millennium.

It is for individual Ministers to decide whether or not to publish their complete business continuity plans, according to their judgment of the nature of some of the detail involved. It would clearly be inappropriate for Ministers to publish information that is sensitive or relates to matters of national security.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Bereavement Allowances

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many widows will be affected by the loss of the widow's bereavement allowance broken down by those aged (a) 50–55, (b) 55–60 and (c) 60 years and over; and what the average amount will be lost not including the effects of the proposed reforms to bereavement benefits. [76841]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 15 March 1999]: Existing claimants will retain their entitlement to this allowance even after 5 April 2000. Women who are bereaved after 5 April 2000 will not be able to claim the allowance.

Means-tested Benefits (Scotland)

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the cost of (a) all means-tested benefits in Scotland, (b) means-tested benefits for people aged 15 to 25 years in Scotland, (c) means-tested benefits for people aged 26 to 40 years in Scotland and (d) means-tested benefit for people aged 41 to 65 years in Scotland in each year since 1992 in (i) cash terms and (ii) 1998–99 prices. [77770]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the tables.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to extend to those (a) in receipt of benefits and (b) on low incomes the heating allowance for those on pensions. [77990]

Angela Eagle: The Winter Fuel Payments scheme provides extra help to around ten million eligible pensioners, in over seven million households towards their heaviest fuel bills. We have no plans to extend the scheme to other groups.

We are committed to tackling the problems associated with vulnerable people keeping warm and has already introduced numerous substantial measures to meet this objective.

Unclaimed Benefits

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the amount of income-related benefits unclaimed by those entitled to them in (a) the Tamworth constituency and (b) Staffordshire. [78341]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available. The national estimates of take-up of income-related benefits are currently being revised and are due to be republished in May.

Disability Living Allowance

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the number of people receiving the higher rate of disability living allowance; and of these the number who have (a) had their benefit (i) reduced and (ii) stopped and (b) had their benefit increased. [78316]

Iraq (Medical Supplies)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 16 March 1999, Official Report, column 573, if he will have discussions with the Iraqi authorities about increasing the role of the UN in the distribution of medical supplies in central and southern Iraq. [78029]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 22 March 1999]: As my hon. Friend is aware, we have no diplomatic relations with the Government of Iraq and our dealings with them are strictly limited to occasional contacts with the Iraqi Interests Section of the Jordanian Embassy in London and the Iraqi mission to the UN in New York.

As I said in my earlier answer, we would support proposals from the panel assessing the humanitarian situation in Iraq to increase the role of the UN in distributing medical supplies in central and southern Iraq. But it would be for the UN to discuss any such proposals with the Iraqi authorities.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Civil Servants (Appraisal)

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what were the appraisal performance markings awarded to civil servants in 1998 for (a) each agency in his Department and (b) the Department broken down by (i) grade, (ii) gender, (iii) ethnicity, (iv) part-time/full-time working and (v) disability; and for (1) each agency and (2) the Department whether the Cabinet Office's four fifths rule for detecting potential adverse impact was applied to the appraisal markings of civil servants in the 1998 report round. [78140]

Mr. Hoon: The appraisal performance markings awarded to Civil Servants in 1998 within the Lord Chancellor's Department and its Agencies are shown in the tables.

Although we do monitor for Equal Opportunities purposes, neither the Lord Chancellor's Department nor its Agencies applied the four fifths rule in analysing the appraisal markings awarded to staff in 1998.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the total number of occasions when (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity since 2 May 1997, unaccompanied by Ministers. [77980]

Mr. Hoon: There have been no occasions since 2 May 1997 when the special adviser employed by my Department has travelled abroad in an official capacity unaccompanied by Ministers. Neither the Lord Chancellor nor I have any non-departmental special advisers.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Human Rights Commission

8. Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations she has received relating to the Human Rights Commission's work. [76686]

Marjorie Mowlam: The Government have received no representations relating to the work of the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission since it was established on 1 March. However, during the passage of the Northern Ireland Bill, we received many representations from interested parties on what the functions and powers of the Commission should be. These were fully debated in Parliament and the Government introduced a number of amendments to the Bill to reflect the representations that had been made.

20. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the work of the Human Rights Commission. [76698]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission was formally established on 1 March under the provisions of the Northern Ireland Act 1998. The Chief Commissioner is Professor Brice Dickson, and there are nine part-time Commissioners. The establishment of the Commission is the central feature of the additional protections for human rights in Northern Ireland which are envisaged in the Belfast agreement. The Government believe that it will be a powerful force in developing, through education and research, an active human rights culture in Northern Ireland. One of its early functions will be to advise on a possible Bill of Rights for Northern Ireland. How the commission carries out its various responsibilities is a matter for the commission itself to determine.

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the interview panel for appointments to the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission recommended only the persons ultimately appointed. [77985]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The two interview panels put forward recommendations on all those interviewed which numbered eight for the Chief Commissioner part and 23 for the Commissioner parts.

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria were adopted to ensure that the human rights commissioners appointed were representative of the community as a whole. [77982]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, in placing advertisements widely and issuing a press release, ensured that applications were received from as wide a selection of people as possible. The sift criteria for interview were adopted to ensure that the best candidates were interviewed. The Secretary of State then appointed a Chief Commissioner and Commissioners making a judgment about the group as a whole being representative of the community in Northern Ireland. She is satisfied that the statutory requirement has been met.

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria were used for shortlisting applicants for membership of the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission; who carried out the shortlisting; and what consultation was undertaken with (a) the Irish Government and (b) others regarding shortlisting. [77984]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Shortlisting was carried out by the three members of the interview panel using the following two criteria:

(a) the candidate's record of achievement in their chosen field, and

(b) evidence from their application form of a good grasp of human rights.

The panel did not consult with anyone in drawing up the shortlist.

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the advertised requirements for the appointment of Northern Ireland's Human Rights Commission; and if these requirements were discussed with (a) the Irish Government and (b) the Secretariat at Maryfield. [77981]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Copies of the advertisements will be placed in the Library of the Houses. The details were not discussed with either the Irish Government or the Secretariat at Maryfield.

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whom she consulted prior to agreeing the appointments to the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission. [77986]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Secretary of State discussed the recommendations of the two interview panels with the Chairmen of those panels. She did not consult anyone else prior to appointing the Chief Commissioner and Commissioners.

Fishing

9. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on discussions she has held with the Irish Government on ways of improving fishing opportunities in the Irish sea. [76687]

Mr. McFall: Over the past six months I have written to the Taoiseach on a number of occasions in connection with a joint approach to exploitation of Irish Sea stocks. I am delighted to report that the United Kingdom and Irish Governments were able to co-operate at last December's Council of EU Fisheries Ministers. We achieved significant increases in fishing opportunities for haddock for the benefit of all fishermen fishing in the Irish Sea, particularly the Northern Ireland fleet. This was a very welcome development, and I hope that we will continue to find opportunities to co-operate constructively on fisheries issues.

Good Friday Agreement

10. Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what meetings she has had with the Irish Government about the implementation of the Good Friday agreement in the last month. [76688]

Marjorie Mowlam: I have had regular contacts with the Irish Government and with the Northern Ireland political parties in the last month. It is important that all parties to the Good Friday Agreement work together at this crucial time to ensure that every aspect is implemented in full.

11. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on progress on implementing the Good Friday agreement. [76689]

12. Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on progress in implementing the Good Friday agreement. [76690]

Marjorie Mowlam: I refer hon. Members to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Falkirk, East (Mr. Connarty) today, Official Report, column 379.

Irish Language

13. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what new proposals she has to improve the quality of teaching through the medium of Irish. [76691]

Mr. McFall: The quality of intakes to Irish Medium Education initial teacher training courses is already high and the Education and Training Inspectorate has found the quality of teaching in schools to be generally good.

Post-devolution, this issue will be for the Irish Language Agency of the North-South Implementation Body on Languages.

Euro

14. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the impact of the euro on north-south relationships in the island of Ireland. [76692]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Northern Ireland is unique in that it is the only part of the United Kingdom with a border to the euro-zone. It is very early to be definitive about the impact of the euro, but in the short term it is likely to be limited.

Decommissioning

15. Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of progress on the decommissioning of illegally held arms and explosives. [76693]

Mr. Ingram: The Good Friday agreement committed all the participants to the total disarmament of all paramilitary organisations. The participants also confirmed their intention to work constructively and in good faith with the Independent International Commission on Decommissioning and to use any influence they may have to achieve the decommissioning of all paramilitary arms within two years of last May's referendum and in the context of the implementation of the overall settlement.

21. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what report she has received from General De Chastelain on the status of parties in the Assembly in relation to decommissioning. [76699]

Mr. Ingram: I understand that discussions continue between various Assembly parties and the Independent International Commission on Decommissioning.

25. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will consider the purchase of arms from paramilitary groups in Northern Ireland as part of the process of decommissioning. [76703]

Mr. Ingram: Decommissioning schemes were agreed in June 1998 after extensive consultation. The schemes do not provide for the purchase of paramilitary arms since that option was not supported by the parties.

28. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when she last met the Taoiseach to discuss matters relating to the issue of the decommissioning of paramilitary weaponry. [76706]

Mr. Ingram: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State last formally met with the Taoiseach on 3 February and they also met again during their recent visits to the USA for St. Patrick's day.

29. Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of progress on the decommissioning of illegally held arms and explosives. [76707]

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent representations she has received on when the decommissioning of illegally held weapons and explosives will begin. [76683]

Mr. Ingram: I have welcomed the start to decommissioning made by the LVF on 18 December. The Independent International Commission on Decommissioning is continuing its vital work. It is time for all groups to play their part in the full implementation of the agreement; they should start to decommission now.

Drumcree

16. Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on progress towards the resolution of the problems relating to the Orange Order parade at Drumcree. [76694]

26. Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made towards the resolution of the problems over the Orange Order parade at Drumcree. [76704]

Mr. Ingram: Since last July, the Government have been playing an active and constructive role in helping to find a solution to these problems which would address the legitimate concerns of all sides. We have appointed in a personal capacity Frank Blair, Director of ACAS Scotland, as facilitator and urge all sides to co-operate with him.

Health Care

17. Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what impact the Budget will have on health care provision in Northern Ireland. [76695]

Mr. McFall: The Chancellor's Budget statement confirmed the Government's continuing commitment to modernise the NHS. I am equally determined that health services in Northern Ireland are equipped to provide a first class service, and am considering how this can best be achieved.

Omagh Bombing

18. Mr. Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate she has made of the total compensation payable as a result of the Omagh bomb. [76696]

Mr. Ingram: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Compensation Agency and I understand from the chief executive that the information is as follows.

Compensation for death or injury in such circumstances is payable under the Criminal Injuries (Compensation) (Northern Ireland) Order 1988. The Agency anticipates that approximately £9 million is likely to be paid in respect of the victims of the Omagh bomb.

Loss or damage to property in such circumstances is payable under The Criminal Damage (Compensation) (Northern Ireland) Order 1977. The current estimate is that approximately £8 million is likely to be paid for damage caused to buildings, their contents and to vehicles.

National Stadium

19. Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the Government's policy on a national sports stadium in Northern Ireland. [76697]

Mr. McFall: The Government are aware of the need to assess the possibility of providing a national stadium in Northern Ireland. It has, therefore, asked the Sports Council to lead in establishing a Working Group to explore the need for, and feasibility of providing a national stadium and to recommend the way forward.

Paramilitary Violence

22. Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate she has made of the number of punishment beatings since the Good Friday agreement; and in how many of the cases charges have been laid against alleged perpetrators. [76700]

Mr. Ingram: Since the Good Friday agreement, to 11 March, there have been 161 paramilitary-style assaults, 102 by Loyalists and 59 by Republicans. There have been 66 paramilitary-style shootings, 39 by Loyalists and 27 by Republicans.

Charges are made on the basis of specific offences, for example, common assault, grievous bodily harm and actual bodily harm. The database does not record separately those which are deemed to be paramilitary-style and it is therefore not possible to provide information on the number of persons who have been made amenable for these attacks.

New Deal (Young People)

23. Mr. Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many young people under 25 years have participated in the new deal in Northern Ireland to date; and how many of those are now in work. [76701]

Mr. McFall: The Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency has informed me that since 6 April 1998, 9,707 New Deal clients under 25 years have entered New Deal. Of these, at the end of February 1999, 2,547 had found work. Almost 70 per cent. were unsubsidised jobs. Information on whether they are still in employment could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Lifelong Learning

24. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals she has to introduce the Government's lifelong learning programme in Northern Ireland. [76702]

Mr. McFall: The Government's strategy for lifelong learning in Northern Ireland was published on 9 February 1999. A copy of the document, "Lifelong Learning: a New Learning Culture for All", has been placed in the Library of the House.

Equality Commission

27. Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Equality Commission in Northern Ireland will be established. [76705]

Marjorie Mowlam: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Glasgow, Maryhill (Mrs. Fyfe) today, Official Report, column 376.

Peace Process

30. Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the progress of the peace process. [76708]

Marjorie Mowlam: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Falkirk, East (Mr. Connarty) today, Official Report, column 379.

Patten Commission

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if she will make it her policy that no information from the Patten Commission on policing which is not in the public domain will be shared with (a) any other Government and (b) any private group; [77582]

(2) if she will make it her policy that no information from the Patten Commission on policing which is not in the public domain will be shared with (a) any other Government and (b) any private group. [77584]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. and learned Gentleman to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 19 March 1999, Official Report, columns 843–44.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the greatest approved expenditure during the past five years for the provision of CCTV security equipment at (a) a controlled school, (b) a maintained school and (c) a voluntary grammar school; and if she will make a statement on the criteria used for approval of expenditure on CCTV security systems at schools. [77611]

Mr. McFall: The greatest approved expenditure for CCTV equipment over the past 5 years was £18,000 for a controlled school, £17,000 for a maintained school and £12,000 for a voluntary grammar school. Applications for CCTV systems in schools are considered on their merits in light of the available resources and a risk assessment based on guidelines in the booklet, "Security and Personal Safety in Schools".

Dundonald Training Centre

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff are presently employed at Dundonald Training Centre; how many trainees are involved there; and what proposals she has to increase training opportunities in the boroughs of Ards, Castlereagh and North Down. [77796]

Mr. Ingram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 23 March 1999:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency, to reply to your question about Dundonald Training Centre and training opportunities in the Boroughs of Ards, Castlereagh, and North Down.

Pending a decision on its future, Dundonald Training Centre is not currently operational. Five staff remain in the Centre to maintain the premises and provide support services to other parts of the training centre network. A further 30 T&EA staff are located on the Dundonald site engaged in duties which are not directly linked to the work of training centres. There are no trainees in the Centre at present.

A document on the future structure of relationships between training centres and Further Education Colleges, which was published for consultation purposes in September 1998, recommended a working partnership between colleges and training centres which would better utilise their respective strengths. The views and advice offered during the consultation process are being assessed and an announcement on the way forward is expected shortly.

The future of Dundonald Training Centre will depend upon the outcome of the Review. The extent to which vocational training arrangements in Ards, Castlereagh, and North Down might be further improved will be similarly addressed through the implementation of the Review's recommendations.

As you know, high quality training is available now under the New Deal and Jobskills programmes and will be offered shortly in Worktrack which will succeed ACE. Complementing these programmes is the recently announced strategy for Lifelong Learning, a £63 million initiative to encourage a culture of continuous learning. This major new initiative will help individuals of all ages to acquire the skills they need to meet the demands of a rapidly changing economy.

I hope you find this information useful.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Further Education

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what change there has been in the number of students in further education in the United Kingdom since tuition fees were introduced. [75022]

Mr. Mudie: The information requested is not available.

New Deal (Targets)

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what targets the Employment Service has set for improving employability through the implementation of the New Deal. [75665]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 9 March 1999]: Responsibility for the subject of these questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Graham Brady, dated 24 March 1999:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply to your question about the targets we have set for improving employability through the implementation of New Deal. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

We are working to the goal of implementing the Government's commitment to helping 250,000 young unemployed people off benefit and into work. Placement in jobs, retention in employment and qualifications gained are employability measures included within the core performance measures of the New Deal.

I hope this is helpful.

Chief Inspector of Schools

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will investigate the recent reports relating to the conduct of the Chief Inspector of Schools; and if he will make a statement. [76456]

Ms Estelle Morris: Chris Woodhead has made it clear that he does not accept the allegations made in recent reports about his conduct during the period when he was a school teacher and no evidence has been brought forward to substantiate them. He has also made it clear that he supports the Government's new legislation on improper relationships between pupils and their teachers.

Museums (School Programmes)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the effect on local authority museums' school programmes of the further delegation of funding to schools. [76640]

Ms Estelle Morris: Local education authorities are not required to delegate funding for school museum services in 1999–2000, except to grant-maintained schools. From April 2000, we intend to require them to delegate funding for school library and museum services to secondary schools; in the case of primary and special schools, our intention is that any funding for these services which is not delegated should be passed to the schools on an earmarked basis, which will enable the schools to decide whether to buy the services from their own or another authority.

We are committed to encouraging museums and galleries to develop their educational role and strengthen their links with schools, and have recently announced that we shall be making £2.5 million available for this purpose over three years.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many civil servants in his Department have been invited to waive the Working Time Directive requirement to work less than 48 hours a week on 17 consecutive weeks; how many civil servants in his Department have refused to waive the requirement; and what is the total cost of compliance with the Directive. [76810]

Mr. Mudie: Three members of the Senior Civil Service in the Department for Education and Employment (including the Employment Service) have signed an agreement to disapply the 48 hour limit. Central records are not kept for staff outside the Senior Civil Service in DfEE (including the Employment Service), nor do the Regulations require employers to keep records of the number of workers who refuse to sign an opt-out agreement. The standard terms and conditions of service for staff employed by the Department for Education and Employment (including the Employment Service) are well within the limits set by the Working Time Regulations. Compliance costs are not kept centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Support Staff Pay

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment his Department has made of the impact of the single status agreement on the pay of non-teaching support staff. [76939]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 16 March 1999]: No assessment has been made. As with other groups of local government staff, pay and conditions of service for education support staff are determined by local authorities in negotiation with staff and the relevant trade unions. The Government traditionally are not involved. However, we welcome the encouragement in the single status agreement of local pay and grading reviews and the commitment to training and development for all staff.

Correspondence

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the hon. Member for West Derbyshire can expect a reply to the letter he sent on 20 November 1998 on behalf of his constituent, Mr. Purdy. [77316]

Mr. Mudie: Since an interim reply was issued on 11 January 1999, the hon. Member for West Derbyshire's letter of 20 November has, unfortunately, been mislaid in the Department. A reply was issued to the copy letter provided by the hon. Member's office today.

Departmental Review (Regional Consultation)

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if his current review of the delivery of high-quality further education, training and work force development includes consultation at a regional level. [77824]

Mr. Mudie: Yes. We have invited comments from a wide range of partners at local, regional and national level.

Classroom Assistants

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what regulations set the pay and conditions of classroom assistants. [77906]

Ms Estelle Morris: The pay and conditions of classroom assistants in schools are not governed by regulations but are determined by Local Education Authorities and schools in negotiation with their staff and relevant trade unions.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what minimum qualifications classroom assistants are required to possess. [77907]

Ms Estelle Morris: It is for Local Education Authorities and schools to determine the qualifications required by classroom assistants working in schools. The Department is working with Local Education Authority representatives and others to develop a national framework of training and qualifications for classroom assistants based on occupational standards/NVQs.

Local Authority Spending

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the local authorities to which Ministers have written urging greater spending on local services within their portfolio area. [77960]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 22 March 1999]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has written to all English Local Education Authorities to urge them to ensure that the additional provision which we have made available is actually spent on education and, in particular, is used to support schools so that the resources can be spent directly on raising standards.

Millennium Dome (School Visits)

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions he has had with teaching unions regarding overnight accommodation costs and overtime payments for teachers accompanying parties of school children visiting the Millennium Dome. [78166]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 22 March 1999]: None. Many schools are accustomed to taking children on overnight trips.

Information Technology Learning Centres

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many of the new IT learning centres announced in the Budget are to be developed in rural areas; and if he will list their locations. [78310]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The number of learning centres to be located in rural areas and their locations is yet to be decided.

New Deal (Lincolnshire Schools)

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list those schools in (a) north east Lincolnshire and (b) north Lincolnshire which received finances through the New Deal for schools; and in each case for what purpose the money was allocated. [78312]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The following two tables answer my hon. Friend's question.

Science Laboratories

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many new scientific laboratories have been built in schools in the last five years. [78232]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not held centrally.

Education Funding (Leicestershire)

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what advice he has given Leicestershire County Council concerning the expenditure of the 1999–2000 increase in the education SSA for the county; and if he will make a statement; [78247]

(2) what responses he has received from the leaders of the (a) Conservative, (b) Liberal and (c) Labour county councillors in Leicestershire to his letter of 1 March to county councillors entitled Education Funding; and if he will make a statement; [78246]

(3) if he will list the education authorities which have not passed on to schools the whole of the increase in the education SSA for 1998–99; and if he will make a statement. [78337]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 23 March 1999]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has written to all English Local Education Authorities, including Leicestershire, to urge them to use all of the cash increase in the education SSA for 1999–2000 to support education services. We expect every Local Education Authority of whatever political control to ensure that the increase is spent on education and used in the direct delivery of services. No responses have been received from the leaders of the Conservative and Liberal Groups to the letters which have been sent to the County Council. The Labour Group Leader has indicated that the Labour Group is committed to providing additional resources for education in Leicestershire. Final data are not yet available on actual expenditure in 1998–99 or planned expenditure in 1999–2000 but we will be monitoring the financial returns of authorities to see whether the cash increase in the education SSA has been used to support education.

Ministerial Engagements

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what his engagements were at 11.00 am on Friday 19 March; and if he will make a statement; [78447]

(2) what engagements the Minister for Employment, Welfare to Work and Equal Opportunities had at 11.00 am on Friday 19 March; and if he will make a statement; [78448]

(3) what engagements the Minister for School Standards had at 11.00 am on Friday 19 March; and if he will make a statement; [78449]

(4) what engagements the Minister for Education and Employment had at 11.00 am on Friday 19 March; and if he will make a statement; [78450]

(5) what engagements the Under-Secretary of State responsible for Lifelong Learning, my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, East (Mr. Mudie), had at 11.00 am on Friday 19 March; and if he will make a statement; [78452]

(6) what engagements the Under-Secretary of State responsible for School Standards, my hon. Friend the Member for Norwich, South (Mr. Clarke), had at 11.00 am on Friday 19 March; and if he will make a statement; [78453]

(7) what engagements the Under-Secretary of State responsible for Employment and Equal Opportunities, my hon. Friend the Member for Barking (Ms Hodge), had at 11.00 am on Friday 19 March; and if he will make a statement. [78454]

Mr. Blunkett: Following the briefing given to my hon. Friends the Members for Hackney, North and Stoke Newington (Ms Abbott) and for Hackney, South and Shoreditch (Mr. Sedgemore) by the School Standards Minister the day before the announcement relating to Hackney LEA on Thursday, 18 March, Education and Employment Ministers were visiting a range of schools and other facilities throughout England on Friday. Details are as follows:

I was visiting Mossbrook Special School in Sheffield and attending an international education seminar;

The Minister for Employment, Welfare to Work and Equal Opportunities was giving a speech in Oxford to the Tourism Business Scheme on recruitment problems in the Tourist Industry and visiting a New Deal self-build project;

The Minister for School Standards had a two hour dental appointment and was in Birmingham on Departmental and Constituency business;

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Lifelong Learning was visiting Rawthorpe High School in Huddersfield;

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for School Standards was opening the Milton Keynes Educational Partnership Conference in Northampton;

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Employment and Equal Opportunities was addressing a childcare conference in Gloucester;

Baroness Blackstone was in London providing Ministerial cover.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those people he has appointed to public bodies since 1 November 1998, indicating the positions to which they have been appointed and if they receive remuneration. [76419]

Mr. Fatchett: Since 1 November 1998, the Secretary of State or other FCO Ministers have made or approved the following appointments to non-departmental public bodies:

Gibraltar

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Spanish Foreign Minister concerning his recent statements about alleged criminal activity in Gibraltar; and if he will make a statement; [76928]

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the recent allegations about criminal activity in Gibraltar made by the Spanish Foreign Minister; and if he will make a statement. [76395]

Ms Quin [holding answer 15 March 1999]: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary raised Spanish allegations about criminal activity in Gibraltar with the Spanish Foreign Minister when they met on 21 February. He made clear to Sr. Matutes the strength of British and Gibraltarian determination to confront criminal activity in any form. He invited the Spanish authorities to substantiate their allegations.

We have received details of some specific Spanish concerns. We have been looking into these, together with the relevant Gibraltar authorities, and are responding.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the instructions given to (a) the Governor of Gibraltar and (b) the Royal Gibraltar Police regarding the enforcement of the laws restricting fishing in Gibraltar's territorial waters. [78352]

Ms Quin: It is not our practice to reveal details of confidential exchanges between the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and any Governor or Ambassador. Nor is it our practice to give details of the operational instructions given to the Royal Gibraltar Police.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the agreement reached with the Spanish Government on fishing by Spanish trawlers in Gibraltar's territorial waters. [78351]

Ms Quin: The understanding reached with Spain was not a written document. On 5 October 1998, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and the Spanish Foreign Minister confirmed an understanding reached earlier between British and Spanish officials on the basis for a return to the situation that had prevailed in British waters around Gibraltar between 1991 and 1997, when fishing took place in moderation and the fishermen respected the authority of the Gibraltar law enforcement agencies. They agreed that we should revert to that situation.

Pakistan

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the Attorney General of Pakistan to discuss the law as it affects women in Pakistan. [76349]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 23 March 1999]: Neither I nor my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary have met the Attorney General of Pakistan. We discuss the law as it affects women as part of our continuing dialogue with Pakistan.

EU Budget Contribution

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will provide a breakdown of the UK's contribution to the EU for the last year for which figures are available. [78373]

Ms Quin [holding answer 23 March 1999]: The European Commission's report of 7 October 1998 called "Financing the European Union", a copy of which was deposited on 26 October (Batch list 121), contains Member States' payments into the EU budget from 1992–99, although the figures for 1998 and 1999 are estimates. The payments are listed by type; Traditional own resources (customs duties, agriculture duties, sugar levies less collection costs), VAT, GNP and the adjustment made to other Member States' contributions to fund the UK abatement. UK 1995–97 average contributions were:

	£ million	Euro million
Traditional Own Resources	1,929.6	2,807.6
VAT Own Resource	3,700.7	5,384.5
GNP Own Resource	1,991.8	2,898.1
Abatement	−1,574.4	−2,290.7
Total	6,047.7	8,799.5
The average net contribution (net of receipts) was:	1,957.4	2,848

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reason no external assessment has been made of the plans of his Department for millennium compliance. [78466]

Mr. Fatchett: At present I am content to rely on the robustness and independence of our own Internal Audit team. They have just completed an examination of our compliance programme. We have taken on board the lessons they have flagged up. If, however, we feel that there is a need for external assessment, we shall arrange one.

European Commissioners

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which European Union institution will be responsible for controlling the payments to the retiring commissioners when they leave office; what plans he has to meet those who are to make those payments; and if he will make a statement. [78202]

Ms Quin: Commissioners' terms and conditions are set down in the 1967 Council Regulation 422/67. This governs transitional and pension payments following their retirement or resignation from the Commission.

Payments following a Commissioner's departure are paid by the Commission.

We expect out-going Commissioners to be treated in accordance with this Statute. I have no plans to meet the Commission to discuss these arrangements.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Alan Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received of the murder of civilians in Waterloo, Sierra Leone; and if he will make a statement. [78323]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We have no precise figure for the number of civilian deaths in Waterloo. We believe that between 3,000 and 5,000 persons were killed during the rebel attack on Freetown in January, and that many of them had fled initially from Waterloo.

The Nigerian-led West African peacekeeping force, ECOMOG, succeeded in expelling the rebels from Waterloo on 24 February. In Waterloo, we understand that the rebels murdered some civilians and committed other atrocities; the rebels destroyed much of the town's infrastructure. Our High Commissioner in Freetown visited Waterloo on 6–7 March, and reported evidence of heavy fighting and widespread destruction.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of developments in Sierra Leone following the most recent reports of atrocities by rebel troops. [78421]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The situation in Freetown is improving, but remains volatile. The picture in the rest of the country is unclear, due to difficulties of access. Rebels are believed to be active in large areas of the north and east; for example, heavy fighting has recently been reported around Kambia, near the border with Guinea. We condemn the appalling atrocities, murder and destruction committed by the rebels. We continue to support strongly the democratically elected Government of Sierra Leone and the efforts of the Nigerian-led West African peacekeeping force, ECOMOG, to protect the civilian population. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's announcement on 2 March of a new £10 million package of assistance for Sierra Leone is further evidence of that commitment.

Schengen Agreement

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his oral answer to the right hon. and learned Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard) of 16 March 1999, Official Report, column 868, on Spain, what is the legal basis for his statement that no country has a veto on a United Kingdom application to join in arrangements made under the Schengen agreement. [78399]

Ms Quin: Under Article 5 of the Protocol integrating the Schengen acquis into the framework of the European Union, the United Kingdom will be free to participate in any future Schengen-based co-operation. Under Article 4 of that Protocol, it is only in respect of existing Schengen provisions (the "Schengen acquis") that a request by the United Kingdom to take part will be subject to the unanimous approval of the thirteen Schengen States.

Asia-Europe Foreign Ministers Meeting

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the agenda for the forthcoming Asia-Europe Foreign Ministers meeting of 29 and 30 March. [78394]

Mr. Fatchett: The Asia-Europe Foreign Ministers' Meeting in Berlin on 28–29 March 1999 will discuss regional and international issues of common interest. It will also review progress on the wide range of ASEM initiatives promoting economic, social, environmental, cultural and law enforcement co-operation, particularly those initiatives endorsed by Leaders at the Second Asia-Europe Meeting in London on 3–4 April 1998. Publication of the formal agenda is a matter for the German Federal Government as host of the meeting.

Pauline Green

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he made and on what dates to the head of the European Socialist party concerning the January motions of no confidence in the European Parliament on fraud and the Commission; and if he will make a statement. [78397]

Ms Quin: It is not the practice for members of the Government to give details of party political discussions in this manner.

Rambouillet

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Rambouillet negotiations. [77754]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I refer my hon. Friend to the Statement on Kosovo made by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 23 March 1999, Official Report, columns 161–63.

Russia (Human Rights)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the human rights situation in Russia. [78382]

Ms Quin: Russia has made progress towards the rule of law and democracy. But we remain concerned about anti-semitism; the law on religion; prison conditions; and the cases of the environmentalists Nikitin and Pasko, among other issues. We raise our concerns frequently with the Russians. The Foreign Secretary did so most recently during his visit to Russia on 3 to 5 March. We also hold annual talks with the Russians on human rights.

Moldova (Human Rights)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the human rights situation in Moldova. [78383]

Ms Quin: Moldova enjoys a working, multi-party democracy. International observers regarded the 1998 parliamentary elections as free and fair. There have been no reports of politically motivated killings or disappearances or torture of prisoners by the authorities. There are occasional instances of police cruelty and prisons are generally overcrowded. The Constitution and the law provide for freedom of expression though it is forbidden to publish views which question the country's independence, sovereignty or territorial integrity. The law makes it easy for public figures to launch defamation suits which can lead to self-censorship by journalists. The Constitution provides for judicial independence though in practice the Prosecutor's Office has too much influence over the judiciary. Religious freedom, the right of assembly, freedom of movement and academic freedom are all respected.

In the separatist region of Transdniestria, there are reports of serious human rights abuses (including torture, police cruelty, questionable detentions, pressure on the media and discrimination against use of the Roman alphabet).

Bulgaria (Human Rights)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the human rights situation in Bulgaria. [78386]

Ms Quin: The Government believe that Bulgaria has made good progress on human rights in recent years. Positive developments in the past few months include the abolition of the death penalty and the ratification of the Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities. Further progress is needed, however, on the implementation at local level of human rights legislation.

Romania (Human Rights)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the human rights situation in Romania. [78384]

Ms Quin: Considerable progress on human rights has been made in Romania since the overthrow of the Communist regime in 1989. The UK is satisfied that Romania now adheres to modern European standards of human rights in respect of democracy, the rule of law and protection of the rights and freedoms of citizens. In certain areas, such as the administration of justice, the elimination of corruption and the treatment of minorities and the disadvantaged, further improvement is needed. The UK welcomes the movement towards greater protection of human rights in Romania and seeks to support this process.

China (Human Rights)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the human rights situation in the People's Republic of China. [78385]

Mr. Fatchett: We continue to be very concerned about human rights in China, including the recent clampdown on peaceful political activists. We have raised these concerns directly with the Chinese authorities through the continuing bilateral and EU human rights dialogues. These dialogues have made limited progress in some areas. The General Affairs Council decided on 22 March that the EU would not change its position on China at this year's UN Commission on Human Rights (UNCHR). The EU will continue to express publicly its growing concerns about human rights in China at the UNCHR, as well as at bilateral and EU high-level meetings with China. It will remain in close contact with its main partners in pursuit of the common objective of achieving concrete improvements in human rights in China. It will keep its policy under regular review in the light of developments there.

Falklands Flights

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will quantify the economic effects that the removal of the Lan Chile link will have on the people of the Falklands. [78210]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We hope that Lan Chile will continue to fly to the Falklands. We have expressed our regret to the Chilean Government over the decision to ask the airline to suspend these flights and have said we do not believe this to be justified. It is not possible to quantify reliably the economic effects that suspension of the flights would have on the Falklands, but without an alternative in place, the impact would be adverse. For example, tourism would be affected as would the ability to buy some Chilean goods and services. Airfreight would no longer pass through Chile.

Falklands (Agriculture)

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what encouragement his Department has given to the Government of the Falklands to diversify the islands agricultural base. [78389]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: It is for the Falkland Islanders and their Government to decide whether and how to diversify their agriculture. We encourage them to consider diversification options. They are studying options including alternative livestocks. They are investing in a programme to improve their pasture, which will facilitate diversification, and have secured EU funds for the construction of an abattoir.

CABINET OFFICE

Civil Servants (Appraisal)

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what were the appraisal performance markings awarded to civil servants in 1998 for (a) each agency in his Department and (b) the Department broken down by (i) grade, (ii) gender, (iii) ethnicity, (iv) part-time/full-time working and (v) disability; and for (1) each agency and (2) the Department whether the Cabinet Office's four fifths rule for detecting potential adverse impact was applied to the appraisal markings of civil servants in the 1998 report round. [78148]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The information requested is set out in the tables. In the Cabinet Office the appraisal performance marks were analysed by our statisticians who reported that the differences by gender and ethnicity were not statistically significant. The Department is keeping the situation under review. It is committed to a policy of equal opportunity and wishes to ensure that box marking standards reflect that commitment.

Note:

The COI has developed its own systems for detecting potential adverse impact in the performance appraisal of its staff. However, retrospective application of the 4/5ths rule confirms that there appears to be no notable bias on the grounds of gender, ethnicity or disability within the limitations imposed by COI's small number of staff.

The COI is a separate department which reports to the Minister for the Cabinet Office.

Notes:

The Security Facilities Division was until 1 July 1998 an Executive Agency of the Cabinet Office. It has now been integrated with the Department. Although the 4/5ths rule has not been used in monitoring performance standards, the results have been reviewed to ensure equality and consistency in report marking.

Percentages are rounded to the nearest whole number. Asterisks are used for percentages less than 1.5.

The Cabinet Office and its agencies have each developed their own appraisal systems. In each case the right hand column indicates unacceptable performance and the left hand column outstanding or excellent performance.

Government Employees (Ethnic Monitoring)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will make a statement on the availability of records which monitor the number of ethnic minorities in Government offices; and what plans he has to publish the breakdown of Government employees by race and gender. [78121]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Information on ethnic origin is collected through voluntary surveys in Departments and agencies. The information is treated in confidence, and to protect the privacy of individual staff in any statistical table, numbers relating to fewer than five people are not disclosed, though this policy is under review.

Information about the ethnic origin and gender of employees is submitted quarterly by Departments and agencies to Mandate, the Cabinet Office's database of civil service personnel. Aggregate information about ethnic origin and gender is collected annually from those Departments and agencies who do not currently provide Mandate records. A service-wide analysis at 1 April each year is published in "Equal Opportunities in the Civil Service Data Summary". The information for 1998 was published in February 1999. We plan to publish the 1999 Data Summary towards the end of the year.

Special Advisers

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will list the special advisers who have left their posts since 1 January 1998, giving in each case (a) the reasons and (b) the name of their successor. [78257]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Listed are the names of the Special Advisers who have left the Civil Service either as a result of resignation or through having their contracts terminated as a result of ministerial changes. The names of their successors are in brackets where appropriate:

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Chope: To ask the Attorney-General for what reason the Crown Prosecution Service did not meet the Government's target of producing an initial Year 2000 continuity plan by January; and for what reason it is not proposed to produce one until August. [78469]

The Attorney-General: From April 1999, the Crown Prosecution Service will be reorganised into 42 geographical CPS Areas. The reorganisation includes the appointment of 42 new Area Business Managers. The Crown Prosecution Service Year 2000 Project Board agreed that the production of Business Continuity Plans should await the appointment of the Area Business Managers as they will have a key role in the production, and operational ownership, of the Plans and business processes which the Plans must support.

August 1999 has been set as a date for the production of CPS Year 2000 Business Continuity Plans. This is an achievable target which takes account of the re-organising of the CPS in April and will enable Plans to be in place well in advance of the end of the year.

DEFENCE

RN Physiological Laboratory

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what experiments have been carried out at the Royal Navy Physiological Laboratory in the last 12 months; what animals were involved; and what was the purpose of the experiments. [65734]

Mr. Doug Henderson: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Sir John Chisholm to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 24 March 1999:

I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question about the former Royal Navy Physiological Laboratory (RNPL) which is now part of the Centre for Human Sciences (CHS) Sector of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA). The Centre for Human Sciences is currently running a research programme for the Ministry of Defence to determine the pressure and time limits for the safe escape of Navy personnel from a sunken submarine. The programme is also looking at the best treatments to maximise the recovery of those injured whilst escaping.

Goats are being used as the experimental model for this programme because their physiological behaviour in these circumstances approximates very closely to that of humans. In addition, we already have a substantial database of behavioural information from experiments with goats, thus minimising the number of new experiments needed.

All proposed research work involving the use of animals is subjected to rigorous internal review. The animals are not immersed in water but are subjected to varying levels of atmospheric pressure whilst in a pressure chamber. They are continuously monitored during the experiment. The work is carried out strictly in accordance with the requirements of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 which is administered by the Home Office. During 1998, 124 procedures were carried out using goats (1 animal = 1 procedure; but note that individual animals may take part in several procedures).

In addition to the statutory controls already in place, the Ministry of Defence has established an independent committee to review arrangements for animal care at DERA sites carrying out work with animals and to advise on best practice. Its independent reports are made to the Chief Scientific Adviser to the Ministry of Defence.

I hope the foregoing is helpful.

Falklands Flights

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effect the potential removal of the Lan Chile flight to and from the Falklands will have on the proposal to reduce Tristar flights to the islands. [77991]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We regret the Chilean Government's decision to ask Lan Chile to suspend flights to the Falklands and do not believe this to be justified. We hope the Lan Chile will continue to fly to the Falklands. The reduction in the number of RAF Tristar Airbridge flights to the Falkland Islands was one of a range of efficiency proposals identified by the Strategic Defence Review. It represents a rationalisation of the use of Tristar aircraft, following technical improvements that allow them to carry an increased payload. Final arrangements for the implementation of this measure are still under consideration.

Joint Training

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many joint training exercises were conducted by the Army with other countries in the past year; and which countries they were. [78119]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Seventeen training exercises have been conducted to date by the Army with other countries in the current financial year, involving personnel from the following countries:

Australia

Austria

Azerbaijan

Belgium

Botswana

Bulgaria

Canada

Czech Republic

Denmark

Finland

Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia

Georgia

Germany

Greece

Hungary

Italy

Jamaica
Kenya
Latvia
Luxembourg
Moldova
Netherlands
Norway
Oman
Poland
Portugal
Romania
Slovakia
Spain
Turkey Ukraine
USA.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many personnel were deployed on the jungle training exercises in Brunei carried out between 1 April 1997 and 31 March 1998. [76608]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The number of Royal Marine Command personnel deployed was 2,390 all ranks. In addition, 860 Gurkhas from the battalion in Burnei and 558 members of the Royal Brunei Armed Forces participated in the exercise.

TA Recruitment

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what targets were set for the Territorial Army recruitment activities held on Saturday 13 March; and what assessment he has made of their impact. [78226]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The aim of the Territorial Army National Open Day on 13 March was to reinforce the messages of the spring national marketing campaign at regional and local levels. This was part of the drive to meet the target for recruitment into the TA for the next financial year which is estimated at up to 10,000 new recruits. We are currently assessing the day's effectiveness and early indications are that it has been successful in increasing awareness of the TA.

TA Units (Wales)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the Territorial Army units in Wales, indicating which are classed as being in (a) North Wales and (b) South Wales. [78116]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 22 March 1999]: All Territorial Army units in Wales (current and future) can be found in the publication "Modern Forces for the Modern World: A Territorial Army for the Future"—Volume 2, a copy of which has been placed in the Library. TA units in the towns listed have been classified as either South or North as follows:

South Wales	North Wales
Abergavenny	Bangor
Abertillery	Caenarfon
Aberystwyth[1]	Colwyn Bay
Brecon	Llandudno
Bridgend	Prestatyn
Cardiff	Queensferry
Carmarthen	Wrexham
Cefn Fforest	—
Cwmbran	—
Gorseinon	—
Haverford West	—
Llanelli	—
Monmouth	—
Newport	—
Pentre	—
Pontypool	—
Pontypridd	—
Swansea	—

[1] Aberystwyth is included in the list for South Wales because it is home to a University Officers' Training Corps which is affiliated to Cardiff University, and has a detachment of 203 Field Hospital, whose headquarters is in the South.

Mission Statement

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress he has made towards a mission statement for his Department. [78854]

Mr. George Robertson: The objectives for the Ministry of Defence were included in the volume of Supporting Essays published as part of the Strategic Defence Review. I have since revised the language of these objectives to make them more simple and direct. The Mission Statement, which describes both the overall output and the main characteristics of the Ministry of Defence and Armed Forces, is as follows:

The Defence Mission

Purpose

The purpose of the Ministry of Defence, and the Armed Forces, is to:

- defend the United Kingdom, and Overseas Territories, our people and interest;
- act as a force for good by strengthening international peace and security.

How we achieve it

To achieve this, we:

- make a vital contribution to Britain's security policy and its promotion at home and abroad;
- direct and provide a defence effort that meets the needs of the present, prepares for the future and insures against the unpredictable;
- generate modern, battle-winning forces and other defence capabilities to help;
  - prevent conflicts and build stability;
  - resolve crisis and respond to emergencies;
  - protect and further UK interests;
  - meet our commitments and responsibilities;
  - work with Allies and partners to strengthen international security relationships.

Success depends, above all, on our people. We must:

- recruit and retain the best people for the job from a diverse society;
- train, motivate and quip them properly;
- manage with care, ensuring that the demands on individuals and their families are reasonable;
- develop careers in defence and skills for life.

In all this we must:

- make every pound count for defence to ensure that the defence budget is used to best effect;

develop a joint approach, harnessing the three Armed Services, defence civilians and all our resources to deliver the defence mission; be open, flexible and creative in the way we work;

encourage British defence technology, science and industry;

help protect the natural environment;

be an active part of the wider community which we serve and in which we live.

This Defence Mission is implemented through a series of supporting objectives, which were set out in the Strategic Defence Review White Paper.

RAF Maintenance Group Defence Agency

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people are currently employed by the RAF Maintenance Group Defence Agency; what was the figure at its inception; on what date the RAF Maintenance Group Defence Agency published its report for 1997–98; and what was the cost of production of the report. [76880]

Mr. Doug Henderson: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the RAF Maintenance Group Defence Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from K. J. M. Procter to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 24 March 1999:

Parliamentary question—numbers of people employed by the RAF maintenance group defence agency and the 1997–98 report

1. I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence concerning the numbers of people employed by the RAF Maintenance Group Defence Agency (MGDA) currently and at its inception, the date of publication of the MGDA's report for 1997–98 and the cost of production of the report. As Acting Chief Executive of the MGDA, these matters fall within my area of responsibility.

2. Currently, the MGDA employs some 6,750 people (2,200 Servicemen and 4,550 civilians). At its inception in 1991, the Agency employed some 13,600 people (7,800 Servicemen and 5,800 civilians). During this time, of course, the Agency had reduced substantially in size by transfers and closures from 12 RAF stations and a similar number of other aerosystems, supply and signals units in 1991 to just 3 RAF stations now.

3. The MGDA's Annual Report and Accounts for 1997–98 was published on 8 July 1998 and copies placed in the libraries of both Houses of Parliament. The cost of production of the report was about £8,000.

Armed Forces (Uniforms)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information and guidance his Department gives to the United Kingdom textile industry when planning procurement of uniforms and textiles for the armed forces. [77464]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 18 March 1999]: The Defence Clothing & Textiles Agency (DCTA) is bound by EC Regulations which require all contracts with a potential value of more than £160,670 to be advertised in the "European Journal". Requirements to the value of £250,000 are also advertised in the MOD Contracts Bulletin. The Defence Suppliers Service publishes a booklet entitled "Selling to the MOD" to assist all companies considering my Department as a potential market for their goods. Seminars, exhibitions and "Meet the Buyer" events are also organised. The DCTA held two separate day conferences for Contractors during 1998 and more are planned—these attract predominately UK contractors. The DCTA also provides ad hoc advice on potential future purchases, and operates a system to debrief unsuccessful tenderers on why their bids were unsuccessful. These activities are designed to ensure that a competitive environment is maintained to meet our objective of achieving Value for Money in the procurement of textile goods.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what proportion of the expenditure by his Department on uniforms for the armed forces during the last three years went to companies in the United Kingdom; [77466]

(2) how much his Department has spent on procurement of uniforms for the armed forces in the last three years. [77465]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 18 March 1999]: Total expenditure on all items of clothing for the past three years was £159.092 million, 76 per cent. of which went to UK companies.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer on Iraq of 18 March 1999, Official Report, column 810, what threats to the coalition came from the area of the Syrian Christian community of Ainawa, near Erdbil. [78368]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 23 March 1999]: I am not aware of any threats to UK aircraft from the area of Erdbil.

Recruitment

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of recruits to each of the armed services in each of the past three years for which figures are available; what the recruitment targets were; and whether current recruitment targets are being achieved. [77486]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The recruitment targets and achievements for each of the Armed Services over the last three completed financial years were:

	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98
Naval Service
Target	2,682	4,607	5,310
Achievement	(86%) 2,315	(85%) 3,909	(85%) 4,536
Army
Target	15,805	15,830	16,504
Achievement	(75%) 11,785	(91%) 14,366	(89%) 14,658
RAF
Target	2,814	3,283	4,163
Achievement	(92%) 2,601	(88%) 2,877	(92%) 3,839

For the current financial year, the recruitment achievement to date is:

	Target	Achievement (%)
Naval Service	5,088	93
Army	16,446	96
RAF	4,622	95

Military Exports (Private Flights)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the RAF airfields from which private companies have exported goods in the last five years. [77250]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

HM Customs and Excise does not keep records of such information.

HEALTH

Health Authority Debt

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the total debt (a) in cash terms and (b) as a percentage of income, of each trust and health authority at the end of each of the last five financial years. [76477]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 15 March 1999]: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by NHS region the bad debts and claims abandoned by each health authority, for each of the last five years. [76486]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 15 March 1999]: Detailed information on bad debts and claims abandoned is not held centrally, but copies of expenditure by each health authority on these items has been placed in the Library.

Breast Screening Programme

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what contingency plans he has to implement the findings of the pilot studies on extending the routine call element of the breast screening programme to women aged 65 to 69 years, as soon as they are published in 2001. [77339]

Mr. Hutton: The decision whether or not to extend the breast screening programme to all women aged 65–69 will be taken by Ministers, advised by the National Screening Committee, in light of the evaluation of the final results of the three pilot studies.

We recognise the pressures on the current programme due to increasing numbers of eligible women and staff shortages. In October 1998, the Chief Medical Officer set up a working group, with membership drawn from the relevant professional bodies, to look at these issues in more detail. He is currently considering their report.

Barnet Health Authority

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what additional funds (a) have been made available, and (b) have been allocated for future use, to Barnet Health Authority since November 1998; and for what purposes these funds have been allocated. [77580]

Mr. Denham: The table shows the additional resources for Barnet Health Authority that have been announced since November 1998.

Barnet Health Authority additional funds from November 1998

Date	Purpose	Amount (£000)
1998–99
13 November 1998	1998–99 winter additions	1,080
8 December 1998	colorectal cancer	63
21 December 1998	waiting list performance fund	217
2 February 1999	winter pressures contingency	110
1999–2000
10 November 1998	cash uplift for 1999–2000 revenue allocations including modernisation funding as itemised below: waiting lists (£1,706k) primary care group management costs (£886k) improving primary care (£501k) mental health (£440k)	12,899
10 November 1998	special allocation—drugs misuse	94
17 February 1999	special assistance funding (last tranche)	170

Barnet Hospital

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total capital cost of the approved scheme for Phase 1b at Barnet Hospital. [77581]

Mr. Denham: The total capital cost of the approved scheme for Phase 1b at Barnet General Hospital is £65.5 million.

Drugs Dispensing

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on permitting pharmacists to prescribe drugs; and if he will make a statement. [77842]

Mr. Denham: The possible prescribing of drugs by various professions, including pharmacists, is referred to in the final report of the Review of Prescribing, Supply and Administration of Medicines, which the Department issued on 8 March for consideration and comment. Copies of the report are available in the Library. We have also had preliminary discussions with various pharmacy, medical and nursing bodies about the possibility of community pharmacists supplying medicines—in particular those for certain minor illnesses—without prescriptions, but on the National Health Service.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on the right of doctors to dispense drugs; and if he will make a statement. [77862]

Mr. Denham: From time to time the Department receives representations from various parties about the rules governing the dispensing of National Health Service prescriptions by general practitioners in rural areas. In particular, departmental officials have recently met representatives of the General Practitioners Committee of the British Medical Association, the Dispensing Doctors Association and the Pharmaceutical Services Negotiating Committee to discuss those organisations' ideas for changes to the relevant regulations.

Care Standards

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects the proposed regional commissions for care standards to be introduced. [77908]

Mr. Hutton: We want to establish the Commissions for Care Standards as soon as possible; however this will require primary legislation and will depend on legislative time being available.

Primary Care Boards

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the extra administrative costs to the National Health Service of the introduction of primary care boards. [78134]

Mr. Denham: There will be no extra administrative costs to the National Health Service arising from the introduction of primary care groups. The combined health authority and PCG management costs will be less than the management costs of the previous system of HAs and general practitioner fundholders. This will contribute towards our commitment to deliver a £1 billion saving in NHS management costs over the life of this Parliament.

HIV

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money he has allocated in the last year for which figures are available for research into the HIV virus in Great Britain. [78124]

Ms Jowell: Departmental expenditure on HIV/AIDS research in 1997–98 was £117,000 for wholly funded work and around £1.275 million on partly funded research. The National Health Service research and development levy is also used to support research and development in health care settings. Project details are not held centrally and some further HIV/AIDS work may be supported by this route.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have the HIV virus in Great Britain. [78128]

Ms Jowell: It is currently estimated that there were around 25,000 HIV infected adults (age 15 years and over) alive at the end of 1997. This figure includes diagnosed and undiagnosed infections.

Bovine Tuberculosis (Cheese)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the policy of his Department in relation to stocks of cheese made with milk from a dairy herd which subsequently experiences an outbreak of bovine TB. [78110]

Ms Jowell: The Dairy Products (Hygiene) Regulations 1995 require that raw cows milk shall come from animals belonging to a herd which is officially tuberculosis free, otherwise it may be sold for human consumption only after it has been heat treated.

Where cheese has been made with heat treated milk there would be no food safety implications. However, in the case of cheese made from unpasteurised cows milk, the Department would liaise with food authorities to ensure that there were no public health implications or food safety risks before allowing the marketing of that cheese.

Rowntree Report

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the Rowntree report's proposal to support food projects as a way to tackle health and social problems; and if he will make a statement. [78130]

Ms Jowell: This is an interesting and timely report. It is particularly relevant to the work currently being undertaken by the Social Exclusion Unit following the publication of its report "Bringing Britain together: a national strategy for neighbourhood renewal". The findings of the report funded by the Joseph Rowntree Foundation will also be useful in taking forward the twin aims of the Government's health strategy for England: improving health and tackling inequalities. These were set out in the green paper "Our Healthier Nation" and the white paper will be published shortly. As the Joseph Rowntree Foundation report points out, local food projects are just one way of improving access to food which may have long term health benefits in terms of enabling more people to make healthy eating choices. However, the other benefits of improving self confidence, self esteem, and self worth, which all contribute to give people and the communities they live in a sense of well being, are equally important in tackling inequalities and improving overall health.

Milk (Food Poisoning)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure that food poisoning incidents attributable to a failure of the pasteurisation process are correctly recorded as emanating from imperfectly pasteurised milk rather than from unpasteurised milk; and if he will make a statement. [78111]

Ms Jowell: Investigations into food poisoning outbreaks are usually undertaken by the local authority and the Public Health Laboratory Service. If milk is identified as the source of an outbreak and the investigation is able to establish if the milk was unpasteurised, contaminated post-pasteurisation or subject to pasteurisation failure, then this information will be recorded.

Hospitals (Accidents)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statistics his Department collates on accidents to in-patients in National Health Service hospitals. [78363]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 23 March 1999]: Information about accidents to in-patients is not available centrally. Individual National Health Service trusts are ponsible for keeping information on accidents involving patients and the general public on their premises.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to place a health warning on mobile phones. [77642]

Mr. Wills: I have been asked to reply.

I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms Walley) on 8 June 1998, Official Report, column 440.

Mobile communications equipment should comply with the guidelines for restricting human exposure to electromagnetic fields of the National Radiological Protection Board. Whilst there has been renewed media interest in this subject there has been no new scientific evidence on which to base any changes to the guidelines.

There are no plans to require mobile phones to have a health warning.

Professional Regulation

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statutory protection is provided to the patients of (i) paramedics, (ii) chiropodists, (iii) physiotherapists, (iv) clinical psychologists, (v) occupational therapists and (vi) speech therapists in (a) the National Health Service and (b) the private sector; and what plans he has to introduce measures to provide additional protection. [75224]

Mr. Denham [pursuant to his reply, 15 March 1999, c. 555–56]: I regret that my previous answer contained inaccurate information relating to the restrictions on National Health Service employment of clinical psychologists and proposals for statutory regulation. The revised reply is as follows.

Chiropodists, physiotherapists and occupational therapists are regulated under the Professions Supplementary to Medicine Act 1960. It is an offence to pretend to be registered under that Act. In addition, employment in the National Health Service is restricted to those who are registered under the Act. We plan to replace the Act with new legislation to improve public protection, including restricting the use of common professional title to registered practitioners wherever they work.

NHS employment of speech and language therapists is restricted to members of the Royal College of Speech and Language Therapists. NHS employment of paramedics is restricted to those who have a qualification accredited by the Institute of Health Care Development. We are currently considering petitions to extend the 1960 Act to these two professions.

NHS employment of clinical psychologists is restricted to those who are eligible for registration as a Chartered Psychologist with the British Psychological Society. The Society manages a voluntary register under the auspices of the Privy Council.

The Health Bill, currently before Parliament, contains proposals for the strengthening of professional self-regulation.

SCOTLAND

Overseas Travel

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, for each overseas trip by his Ministers and officials, since 1 May 1997 (a) the individuals who travelled, (b) the total costs of the trip broken down as available, (c) the destination of the trip and (d) the reason for the trip; and if he will make a statement. [69253]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 4 February 1999]: All overseas visits by Ministers are conducted in accordance with the principles set out in the Ministerial Code. Information in the form requested is not held centrally and could be collated only at disproportionate cost. The figures given are estimates of costs attributable to officials. In accordance with convention the names of officials who accompany a Minister have not been given.

The cost of these visits is part of this Administration's expenditure on ministerial overseas travel which in 1997–98 was £6.1 million, compared to £7.8 million in the last year of the previous administration.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total number of occasions when (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity since 2 May 1997. [76823]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 19 March 1999]: Since 2 May 1997, my Special Advisers have made visits overseas on four occasions in an official capacity. All such travel complied with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Means-tested Benefits

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people (a) aged 15 to 25 years, (b) aged 26 to 40 years, (c) aged 41 to 65 years and (d) in total received a means-tested benefit in Scotland in each year since 1992. [77771]

Notes:
1. In general, children below the age of 18 are not entitled to benefit. Young people aged 16–17 can receive IS or JSA (IB) if they satisfy the conditions of entitlement and are in one of a number of a categories.
2. It has not been possible to provide a single figure representing the number of means-tested benefit recipients in Scotland. This is due to the fact that an individual may be in receipt of more than one means-tested benefit and it has not been possible to remove all overlaps between HB and CTB in Scotland due to the data collection procedure.
3. We estimate however that approximately 65 per cent. of HB recipients also receive CTB.
4. Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand and as such totals may not sum.
5. IS, JSA and FC figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample of benefits claimants. CTB and HB estimates are based on a 1 per cent. sample of Housing Benefit Management System and are subject to a degree of sampling error. DWA is based on a 100 per cent. scan of all DWA claimants.
6. Estimates are based on samples taken at May of each of the years.
7. Figures are not available for DWA as at May 1992.
8. IS figures prior to October 1996 include unemployed claimants.
9. Information refers to benefit units.
10. The information on HB and CTB does not include second adult rebate cases.

Houses in Multiple Occupation

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what conclusions the Government have drawn from its consultations on proposals for the introducing of Mandatory Licensing of Houses in Multiple Occupation in Scotland. [78858]

Mr. Dewar: Some 86 bodies and individuals to the Consultation Paper on the Mandatory Licensing of Houses in Multiple Occupation which was issued last year. The overwhelming majority of those responding supported the case for making it mandatory for all local authorities in Scotland to introduce licensing of houses in multiple occupation.

The Consultation Paper also sought views on the best way of implementing mandatory licensing and the scope of any licensing scheme. In the light of the responses to the consultation paper, we believe that mandatory licensing of houses in multiple occupation should be introduced initially by means of an Order under the Civic Government (Scotland) Act 1982 although it may be desirable to introduce new primary legislation in the longer term.

We envisage that any licensing scheme should be based on a definition of a house in multiple occupation as a house which is the only or principal residence of a specified number of persons who are not all members of one family or one or other of two families. We also envisage that there would be a staged implementation of the licensing by progressively reducing the number of specified persons so that the largest houses in multiple occupation would be licensed first but, over time, all houses in multiple occupation would be included in the scheme. The activity to be licensed would be the letting of premises as a house in multiple occupation but we believe that the definition should be extended to include other situations where occupancy rights in houses in multiple occupation are granted, outside of conventional lets.

We have also given careful consideration to the views of consultees on the need for exemptions from the proposed licensing scheme and we believe that the only categories of houses in multiple occupation that should be exempted are those owned by local authorities (since local authorities will be bodies responsible for enforcement) and residential and nursing homes which are already subject to registration and enforcement by the local authority or health board.

The Consultation Paper sought views on a number of possible modifications of licensing procedures linked to the use of the powers under the Civic Government (Scotland) Act 1982. There was strong support for the proposal to extend the period during which an application for a new licence might be considered by the local authority to ensure that applicants have sufficient time to undertake remedial works specified as licensing conditions before a licence is granted. There was also support for granting an authorised officer of a local authority, with the approval of the Court, the power to enter and search premises where there are reasonable grounds for believing that it is being let as a house in multiple occupation but without a licence. We believe that both of these changes should be incorporated into the proposed Order and that account should also be taken of the suggestion, made by some consultees, to exempt women's refuges from the public notification procedures in the 1982 Act to help safeguard the anonymity of this particular type of house in multiple occupation.

We consider that a licensing system along these lines would give increased protection to tenants without penalising those responsible landlords who are already providing satisfactory housing. We hope that the Scottish Parliament will give early priority to these proposals and their detailed implementation would be taken forward in consultation with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities and other relevant interests.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Select Committee Reports

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if (a) he, (b) civil servants in his Department or (c) special advisers in his Department have (i) had sight of drafts of Select Committee reports, in whole or in part, or (ii) been informed of conclusions of Select Committee reports prior to their publication by the Select Committees. [75874]

Mr. Dewar: On 26 November 1998, the Glasgow Herald newspaper printed what it claimed were extracts from the then unpublished report of an inquiry into "The operation of multi-layer democracy" by the Scottish Affairs Select Committee. This provoked widespread media coverage and comment on that and subsequent days, and I was approached for comment by many journalists.

Inquiries established that the Committee had made its report to the House on 18 November. By 26 November the report was with the printers, and it was published on 2 December 1998. I received protests from members of the Committee about the way in which the contents of the report were being reported. My own initial comments reflected those concerns.

I made it clear to those members of the Committee to whom I spoke that my only concern was to assess the accuracy of the press reports by then appearing in many newspapers. A member of the Committee supplied me with extracts from the report which confirmed that the extensive quotations contained in the media coverage were accurate but not complete. In particular, the Glasgow Herald had not chosen to report the Report's single conclusion, that "we wholeheartedly welcome the Scottish Parliament and Executive and wish them all possible success".

Neither I nor anyone acting on my behalf made any attempt nor had any opportunity to influence the Committee's consideration of the report nor the terms of the report itself. Neither did I nor anyone acting on my behalf comment on the report in advance of its publication other than in response to the publication of extracts from a leaked copy by the Glasgow Herald.

Neither I nor ministerial colleagues in the Scottish Office nor our parliamentary private secretaries have seen drafts of any other Select Committee reports, nor of parts of reports including their conclusions, before publication. Nor to the best of my knowledge have there been any other occasions on which such material has been given to civil servants or special advisers in my Department. This excludes embargoed copies of reports, including the report published on 2 December 1998, issued under House of Commons Standing Orders.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a of list leaked Select Committee documents that reached (a) him, (b) his Ministers, (c) his officials, (d) his advisers and (e) departmental parliamentary private secretaries during (i) 1997, (ii) 1998 and (iii) 1999. [77929]

Mr. Dewar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave today to the right hon. Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean), Official Report, column 324. I know of no other such documents.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Meat Hygiene Service

Mrs. Fiona Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to introduce training programmes for OVS level staff in the Meat Hygiene Service. [62783]

Mr. Rooker: Official Veterinary Surgeons (OVSs) are qualified veterinary surgeons. The veterinary undergraduate course is approximately five years and is extensive and intensive. It incorporates training in microbiology, pathology, veterinary public health and zoonotic disease. In addition, and before commencing as OVSs, veterinary surgeons are required to undertake the OVS accreditation course. This provides refresher training in meat hygiene and inspection, animal welfare and relevant legislation.

The MHS also launched its Continuing Professional Development (CPD) programme in April 1997 as a mechanism for addressing the training and professional development needs of OVSs. In partnership with various training providers, the MHS provides at least two days training per year to facilitate CPD to ensure that the skills and knowledge of OVSs are up to date. OVSs must undertake a minimum of a further three days CPD obtained from other sources such as the Veterinary Public Health Association/British Veterinary Association Conferences and other commercially provided CPD.

Training in enforcement, assertiveness and other management skills continues to form part of the MHS's ongoing training programme for OVSs.

Badger Culling

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about Crown immunity in relation to the randomised badger culling trial. [67012]

Mr. Rooker: The Protection of Badgers Act 1992 does not bind the Crown. Therefore, in the context of the trial, the licence requirements contained in the Act do not apply to the Minister. The trial is taking place with the agreement of landowners as part of a wide-ranging approach to dealing with an increasing and urgent bovine TB problem. It is being conducted by Ministry staff in designated areas in accordance with the recommendations of the Independent Scientific Group chaired by Professor Bourne, which take account of welfare concerns.

Horticulture and Fruit Industry

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those (a) schemes and (b) initiatives which have been introduced by the public and the private sector during the last five years that have been aimed at improving quality standards in the horticulture and fruit industry. [66496]

Mr. Rooker: The reformed fruit and vegetable regime emphasises the importance of maintaining and improving quality. Actions to achieve that objective may attract financial assistance within agreed operational programmes. We expect that such programmes will have received in total some £6.5m in the UK in respect of 1998. In addition, the Horticultural Marketing Inspectorate continues to assist the sector to achieve the standard required by EU legislation.

I am not responsible for initiatives in the private sector, but I would commend the Assured Produce Scheme which has been set up by the National Farmers Union and which has the strong support of the multiple retailers.

Primate Imports (Research)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many primates imported to the United Kingdom in 1998 for research purposes from (a) China, (b) Mauritius, (c) Indonesia and (d) the Philippines were (i) found to be dead on arrival and (ii) suffered serious injury during transit. [69283]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 4 February 1999]: All primates imported into the UK are required to undergo six months in quarantine. Following arrival in the quarantine premises, the Veterinary Surgeon or Medical Supervisor appointed to the premises completes reports on the health of the animals on arrival. During 1998, all primates imported from China, Mauritius and the Philippines were reported as being found healthy on arrival. There were no primates imported into the UK from Indonesia during 1998.

Food Sampling

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what action his Department has taken in the past two years when the rates of (a) food sampling and (b) food analysis by local authorities, in relation to their statutory duties on food law, have fallen; [77512]

(2) if he will list the occasions on which he has taken action in respect of a local authority which failed to take sufficient or appropriate samples of food in relation to its statutory duties under food law in the last five years. [77952]

Mr. Rooker: Local authorities whose sampling rates fall below acceptable levels are sent a written reminder of their obligations by the Ministry. To date there have been no occasions when action has been required under section 42 of the Food Safety Act 1990.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how much money was (a) allocated to and (b) spent by each individual local authority in each of the financial years 1989–90 to 1997–98 on the sampling and analysis of food, pursuant to their statutory duty; [77499]

(2) how much money was spent in each year between 1989–90 and 1997–98 and in 1998–99 to date by local authorities on their statutory duties in relation to food; and what percentage this was of the total sum provided in the standard spending assessment for each of those financial years for the enforcement of the law in relation to food control; [77522]

(3) how much was spent, in each of the financial years since 1989–90, by local authorities in relation to (i) food sampling and (ii) food analysis; [77536]

Mr. Rooker: Enforcement of Food Law remains with local authorities and we do not hold figures on local authority expenditure on food control centrally.

Live Animals (Transportation)

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce legislation requiring the master of a vessel carrying live farm animals to submit a written return on animals (a) injured and (b) dying during the voyage; and if he will make a statement. [77948]

Mr. Morley: I have no plans to introduce such a requirement, which would seem to be of minimal value in relation to roll-on/roll-off vessels. On the other hand, a requirement on these lines may be worthy of consideration when negotiations start on the proposals for detailed rules on specialist livestock vessels which the EU Commission is currently drawing up.

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what criteria he applies in deciding whether to use his powers under the Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997 to prevent a vessel carrying live farm animals from sailing in adverse weather conditions; and if he will make a statement. [77947]

Mr. Morley: These powers are granted by WATO 1997 to Inspectors appointed as such by the Minister or by the local authority. MAFF Inspectors have comprehensive guidance covering the use of these powers in relation to rough weather sailings. I am placing a copy in the Library.

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reasons the 'Cap Afrique' was allowed to sail in adverse weather conditions with live farm animals on board on 3 March; and if he will make a statement. [77945]

Mr. Morley: I presume my hon. Friend is referring to the voyage by the 'Cap Afrique' on 2 March. In the light of prevailing conditions, and after discussion with the master of the vessel, MAFF inspectors at the quayside were of the view that they did not have grounds for serving a notice prohibiting transport under Article 18 of the Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997. A MAFF veterinarian accompanied the animals on the voyage and concluded that the animals were transported in compliance with the 1997 Order. I am placing a report in the Library.

Minister for Science

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which meetings he has attended since July 1998 at which the Minister for Science was present where GM foods or crops were discussed. [73125]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 25 February 1999]: None.

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to require segregation of genetically modified crops from other crops imported into the United Kingdom under the WTO rules relating to the right to protect human health and the application of the precautionary principle. [78255]

Mr. Rooker: All genetically modified (GM) crops which are permitted to be imported into the UK have been approved following a rigorous assessment of their safety. It is therefore not possible to require segregation under WTO rules.

Fisheries Council

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the agenda for the forthcoming EC Fisheries Council of 30 March. [78395]

Mr. Morley: The agenda for the Council is expected to cover an orientation debate on proposals for reform of fisheries structural funds; a Commission presentation of its proposals for reform of the common market organisation in fisheries products and on the listing of serious infringements of EU fisheries controls; and adoption of autonomous tariff quotas for fisheries products.

I shall represent the UK and will be asking the Commission under Any Other Business for a report on progress on the allocation of new quotas for shrimp, spurdog and blue whiting and on the introduction of closed areas for sandeels.

Farmland Access (Horseriders)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to provide financial assistance to those farmers who provide new opportunities for access to their land by horseriders; and if he will make a statement. [78220]

Mr. Morley: Payments are available for farmers who provide voluntary access for horseriders on their land under the Countryside Stewardship Scheme. Agreements are for 10 years. An independent evaluation of the access provisions under the agri-environment schemes, including the Countryside Stewardship Scheme, was carried out in 1998. This will form the basis of a review including consideration of access for horseriders under Countryside Stewardship in future.

Regional Development Funding

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total budget for the EAGGF South West Objective 5b Area for Devon and Cornwall; how much money has been received by the Government in respect of the fund; what is the actual amount spent; and what is the balance as yet unspent. [78372]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 23 March 1999]: The total EAGGF allocation for the South West Objective 5b area is £30.14 million. Of this 89.5 per cent. has been committed to projects. £6.33 million has been spent by projects to date. The unspent balance is £23.81 million. Advances of EAGGF funds are paid when expenditure trigger points are reached. So far £1.94 million has been received and a further payment of 9.26 million euros (approximately £6.59 million) is being processed by the Commission.

Tridemorph

Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action the Government are taking in respect of the pesticide Tridemorph. [78922]

Mr. Rooker: The independent Advisory Committee on Pesticides has considered new scientific information and has identified a possible risk of harm to the unborn child if the mother is exposed to high levels of the fungicide tridemorph while working with the compound.

The Government's first priority is human safety. We therefore acted on 19 March to impose, with immediate effect, stringent measures designed to minimise the risk of harmful exposure. These include engineering controls and protective clothing as well as restrictions on the maximum dose and the way in which it may be applied to the crop. We are also requiring those companies that market the pesticide to mount an active information campaign to inform pesticide users of the issues and the action which they should take.

Genetic Modification

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what response the Government have made to the House of Lords European Communities Committee report of Session 1998–99 on EC regulation of genetic modification in agriculture (HL 11). [78923]

Mr. Rooker: The Government have welcomed the Report as making an important contribution to the intense debate on the regulation of GMOs in agriculture through the presentation of a balanced and considered perspective on the key issues surrounding the application of biotechnology in agriculture and food production.

The Government's response in particular welcomes a number of the Committees's recommendations. It makes the point that vigorous and wide-ranging assessment of risks to the environment and human health must continue to form the foundations of the regulatory process and that the Government are committed to ensuring that risk assessment provisions are strengthened and extended to include indirect and delayed environmental monitoring on the grounds that this will allow a clear picture to be built up of the environmental effects of GMOs, and enable the assumptions in the risk assessment to be verified.

The response further welcomes the Committee's recommendations on labelling and makes it clear that the Government are pressing the European Commission to develop further proposals on thresholds for adventitious contamination and a list of materials from GM crops that will not require labelling.

Finally, the response states that the effective and timely revision of Directive 90/220 on the deliberate release into the environment of GMOs is a major priority for the Government. It offers the opportunity to reinforce the existing legislation to secure full protection for human health and the environment, while providing a stable and predictable regime which will maintain UK and EU competitiveness in the commercial exploitation of biotechnology and genome research. The European Parliament adopted its first reading Opinion in February 1999. The Government welcome the Opinion, and support the Parliament's call for moves to reach a common position shortly.

A copy of the Government's response is available in the Library of the House.

DEFENCE

Iraq

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost to public funds of British military activities relating to Iraq since the end of Operation Desert Fox. [75672]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 9 March 1999]: Operation Desert Fox ended on 19 December 1998. Expenditure on subsequent British military activity relating to Iraq in January and February 1999 is approximately £10 million.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the approximate weight of ordnance fired against targets in Iraq between Wednesday 17 March and Saturday 20 March. [78716]

Mr. George Robertson: I am withholding the information requested under Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government information relating to Defence, Security and International Relations.

Electronic Red Boxes

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will name the Ministers in his Department who are regular users of electronic Red Boxes. [76171]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office, on 16 March 1999, Official Report, columns 651–52.

Naval Recruiting and Training Agency

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people are currently employed by the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency; what was the figure at its inception; on what date the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency published its report for 1997–98; and what was the cost of production of the report. [76896]

Mr. Doug Henderson: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chadwick to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 25 March 1999:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the numbers of people currently employed by the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency (NRTA), currently and at its inception, and the date of publication and cost of the 1997–98 Report, in my capacity as Chief Executive of the NRTA.

The NRTA currently employs 4,600 Naval and civilian personnel. At its inception in April 1995, the Agency employed 5,100 Naval and civilian personnel. The Agency Report for 1997–98 is currently being printed, after a delay in producing financial figures due to the requirement for reconciliation with the Ministry of Defence's overall Opening Balances. The cost of production will be in the order of £4,500.

I will arrange for a copy of the Agency Report for 1997–98 to be forwarded to you when it is available.

Defence Vetting Agency

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people are currently employed by the Defence Vetting Agency; and how many were at its establishment. [76636]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Vetting Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Wilson to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 25 March 1999:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number of staff employed by the Defence Vetting Agency, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Agency.

The Agency employed 349 staff when it was established on 1st April 1997. The strength of the Agency at 1st February 1999 was 365. The bulk of the additional 16 staff are 3-year Fixed Term Appointees, recruited for the specific purpose of clearing a developing backlog in one particular part of the organisation. As you are aware, the Agency plans to collocate at York by early 2001, at which time the strength will reduce to about 310. The exact figure will depend to some extent on how well a number of underlying management assumptions bear up.

I hope this is helpful.

Brimstone and Storm Shadow Programmes

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current forecast (a) in-service date for and (b) cost of (i) the Brimstone and (ii) the Storm Shadow programmes; and what was the forecast in each case at the time that the contract was placed. [77262]

Mr. Spellar: The in-service dates for the Brimstone and Storm Shadow programmes remain the same as those forecast at the time the contracts were placed, namely October and December 2001 respectively.

The forecast programme cost for Brimstone was £783 million compared with a current estimate of £793 million. The forecast programme cost for Storm Shadow was £858 million compared with a current estimate of £878 million.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the work for the (a) Brimstone and (b) Storm Shadow programmes is being placed with UK registered companies; and what was the forecast proportion when the contract was placed. [77263]

Mr. Spellar: At the time the Brimstone contract was negotiated, the proportion of work by value, expected to be placed with UK registered companies was some 63 per cent. There has been no significant change in this percentage since placement of the contract.

When the Storm Shadow contract was placed, it was envisaged that in excess of 70 per cent. of work would be placed with UK registered companies. Matra BAe Dynamics have to date placed 85 per cent. of work by value; of which 80 per cent. has been placed in the UK.

Aircraft (In-service Dates)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 8 March 1999, Official Report, columns 34–35, on in-service dates for aircraft, what are the reasons for the different definitions of in-service. [77265]

Mr. Spellar: The current practice is to define in-service dates as the date by which an equipment, or a specified number of equipments, will contribute to the operational capability of the Service concerned. The in-service date quoted for the Hercules C130J conforms with this practice. The in-service dates for Eurofighter, Merlin HM Mk 1 and Merlin HC Mk3 were defined some years ago when the practice was to take account of a range of operational, production and international factors.

DERA

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his future plans for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. [77903]

Mr. Spellar: My noble Friend the Minister for Defence Procurement is expecting initial advice from a team studying the Public Private Partnership options for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency at the end of this month. Following a period of discussion and consultation, Ministers would hope to make a decision and an announcement about the future of DERA later this year.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much of the turnover of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency is civil. [77059]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Michael Colvin, dated 25 March 1999:

I have been asked to reply to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the turnover of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) in view of my responsibilities as Chief Executive.

The turnover of DERA for the financial year 1997/98 can be broken down into a number of constituent parts. Total income, as stated in our last Annual Report and Accounts, was £1006.3 million, of which £105.7 million came from non-Ministry of Defence sources. Defence related activities for either UK industry or foreign customers accounted for £38 million of this figure. Of the remaining £67.7 million which came from civil markets, £27.8 million was from British Government Departments other than the Ministry of Defence.

I hope this is helpful.

Technology Transfer

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the titles of the study groups established by his Department to examine the globalisation of technology transfer; what are the terms of reference of each; and when they are due to report. [77904]

Mr. Spellar: I am not aware that any working groups have been established specifically to study the globalisation of technology transfer. The UK continues to benefit from a wide-ranging programme of international collaboration in defence research, principally with our NATO Allies.

US Advanced Research Projects Agency

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions there have been between his Department and the American Department of Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency; and if he will make a statement. [77902]

Mr. Spellar: The Defence Evaluation and Research Agency, DERA, as the UK MOD's main source of defence scientific and technical expertise, has regular exchanges with the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency on a range of research matters. These discussions form a part of the UK's wider collaborative relationship with the US.

Auxiliary Oiler Contract

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 10 March 1999, Official Report, column 209, on auxiliary oilers, if he will estimate the extent of the anticipated slippage. [77993]

Mr. Spellar: The Prime contractor, Marconi Naval Systems, is currently reviewing the Auxiliary Oiler programme. It would not be appropriate for MOD to speculate in advance of the company completing their review and reporting to the MOD.

HMS Illustrious

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost of the recent overhaul of HMS Illustrious. [78227]

Mr. Spellar: HMS Illustrious is currently on sea trials following maintenance work at Portsmouth. As is normally the case, the sea trials will be followed by a period of defect rectification work. The total project cost will not be known until this work is complete.

Nimrod

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what negotiations he is currently holding about replacements for Nimrod aircraft; and when he expects to make an announcement as to their effect on RAF bases in the United Kingdom. [78250]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 24 March 1999]: The in-service date, ISD, for the RAF's new maritime patrol aircraft, Nimrod MRA4, which is currently under development by BAe, is April 2003. Resource and technical difficulties with the programme at BAe have led the company to advise that they do not expect to achieve the ISD before early 2005. Negotiations are underway on revisions to the Nimrod MRA4 contract, which will include recovery of liquidated damages for late delivery. The current Nimrod MR2 aircraft will continue to provide the UK's maritime patrol capability until the Nimrod MRA4 aircraft are delivered to RAF Kinloss. The delay is not, therefore, expected to have a significant effect on the current operations of RAF Kinloss.

Defence Bills Agency

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the planned basis of the Defence Bills Agency's future operations; and what key targets have been set for 1999–2000. [79037]

Mr. Spellar: On 14 December 1998, Official Report, columns 330–31, I announced the decision to extend Agency status for the Defence Bills Agency for a further five years from 1 April 1999. Following this decision, a new Framework Document has been agreed for the Agency and I am today placing a copy of this in the Library of the House. In parallel, a new Service Level Agreement has been agreed between the Ministry of Defence and the Agency which sets out demanding objectives for the period up to 31 March 2004. The key targets derived from the Service Level Agreement for the year 1999–2000 are as set out:

1. To reduce transaction costs by 8 per cent. for bills and 5 per cent. for invoices by 31 March 2000.
2. To produce accounting and financial management information to time and quality set out in ISO 9001/3.
3. To pay 100 per cent. of correctly-presented bills within 11 calendar days of receipt as part of the Department's 30 day payment target.
4. To raise accurately 95 per cent. of invoices within 4 days of receipt of a correctly-authorised claimable document.
5. Within the permitted tolerances, to meet the performance targets prescribed in the Service Level Agreement.
6. To produce within 3 months a feasibility report on partnership options and, if possible to make arrangements to proceed with partnership within one year.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

West London Line

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received with regard to the opening of new stations on the West London line at (a) Chelsea Harbour and (b) Stamford Bridge. [77792]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Since 2 May 1997, we have received four representations supporting a station at Chelsea Harbour and one representation regarding a station at Stamford Bridge.

Fiveways Corner, Mill Hill

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects the major works at Fiveways Corner, Mill Hill, (a) to commence and (b) to be completed. [77864]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Work on the Fiveways Corner Improvement scheme is expected to start before the end of April and we expect it will take about 18 weeks to complete.

Jubilee Line Extension

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the cost per mile of the Jubilee Line extension; when he expects it to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [77826]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Extension to the existing Jubilee Line is 16kms/10 miles long and London Transport's estimate of final cost is £3.2 billion.

London Transport plan to open the Extension in three phases (firstly Stratford to North Greenwich in late spring, then on to Waterloo in late summer and finally to Green Park where it will connect with the existing Jubilee Line in late autumn). Commissioning work is already in hand and trains are currently being tested on the line between Stratford and North Greenwich. The Government are confident that London Transport and Bechtel will deliver the Jubilee Line Extension in time for the Millennium.

Private Hire Vehicles (Licences)

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what discussions have been held between his Department and local authority licensing departments on the licensing of vehicles for private hire where the construction of the vehicle allows for the potential carriage of more than eight passengers; [77673]

(2) how many prosecutions of operators of licensed private hire vehicles for operating vehicles with the potential to carry more than eight passengers where those vehicles have previously been licensed by a local authority taxi licensing department have been undertaken in the last year. [77678]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The law defines private hire vehicles as vehicles constructed or adapted to carry fewer than nine passengers. Consequently, it is not possible for a local licensing authority to license as a private hire vehicle any vehicle which can carry more than eight passengers. I am not aware of any particular case where a licensing authority has licensed as a private hire vehicle a vehicle with a passenger-carrying capacity in excess of eight and I am, thus, not aware of any prosecutions arising from such a situation.

Small-engined Vehicles

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proportion of the total number of cars in the United Kingdom have engine capacity below 1100 cc. [78009]

Ms Glenda Jackson: At the most recent statistical analysis of the vehicle records held by DVLA and DVLNI in September 1998, some 8% of vehicles registered in the Private and Light Goods class had an engine capacity not exceeding 1100 cc.

Government Office for London

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are the performance indicators set for the Government Office for London, in dealing with planning inspectors' reports; and if he will make a statement. [78333]

Mr. Caborn: The target for dealing with Inspectors' reports on called in applications is 80 per cent. within 13 per cent. weeks and 100 per cent. within 20 weeks. For appeals, targets are 80 per cent. within 8 weeks and 100 per cent. within 13 weeks.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the (a) longest, (b) shortest and (c) average time taken by the Government Office for London in processing planning inspectors' reports for each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [78331]

Mr. Caborn: The details are in the table:

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
Longest	51	86	34
Shortest	6	6	7
Average	13	23	13

Note:

Countryside Access

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to announce measures to improve access to the countryside for horseriders and cyclists. [78221]

Mr. Meacher: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 18 March 1999, Official Report, column 726.

Countryside Commission

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he proposes to announce the remaining members of the new Countryside Commission. [78354]

Mr. Meacher: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Denton and Reddish (Mr. Bennett), on 19 March 1999, Official Report, columns 888–89.

Small Cars

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of cars currently registered in the United Kingdom are estimated to be below 1100cc. [78408]

Ms Glenda Jackson: At the most recent statistical analysis of the vehicle records held by DVLA and DVLNI in September 1998, some 8% of vehicles registered in the Private and Light Goods class had an engine capacity not exceeding 1100 cc.

Genetically Modified Animals

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many genetically modified animals, including fish, have escaped into the environment in the United Kingdom since 1990. [78593]

Mr. Meacher: None, to our knowledge.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will set out detailed future spending plans for his Department. [79071]

Mr. Prescott: I have today published my Department's Annual Report for 1999 (Cm 4204), and copies have been placed in the House Libraries. The Report sets out the Department's achievements over the last year and its detailed plans for delivering a fairer society, a cleaner environment and a more efficient economy. We have already published targets covering all areas of the Department's work in our "Public Service Agreement". Now we are setting out detailed spending plans showing how we will meet those targets and deliver our objectives. These include an additional £4.1 billion investment by the Department over the next three years, as well as an extra £8.3 billion for local authorities. The Report also includes a summary of our Departmental Investment Strategy, to be published shortly, which will set out how the Department ensures that capital investment delivers its objectives, whilst achieving value for money.

Business Aviation

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the remaining parts of his Department's study of Business Aviation in the South East will be published. [79203]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The report on Part 2 of the study of Business Aviation in the South East which we commissioned last year, "The Economic Impact of Business Aviation", has been published today and copies of the report have been placed in the Libraries of the House. Part 1 was published in July last year. As policy decisions arising from the study of airports issues in the South East of England and the East of England, announced by the Government on 11 March, may impact on Business Aviation, work on the final part of the study, "Future Capacity for Business Aviation", will not be finalised until the South East airports study has reported. At that time, we shall consider the implications for the work which has been done so far on future capacity for Business Aviation, and whether further work is needed.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Civil Servants (Appraisal)

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what were the appraisal performance markings awarded to civil servants in 1998 for (a) each agency in his Department and (b) the Department broken down by (i) grade, (ii) gender, (iii) ethnicity, (iv) part-time/full-time working and (v) disability; and for (1) each agency and (2) the Department whether the Cabinet Office's four fifths rule for detecting potential adverse impact was applied to the appraisal markings of civil servants in the 1998 report round. [78150]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The following tables show the breakdown for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and overall figures for Wilton Park. The figures for box 4 and 5 have been combined as they are very small. At present, 80 per cent. of the 1998 Appraisal Performance Markings have been received.

Neither Wilton Park, nor the Department as a whole, uses the Cabinet Office's "four fifths rule" to assess potential adverse impact.

Cuba

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the jailing of political dissidents in Cuba. [78123]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Government are very concerned about the jailing of political dissidents in Cuba, and in particular with the sentencing of the four members of the "International Dissidence Working Group" in Havana on 15 March. This group exercised the freedom of expression, as enshrined in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and were held without charge since July 1997. We do not accept that citizens who do so should be criminalised by state authorities.

Together with EU partners and bilaterally (including when Isabel Allende, Cuban Vice Foreign Minister met my noble Friend Baroness Symons on 25 February), we have made representations to Cuban authorities expressing serious concern and deep regret about the sentences. The EU Presidency issued a public statement on 17 March which said it was deeply disappointed that its repeated appeals for the unconditional release of the "Four" have been ignored, and that neither diplomats nor international media representatives were allowed to attend the trial.

Falklands Flights

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effect on tourism in the Falklands of the proposed reduction in Tristar flights to the Falklands. [78388]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The reduction in the frequency of RAF Tristar Airbridge flights to the Falkland Islands was one of a range of efficiency proposals identified by the Strategic Defence Review. It represents a rationalisation of the use of the Tristar aircraft following technical improvements that allow them to carry more passengers. We foresee no significant effect on tourism in the Falklands.

Sandra Gregory

Sir Nicholas Lyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action his Department is taking in relation to the case of Ms Sandra Gregory, convicted on a drugs charge in Thailand. [78225]

Mr. Fatchett: Following her conviction for drug offences in Thailand in 1993, Ms Gregory transferred to a British prison in 1997 under the terms of the UK/Thailand Prison Transfer Agreement. The Agreement does not allow sentences to be reviewed once a prisoner is repatriated, but does allow the prisoner to benefit from our parole system. Ms Gregory will be eligible for parole in 2003.

Ms Gregory has asked the Government to support her Royal Pardon Petition. We have declined to do so because our policy is to support Petitions only when a prisoner is terminally ill or when a relative is terminally ill and dependent relatives may be left with no-one to care for them. These circumstances are not present in Ms Gregory's case.

Overseas Territories

Mr. Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his statement of 17 March 1999, Official Report, columns 1125–27, if he will list the British overseas territories that comply with the European Convention on Human Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. [78000]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The European Convention on Human Rights has been extended to Anguilla, Bermuda, British Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands, the Falkland Islands, Gibraltar, Montserrat, St. Helena and the Turks and Caicos Islands.

The International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights has been extended to Bermuda, British Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands, the Falkland Islands and Dependencies, Gibraltar, Montserrat, the Pitcairn Group, St. Helena and Dependencies and the Turks and Caicos Islands.

Anguilla, the British Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands, Montserrat, and the Turks and Caicos Islands risk being in breach of the ECHR and/or the ICCPR insofar as they have retained legislation which criminalises homosexual acts between consenting adults in private. Bermuda and the British Virgin Islands, furthermore, risk being in breach of the ECHR and the ICCPR if they administer judicial corporal punishment, which is still on their statute books. We are not aware of any legislation in the Falkland Islands and Dependencies, Gibraltar, St. Helena and Dependencies or the Pitcairn Islands which might place these territories in breach of either the ECHR or the ICCPR. We are taking steps to ensure that all of the Overseas Territories are in full compliance with the UK's international human rights obligations. Further details can be found in Chapter Four of the White Paper on Britain and the Overseas Territories, which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries he advises tourists to avoid because of the threat of the Millennium bug; and if he will make a statement on his public awareness campaign. [78430]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer to my reply of 12 March 1999, Official Report, column 398 to the hon. Member and also to my reply of 18 March 1999, Official Report, column 761 to my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon (Mr. Dismore). Our travel advice notices will aim to provide practical information to allow travellers to make their own informed decisions. We will continue to monitor other countries' preparedness and will issue new advice accordingly.

Strategic Export Controls

Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Government intend to update the Summary of Government Commitments regarding the application of strategic export controls. [79182]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We will shortly be placing a copy of the updated Summary in the Libraries of the House.

During the course of research for the Annual Report on Strategic Export Controls a number of technical errors were discovered in the Summary, which forms an Appendix to the Annual Report. These errors, which pre-date 1 May 1997 are:

the entry for Burma should have read "Does not cover contracts existing at the time of imposition". Previous versions of the Summary had stated that existing contracts were covered. (1991 EU embargo).

the entry for Liberia should have specified that the embargo did not apply to ECOWAS peacekeeping forces. Previous versions of the Summary had omitted this point. (1992 UN embargo).

the entry for Sudan should have read "the embargo does not cover contracts existing at the time of imposition". Previous versions of the Summary had stated that existing contracts were covered. (1994 EU embargo).

the date of the introduction of the EU arms embargo against China should read 27 June rather than 26 June 1989 as in previous versions.

In addition, for Bosnia and Herzegovina and Croatia we have added that the embargoes were originally imposed in 1991. The 1996 Ministerial statements (referred to in the Summary) confirmed the EU's position on arms exports to these countries.

We have taken the opportunity of publishing the Annual Report to correct these errors.

Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Government intend to publish the Annual report on Strategic Export Controls. [79184]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Government have published the Annual Report today. I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses and in the Vote Office. The Report will also be available on the FCO website.

Narcotics Trade

Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government of Iran's role in combating the trade in narcotics. [79185]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We are aware of the efforts that Iran makes to counter the narcotics trade, an effort which deserves to be more widely recognised. Most of the heroin sold in Britain originates in Afghanistan. Iran is a key country on the heroin route from Afghanistan to Europe and is in the front line in the war against this trade. It has made good efforts in recent years to stem the traffic. Close to 3,000 deaths among frontier guards in the past 20 years is a regrettable reflection of the commitment that Iran has made to try to combat this menace.

In that connection, I should like to announce that the Government are donating £300,000 to the United Nations Drug Control Programme to provide Iranian frontier personnel with 1,020 bullet proof vests. This donation will enhance the capacity of Iran's frontier personnel to combat the drug traffickers and to reduce the sad toll of casualties which they have borne.

No supplier has yet been nominated for these goods. If they are sourced from the UK, an export licence would need to be granted. If such a licence were granted, this would represent an exception to our arms embargo on Iran and would be announced.

Abdul Rahin

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the decision will be made on the application for entry clearance by Abdul Rahin, husband of Shaheen Akbar, interviewed at Islamabad on 16 December. [78721]

Mr. Fatchett: We have asked our High Commission in Islamabad for details of this case. My noble Friend Baroness Symons will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

EU Council

Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the forthcoming business in the Council of the European Union for April and list the major European Union events for the next six months. [79183]

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Indonesia (Exports)

1. Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on current ECGD liabilities in respect of exports to Indonesia. [77033]

Mr. Wilson: ECGD's exposure on Indonesia is £1,603 million, of which £41 million is in respect of unrecovered claims.

Assisted Areas (Kent)

18. Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received in support of retaining assisted area status for Dover and other areas of Kent. [77052]

Mr. Wills: Under the public consultation for the assisted areas review, a joint submission was received from Kent County Council, seven District Councils and Medway Unitary Authority arguing for assisted area status for Dover and six other areas of East and North East Kent.

Hon. Members representing Kent constituencies, including my hon. Friend, local Councillors and a number of local companies, have also made representations in support of the case for these areas.

Manufacturing Industry

19. Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he is taking to assist the competitiveness of manufacturing industry. [77053]

Mr. Byers: Manufacturing is a vital part of the economy. Its competitiveness is assisted by my policies for promoting best practice, encouraging the development of efficient supply chains, promoting the application of new technology, and developing beneficial regional partnerships.

Small Businesses (Regulations)

20. Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he is taking to reduce the amount of management time expended by small business on dealing with Government regulations. [77054]

Mr. Wills: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has made clear that one of the key tasks of my Department's new Small Business Service will be to help small businesses get to grips with regulation, providing them with practical assistance to cut the burdens of compliance.

Steel and Engineering Industries

21. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of the Chancellor's Budget statement on the steel and engineering industries. [77055]

Mr. Battle: By locking in the economic stability that our policies have already achieved, such as low inflation, and through our programme of targeted tax cuts, such as the reduction in Corporation tax to the lowest rate of any major industrialised country anywhere in the world, sectors such as steel and engineering should benefit and have a stable climate in which to compete.

Fresh Meat (Supermarkets)

22. Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the Office of Fair Trading inquiry into supermarket retailing of fresh meat. [77056]

Dr. Howells: The Office of Fair Trading is carrying out an inquiry into the profitability of the major supermarkets in the grocery sector. I understand that the Office of Fair Trading hopes to be in a position to announce its conclusions in April.

Research and Development

23. Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from business leaders on the measures announced in the Budget to encourage research and development. [77057]

Mr. Battle: The Government recognise the important role which research and development (R&D) plays in a modern knowledge-driven economy. This was the theme of the consultation document published jointly by HM Treasury and DTI on Budget Day 1998 entitled "Innovating for the Future: investing in R&D".

The findings from this review have already influenced both the planning for future Budgets and the Government's Competitiveness White Paper "Our Competitive Future—Building the Knowledge Driven Economy" published last December and its follow-up Implementation Plan (published by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 10 March).

The Budget announcements on 9 March included details of the Government's intention to introduce a research and development tax credit for small and medium enterprises (SMEs) in the 2000 Budget. The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced on 10 March the publication of the Inland Revenue's technical paper to consult further with business on the detail of this measure. This represents a key output from the Innovating for the Future consultation which, in addition to the tax treatment of R&D, considered a range of questions looking at how best to remove barriers to innovation.

Around 200 representations were received. Of those commenting specifically on questions relating to tax credits, respondents can be divided into five main types: companies; business organisations; professional and union bodies; accountant and tax firms; and academic institutions. Individual companies gave a mixed view on tax credits from those firmly in support to those who felt such a measure might be less effective. The main business organisations also provided a variety of opinion with the CBI, for example, arguing that the feasibility of a targeted credit for SMEs should be assessed; the CBI reaffirmed their support for a specific SME measure in their Budget submission earlier this year. Professional and union bodies were almost totally in favour of tax credits (as were the majority of academic institutions) although the main accountancy, insurance and tax firms generally provided a more cautious response; a number advocating further analysis before any measures might be introduced.

A main theme to emerge from the consultation was the concern that any R&D investment measure introduced should also provide assistance to the most cash-constrained small companies in their start-up and early stages, when they are "tax exhausted" and would not immediately benefit from extra allowances to reduce their corporation tax. This message was also emphasised by the Williams Group's report to the Treasury (November 1998) analysing barriers to growth faced by high-tech small firms. In the light of these views, and the Government's own research and analysis, the Government announced at the Budget their intention to introduce a comprehensive R&D tax credit for SMEs, which would also involve a payable element for companies not yet in taxable profit.

In addition to this key measure other important outputs from the Innovating for the Future consultation are as follows.

Intellectual Property

Establishing a rational and less complex system for the taxation of intellectual property (IP) was an important conclusion to emerge from many respondents. IP is one of the key outputs of firms' innovation and R&D investment. The 1998 Pre-Budget Report therefore announced that the Government would consult, by the 2000 Budget, on two possible measures to reduce tax compliance costs and distortions on business decisions affecting IP transactions:

- moving towards a simpler system of IP taxation, essentially following the accounting treatment for relieving expenditure on IP purchases and taxing proceeds; and;
- simplifying the taxation of royalty payments which accrue to the owners of intellectual property rights.

In addition, the Competitiveness White Paper set out details of the Government's Intellectual Property Rights (IPR) action plan. This focuses on making the IPR system more affordable and accessible including a review of the impact of fees charged by the UK Patent Office. Work will also be taken forward to ensure the system is better able to keep pace with developments in new technology by, for example, agreeing EC Directives on copyright in the information society and stronger protection for software-related inventions. The action plan would also involve reform of the civil law system for IPR litigation; a push for an EC patent which is affordable and easy to enforce and work to ensure that EU harmonisation of "second tier" or "petty patents" benefits UK firms, particularly small companies.

Accounting Treatment

The consultation also highlighted the importance of measuring and reporting the value of innovation and intangible assets if firms are to manage their R&D activities effectively. The Government encourage companies to use the framework provided by current accounting standards as a means to inform their own R&D investment decisions and to disseminate information about their R&D activities to the market as a whole. As announced in the Competitiveness White Paper, the Government have therefore asked the Accounting Standards Board, in consultation with others, to take a fresh look at this issue. DTI will also be launching a best practice programme to identify and disseminate best practice for companies of all sizes in assessing the strengths and weaknesses of their intangible assets.

Science Exploitation, Management and Finance

The Competitiveness White Paper and recently published Implementation Plan include a range of new and reinforced measures to promote competitiveness within the knowledge driven economy. This included a particular focus on creating and exploiting knowledge and many have a strong resonance with the comments received on the Innovating for the Future consultation. For example:

- the doubling of DTI funding for the popular TCS (Teaching Company Scheme);
- funding for a national network of Faraday Centres to bring together businesses, scientists and engineers to commercialise research;
- a significant extension of the Smart scheme to help more small manufacturing firms to turn their innovative ideas into commercial reality;
- the further development of the University Challenge Fund (the Chancellor's Budget Statement included an extra £15 million) and the establishment of a £25 million Science Enterprise

Challenge (announced in the Pre-Budget Report) to establish up to eight new enterprise centres in universities to promote business skills and the commercialisation of research;

a national Venture Capital Challenge Fund to help provide, in partnership with private sector funding, risk capital to early stage high technology companies;

Enterprise Management Incentives (EMIs) to allow smaller, higher-risk companies recruit and retain talented managers; new measures for corporate venturing, which look at tax incentives to encourage firms to invest in and become involved with small, high risk companies.

Copies of responses to the Innovating for the Future consultation have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Small Businesses (Corporation Tax)

24. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the impact of the new rate of corporation tax for small businesses. [77058]

Mr. Wills: Around 270,000 small and growing companies, that is two-thirds of all tax-paying companies, will benefit from the new 10 per cent. starting rate of corporation tax for small business, leaving them with more of their profits for retention, reinvestment and growth.

Trade Liberalisation

25. Mrs. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to discuss the liberalisation of trade with his international partners. [77060]

Mr. Wilson: The Secretary of State often meets his overseas counterparts individually and takes every opportunity to discuss with them specific issues relating to international trade and the importance of further liberalising world trade in general. He next expects to meet the majority of his international partners as a group at the World Trade Organisation's Ministerial conference in Seattle from November 30 to December 3 this year. The agenda for that meeting is not yet fixed but is expected to include the launch of a new Round of multilateral trade liberalisation negotiations.

Liberalisation of trade is a matter covered by the Common Commercial Policy of the EU. The Secretary of State will next discuss this with EU partners in Berlin on 9–10 May 1999 at an Informal Meeting of Trade Ministers. Other opportunities to meet groups of trade ministers include the annual Ministerial meeting of the Organisation of Economic Cooperation and Development and the biannual Asia-Europe meeting.

Business Costs

26. Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the net change in (a) regulatory costs and (b) tax costs to business since 1 May 1997. [77061]

Dr. Howells: Any assessment of the net change in regulatory costs is, on its own, misleading because it ignores the benefits of regulation which are much more difficult to quantify. What matters is that we minimise costs and maximise benefits when obliged to regulate. Our regulatory impact assessment procedures are designed to achieve this.

Details of the impact of particular tax measures introduced since 1 May 1997 are set out in the relevant edition of the Financial Statement and Budget Report.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will reassess the annual cost to business of full implementation of the (a) minimum wage and (b) working time regulations following recent business experience. [77885]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 19 March 1999]: I will always be prepared to reassess our estimate of costs in the light of experience.

Supermarkets

27. Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects the Office of Fair Trading to report on its inquiry into supermarket profitability; and if he will make a statement. [77063]

Dr. Howells: I understand that the Office of Fair Trading hopes to be in a position to announce its conclusions in April.

National Minimum Wage

28. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations his Department has received on arrangements made by employers to avoid providing the full benefit of minimum wage to their employees. [77064]

Mr. Byers: Not only do most employers support the principle of the national minimum wage, but many firms have already adjusted their pay structures to take account of its introduction. The Inland Revenue will enforce the minimum wage by responding to complaints and targeting inspections on those sectors where underpayments are likely to occur.

29. Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received concerning the Bank of England's assessment of the inflationary implications of the minimum wage. [77066]

Mr. Byers: I have received a number of representations on the possible effect of the introduction of the national minimum wage, including its impact on inflation.

Business Links

30. Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to review the Business Links services; and if he will make a statement. [77067]

Mr. Wills: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made a statement to the House last week which detailed our plans to create a new Small Business Service about which we will be consulting widely. As part of that consultation, I will be inviting views from Business Link Partnerships, small firms and their representative organisation, and other interested bodies, on how best we can deliver coherent, high-quality support programmes to smaller firms.

Aerospace Industry

31. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with (a) British Aerospace and (b) the Society of British Aerospace Companies concerning the consolidation of the European aerospace industry; and if he will make a statement. [77068]

Mr. Battle: I met British Aerospace to discuss the consolidation of the European aerospace industry in advance of the meeting of Industry Ministers of the six European nations most closely involved in discussions on this issue, held in Madrid on 21 January.

Coal Industry

32. Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards the coal industry. [77069]

Mr. Battle: The United Kingdom coal industry neither seeks nor receives special treatment. The Government are concerned to ensure that UK coal producers are able to compete on a level playing field with other sources of energy and with imported coal.

The measures the Government are taking to remove distortions in the UK electricity market will ensure a level playing field for all fuels. It is for UK coal producers to respond to the challenge of an open and competitive coal market.

I published last week a report by International Mining Consultants Ltd. (IMCL) commissioned by my Department on the prospects for deep mined coal production in the UK over the next twenty years. The report shows that there are sufficient reserves to sustain a competitive deep mine industry of significant size well into the new century.

Building Societies

33. Mr. Lock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations (a) he has made and (b) plans to make to the Chancellor of the Exchequer concerning the impact on the financial services market of building society de-mutualisations. [77070]

Dr. Howells: I have not made, nor will I be making, any such representations.

Euro

34. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his plans to issue advice to businesses following the introduction of the euro. [77072]

Mr. Byers: My Department has recently launched a Euro Planner floppy disc designed to help small and medium businesses deal with the euro. More than 40,000 copies of the Euro Planner have already been sent out.

This is one part of the Government's broader strategy to help SMEs deal with the euro, which includes a national awareness campaign, supported by high-quality information on the euro; a network of twelve regional euro forum; the provision of practical advice through Business Links and other intermediaries and specific measures to facilitate the use of the euro by business.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research has been (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated by his Department into the forms of packaging available for containment of (i) low, (ii) intermediate and (iii) high level radioactive wastes for its repatriation after reprocessing. [77943]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have been asked to reply.

The Department does not commission research relating to specific packages: this is the responsibility of the designer concerned. The Department's role is to evaluate the safety case, made by designers, against the regulatory requirements which apply to certain types of package.

Political Donations

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the Government's response to the recommendation on political donations by companies made by the Committee on Standards in Public Life in its report on the funding of political parties in the United Kingdom. [78860]

Mr. Byers: The Government agree with the Committee that the current arrangements for company donations, under which directors have discretion whether to contribute to a political party and whether to seek shareholders' consent, will not be satisfactory in an era of greater openness about party sources and uses of party funds. It has therefore accepted the Committee's recommendation that legislative provision should be made to require any company intending to make a donation (whether in cash or in kind, and including any sponsorship, or loans or transactions at a favourable rate) to a political party or organisation to have the prior authority of its shareholders. The Government would, however, welcome views on the implementation of this recommendation, and I have today published a consultative document seeking comments on the following three areas: the definition of a "political donation" with respect to donations by companies; the way in which companies legislation should be amended to give effect to the Neill Committee's recommendation that a company should have to have the prior authority of its shareholders; and possible changes to the existing disclosure provisions relating to political donations in Schedule 7 to the Companies Act 1985. The consultation will inform the drafting of a Bill to implement the main findings of the Committee's report, which the Government intend to publish by the Parliamentary Summer Recess.

Monsanto

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he list all the potential crop organisms on which Monsanto has secured European patents. [74829]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 5 March 1999]: Up to the end of February 1999, six European patents for crop plants which have been modified in a particular way have been granted to Monsanto by the European Patent Office. The serial numbers of these patents are: EP0340197, EP0293358, EP0289479, EP0269601, EP0223452 and EP0218571. The inventions and the crops to which they relate are specified in the patent specifications. Oppositions have been filed against two of the patents: EP0289479 and EP0269601.

Biological Resources

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in respect of patent issues, what assessment his Department has made of the compatibility of Article 27 of TRIPS and Articles 8, 15 and 16 of the UN Convention on Biological Resources. [74846]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 5 March 1999]: Article 8 of the UN Convention on Biological Diversity concerns conservation of biodiversity in its natural habitat, requiring contracting states to set aside protected areas. Article 15 recognise sovereign rights over genetic resources while encouraging access for environmentally sound purposes. Article 16 states that transfer of technology, including biotechnology, is an essential element for the attainment of the objectives of the convention, that is to conserve biodiversity, to use it in a sustainable way and to share equitably the benefits arising from the use of genetic resources. The World Trade Organisation (WTO) Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) Agreement is complementary to the objectives and substance of this Convention. If patents were to be granted for known plants or for discovering something that exists in nature, then, under Article 27 of the TRIPS Agreement, it is clear that such rights would be invalid. The TRIPS Agreement also encourages technology transfer. It is not a matter for TRIPS or intellectual property regimes to set the conditions for access to the genetic resources. This is for individual contracting States to the CBD to decide.

Classic Collections (UK) Ltd.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will call for a report from the British Standards Institute regarding the alleged misuse by Classic Collections (UK) Ltd., Slough, of ISO 9000 accreditation; and if he will make a statement. [76130]

Mr. Battle: I understand that this case involves allegations of misuse of the BVQI ISO 9000 certification mark which includes the National Accreditation of Certification Bodies (NACB) mark. My department licenses the United Kingdom Accreditation Service (UKAS) to use the NACB mark, to sub-license the use of the mark to UKAS accredited organisations such as BVQI and to control its use. I have asked UKAS to investigate these allegations of misuse and to take any necessary action. I also understand that the City of Sunderland Trading Standards Department is investigating the case and will take action under the Trade Descriptions Act if they think it is justified. As far as I am aware, the British Standards Institution has no role to play in this case.

Trade Delegations

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the last occasion on which a Government Minister led a trade delegation to (a) South Africa, (b) Sri Lanka, (c) Thailand and (d) Uganda; and what future trade delegations are planned. [76559]

Mr. Wilson: (a) My hon. Friend the Financial Secretary to the Treasury, the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roche), when Under-Secretary of State with responsibility for Small Firms, led an investment mission to South Africa in July 1998. There are no planned Ministerial-led trade delegations.

(b) The then Minister for Trade led a trade delegation to Sri Lanka in February 1995. There are no planned Ministerial-led trade delegations.

(c) The Minister for Education, Scottish Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Airdrie and Shotts (Mrs. Liddell), when Economic Secretary to the Treasury, led a trade delegation to Thailand in March 1998. There are no planned Ministerial-led trade delegations.

(d) There have been no recent Ministerial-led trade delegations to Uganda. There are no planned Ministerial-led trade delegations.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of projected increases in CO_2 emissions as a result of the introduction of declining rate tariffs to larger domestic consumers by Northern Electricity; and if he will make a statement. [77110]

Mr. Battle: None. Any such impact is likely to be very small.

Car Industry

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which makes of car with engines of up to 1100 cc were built in Britain in 1998; and how many were sold in the United Kingdom of each make. [78011]

Mr. Battle: The only make of car with an engine capacity of 1100ccs (or less) manufactured and sold in the United Kingdom during 1998, was the Nissan Micra (998 cc)—produced at the Nissan plant in Sunderland. 38,684 of this particular model and a total of 48,757 Micras (of all engine sizes) were registered in the UK in 1998.

Domestic Appliance Safety

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action the Government are taking to ensure that non-working surfaces on cooking and heating appliances do not reach dangerously high temperatures. [78355]

Mr. Battle: The safety of gas and electrical appliances is controlled by the Gas Appliances (Safety) Regulations 1995, and the Electrical Equipment (Safety) Regulations 1994, which implement European Safety Directives into UK law. Both these Regulations address surface temperatures.

European Safety Standards have been developed, UK participation being by the British Standards Institution, which give a presumption of conformity with the requirements of the Regulations. These standards do include temperature limits, which officials within my Department are continually trying to see lowered, particularly as technology advances.

A recent enforcement action by the UK resulted in the European Commission declaring one of these standards defective and asking the standards-making bodies to review the standards on household appliances to ensure that temperature limits are adequately addressed.

Small-engined Vehicles

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the vehicle models that are (a) made and (b) imported into the UK that have engine capacities of (i) less than 1,000cc, (ii) 1,000cc to 1,100cc, (iii) 1,101cc to 1,200cc and (iv) 1,201cc to 1,250cc. [78369]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 23 March 1999]: The following tables list the vehicles available in the UK in 1999, by model, origin and engine size (up to 1,250cc):

(i) Cars of less than 1,000cc

Manufacturer	Model	cc	Country of origin

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to alter the accountability to him of the Export Credits Guarantee Department in response to the last sentence of paragraph 64 of Sir Richard Wilson's review of export promotion. [78438]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has no plans to alter the accountability of the ECGD. ECGD's Chief Executive will continue to be accountable to the Minister for Trade.

Small Businesses (Rebates and Grants)

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department plans to produce a guide to rebates and grants available for small businesses. [78627]

Mr. Wills: The publication "A Guide to Help for Small Firms" includes details of the wide range of support available to small businesses including financial help. It is currently being revised and I will ensure that my hon. Friend receives a copy and copies are placed in the Libraries of the House when it is published in mid-April.

Small Business Service

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he plans to issue guidance to small businesses which want to apply for assistance from the Small Business Service. [78628]

Mr. Wills: A consultation paper on the specific role and functions of the Small Business Service will be published shortly with a view to the new service being set-up and running later in the year. In the meantime, a wide range of government support for smaller firms can be accessed through the national network of Business Links.

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to announce the appointment of the Chief Executive of the new Small Business Service. [78626]

Mr. Wills: It is hoped to make an announcement about the appointment of the Chief Executive of the Small Business Service in the Autumn.

Nazi Victims (Compensation)

Mr. Ivan Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Government will launch a claim scheme to compensate victims of Nazi persecution who had property in the United Kingdom that was confiscated by Her Majesty's Government during the Second World War under the Trading with the Enemy legislation. [78991]

Mr. Byers: I am pleased to announce the launch of the Claim Scheme. It will have the following main features: claims can be made in respect of any property in the UK confiscated by HM Government under British legislation on enemy property or trading with the enemy, if it has not already been returned and compensation has not already been paid intended to cover its full value; the Government will pay compensation on the basis of wartime values increased by the change in the Retail Prices Index; compensation will be paid to victims of Nazi persecution who owned such property when it was confiscated, and other people who can show that they were likely to have been the beneficial owner of such property if it had not been confiscated, if they or the original owner suffered Nazi persecution; claims will be determined by a panel of three assessors comprising a legally qualified Chairman, someone with financial expertise and someone with an understanding of belonging to a minority group.

The right hon. Lord Archer of Sandwell QC who advised the Government about the claims procedure has agreed to chair the panel which will be called the Enemy Property Claims Assessment Panel (EPCAP). It will assess all claims according to criteria set out in its Terms of Reference. A copy of the Constitution and Terms of Reference of the Panel has been placed in the Library of the House. The EPCAP will be supported by a Secretariat comprised of a team of DTI officials.

To assist claimants the Enemy Property Internet website at "www.enemyproperty.gov.uk" has been updated with additional lists of those who had their property seized under the enemy property or trading with the enemy legislation. The website has a copy of the claim form and background information that can be downloaded and printed. It now has a database of over 30,000 names covering property originally belonging to residents of Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Estonia, Germany, Hungary, Japan, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Romania and Yugoslavia. The database also includes records of people from other countries and those it was not possible to trace.

Claimants will have until 30 September 1999 to submit their claims to the EPCAP Secretariat. Those who have already written to my Department indicating an interest in the Scheme will be sent claim forms by the EPCAP Secretariat. The payment of compensation will not start until after that date because there may be several claims for the same property and entitlement will need to be established. Claim forms can be obtained from the EPCAP Secretariat at the address below:

Regulation

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which regulations he is planning to amend to make them more compatible with a flexible, innovative and entrepreneurial economy. [77636]

Mr. Byers: The Competitiveness White Paper published last December set out specific commitments to help create such an economy. Those concerning regulation include: reviews of the insolvency and bankruptcy laws, and company law; consultation on the case for reform of the mergers regime; reform of telecommunications regulation; and the introduction of legislation to improve the regulation of financial services.

The White Paper, and the Implementation Plan I published earlier this month setting out the steps the Government will take to meet these commitments, are available in the Library of the House and on the DTI's web site at www.dti.gov.uk/comp.

Investment Programme

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the targets and timetable for his plans to promote an investment programme in British economic capabilities. [77789]

Mr. Byers: The Implementation Plan for the Competitiveness White Paper details the milestones and target dates for programmes designed to stimulate the availability of the right finance for growth businesses and to provide them with the business skills to manage this finance. Measures include the establishment of an Enterprise Fund to leverage private investment capital, extending the Young Enterprise Scheme and consultation on corporate venturing.

Details of the relevant commitments are set out in section A of the Implementation Plan. Both the White Paper and the Implementation Plan are available in the Library of the House and on the DTI's web site at www.dti.gov.uk/comp.

Competitiveness

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress he has made in establishing competitiveness indicators to measure the improvement in the United Kingdom's performance in this respect. [77786]

Mr. Byers: The Competitiveness White Paper announced the publication of a set of competitiveness indicators—the Competitiveness Index. The department is aiming to publish the Index in July. Further information is given in the DTI Implementation Plan, which has been placed in the Library or can be viewed on the Internet at www.dti.gov.uk/comp.

Business Collaboration

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress he has made in encouraging collaboration between businesses. [77788]

Mr. Byers: The increasing importance of collaboration for successful businesses was a major theme in the Competitiveness White Paper. Many of the commitments in the paper are designed to help UK businesses to learn from others, including their competitors. These include the promotion of benchmarking, the spread of best practice and other schemes to encourage UK businesses to collaborate sectorally, regionally and locally.

Details of the relevant commitments are set out in the White Paper Implementation Plan, which sets out the progress made on each commitment. For example, the DTI has already issued draft guidance to Regional Development Agencies for their review of the coherence and quality of business support in their areas and has agreed support for 22 Centres of Expertise in the Business

Link partnership network in 1998–99, and is committed to the development of further Centres over the next three years.

Both the White Paper and the Implementation Plan are available in the Library of the House and on the DTI web site at www.dti.gov.uk/comp.

Mobile Phone Industry

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on competition in the mobile phone industry. [77065]

Mr. Wills: Pursuant to his duties under the Telecommunications Act 1984, the Director General of Telecommunications issued a consultation document, "Competition in the mobile market", on 4 February.

The document presents the finding that Vodafone and Cellnet continue to have market influence but, as there are signs that effective competition is emerging, it is not appropriate now for regulatory controls to be applied to the price of calls from mobiles.

I understand that the closing date for comments has been extended to 1 April. I shall not prejudge the conclusions reached.

The DTI has consulted industry on proposed measures to ensure a competitive market in the next (third) generation of mobile services. I am now considering the responses received and will make a statement when I have come to a view.

Coal Pricing

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps the Government are taking to identify imports of coal and coal products which may be unfairly priced. [79069]

Mr. Battle: We wish to see an open and competitive market for coal and coal products. We mean to ensure that the market is not distorted by imports which do not reflect the costs of production and freight. To this end, we have encouraged the European Commission to take action against such marketing practices which are supported by aid applied for an unauthorised purpose and welcome the decision it took last June on German anthracite. We have also encouraged UK coke manufacturers to draw the Commission's attention to the fact that sales of French foundry coke in the UK market appear to be supported by unauthorised state aid.

We are having continuing discussions with the Commission and with the Polish authorities and exporters about the pricing and future flows of Polish coal to the UK. We are also working with the industry to establish how far the prices of Chinese anthracite and coke cover their costs of production and freight.

Greater transparency is a key component of our policy. We have accordingly agreed with HM Customs and Excise that they will in future publish country of origin data on coal imports from non-EU countries on a monthly basis, and we intend to work closely with them and with interested parties to improve the quality of the data.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what targets he has set his Department's Insolvency Service Executive Agency for 1999–2000. [79070]

Mr. Byers: The Insolvency Service's planning assumption is that compulsory insolvencies will total 26,000 in the year to 31 March 2000, and I have therefore set it the target of completing case administrations to match new case input so that the number of cases outstanding at 31 March 2000 is maintained at the level as at 31 March 1999, with no more than 5 per cent. of cases being more than 36 months old. I have also set it the targets of reducing the unit costs of administering bankruptcy and compulsory liquidation cases by 5 per cent. in real terms over the period 1999–2002; and reducing the cost of investigations of bankruptcy and compulsory liquidation cases by 10 per cent. in real terms over the period 1999–2002. Despite this reduction, I expect The Service to continue to achieve at least the levels of proceedings for disqualification taken against unfit directors and reports on cases of criminal misconduct as in the current year.

In addition, I have set The Service the following quality of service targets for 1999–2000:

to report to creditors on assets and liabilities within 8 weeks in at least 97 per cent. of all cases; and within 12 weeks in 98 per cent. of all cases; to hold the initial meetings of creditors within 12 weeks in 96 per cent. of all appropriate cases, and within 4 months in 98 per cent. of all appropriate cases; to submit reports within 10 months in at least 90 per cent. of bankruptcy cases, and at least 80 per cent. of company liquidation cases where there is evidence of criminality; to submit disqualification reports within 15 months in at least 80 per cent. of cases where there is evidence of unfit conduct by directors; and to check and action at least 97 per cent. of Insolvency Services Account payment requisitions within 4 days or by the due date.

The Service is also expected to action 100 per cent. of invoices for payment within 30 days of receipt and the Agency Chief Executive is expected to reply within 10 days to all letters from Members of Parliament delegated to him for reply.

Mortgages

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to give the Office of Fair Trading a role in relation to mortgage deals. [77049]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced on 10 March 1998, Official Report, columns 263–64, a package of measures to improve information for consumers on mortgages and on other credit marketing. These will give consumers a fairer deal and tackle confusion caused by lenders presenting information in different ways. The Office of Fair Trading would have enforcement responsibilities under the Consumer Credit Act 1974 in relation to these measures.

I have no further plans to extend the role of the Office of Fair Trading in relation to mortgage deals. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer will be carrying out a review later this year on the regulation of mortgage advice.

Inward Investment (Sussex)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the prospects for inward investment in Sussex. [77071]

Mr. Wills: The prospects are positive and better than they were a year ago. A number of significant inward investors are pursuing inquiries with the appropriate organisations in Sussex.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Cumbria County Council

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, (1) pursuant to his answer of 8 March 1999, Official Report, column 77, if he will place in the Library a copy of his letter to the Leader of Cumbria county council; [76189]

(2) if his Department has received written communications from Cumbria county council informing it that they intend to spend their full standard spending assessment on education. [76190]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 12 March 1999]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State wrote in January to the leader of the county council to urge Cumbria to use all of the cash increase in the education of SSA to support education and I repeated that message in February. Copies of all the letters which have been sent by Ministers to Cumbria county council on this issue have been placed in the Library.

The Department has received written communications from the county council indicating that the increase in the education directorate's budget will match the £9.4 million cash increase in Cumbria's education SSA. We will monitor Cumbria's formal budget returns to confirm that all of the cash increase has been used to support education services.

New Deal (Young People)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people who would fit the Government's target category for the new deal for young people left unemployment between January 1993 and May 1997. [77176]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 16 March 1999]: The information is provided in the following table, based on the monthly count of people claiming jobseeker's allowance or national insurance credits:

18–24 year old 6 month plus claimants of unemployed-related benefits	January 1993 to May 1997
Total offlows from the claimant count	1,654,434
Average monthly offlow from the claimant count	33,089
Total change in stock of claimants	200,960
Average monthly change in stock of claimants	−4,019
Total change in stock of claimants (%)	−54.2
Monthly percentage point change in stock of claimants	−1.1

Civil Servants (Appraisal)

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what were the appraisal performance markings awarded to civil servants in 1998 for (a) each agency in his Department and (b) the Department broken down by (i) grade, (ii) gender, (iii) ethnicity, (iv) part-time/full-time working and (v) disability; and for (1) each agency and (2) the Department whether the Cabinet Office's four fifths rule for detecting potential adverse impact was applied to the appraisal markings of civil servants in the 1998 report round. [78151]

Mr. Mudie: The 1998 performance markings for the DfEE and for the Employment Service are shown in the following tables. At Senior Civil Service level (former Grade 5 and above) no distinction is made between staff in the DfEE and those in the Employment Service. Because of the small numbers involved at Senior Civil Service level, a breakdown of performance markings by grade, ethnicity, part-time/full-time working and disability would breach individual confidentiality and therefore cannot be provided.

The DfEE and the ES undertake tests that go further than the four fifths rule by proceeding directly to a full statistical analysis of the data to determine which differences observed are statistically significant.

Scientific Equipment Expenditure

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how much money has been allocated to scientific equipment excluding computers in schools in the last five years; [78233]

(2) what plans he has to allocate resources for expenditure on scientific equipment and laboratories in schools over the next two years. [78234]

Ms Estelle Morris: The returns we receive do not disaggregate local education authority expenditure on scientific equipment. Nor are earmarked resources allocated for this purpose in future spending.

School Records

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what right of access parents have to records concerning their child which are held by the school their child is attending; and if he will make a statement. [78537]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Education (School Records) Regulations 1989 give parents the right of access to educational records concerning their child, held by his or her school, within 15 school days of making a written request.

Beacon School Status

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish the criteria on which beacon school status is awarded. [78345]

Ms Estelle Morris: The pilot group of Beacon schools was selected from those schools named in HMCI's annual report for 1996–97 as "best performing". Criteria for the selection of 125 new Beacon schools from September 1999 have been developed to enable a wider group of schools to apply this year. Full details of the criteria have been placed in the Library and are available on request or via the departmental internet site.

Class Sizes

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by local education authority the (i) amounts bid for and (ii) grants made by his Department for (a) 1998–99 and (b) 1999–2000 for revenue expenditure to meet his class size pledge. [78630]

Ms Estelle Morris: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 23 March 1999, Official Report, column 192.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the bids made by local education authorities for (i) 1998–99 and (ii) 1999–2000 for (a) extra teachers and (b) new classrooms to meet the Government's class size pledge. [78633]

Ms Estelle Morris: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave on 10 February 1999, Official Report, column 271; 2 March 1999, Official Report, column 613; and 23 March 1999, Official Report, column 192.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by local education authority his estimate of the impact of class size reduction grants made by his Department for (i) 1998–99 and (ii) 1999–2000 in terms of extra (a) teachers and (b) classrooms. [78631]

Gifted Pupils

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his Department's definition of a gifted pupil; what criteria schools will use to identify such pupils to qualify for support under the Excellence in Cities Initiative; if all schools will be entitled to resources attached to the scheme; and if schools will be expected to bid for the resources. [78715]

Ms Estelle Morris: The measures for gifted and talented pupils in "Excellence in Cities" are for the most able 5–10 per cent. of pupils in every secondary school within the specified areas, including those with particular talents such as music and sport. Schools will identify these pupils through a combination of measures, including test scores and teacher assessments, in accordance with best practice. Pupils at every secondary school within the specified areas will benefit from the initiative. The funding mechanisms for these measures will be discussed with LEAs and others.

Departmental Finances

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the total levels of unapplied (a) revenue and (b) capital reserves carried forward by his Department from 1997–98 to 1998–99; and what are the anticipated levels of reserves to be carried forward to 1999–2000. [78706]

Mr. Mudie: Running costs provision of £69,945,000, covering both the Department's headquarters and the Employment Service, was carried forward from 1997–98 into 1998–99, along with £958,000 of non-voted capital provision and £50,817,000 of welfare-to-work expenditure. It is too early to say with any precision what the carry over provision will be from 1998–99 to 1999–2000.

School Categories

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many state primary and secondary schools in England and Wales he estimates to be (a) specialist schools, (b) city technology colleges, (c) education action zones, (d) foundation schools not in any other specific category, (e) aided schools and (f) community schools by 2002. [78708]

Ms Estelle Morris: The numbers of state primary and secondary schools in England by September 2002 in the categories listed is expected to be:

	Primary	Secondary
(a) Specialist schools	0	at least 700 (800 by September 2003)
(b) City technology colleges	0	15
(c) Schools in education action zones	1,000	150
(d) Foundation schools	300	600
(e) Voluntary schools	6,200	500
(f) Community schools	11,500	2,400

Notes:

1. Specialist schools may be foundation, voluntary or community schools and are double counted in this table. Similarly, schools in education action zones are double counted in this table.
2. The table covers England only. There are no plans for specialist schools, city technology colleges or education action zones in Wales.
3. Figures for specialist schools and education action zones are based on current targets.
4. Figures for foundation, voluntary and community schools are broad approximations based on current numbers in current categories, and include middle schools deemed secondary.

Music and Ballet Scheme

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will extend the music and ballet scheme (England) to schools in the Midlands; and if he will make a statement. [78592]

Ms Estelle Morris: We have commissioned a review of the music and ballet scheme in England and are currently considering its interim report. The geographical location of schools and the provision available at regional level are among the factors being taken into account. We expect to receive the final report after Easter and to announce our future plans in the summer.

PRIME MINISTER

Cabinet Committees

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister what progress he has made in establishing a Cabinet Committee on productivity and competitiveness. [77697]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Erdington (Mr. Corbett) on 1 December 1998, Official Report, columns 118–19.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Prime Minister when he will reply to the letter of 7 January from the hon. Member for Falkirk, West about ministerial visits to Falkirk, West. [78495]

The Prime Minister: I replied to the hon. Member's letter on 7 March.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Human Rights Commission

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many applicants for membership of the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission, represented both shades of political opinion in Northern Ireland. [77983]

Mr. Paul Murphy: There are no applicants who declared themselves as representing more than one shade of political opinion. Of the 154 applicants, 23 recorded that they had had a political affiliation in the last ten years. The breakdown is as follows:

	Number
Alliance	6
Communist Party of Ireland	1
Labour	2
Liberal Democrat	1
PUP	1
UDP	1
UUP	3
UK Unionist	1

Peace Process

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the progress of the peace process. [76682]

Marjorie Mowlam: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Falkirk, East (Mr. Connarty) on 24 March 1999, Official Report, columns 379–82.

TREASURY

Co-operatives

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to encourage the development of co-operatives. [77062]

Ms Hewitt: The Treasury consulted on proposals to update industrial and provident societies legislation last year, to prepare the way for a Bill when an opportunity arises.

Earnings

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of people in work who will have earnings above the lower earnings limit and below the threshold for paying national insurance contributions, in each year till 2001–2002. [76660]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 15 March 1999]: I have been asked to reply.

The Earnings Threshold for employees' primary Class 1 contributions will not be introduced until April 2000.

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in work have earnings below the lower earnings limit for National Insurance; and if he will provide (a) figures on the same basis for each of the last 10 years and (b) estimates of the figures for the next three years. [76661]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 15 March 1999]: I have been asked to reply. The information is in the table.

Estimated average weekly number of employees in Great Britain with earnings above the lower earnings limit for National Insurance Contributions in each year in the period from 1988–89 to 2001–02. The figures do not take account of the national minimum wage, which will be introduced on 1 April 1999

Census Returns

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action has been taken to reduce the storage and maintenance costs for the United Kingdom 1841 to 1991 decennial census returns since Sir Peter Levine reported on them in 1997; and if any of the returns has been identified for early destruction. [78268]

Mr. Hoon: I have been asked by the Chancellor of the Exchequer to reply to this question.

Decennial census returns, whether held by the Public Record Office or the Office for National Statistics, are stored and maintained in the most cost effective manner possible while respecting their safe keeping and preservation and the occasional need for access to those which are open. No additional action has been taken to reduce costs since 1997.

No returns have been identified for early destruction.

HEALTH

Viagra

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish the finalised Department of Health guidelines on the use of Viagra. [78591]

Mr. Denham: Following the close of the consultation on 25 March, we will consider the many responses received (approximately 800), before coming to a final decision on the availability of Viagra and other drug treatments for impotence on the National Health Service. An announcement will be made as soon as possible.

Human Vaccines

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) on which date it was decided to discontinue use of those human vaccines which in their early stage of manufacture had used bovine material prohibited for use in human food; [78595]

(2) what was the last date on which human vaccines, where bovine material prohibited for use in human food was used in the early stage of manufacture, were used on humans; [78594]

(3) how those human vaccines, which in their early stage of manufacture used bovine material prohibited for use in human food, were disposed of. [78596]

Ms Jowell: No vaccine has been disposed of or discontinued because of use in the early stage of manufacture of bovine material which is prohibited for use in human food. Bovine material prohibited from use in the human food chain is not prohibited from use in the manufacture of medicinal products, including vaccines, but manufacturers are required to apply stringent quality measures to these materials to ensure their quality and safety. These quality measures have been in place since 1989, and require manufacturers to source material from countries with no reported cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy, to consider the potential infectivity of tissues used and to comply with rigorous provisions on processing and quality control.

NHS Expenditure (West Midlands)

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the estimated surplus or deficit of each (a) health authority and (b) hospital and other trust in the West Midlands for the last five years. [78223]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is in the table. Health authorities and family health service authorities merged after 1995–96, so health authority figures thereafter are not directly comparable.

NHS Trusts

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library the forecast surpluses and deficits for NHS trusts in 1998–99 quarter 3. [78521]

Mr. Denham: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Violence against Women

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the planned Government paper on violence against women will address (a) rape and sexual assault, (b) the problems faced by adult survivors of child sexual abuse, (c) sexual harassment, (d) female genital mutilation, (e) violence and abuse of girls, (f) the law as it relates to those who wish to claim asylum on the ground of gender violence, (g) the law on homicide as it relates to victims of domestic violence who kill abusive partners and (h) funding for (i) rape crises centres, (ii) refuges and (iii) other services for women and girls who have suffered violence or abuse. [78486]

Ms Jowell: The Government's paper will highlight practical examples, from different organisations, agencies and local authorities, of how violence against women is being successfully tackled across the country. These good practice models will be supported by practical measures which are being developed across Government.

The publication will be based on the prevention of violence against women wherever possible and the provision of protection, services and justice for women where violence has occurred. Amongst other issues, it will address rape and sexual assault, domestic violence, sexual harassment, female genital mutilation, and funding for rape crisis centres, refuges and other support services for women and girls who have suffered violence or abuse.

Medicines Control Agency

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the revised timetable for the consideration of responses to proposals contained in the Medicines Control Agency Consultation Document MLX249, and on the timetable for legislative action arising from those proposals. [78560]

Ms Jowell: The Medicines Control Agency is presently considering the responses to the proposals with a view to making recommendations to Ministers. In the light of those recommendations, we will consider whether or what legislation should be put before Parliament. As we have previously said, we are not tied to the April 1999 date suggested in the proposals.

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the companies to which the Medicines Control Agency has written in the last 12 months indicating that it is considering classifying as a medicine, products which that company currently markets as a food, indicating in each case the ingredients concerned and the (a) scientific and (b) legal basis for the action. [78565]

Ms Jowell: No. The Medicines Control Agency has considered the classification of over 900 products in the last twelve months and the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated cost of providing scientific evidence to support an application for a product licence for the Medicines Control Agency; and what is the average time taken by the Agency to consider such applications. [78564]

Ms Jowell: The cost of providing scientific evidence to support an application for a product licence is met by the applicant and the Government have made no estimate of the average cost of application. The average time taken to consider such applications varies according to the type of application. These are detailed in the Medicines Control Agency's Annual Report, copies of which are available in the Library. The mean time for the assessment of new active substances in 1997–98 was 44 days.

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) herbal products and (b) blends of herbs with vitamins that are sold as foods, the Medicines Control Agency is considering for assessment as medicines, indicating the ingredients concerned in each case. [78566]

Ms Jowell: The Medicines Control Agency is not considering for assessment as medicines any herbal products or blends of herbs with vitamins legitimately sold as foods.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter of 10 February regarding a constituent and to his letter of 24 February regarding a constitutent (ref. POH(2)5608/20). [78488]

Mr. Denham: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State replied to my hon. Friend's letter of 24 February on 23 March. I replied to my hon. Friend's letter of 10 February on 24 March.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress in implementing the changes at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate offices in Croydon. [77834]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison) on 24 March 1999, Official Report, column 227.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set up an Immigration and Nationality Directorate office in Cardiff. [78230]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate has an office in Cardiff operated by 13 staff from the Immigration Service Ports Directorate. They have responsibility for processing arriving passengers and immigration law enforcement work. There are no current plans for additional offices.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the companies who applied for the contract for the computerisation of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate; and if he will make a statement. [78632]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Seven companies responded to the notice advertising the competition. They were Amdahl UK, Andersen Consulting, Computer Science (CSC), EDS, IBM UK, Siemens Business Services and Unisys. The National Audit Office report on the Casework Programme, published on 24 March, concluded that the Immigration and Nationality Directorate managed the procurement in a business-like way.

Road Traffic Accidents (Horseriders)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will revise police recording methods so that statistics on road traffic accidents involving horseriders and horses are separately collated; and if he will make a statement. [78224]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have been asked to reply.

Following a review of data requirements in 1997–98, it was agreed that details of horseriders would be separately identified in the information which is recorded by the police on road injury accidents from 1999. Unridden horses and horse drawn vehicles will not be separately identified.

Corporate Manslaughter

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to seek to introduce a new crime of corporate manslaughter. [78238]

Mr. Boateng: An inter-departmental working group of officials, which includes a member of the Law Commission, is currently considering the recommendations made in the Law Commission's report no. 237, "Legislating the Criminal Code: Involuntary Manslaughter", which includes the creation of a new offence of corporate manslaughter.

Once we have the group's conclusions we will consider how to take forward the recommendation on corporate manslaughter.

Convention on Mutual Legal Assistance

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the working group operating under the European Union Justice and Home Affairs Council to finalise the draft Convention on Mutual Legal Assistance containing proposals for cooperation on the interception of telecommunications. [78392]

Mr. Straw: The German Presidency hopes to conclude the draft Convention at the Justice and Home Affairs Council on 27–28 May 1999.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [79154]

Mr. Straw: We looked afresh at the scheme as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review. The review recommended no changes to the basic structure of the scheme. In the financial settlement following the review, more money was made available for the scheme, with the aim of ensuring that the number of cases settled equalled or exceeded the number of new applications received so that the number of cases outstanding remained broadly constant or fell. We want to see the resources now available are used as effectively as possible for the benefit of victims and taxpayers alike.

We are accordingly undertaking a public consultation exercise inviting views on whether and, if so, how the scheme might be refined or improved within the parameters of the present tariff-based arrangements and the financial provision set for the next three years. A consultation document entitled, "Compensation for Victims of Violent Crime—Possible Changes to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme", is accordingly being sent to a wide range of practitioners, interested organisations and the media. The document will be made available to other inquirers on request. Copies have been placed in the Library.

The consultation document sets out the background to, and rationale for, the scheme. It summarises historical details of applications received and awards paid, and sets out performance plans for the coming three-year financial cycle. It offers suggestions on how the tariff or injuries might be changed to improve internal consistency and to make it more comprehensive, and summarises a number of other suggestions put forward at various times on what other changes might be made. It also identifies ways in which scheme resources could be released to pay for changes considered desirable if the cost of those changes exceeded the provision available.

The consultation document invites comment by mid-June. After that, we will analyse carefully the responses received and consider how best to take matters forward.

In the interim, I have today laid before Parliament a draft of alterations to the scheme, seeking to add additional injury descriptions to the tariff of awards. This is without prejudice to the consultation exercise. The purpose is the limited one of enabling the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority to settle outstanding claims from applicants whose injuries are not currently listed in the tariff but which are considered sufficiently serious to qualify for at least the minimum award of £1,000. The proposed changes require approval by the affirmative resolution procedure before they can take effect.

Private Security Industry

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to announce proposals on regulation of the private security industry. [79155]

Mr. Boateng: I intend to publish a White Paper containing the Government's proposals for a framework for comprehensive regulation of the private security industry tomorrow. Copies will be placed in the Library.

Interception of Communications

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many residents of Altrincham and Sale, West have been subject to approved (a) interception of mail and (b) telephone tapping since 1 May 1997. [78524]

Mr. Straw: In accordance with long-established policy and consistently with the statutory provisions of the Interception of Communications Act 1985, it is not the practice of Government to confirm or deny, either that a warrant of interception has been issued, or that interception has taken place in any particular case. This policy, by extension, is applied to revealing figures for specific areas of the country, as this may assist the people who, because they represent a threat to national security or because they are suspected of involvement in very serious crime, are subject to interception measures.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend the Interception of Communications Act 1985 to make the monitoring of internal telephone calls in the workplace an offence if done without the employee's consent. [78493]

Mr. Straw: During the Criminal Justice (Terrorism and Conspiracy) Bill debate in this House on 2 September 1998, Official Report, column 749, I announced that I had put in hand a comprehensive review of the interception regime, and that a consultation document on this would be published in due course. The consultation document will address the issue of interception on private telephone networks which was the subject of a judgment of the European Court of Human Rights in the case of Halford v United Kingdom. Legislation will be introduced at the earliest available opportunity. In the meantime, the Government will shortly issue guidance, explaining to operators of non-public networks, the steps that they should take in order to give effect to the judgment and to ensure, as far as possible, that such a breach does not recur. I shall place a copy of these guidelines in the Library.

CCTV Surveillance

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the possible registration of CCTV surveillance systems with the police; and if he will make a statement. [78489]

Mr. Boateng: We have no plans to require public space Closed Circuit Television (CCTV) systems to be registered with the police.

The Data Protection Act 1998 will provide a framework for the statutory regulation of public space CCTV systems. Controllers of such systems will have to notify details of their processing to the Data Protection Commissioner and comply with a set of enforceable principles of good information handling practice, including the need for personal data to be processed fairly and lawfully.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensions

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the cost would have been of increasing basic pension in line with earnings since 1 May 1997; what the value of such an increase would have been to a single pensioner; what the actual increase in basic pension has been since 1 May 1997, and what the cost has been; and what the cost of the winter payments to pensioners have been in each year since 1 May 1997. [76658]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 15 March 1999]: The information is in the tables.

Estimated cost (net of means-tested benefits) of uprating basic state pension by prices from April 1997 level

£ million

	Excluding linked benefits	Including linked benefits
1998–99	770	920

	Cost
1997–98	200
1998–99	200

Notes:

1. Table 1 shows the estimated cost of uprating the basic State pension by prices compared with a situation where no uprating takes place after April 1997. Table 2 shows the extra cost, over and above uprating by prices of uprating by earnings from April 1998 onwards.
2. Estimates of total costs in first two tables are rounded to nearest £10 million and are cash figures.
3. Contributory benefit effects have been provided by the Government Actuary's Department
4. Means-tested benefit offsets were estimated using the 1995–96 and 1996–97 Family Resources Survey and the May 1997 Income Support Quarterly Statistical Inquiry.

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners in Hammersmith and Fulham currently have incomes above the minimum income guarantee but below the income tax threshold. [77836]

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners in Hendon are above the level of the minimum income guarantee and below the income tax threshold. [77576]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is not available.

Benefits (Hendon)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people in Hendon are in receipt of (a) disability living allowance and (b) incapacity benefit; [77573]

(2) how many people aged over 50 years in Hendon are in receipt of incapacity benefit; [77574]

(3) how many people aged over 50 years in Hendon are in receipt of jobseeker's allowance. [77575]

Mr. Bayley: The administration of Social Security benefits is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, Mr. Peter Mathison. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Andrew Dismore, dated 25 March 1999:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking, how many people in Hendon are in receipt of, (a) Disability Living Allowance, (b) Incapacity Benefit, and how many people aged over 50 years in Hendon are in receipt of Incapacity Benefit and Jobseeker's Allowance.

The information that is available is in the attached table. I am afraid it is not all in the format requested. This is because normally the Benefits Agency (BA) collates statistics by BA District. These Districts do not necessarily correspond with Local Authority boundaries or Parliamentary constituencies. The BA Edgware District is one such District with offices at Barnet Hill, Hendon, and Edgware. The information about Incapacity Benefit is for this District. The information for Jobseeker's Allowance closely reflect the 1991 wards of Burnt Oaks, Colindale, Edgware, Hale, Hendon, Mill Hill, and West Hendon. The figures for Disability Living Allowance are for the postal area of the Parliamentary Constituency of Hendon.

I hope you find this helpful.

Recipients of Jobseeker's Allowance, Incapacity Benefit, and Disability Living Allowance for Hendon and the surrounding area

Benefit	No. all ages	No. over 50 years of age
Jobseeker's Allowance	—	433
Incapacity Benefit	5,740	3,320
Disability Living Allowance	2,337	—

Notes:

1. Figures for Jobseeker's Allowance are as at 14 January 1999 and include credits only claims (National Insurance Contributions), and reflect the 1991 wards of Burnt Oaks, Colindale, Edgware, Hale, Hendon, Mill Hill, and West Hendon.[1]
2. Figures for Incapacity Benefit are as at 31 May 1998 and are from a 5 per cent. sample that excludes a small number or clerical cases, and are for the BA Edgware District which includes the BA offices at Barnet Hill, Hendon, and Edgware.[2]
3. Figures for Disability Living Allowance are as at 31 May 1998 and are from a 100 per cent. count, and are for the postal district of the Parliamentary Constituency of Hendon.[2]
4. Figures are provisional and subject to change.

Benefits Agency/POCL System

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the projected savings to public funds of (a) the piloting of and (b) each of the first five years of the operation of the Benefits Agency/POCL system. [78314]

Angela Eagle: It is estimated that, on current plans, the trial of the Payment Card will result in savings of £17 million during the period of the trial. A further £64 million will be saved by the Order Book Control Service over the same period.

The estimated savings in each of the first five tax years following national roll-out of the systems

£ million

	Savings
2000–01	188
2001–02	189
2002–03	189
2003–04	189
2004–05	189

Note:

Includes savings from other measures including Order Book Control Service that are gradually superseded by the Payment Card during national roll-out.

Benefit Claimants (Bank Accounts)

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the percentage of benefit (i) claimants and (ii) recipients of state pensions who have neither a bank account nor a National Savings Account. [78231]

Mr. Timms: Estimates of total number of benefit claimants who have neither a bank account nor a National Savings Account vary. The various sources of information available suggest the proportion to be in the region of 10–20 per cent.

The information available suggests that the proportion of recipients of state pensions who have neither a bank account nor a National Savings Account is in the region of 5 per cent.

Benefit Integrity Project

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the final out-turn figure for the Benefit Integrity Project in terms of net expenditure; and if he will estimate the amounts of (a) under and (b) over payments identified. [78324]

Mr. Bayley: Administrative costs for the year 1997–98 were £8.267 million. Current estimates of the costs for the year 1998–99 are £12.6 million. For the latest estimate of net programme savings, I refer my hon. Friend to my oral answer to the hon. Member for Winchester (Mr. Oaten) on 8 March 1999, Official Report, columns 16–17. A breakdown of this estimate into underpayments and overpayments is not currently available, although underlying information on the amount of weekly Disability Living Allowance that groups of claimants on different rates of benefit have either gained or lost is provided in the monthly statistical summaries held in the Library.

Final estimates for administrative and programme costs and savings associated with the Benefit Integrity Project will be calculated after the Project ends on 31 March 1999 and will be published in due course.

Pregnant and Lactating Mothers (Benefits)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the number of (a) pregnant and (b) lactating mothers receiving (i) income support and (ii) family credit. [78278]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows:

The number of pregnant women receiving milk tokens in receipt of Income Support was 45,000 as at August 1998. At the same date 570,000 recipients of Income Support received milk tokens for children aged five years or less.

No information is available in respect of Family Credit.

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. Figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample of all Income Support claimants and are subject to a degree of sampling error.
3. The figures cover those women who are provided with milk tokens during pregnancy up to the birth of the child and those claimants who are provided with milk tokens for children up to the age of five.

Dependent Children (Benefits)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answers of 3 February 1999, Official Report, columns 674–76, on income support and family credit, if he will publish further figures showing how many (a) two-parent and (b) one-parent families have dependent children aged (i) under 12 months, (ii) one to two years, (iii) three to four years, (iv) five to 10 years, (v) 11 to 15 years and (vi) 16 to 18 years; and if these figures and those in his earlier answers relate to the whole of the United Kingdom. [78332]

Angela Eagle: The information for my previous answer relates to Great Britain only.

The additional information requested is not currently available. Once the estimates have been made, I will write to the hon. Member with a full reply.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many successful appeals there have been against a refusal of incapacity benefit for the years 1996 to date. [78281]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the table.

	Appeals heard and decided	Appeals decided in appellant's favour	(Percentage of appeals heard and decided)	Lapsed on review/superseded
Incapacity benefit: all work test
1996	38,474	18,026	(47)	269
1997	51,896	22,453	(43)	1,742
1998	48,031	19,361	(40)	2,533
Incapacity benefit other than all work test
1996	3,120	1,035	(33)	49
1997	4,682	1,299	(28)	833
1998	5,302	1,343	(25)	1,347

Note:

Lapsed on review and superseded includes cases that could have been due to a re-instatement of benefit, but can include other causes.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter of 10 February (ref. 2/3644/41) regarding a constituent. [78487]

Mr. Timms: A reply was sent on 23 March 1999.

Basis Southern Command

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many arrests have been made in January by Benefits Agency Security Investigation Service Southern Command; [74345]

(2) what is the current budget for Benefits Agency Security Investigation Service; and of this, what proportion is allocated to the (a) Northern and (b) Southern Commands; [74347]

(3) how many arrests made by BASIS Southern Command have led to (a) prosecutions and (b) successful convictions since its establishment. [74346]

Mr. Timms [pursuant to his reply, 3 March 1999, c. 886–87]: Questions on Benefits Agency operational matters are the responsibility of the Chief Executive, Peter Mathison, and I have asked him to send a further letter to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Iain Duncan Smith, dated 25 March 1999:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking how many arrests have been made in January by BASIS Southern Command; what is the budget for BASIS; and of this, what proportion is allocated to Northern and Southern Commands respectively; how many arrests made by BASIS Southern Command have led to a) prosecutions and b) successful convictions since its establishment.

During January 1999 the BASIS Southern Command made twenty-five arrests.

The budget for BASIS is managed centrally and not split into two commands. It covers not only the Investigation Staff but also Support Staff and Goods and Services. The budget for this financial year is £8.2m of which £6.34m has been spent to date.

BASIS was formed in April 1998. Since that date the police have made 375 arrests based on information supplied by BASIS Southern Command. One hundred and forty-eight of these have been submitted for prosecution of which ninety-four have to date been successful.

I hope that this is helpful.

SCOTLAND

Agrimonetary Compensation

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much agrimonetary compensation was paid in Scotland in each year since 1992 in (a) cash terms and (b) 1998–99 prices. [77751]

Mr. Macdonald: No agrimonetary compensation was paid by the UK Government until 1997–98. £23.36 million (£23.94 million at 1998–99 prices) was paid in 1997–98.

Tuition Fees

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the distribution of the funds raised from the £1,000 tuition fee paid by university students. [77740]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested is not available. Whether a contribution from a student or some or all of the fee paid on their behalf by the Student Awards Agency for Scotland, tuition fees are paid direct to institutions. Institutions distribute the funds as they see fit.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Bankruptcy

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many farmers were made bankrupt in each year since 1992. [77797]

Mr. Macdonald: Information on bankruptcies by occupation is not available. The figures in the table come from the Office of the Accountant in Bankruptcy and shows the number of sequestrations of people employed in the agriculture and horticulture industries in Scotland in each year since 1992. The figures cover employees as well as the self employed, and so many include people other than farmers. From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Number of sequestrations in the agriculture and horticulture industries in Scotland, 1992–1998

Year	Number of sequestrations
1992	35
1993	19
1994	12
1995	13
1996	14
1997	7
1998	11

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many individuals were made bankrupt in Scotland in each year since 1992. [77767]

Mr. McLeish: The number of sequestrations in Scotland under the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985 between 1991–92 and 1997–98 is as follows:

Year	Number of sequestrations
1991–92	8,587
1992–93	11,970
1993–94	4,022
1994–95	2,340
1995–96	2,380
1996–97	2,534
1997–98	2,701

Land Reform

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the costs of the introduction of his land reform proposals. [77750]

Mr. Macdonald: I am satisfied that the overall package of proposals for land reform which we launched on 5 January will benefit the people of Scotland.

The cost of introducing our land reform recommendations will depend on the result of further technical development of the proposals, which is ongoing.

From 1 July 1999 this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Road Projects

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the (a) road building and (b) motorway and trunk road improvement proposals and their total cost for each year from 1997 to 2001. [77764]

Mr. Macdonald: Local roads are the responsibility of the local authorities. Details of schemes and expenditure are not held centrally. Total net expenditure for the motorway and trunk road programme in Scotland was £203 million in 1996–97 and £170 million in 1997–98. The estimated expenditure for 1998–99 is £155 million. Planned net expenditure for 1999–2000 and 2000–01 is £163 million and £176 million respectively. Major new schemes completed or due to be completed between 1 January 1997 and 31 December 2001 are:

M8/M9 Newbridge Interchange, October 1997;

A1 Oswald Dean to East of Innerwick, January 1998;

A92 Halbeath Interchange, March 1998;

A96 Blackburn to Kintore, September 1998;

A830 Polnish to Loch Nan Uamh, October 1998;

A75 The Glen Improvement, May/June 1999;

A74(M) DBFO, Spring 1999;

A828 Creagan Bridge, Summer 1999;

A86 Rubha Na Magach to Aberarder, Summer 1999;

A1 Spott to Oswald Dean, Winter 1999; and,

A7 Hawick Relief Road, Winter 2000–01.

From 1 July 1999 this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many road (a) building and (b) improvement projects were cancelled in 1997. [77763]

Mr. Macdonald: No trunk road schemes were cancelled by my right hon. Friend in 1997. On taking office, we announced a review of the Scottish trunk roads programme and imposed a moratorium on major schemes in the inherited programme with the exception of the A828 (Creagan Bridge) and the A75 (The Glen). Minor schemes and other items of trunk road expenditure were unaffected by the review.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Full-time Education

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what percentage of young people aged 15 to 25 years were in full-time education in each year since 1992. [77742]

Mrs. Liddell: The number of young people aged greater than or equal to 15 but under 25[1] in full-time education[2] in Scotland from 1991–92 until 1996–97 (the last academic year for which full figures are available) was as follows:

Academic year	Number (000s)	Percentage[3]
1991–92	226.9	31
1992–93	236.0	33
1993–94	248.7	36
1994–95	258.7	38
1995–96	265.9	40
1996–97	279.3	43

[1] Age as at 31 December of the relevant academic year. Information on the numbers of people aged 25 is not readily available.

[2] Excludes students on non-vocational courses in further education colleges and those on non-credit bearing courses at higher education institutions.

[3] As a percentage of an estimated population of people aged greater than or equal to 15 but under 25 as at 31 December. Derived from mid-year population estimates provided by the General Register Office for Scotland.

From 1 July 1999 this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Prescription Charges

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from the medical profession on exempt categories relating to prescription charges in Scotland. [77596]

Mr. Galbraith: Since 1 April 1998, six representations have been received from the medical profession in Scotland on exempt categories of prescription charges. All the representations related to exemption from charges on medical grounds.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the next prescription charge review in Scotland will include a review of exempt categories. [77597]

Mr. Galbraith: There are no plans at present to conduct a review of prescription charge exempt categories in Scotland.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will next review prescription charges in Scotland. [77598]

Mr. Galbraith: There are no plans at present to review prescription charges in Scotland.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Further and Higher Education

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what percentage of young people aged 15 to 25 years attended (a) a further and (b) a higher education course in each year since 1992. [77741]

Mrs. Liddell: The number of young people aged greater than or equal to 15 but under 25[1] attending a further education course or a higher education course in Scotland[2] from 1991–92 until 1996–97 (the academic year for which full figures are available) was as follows:

Academic year	Further education Number (thousand)	Further education Percentage[3]	Higher education Number (thousand)	Higher education Percentage[3]
1991–92	75.8	10	102.7	14
1992–93	66.4	9	112.4	16
1993–94	62.1	9	118.4	17
1994–95	55.5	8	123.9	18
1995–96	70.4	11	124.9	19
1996–97	79.1	12	133.2	20

[2] Excludes students on non-vocational courses in further education colleges and those on non-credit bearing courses at higher education institutions.
[3] As a percentage of an estimated population of people aged greater than or equal to 15 but under 25 at 31 December. Derived from mid-year population estimates provided by the General Register Office for Scotland.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Business Insolvencies and Starts

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many business (a) insolvencies and (b) starts there were in Scotland in each year since 1992. [77768]

Mr. Dewar: The information is as follows.

(a) Statistics on insolvencies are produced by statisticians in the Department of Trade and Industry. The information is shown in the following table:

Year	Individuals Sequestrations	Companies Total	Companies Compulsory liquidations	Companies Creditors' voluntary liquidations
1992	10,845	670	310	360
1993	6,828	551	286	265
1994	2,182	444	242	202
1995	2,188	441	252	189
1996	2,503	441	266	175
1997	2,502	477	254	223
1998	3,016	566	338	228

Note:
Insolvent individuals in Scotland are subject to sequestration under the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985. The Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1993 amending the 1985 Act came into force on 1 April 1993, and will have affected the number of sequestrations in the Scottish courts.

(b) The best official source of information relating to business starts is the VAT registration data. The information requested is shown in the following table:

Business start-ups: enterprises registering for VAT in Scotland

Year	Number
1992	12,665
1993	12,600
1994	11,345
1995	11,195
1996	11,275
1997	12,280

Note:
Pre-1994 figures are not entirely comparable with later figures because they counted VAT units rather than whole enterprises, and also because of an unusually large increase in the threshold for VAT registration in 1993.

Legal Aid

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of people claiming legal aid for each year since 1992. [77830]

Mr. McLeish: The total number of people claiming legal aid from the Scottish Legal Aid Board in each year was as follows:

Year	Number
1992–93	403,749
1993–94	390,914
1994–95	407,375
1995–96	419,186
1996–97	406,741
1997–98	419,172

Applications for legal aid for children, contempt of court and solemn criminal legal aid are made to the court. The numbers of applications refused by the court are not kept centrally but the following shows the number of grants by the courts:

Year	Number
1992–93	15,248
1993–94	15,065
1994–95	14,982
1995–96	14,355
1996–97	14,028
1997–98	14,347

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

New Deal

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the cost of the New Deal in Scotland has been (a) per job created and (b) per person completing the scheme to date. [77827]

Mr. Dewar: The New Deal is a rolling programme and total expenditure so far covers some who have left the programme and some who are still participating. It is too early to assess precisely the cost per job or per person completing the programme to date.

Lottery Funding

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) the recipients, (b) the project and (c) the amount of lottery funding awarded in Scotland since May 1997 for projects costing more than £50,000. [77748]

Mr. Galbraith: Awards totalling £370,424,087 for projects in Scotland costing more than £50,000 have been distributed by the 5 Good Causes since May 1997. However, as the list of awards is rather lengthy, I am placing tables containing the information requested in the House Library.

Gas-Fired Power Stations

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will (a) list the consents he has refused for gas-fired power stations and (b) estimate the proposed investments in each station by those applying for consents. [78012]

Mr. Dewar: I recently announced my decision to refuse consent to PowerGen's application for a new natural gas-fired power station at Gartcosh, North Lanarkshire. My decision followed the recommendation by the Reporter to the public inquiry into the application that consent be refused. I have not refused consent to any other gas-fired power stations.

The level of investment Gartcosh would have involved is a commercial matter for the company.

Departmental Budget

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was his Department's budget for (a) agriculture, (b) the fishing industry and (c) transport and roads in cash terms and at 1998–99 prices for each year between 1995–96 and 1998–99 and what estimate he has made in each case for each year from 1999–2000 to 2001–02. [77330]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The information requested is as follows:

£ million

	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02
1. Cash
Agriculture	514	535	525	486	470	524	557
Fisheries	31	30	39	31	30	29	30
Roads and Transport	319	252	304	312	364	361	367
2. 1998–99 prices
Agriculture	557	562	538	486	459	499	517
Fisheries	34	32	40	31	29	28	28
Roads and Transport	345	265	312	312	355	344	341

Agriculture figures are for spending by my Department only and do not include spending in Scotland under schemes operated, on a UK basis, by the Intervention Board Executive Agency.

By far the main component of Agriculture spending by my Department is in relation to CAP on-farm payments. Support under such measures is determined by the EU and the value of payments in Member States is sensitive to currency movements. Planned Agriculture spending figures for the three years beginning 1999–2000 reflect assumptions at the end of the Comprehensive Spending Review on the likely Sterling value of CAP on-farm payments. The actual level of spending on such schemes will be determined largely by changes flowing from the EU Agenda 2000 discussions. CAP provision is classed as Annually Managed expenditure and future spending needs will be decided on an annual basis.

The figures for Roads and Transport include the external finance limits for Caledonian MacBrayne and Highlands and Islands Airports Ltd., but exclude provision for local authority capital expenditure which since 1996–97 has been included in the single allocation for local authority non-housing capital expenditure. From 1997–98, the Roads and Transport programme includes provision for the Strathclyde Passenger Transport Authority transferred from the Department of Transport to The Scottish Office. From 1998–99, it also includes provision for Bus Fuel Duty Rebate in Scotland.

From 1 July, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Repossessions

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many decrees were granted by Sheriff courts for the repossession of owner-occupied homes for each quarter of 1998. [78216]

Mr. McLeish: Figures in relation to repossession of owner occupied homes have been collected by the courts since a revised system of collecting Civil Judicial Statistics was instituted on 1 January 1994. The figures for decrees granted by the sheriff courts for each quarter of 1998 are as follows:

1st Quarter: 1,158

2nd Quarter: 1,155

3rd Quarter: 1,373

4th Quarter: 1,247.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Special Transitional Grant

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of their special transitional grant was spent by each local authority (a) in the independent sector and (b) on home care in each of the last five years. [77145]

Mr. Galbraith [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The special transitional grant did not apply in Scotland.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

FE Colleges

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will announce the detailed remit of the intended review of the management of further education colleges in Scotland. [78992]

Mrs. Liddell: The new Scottish Further Education Funding Council is being asked by the Government:

> to review the quality of management of Scotland's FE colleges, taking account of recent reports on aspects of management within the sector, and in particular to: > assess the effectiveness of current management of colleges;
> identify what range and mix of management skills, structures, systems and processes would best serve colleges;
> suggest how the management performance of colleges might be measured and monitored;
> make recommendations as to how best management practice can become the norm and how shortcomings can be identified early and addressed; > and to report to Scottish Ministers by end 1999.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Darts

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received of the recognising of darts as a sport by the Sports Council; what action he has taken to have darts so recognised; and if he will make a statement. [77442]

Mr. Banks: I am personally very supportive of Darts and the outstanding achievements by British Darts players over many years. I have received a number of representations about the recognition of Darts, including one recently received from the British Darts Organisation (BDO). The Sports Councils keep their recognition criteria under review and I have assured the BDO that this is something in which I shall continue to keep a close interest. I am doing all I can to keep the issue near the top of the Council's agendas.

Football Clubs

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to introduce a regulator to oversee the activities of professional football clubs in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [77795]

Mr. Banks: I expect the football authorities to address issues relating to the administration of professional football, and I know they are currently reviewing structures and procedures.

The Government have recognised the special role football plays in this country by establishing the Football Task Force to investigate issues of concern to all those involved with the game. The Task Force is currently considering the complex issues associated with the commercial aspects of the game, which may include whether some kind of football regulator is required. I will give careful consideration to any recommendations which the Task Force's forthcoming commercial report may make in this area.

Sports Council (Recognised Sports)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received from organisations which have been refused recognition by the Sports Council; and if he will list the activities involved. [77880]

Mr. Banks: I have received a number of representations from organisations and activities which have not been recognised by the Sports Councils. In the last two years, two activities have been rejected for recognition by the Sports Councils. These were Greyhound Racing and Darts. However, the Sports Councils keep their recognition criteria under review and I am currently doing all I can to keep this issue near the top of the Councils' agendas. I will continue to pursue the recognition issue as a matter of priority.

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the sports recognised by the Sports Council. [77879]

Mr. Banks: The following activities have been recognised:

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport for what reason no external assessment has been made of the plans of his Department for millennium compliance. [78465]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 24 March 1999]: The DCMS Year 2000 compliance programme has been audited by the Department's Internal Audit team as part of its oversight duties for the Department's processes and procedures. Internal Audit revisit the compliance work on a regular basis and review the regular returns which the Department provides to the centre. Internal Audit provides a robust and independent review of the Department's compliance programme and I do not feel that, in this case, an external assessment would add value to the process. It would also be costly.

Information on the Department's compliance programme is provided to the centre on a regular basis and is then placed in the public domain, most recently as of the publication of departmental returns and tables summarising department's progress on 16 March.

WALES

Eye Checks

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of (a) the annual cost of abolishing all charges for eye checks and (b) the annual number of people who currently make some payment for such checks. [78530]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: 477,000 NHS sight tests were undertaken in 1997–98 at a cost to the NHS of some £6.7 million.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Dental Checks

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of (a) the annual cost of abolishing all charges for dental checks and (b) the annual number of people who currently make some payment for such checks. [78529]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: All children are entitled to free dental examinations and in Wales around 30 per cent. of adults are either entitled to free NHS dental care or receive partial help with its cost.

In 1997–98, 1.1million NHS dental examinations were carried out for adults in Wales. On the assumption that 70 per cent. of those were for patients who had to pay full NHS charges, around 770,000 of those examinations would have contributed some £3.5m in NHS patient charges.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Legal Services

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list (a) the London barristers' chambers and (b) the London solicitors' firms that have performed services for his Department (i) since 1 May 1997 and (ii) in the equivalent period preceding that date, indicating the remuneration paid in each particular case. [70039]

Mr. Hain [pursuant to the reply, 23 February 1999, c. 255]: I regret that there were a number of inaccuracies in the reply.

The following barristers' chambers have also been instructed directly by the Welsh Office or via Treasury Solicitor's Office:

(i) Atkin Chambers, Gray's Inn,
4–5 Grays Inn Square,
3 Serjeants Inn.

(ii) In the list of barristers' chambers "Monkton Court" should have read "Monckton Chambers".

In addition the statement that no London solicitors firms had been instructed was incorrect. Instructions have been given in both periods to the firms Wilde Sapte, and Bird and Bird.Please accept my apologies for these inaccuracies.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Law Society's Accounts Rules

Mr. Love: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to amend Part II of the Solicitors Act 1974 to include amongst those Law Society rule changes which require his consent, the Law Society's Accounts Rules; and if he will make a statement. [78120]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 24 March 1999]: The Lord Chancellor has no plans to alter the current arrangements for approving changes to the Law Society's Accounts Rules. Such changes are already subject to approval by the Master of the Rolls.

Kent Magistrates' Court Committee

Mr. Marshall-Andrews: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 26 February 1999, Official Report, columns 479–80, on Kent Magistrates' Court Committee, if he will set out the circumstances of the one potential incident; and if he will list (a) the official or officials involved, (b) the nature of the fraud or mismanagement and (c) what advice or recommendations have been made by his Department. [78309]

Mr. Hoon: The potential incident report in respect of the Kent MCC has not yet been resolved. The Magistrates' Courts Committee and the Kent County Council are taking further legal advice. In the circumstances, it would not be appropriate to release details at this stage.

Serious Fraud Office

Mr. Marshall-Andrews: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what was the cost to the Legal Aid Budget of cases brought by the Serious Fraud Office in each year since 1995–96; [78219]

(2) what proportion of the Legal Aid Budget was spent on cases prosecuted by the Serious Fraud Office, broken down into (i) contested cases and (ii) pleas of guilty, in the last year for which figures are available. [78218]

Mr. Hoon: The name of the prosecuting agency is not recorded on the Department's Legal Aid Management Information database. It is not possible therefore to provide the information requested. However, for fraud and fraud related trials of 25 days and over in duration, which will mainly comprise cases brought by the Serious Fraud Office, expenditure in each year was as follows:

Year	Expenditure
1995–96	15,106,215
1996–97	17,297,813
1997–98	20,662,712

This expenditure is in respect of closed cases; that is where the case has been disposed of and all bills determined and will include expenditure incurred in previous years. It will not include interim payments made in respect of cases still current. It is not possible to estimate expenditure on guilty pleas and cases prepared for trial but which did not proceed to trial.

Census

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) United Kingdom and (b) non-United Kingdom organisations have purchased, since 1991, micro-film or other copies of 1891 census enumerators' books for England and Wales, Scotland or Northern Ireland. [78276]

Mr. Hoon: The Public Record Office's records of purchases are not arranged by the categories specified by the hon. Member and, therefore, the information requested by the hon. Member could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what are the total annual storage and maintenance costs for all 1841/51 to 1991 decennial census returns. [78317]

Mr. Hoon: The Public Record Office holds the decennial census records for 1841 to 1911. The total annual storage and maintenance costs for these records are currently estimated at £225,000. The decennial census records for 1921 to 1991 are held by the Office for National Statistics at an estimated annual storage and maintenance cost of £350,000.

Legal Aid Board Administration Account

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the deficit on the Legal Aid Board administration account for (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what is the estimated deficit for 1998–99. [78353]

Mr. Hoon: The Legal Aid Board is entitled to carry forward unspent annual provision for its administration costs held at the end of each financial year. The Board's administration did not exceed the amount which was made available, by way of grant-in-aid and cash carried forward, in 1996–97 or 1997–98, and is not expected to do so in 1998–99.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list (a) under which Sections of the (i) Environmental Protection Act 1990 and (ii) any other Act he has issued regulations concerning conditions to be met by applicants for cultivation of genetically modified crops for (1) research and (2) sale, (b) the (A) dates, (B) numbers, (C) titles of any such regulations and (D) those which require approval by resolution of either House of Parliament and (c) what general exemptions from any part of any such regulations he has given to (x) which persons and (y) bodies and (z) for what reason. [72560]

Mr. Rooker: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment on 22 March 1999, Official Report, column 41.

Public Analysts

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will give for each year since 1989 the number of (a) public analysts and (b) Public Analyst laboratories; [77524]

(2) if all Public Analyst laboratories were accredited by 1 November 1998 under the terms of the Additional Food Control Measures Directive 93/99/EEC; [77516]

(3) what steps he has taken to ensure that local authorities make full use of the facilities provided by public analysts. [77509]

Mr. Rooker: Each local authority must appoint one or more Public Analysts. A list of Public Analysts is not centrally held.

Under the Additional Food Control Measures 93/99, the UK is required to submit to the Commission a list of food control laboratories nominated to carry out analyses and/or examinations of foodstuffs. The list contains those Laboratories who have met the Standards for Official Food Control Laboratories which have been agreed between Government and the United Kingdom Accreditation Service (UKAS). I am not aware of any currently appointed Public Analyst Laboratory not covered by this accreditation.

A copy of the submitted list is available from the Library of the House. Arrangements are also being made to make it publicly available on the Ministry's website and to publish changes to it by that means.

Live Animal Transport

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the adequacy of his powers in relation to animal welfare to prevent livestock vessels from sailing in rough weather conditions; and if he will make a statement. [77946]

Mr. Morley: The provisions of the Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997 (which implements, in Great Britain, Directive 91/628/EEC, as amended) provide extensive protection for animals in transit. In the case of bad weather at sea, a master of a vessel must not, under Article 4, transport animals if, in his judgment, they are likely to be caused injury or unnecessary suffering due to adverse weather or sea conditions likely to be encountered during the voyage. Under Article 18, if a MAFF or Local Authority Inspector considers that animals are being transported or are about to be transported in a way likely to cause injury or unnecessary suffering, he or she may prohibit that transport. MAFF officials have on occasion accompanied livestock when they are transported from Dover in rougher weather conditions, in order to gather information on how the animals travel: these trips have not to date revealed any evidence to indicate that animals' welfare has been adversely affected.

Quarantine Kennels

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice has been given since 1991 by his Department to quarantine kennel owners who submitted plans for expansion and improvement to their facilities. [77950]

Mr. Rooker: All plans for expansion and improvements submitted by quarantine kennel owners have been considered by the Department to ensure that they comply with the standard requirements for the design, construction, operation and management of such premises. Those plans which complied with the requirements have been approved. In cases where the submitted plan has not complied with the standard requirements, this has been explained and the kennel owner invited to submit amended plans.

Freezer Trawlers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many fishing vessel owners have notified his Department that they intend to convert to freezer trawlers. [78330]

Mr. Morley: Fisheries Departments have received notice of the intention to introduce or replace up to six pelagic freezer trawlers under the time limited arrangements announced on 1 December 1998.

Fishing Vessels (Engine Capacity)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many fishing vessels were found to have underdeclared their engine capacity in the last year for which figures are available. [78329]

Mr. Morley: As I explained in the written reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Scarborough and Whitby (Mr. Quinn) on 1 December 1989, Official Report, column 119, checks to ensure that the engine power of fishing vessels is consistent with that registered and licensed are due to commence from 1 January 2000.

Regional Development Funding

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what happens to unspent balances in respect of European Funds for South West Objective 5B at the end of the five year programme. [78374]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 March 1999]: The Government's aim is to ensure that, by the end of 1999, all of the European Structural Funds allocated to the South West Objective 5b programme (and elsewhere) are committed to projects. Funds not committed by the end of 1999 would be lost to the programme. Projects will be monitored closely throughout the year to enable funds to be recycled to approved projects on a reserve list if there is a possibility that on-going projects will not use up their full allocation.

After 1999, project managers will have two years in which to complete projects and claim grant. Provided that this is done on time and that claims fully match commitments, funds should have been spent at the end of the current programme period. Any unspent EU Structural Funds remaining at the end of the programme would be lost to the UK.

New Forest Hounds

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what (a) advice and (b) instructions, Ministers gave to the Forestry Commission before it reached a decision to suspend the licence of the New Forest Hounds. [78475]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 March 1999]: Neither my right hon. Friend the Minister nor I gave the Forestry Commission any advice or instructions before it decided to suspend the New Forest Foxhounds' licence last week. Action was taken under the terms of their licence following a previous written warning. The suspension was carried out after listening to all representations and is a matter for the Forestry Commission to decide. I have already made it clear that the Commission has my full support in the operation of the conditions of licence to hunt. This applies to all Forestry Commission land.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reason no external assessment has been made of the plans of his Department for millennium compliance; and if he will make a statement. [78467]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 24 March 1999]: My Department's millennium programme comprises several parallel projects, co-ordinated by a central programme management team in the IT Directorate. Several projects, and the central team, have employed external consultants to review plans and progress. Currently, external consultants are reviewing MAFF's business continuity planning arrangements (in case some problems still occur, despite all our preparatory activity), and an independent review is being conducted by MAFF's Audit, Consultancy and Management Services division. I am satisfied that these arrangements provide for adequate external and independent review of plans.

Organic Farming Scheme

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total budget allocation for the first year of the Organic Farming Scheme. [78559]

Mr. Nick Brown: Current provision for the Organic Farming Scheme for 1999–2000 is £6.2 million.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the procedure for coping with an excess of demand from farmers applying for grants under the Organic Farming Scheme over supply of available funds. [78558]

Mr. Nick Brown: If demand for aid under the Organic Farming Scheme exceeds financial provision in any year, the Organic Farming Regulations 1999 provide a mechanism for holding over applications until further provision becomes available. We will keep the position under review.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total acreage that will be covered by grants from the Organic Farming Scheme in its first year. [78557]

Mr. Nick Brown: The Scheme has not yet opened. The total acreage covered in the first year of the Organic Farming Scheme will depend on the number of applications and on the type of land covered.

Lindane

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the recent EC proposals on the use of Lindane in agriculture and horticulture. [78527]

Mr. Rooker: The EU has established a programme to review the safety of all pesticides which were authorised (by at least one Member State) for use in agriculture and horticulture on 25 July 1993. Lindane is included in the first round of this programme.

The EU review process begins with an evaluation by a "rapporteur" Member State. This evaluation is subject to peer review by experts from all Member States and consultation with the EU Commission's Scientific Committee on Plants before a decision is put to the Standing Committee on Plant Health and finally adopted by the Commission. In March 1995, Austria was appointed rapporteur for lindane and finally delivered its assessment to the Commission last December. The peer review process has just begun. In the normal course of events, there would not be a decision until well into 2000.

We have carried out a preliminary assessment of the Austrian evaluation and the independent Advisory Committee on Pesticides will consider it at its next meeting. We shall be guided by the Committee's advice.

It is our policy to approve only those pesticides for which it is established scientifically that there is a level of exposure at which no adverse effect occurs and that any exposure arising from the approved use would be well below this level. If this new review indicates that lindane no longer meets this rigorous standard we will take prompt and appropriate action.

GM Organisms

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the advice he has offered supermarkets on the labelling and segregation of genetically modified organisms. [78366]

Mr. Rooker: Supermarkets were informed of the Government's policy that all foods containing GM material should be clearly labelled back in June 1997, when they received copies of the MAFF News Release 147/97 announcing this. Since then, all supermarkets, along with other interested parties, have been kept informed of the emerging legal requirements for the labelling of GM foods and were included in the two consultation exercises on the Food Labelling (Amendment) Regulation 1999 which took place in July 1998 and February 1999. The following MAFF News Releases were issued at key stages in the development of EC and domestic legislation on GM labelling: 211/98 issued on 21 May 1998; 315/98 issued on 29 July 1998; 95/99 issued on 18 March 1999; and 99/99 issued on 19 March 1999. They are also aware of the list of some 60 non-GM suppliers which the Department produced last year (News Release 123/98 issued on 30 March 1998). Copies of all these News Releases are available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent meetings his Department has held with supermarkets to discuss genetically modified organisms. [78365]

Mr. Rooker: During the last year, supermarkets were represented, as indicated, at the following meetings on GM foods:

ACNFP monitoring sub-group—Sainsbury (March 1998)

Parliamentary Secretary (Lords)—Iceland (April 1998)

Officials—Safeway (May 1998)

Officials—Sainsbury (June 1998)

Officials—Tesco (September 1998)

ACNFP monitoring sub-group—Safeway and Sainsbury (December 1998)

Officials—Safeway (March 1999)

Minister of State—Safeway and Tesco (March 1999).

Professor Frank Woods

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the position held by Professor Frank Woods with the Food Advisory Committee. [78562]

Mr. Rooker: Since the Food Advisory Committee (FAC) was formed in 1983, it has been standard practice for the Chairman of the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment to be included in the membership. Under this arrangement, Professor Woods has been a member of the FAC since 1992.

Advisory Group on Vitamins and Minerals

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the Ad Hoc Expert Advisory Group on Vitamins and Minerals will next meet; with what agenda; and when he expects the group to conclude its work. [78563]

Mr. Rooker: The next meeting of the Expert Group on Vitamins and Minerals is scheduled for 7 May 1999. In accordance with normal practice the agenda for the meeting will be published in advance of the meeting once it has been cleared with the Chairman of the Group. The Group is expected to conclude its work around the end of the year 2000.

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who was the first chairman of the Ad Hoc Expert Advisory Group on Vitamins and Minerals; and when and for what reasons the chairman ceased to serve in that capacity. [78568]

Mr. Rooker: Professor Frank Woods was the first Chairman of the Expert Group. He decided in July 1998 to stand down for personal reasons.

Vitamin B6

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reason the forthcoming report of the Ad Hoc Expert Advisory Group in relation to the safety of vitamin B6 and other supplements is to be considered by the Food Advisory Committee; and if he will make a statement on the role of Professor Frank Woods in the process. [78561]

Mr. Rooker: The Expert Group on Vitamins and Minerals is primarily concerned with risk assessment and will be considering the scientific data on the safety of vitamins and minerals. Its membership reflects this role. The Food Advisory Committee (FAC) is a broader-based Committee which, among other things, is concerned with risk management. It will therefore take account of factors outside the remit of the Expert Group when considering what, if any, recommendations should be made to the Government in the light of the Expert Group's report. It will be the role of all the FAC members collectively to consider the report from the Expert Group and to offer advice to Ministers on whatever action the Committee considers ought to be taken in the light of the Expert Group's conclusions. Professor Woods is a member of FAC in his capacity as chairman of the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment.

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who was the Chairman of the Committee on Toxicity at the time of its most recent assessment of the safety of vitamin B6. [78569]

Mr. Rooker: The Chairman of the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment at the time of its most recent assessment of the safety of Vitamin B6 was Professor Frank Woods.

Commercial Whaling

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the meeting of commissioners to the International Whaling Commission of 5 February; and what discussion took place on the resumption of commercial whaling in relation to (a) species of whale and (b) countries eligible to resume whaling. [78485]

Mr. Morley: The meeting to which the hon. Member refers was an informal meeting attended by a number of countries generally opposed to whaling; its principal purpose was to discuss how the countries concerned could best co-operate at the forthcoming International Whaling Commission annual meeting in Grenada in May. There was some discussion of the proposals put forward by Ireland for a complete and permanent ban on all high seas whaling, including scientific whaling, with some limited whaling permitted in individual country's coastal waters; it was generally agreed that these were unlikely to make any progress unless Japan was ready to consider ending its scientific whaling programme. The UK made it clear that, while we supported efforts to improve whale conservation, we continued to have serious reservations about some aspects of the Irish proposals, in particular those concerning coastal whaling.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisons (Health Care)

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the report of the Joint Prison Service and the NHS Executive Working Group on the future organisation of prison health care will be published. [79406]

Mr. Straw: The Government are intending to make an announcement and publish the Report on Monday 29 March 1999.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Serious Fraud Office

Mr. Marshall-Andrews: To ask the Attorney-General how many cases were presented by the Serious Fraud Office as (a) contested cases and (b) pleas of guilty in (i) 1996–97, (ii) 1997–98 and (iii) 1998–99. [78217]

The Attorney-General: The statistics requested by the hon. and learned Gentleman are set out in the table.

CABINET OFFICE

Crown Copyright

Mr. Hope: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when he expects to set out the Government's proposals on the future management of Crown Copyright. [79330]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: A Government White Paper, "The Future Management of Crown Copyright", has been published today (Cm 4300). This document provides a blueprint which sets out the underlying principles which will be at the heart of future licensing of official material. This marks the culmination of a wide ranging consultation exercise initiated by the Government's Green Paper, "Crown Copyright in the Information Age" (Cm 3819), which was published in January 1998.

The challenge for the Government has been to establish a licensing regime for official material which is responsive to the needs of the citizen and the information industry. It is also important that we embrace the opportunities offered by new technology to encourage access to Government information as we approach the 21st Century. Our aim, therefore, has been to deliver a licensing policy which preserves the integrity and authority of official information, yet at the same time is also flexible, streamlined and transparent for users.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will list those regulatory impact assessments published during the latest six month period. [79331]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The Government are committed to ensuring that regulations are necessary, give effective protection, balance cost and risk, are fair and command public confidence. In accordance with this, we require Departments to produce and publish RIAs for all regulatory proposals likely to have an impact on business.

I have presented to Parliament today a Command Paper listing 40 RIAs published between 1 July and 31 December 1998. Also listed are 38 Compliance Cost Assessments. Copies of those listed have been placed in the House Libraries. Please note that this Command Paper entitled "Regulatory Impact Appraisals" has replaced the previous series entitled "Compliance Cost Assessments". This is the tenth such Command Paper.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Jerome Charles

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will place in the Library a transcript of the reasons given in court by His Honour Judge Catlin to explain his decision to give bail to defendant Jerome Charles in Aylesbury Crown Court on 26 June 1998. [78428]

Mr. Hoon: A copy of the transcript will be placed in the Library within the next three weeks.

Census Returns

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list all Public Records Act 1958 instruments that have prescribed periods of extended closure of decennial census returns for England and Wales; and if he will list the class numbers, census years and periods mentioned in the schedules. [78445]

Mr. Hoon: Only Lord Chancellor's Instrument (Access to Public Records) No. 12, 1966, has prescribed a period of extended closure of decennial census returns for England and Wales. The schedule does not mention class numbers and census years; it prescribes a period of 100 years.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Montserrat

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when she will introduce a return air fare scheme for Montserratian evacuees. [79483]

Mr. Foulkes: Conditions on the island now allow for the introduction of a scheme to fulfil the promise I made in September 1997 that the Department for International Development (DFID) would pay the return air fares of those Montserratians who had relocated to the UK or within the Caribbean because of the volcanic activity, who were in need and wished to return to Montserrat, when conditions allowed. The latest volcanic assessment concludes that there has been no resumption of magmatic eruption since March 1998 and that risk levels of a major volcanic eruption are now similar to those in other Caribbean volcanic islands. Projects are underway to encourage small enterprise development and to provide adequate housing for those people who relocated from the south of the island and are now living in a shelter or unsuitable shared accommodation in the north.

Eligible applicants will be provided with a one-way non-transferable economy class ticket from their current place of residence to Montserrat, plus an additional air freight allowance, travel costs to the airport of embarkation in the UK and overnight subsistence costs in Antigua, where required.

In order to qualify for the scheme, applicants will need to:

(a) demonstrate that they were resident on the island on 18 July 1995;

(b) provide an address on the island where they will be able to live upon their return;

(c) show that they have been relocated for a period of at least six months; and

(d) provide written certification that they do not possess savings equivalent to more than EC$44,000 (approximately £10,000).

The scheme will operate for an initial period of 2 years and be administered by the DFID office in Antigua and by the Montserrat Community Support Trust (MCST) in the UK. Applicants in the Caribbean will be invited to register with the DFID office in Antigua or the British Representative in the island where they are living after 1 May whilst those in the UK can register with MCST after 1 June. Further details will be announced nearer the date of commencement.

Travel costs incurred by evacuees returning to Montserrat prior to the commencement of the scheme will not be reimbursed.

With the introduction of ERAFS, HMG are to bring to an end the Assisted Passage Scheme and the Regional Relocation Scheme which enable Montserratians to relocate to the UK or within the region respectively. The Regional Relocation Scheme will end on 30 April whilst the Assisted Passage Scheme will finish on 31 May. Applications received after 1 May 1999 will not be considered. People applying for the schemes must travel by 30 April and 31 May 1999 respectively.

Tanzania

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement about the famine in Tanzania and her Department's response to it. [78772]

Mr. Foulkes: Parts of Tanzania suffered from severe drought in late 1997. The effects of this on Tanzanian agriculture were exacerbated by El Nino-related flooding in early 1998. So far this year there has been a lack of rain in many areas. The cumulative effect has been an increase in vulnerability of already poor people. The Government of Tanzania are planning to distribute food to some 1.2 million people living in the worst affected regions. The Department for International Development (DFID) provided about £1 million of support in late 1997/early 1998. The World Food Programme is coordinating a relief programme, recently extended until June, in the Dodoma and Singida Regions: DFID support since October 1998 has amounted to £400,000. The main rains are now due to begin in Tanzania. This will be a critical period. DFID staff will continue to monitor events very closely over the next few months.

Global Environment Assistance

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will state her Department's budget for (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000 for global environment assistance. [78770]

Mr. Foulkes: In 1997–98 the Department spent £18.7 million on global environmental assistance. In 1998–99 the budget is £19.5 million and in 1999–2000 the budget will be £18.4 million.

Know How Fund

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money from the Know How Fund has been allocated to Russia in each of the last four years. [78911]

Mr. Foulkes: Bilateral assistance to Russia has been allocated by financial year as follows:

Year	£ million
1995–96	28.5
1996–97	28.0
1997–98	28.0
1998–99	29.0

The Department for International Development also contributed approximately 15 per cent. of the cost of the European Union's Tacis programme.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Ministerial Meetings (US)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many times Ministers in his Department have met their counterparts in the US Government since 1 June 1998; and if he will list the dates and locations of each meeting, the Ministers involved on each occasion, and the name of the US counterpart at each meeting. [77117]

Mr. Prescott: The information for DETR is as follows:

Date	Location	DETR minister	US counterpart
7 July 1998	Washington	Richard Caborn	Saul Ramirez (Assistant Secretary for Community Planning and Development)
16–18 September 1998	Japan	John Prescott	Stu Eizenstat (Under Secretary of State for Economic, Business and Agricultural Affairs)
10–13 November 1998	Buenos Aires	John Prescott, Michael Meacher	Stu Eizenstat (Under Secretary of State for Economic, Business and Agricultural Affairs)
25 January 1999	London	John Prescott	Frank Loy (Under Secretary of State for Global Affairs)
30 January 1999	London	John Prescott	Al Gore, Vice President

Community Transport (Fuel Rebate)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it his policy to extend fuel duty rebate to community transport services. [76512]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 16 March 1999]: Fuel duty rebate is an important element in Government financial support for local bus services. Possible changes to its scope will be considered as part of the study we will be asking the new Commission for Integrated Transport to undertake on all aspects of public funding for bus services. We will also be considering carefully all the recommendations of the review of voluntary and community transport commissioned by my Department, the report of which will be published shortly.

Road Haulage

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the change in the number of British-owned road haulage firms over the next year. [77286]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My Department does not hold information on the numbers of British owned road haulage firms. Road haulage companies based in Great Britain are required to hold a goods vehicle operator's licence, issued by the local Traffic Commissioner, for each traffic area in which they have an operating centre: so many of the larger companies will hold more than one licence. Figures for the number of licences in issue each year from 1993–97 show a cumulative decline of some 9 per cent. over the period. Figures for 1997–98 show a slight increase, 0.5 per cent., over the previous year. I estimate that figures for the current year, ending 31 March, will be similar to those for last year. It is too soon to make any estimates for next year.

Transport Infrastructure Investment

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much his Department spent per capita of population on transport infrastructure investment in (a) Greater London, (b) Docklands and (c) the North West of England during the most recent five years for which figures are available. [77666]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Comprehensive information is not available in the form requested. In the last five years, the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions directly invested in transport infrastructure in (a) Greater London, (b) Docklands and (c) the North West of England through a number of different programmes. Local authorities may also have invested in transport infrastructure through Revenue Support Grant, although detailed records of this are not kept by the Department.

The directly supported capital expenditure in the five year period to April 1998 was:

	(a) Greater London	(b) Docklands	(c) North West of England
Trunk roads (£ million)	[1]1,256		1,051
Local Transport Capital (£ million)	[1]449.4		457.1
Capital Challenge (£ million)	0	0	[2]39
Freight grants (£ million)	4.37	0	4.38
Local authority airports (£ million)	0.01	0	5.56
London Docklands Development Corporation (LDDC) (£ million)	—	[3]123.016	—
Docklands Light Railway (£ million)	—	84.035	—
London Transport/Traffic Director for London (£ million)	[1]3,768		—
Woolwich Ferry (£ million)	—	1.967	—
Total (5 years) (£ million)	[1]5,686.8		1,557.5
Population (million)	7.122		6.89
Spend per Capita	[1]£798		£226

[1] Combined figure for Greater London and for Docklands—not separately identifiable
[2] Capital Challenge was a new programme introduced in 1996–97
[3] LDDC closed in April 1998

Millennium Transport Insurance

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on the availability of insurance for transport providers on 1 January 2000; and if he will arrange to meet transport providers to discuss this issue. [77894]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Members of my Department are in frequent discussion with transport providers about their plans to maintain services on 1 January 2000. In general, the matter of insurance is between the transport providers and their insurers.

As regards aviation, the Civil Aviation Authority is requiring all UK licensed operators to provide confirmation that their insurance specifically includes cover for possible computer date recognition problems. Failure to provide satisfactory confirmation will lead to the CAA taking action to suspend operating licences.

Rail operators are required as a condition of their licence, to have adequate insurance cover. The Rail Regulator has made it clear that he does not expect exclusions relating to the millennium date change problem to be a part of such insurance cover.

Driving Licences

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to end the charging of the over-70s for renewing their driving licences. [78301]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There are no plans to end the charging of drivers aged 70 or over for renewing their driving licences.

Canary Wharf

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the costs to public funds of the subsidies and other financial incentives provided to the Canary Wharf development and associated Enterprise Zone since its establishment. [78302]

Mr. Meale: Information as requested on an individual development within an Enterprise Zone is not readily available.

There are two main tax incentives offered to businesses in Enterprise Zones:

(a) 100 per cent. allowances for corporation and income tax purposes for capital expenditure on industrial and commercial buildings (including hotels); and

(b) exemption from local authority business rates for industrial and commercial property, for the duration of Enterprise Zones status.

According to a Report by Cambridge Policy Consultants on 'An Evaluation of the Isle of Dogs Enterprise Zone', which was commissioned by the then Department of the Environment, estimates of the public costs associated with the Isle of Dogs Enterprise Zone as a whole, (over the end of the ten year life of the Zone), which would include the Canary Wharf development, are as follows:

	£ million (1997–98 prices)
Cost to the Exchequer of the Capital Allowances	736.0
Rate Relief	66.8

Leaded Petrol

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what arrangements there will be to allow owners of classic cars to obtain leaded petrol from 1 January 2000. [78305]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The vast majority of classic cars will be able to operate perfectly satisfactorily on lead replacement petrol which is expected to become widely available from the last quarter of this year. Separate additives will also be available for use with unleaded petrol. The Government are, however, continuing to explore options for implementing the provision in EU directive 98/70/EC which permits sales of leaded petrol to continue to a limit of 0.5 per cent. of total sales, though supply will ultimately be a commercial decision.

Arts Budget (London Boroughs)

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list each London borough's arts budget for the (a) current and (b) next financial year. [78417]

Ms Armstrong: The information available relates to budgeted expenditure on culture and heritage, which includes:

all museums and galleries with permanent or transient collections open to the public, museum services and grants to independent museums;

theatres (unless treated as trading services), halls, arts centres etc., covering all local authorities' premises whose main purpose is for arts functions; grants and contributions made for the specific purpose of supporting and/or promoting such art activities in all premises irrespective of their primary purpose or use; conservation of the historic environment;

archives and records.

The reported information for the current financial year (1998–99) is given in the table. Data for 1999–2000 are not yet centrally available.

Environment Council

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will place in the Library a copy of the text of the End of Life Vehicles Directive on which a common position was sought at the meeting of the Environment Council on 11 March; [78455]

(2) which of the items contained in Appendix J, dated 3 March, considered by European Standing Committee C on 9 March were not agreed by other member states at the Environment Council on 11 March; [78459]

(3) if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Environment Council on 11 March; and the prospects for adoption of a common position on end of life vehicles at the next meeting of the Environment Council; [78456]

(4) what aspects of the draft text of the End of Life Vehicles Directive put forward by the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs were agreed by other member states at the EU Environment Council on 11 March; and if he will make a statement. [78458]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 24 March 1999]: In order to inform the debate in European Standing Committee C on 9 March, the Government prepared a paper reflecting broadly the outcome which they hoped to achieve in negotiating a common position. A copy of this text (Appendix J to the Memorandum submitted by my hon. Friend the Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs to European Standing Committee C on 3 March) has now been placed in the Libraries of the House. As I explained in my answer on 16 March 1999, Official Report, columns 582–83, the Council decided to defer a final decision on the Directive until its next meeting on 24/25 June. I am optimistic that a satisfactory common position will be achieved at that meeting.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library copies of the documents which he put before the Environment Council on 11 March. [78457]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 24 March 1999]: The United Kingdom put no documents before the Council.

Wandsworth

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the standard spending assessment financial allocation to the London Borough of Wandsworth in each of the last five years. [78539]

Ms Armstrong: The Standard Spending Assessments for the London Borough of Wandsworth for each of the last five years were:

Year	£ million
1995–96	240.671
1996–97	240.000
1997–98	243.666
1998–99	249.202
1999–2000	259.727

Housing Stock Transfers

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the saving to local authorities which will arise in each of the next three years as a result of maintenance costs being transferred to new landlords when local authority housing is transferred. [78979]

Mr. Raynsford: When assessing applications for a place on the housing transfers programme, we take account of a wide range of factors including the overall cost to the Exchequer of transferring the stock. However, we do not specifically calculate savings on maintenance costs.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the housing associations which have received a transfer of local government housing since 1 May 1997. [78976]

Mr. Raynsford: The following Registered Social Landlords, including housing associations, have received a transfer of local authority housing under either the Large Scale Voluntary Transfer programme, or with funding from the Estates Renewal Challenge Fund since 1 May 1997:

South Oxfordshire Housing Association
Eden Housing Association
Metropolitan Housing Trust
Orbit Bexley
London and Quadrant Housing Trust
Dame Housing
Limehurst Village Trust
CDS Housing Association
Riverside Housing Association
Pollards Housing Association
Poplar HARCA
Kerrier Homes
Kingsmead Homes
Fortunegate Community Housing
Vange Community
Magna West Somerset Housing Association
Bentilee Community Housing
Severn Vale Housing Society
Rother Homes
South London Family Housing Association
Poplar HARCA
Leasowe Community Homes
Ashton Pioneer Homes
West Devon Homes
South Somerset Homes

East Lindsey Housing Partnership
The Guinness Trust
Sanctuary Housing Association
South Hams Housing
Family Housing Association
Clapton Community Housing Trust

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his Department's policy on transfers of local authority housing where tenants of one part of the proposed transfer seek a transfer to a separate landlord from tenants of another part. [78978]

Mr. Raynsford: We expect local authorities to develop housing transfer proposals which take into account the views of tenants and are sensitive to the distinct needs of local communities. The Secretary of State will not consent to a transfer of local authority housing to a Registered Social Landlord if it appears that a majority of tenants are opposed to the proposal.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those transfers of local authority housing stock currently under consideration where the housing estate in question is in a local authority area other than that of the landlord authority. [78977]

Mr. Raynsford: We are currently considering one application for a place on the 1999–2000 housing transfer programme from Manchester City Council for the Sale estates which are located in the Borough of Trafford. Two authorities, Manchester (Colshaw Farm and the Whitefield estates) and the London Borough of Richmond (Butts Farm), have been given a place on next year's programme in respect of estates which are located in other local authority areas.

British Waterways

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to decide on the future constitution of British Waterways. [78940]

Mr. Meale: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment gave to the right hon. Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean) on 2 March 1999, Official Report, columns 620–21.

Council Houses (Rent Arrears)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what total rent arrears in respect of council houses were owing in each council tax billing area in each shire county in (i) 1996–97, (ii) 1997–98 and (iii) 1998–99; [78774]

(2) what total rent arrears in respect of council houses were owing in each metropolitan area in (i) 1996–97, (ii) 1997–98 and (iii) 1998–99. [78775]

Mr. Raynsford: I have placed in the Library a table which shows the total rent arrears owing in each local district and unitary authority in shire counties (as in existence before the creation of unitary authorities) and metropolitan areas respectively, at the ends of March 1997 and 1998.

Zoos Forum

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to announce the appointment of the Chair and members of the Zoos Forum. [79405]

Mr. Meale: I will be making an announcement on the appointment of the Chair and members of the Zoos Forum at London Zoo on Monday 29 March 1999.

HEALTH

Schoolchildren

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the changes in the last five years in the average weight and height of schoolchildren in England and Wales; and if he will list the changes in the last five years in the (i) consumption of (a) dietary carbohydrate and (b) refined sugar products and (ii) total calorie intake and average levels of exercise of schoolchildren. [78135]

Ms Jowell: The heights and weights of primary schoolchildren were monitored in England between 1972 and 1994 by the National Study of Health and Growth (NSHG). No similar information is available for Wales. In 1995, the Health Survey for England (HSE) took over the monitoring the heights and weights of children and also measured their physical activity in 1997. The data for 1995 and 1996 were published in HSE Reports and the combined data for 1995–97 were published in December 1998 in the Report "The Health of Young People '95-'97".

The tables give heights and weights for 5 to 10 year olds for 1994 from NSHG and from HSE for 1995, 1996 and on the same basis for comparison purposes with NSHG for 1995–97 combined.

Heights and weights for children aged 11 to 15 years in 1995, 1996 are given, along with the data for 1995–97 combined, which are the baseline from which changes will be monitored.

The extensive data on the types and levels of exercise among English schoolchildren in 1997 are given in tables 8.1 to 8.15 in the Report "The Health of Young People '95-'97". In Wales, the Youth Health Surveys are carried out by Health Promotion Wales have shown that among 11 to 16 year olds, the proportion exercising for at least 4 hours per week outside school was 24 per cent. in 1994 and 29 per cent. in 1996.

There are no recent data on the consumption of dietary carbohydrate, refined sugar products, and total caloric intake of schoolchildren. However, fieldwork for the National Diet and Nutritional Survey of Young people aged 4–18 years, which covered Great Britain, has been completed and the results are being analysed. This should provide data on all these factors and also on average levels of exercise. A report is expected at the end of this year.

Head Lice

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many local education authorities send head lice nurses into schools; what is his Department's policy on head lice nurses in schools; what is the cost of providing head lice nurses to schools; and if he will make a statement. [78941]

Ms Jowell: It is the responsibility of health authorities to provide services to control the spread of head lice among school children. This service is exercised through the primary health care team, which may include the services of a school nurse. It is the policy of the Department together with the Department of Education and Employment, to encourage a "whole school approach" to the detection of and treatment of head lice. This entails parents checking their children and other family members for head lice and arranging treatment where necessary, with such support from the local primary health care team as they may require.

Information on the number of school nurses checking for head lice and the cost of this service is not available centrally.

Lymphoedema

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's policy towards treating Lymphoedema; how many health authorities provide manual Lymphatic Drainage treatment; how many specialist centres exist for the treatment of Lymphoedema; how many medical staff trained in MLD are employed in Gloucestershire; and if he will make a statement. [78913]

Mr. Hutton: It is for health authorities to determine what services to commission, including those for people with lymphoedema, in the light of evidence from research, resources and the healthcare needs of the local population. None of the other information requested is available centrally.

Herbal Medicines

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has concerning the nature and scope of the proposed forthcoming recommendations from the European Commission for possible amendments to EU Directive 75/318 in relation to herbal remedies; and if he will make a statement. [78903]

Ms Jowell: We have recently received proposals from the European Commission for a directive which would amend the Annex to the Directive 75/318 EEC. The proposed directive seeks to clarify the data on safety and efficacy which companies are required to provide when seeking a marketing authorisation for "well established medicinal products". Our initial assessment is that any direct impact on herbal medicines in the United Kingdom is likely to be limited. In particular, the draft Directive would not change the definition of which products are classified as medicines; nor would the proposals directly affect herbal medicines exempt from the requirement for a product licence under the terms of Section 12 of the Medicines Act 1968. Ministers have asked the Medicines Control Agency to seek further clarification from the European Commission about the draft Directive and any wider implications it may have.

We have also given consideration to the wider question of future regulatory arrangements for herbal medicines in the United Kingdom. Our objective is that the public should have access to a wide range of safe, high quality herbal medicines with appropriate information about the use of the product. There are currently two contrasting routes to the market for herbal medicines. Licensed herbal medicines have to meet rigorous standards of safety, quality and efficacy. Unlicensed herbal remedies in the United Kingdom do not have to meet any specific standards for safety, quality or efficacy.

We fully share the view which was expressed at a meeting held by the Under-Secretary, my noble Friend the Baroness Hayman, earlier this week by a range of organisations working in the natural health sector, that the current regulatory arrangements for herbal medicines have significant weaknesses and require review. The regime for unlicensed medicines does not give systematic protection to the public against low quality and unsafe unlicensed herbal remedies which are known to reach the UK market. Nor does it permit manufacturers legally to give written information to consumers about the intended use of the product. In contrast, elements of the regime for licensed medicines—particularly some of the efficacy requirements—are difficult for responsible companies to satisfy in relation to herbal medicines. We believe that there is a need to work towards arrangements which provide better protection and information for the public while continuing to allow responsible businesses and practitioners to operate effectively.

We have asked the Medicines Control Agency to examine options for achieving our objectives for herbal medicines, consulting widely with interested organisations. Medicines law operates within a European framework. Accordingly, we will need to develop a position which is realistically achievable within the European Union. We intend to participate actively and constructively in any ongoing EU discussions about future regulatory arrangements for herbal medicines.

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he received a copy of the recent report on herbal medicines in Europe from the Association of European Self-Medication Industry; if he has made copies of that report available to right hon. and hon. Members; what response he intends to make to that report; and if he will make a statement. [78904]

Ms Jowell: We received a copy of the final report "Herbal medicinal products in the European Union" earlier this month. We do not see a need to circulate, or to respond directly to, the report which explicitly states that it does not express the Commission's official views. We understand that the report is available on the European Commission's website (http://dg3.eudra.org). We intend to participate actively and constructively in any ongoing European Union discussions about future regulatory arrangements for herbal medicines.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

General Affairs Council

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the agenda for the forthcoming EU General Affairs Council of 22 and 23 March. [77160]

Ms Quin: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 3 March 1999, Official Report, column 773.

Agnes Helen Lopez

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the refusal by the Entry Clearance Officer, in Bombay in the case of Agnes Helen Lopez (Reference R/98/9784). [77641]

Mr. Fatchett: Our Deputy High Commission in Bombay has now provided a detailed account of the position. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Baroness Symons, will be writing to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Visitors' Visas

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many applications for visitors' visas for persons aged over 60 years applying from India and Pakistan were (a) approved and (b) refused in each of the past 10 years. [77896]

Mr. Fatchett: The figures requested are not collected by my Department and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Papua New Guinea

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from Sandline International regarding the Government of Papua New Guinea; and if he will make a statement. [77227]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 22 March 1999]: There have been no representations from Sandline regarding the latest developments surrounding its contractual dispute with the Government of Papua New Guinea. Our records show there was contact with Sandline regarding PNG between February and April 1997:

1. On 28 February 1997 Mr. Tim Spicer, at his own request, called on the British High Commissioner in Port Moresby to inform him of Sandline's contractual involvement with the Government of PNG regarding Bougainville.

2. On 17 March 1997 Mr. Rupert Bowen of Sandline rang FCO officials to ask for news of development in PNG.

3. On 18 March 1997 Mr. Bowen contacted FCO officials again to say that Mr. Spicer and another Sandline representative had been arrested in PNG.

4. The British High Commissioner in Port Moresby gave Mr. Spicer consular assistance. Mr. Spicer was released from custody on 22 March and was accommodated at the High Commissioner's Residence until his legal departure from PNG on 8 April 1997.

5. On his arrival in Brisbane on 8 April 1997 Mr. Spicer rang the High Commission in Port Moresby to express thanks for the consular assistance.

6. On 19 April 1997 Tony Buckingham, Director of Executive Outcomes, wrote to the then PUS to express his gratitude for the consular assistance given to Mr. Spicer in PNG.

7. On 21 April 1997 Mr. Michael Grunberg of Sandline telephoned FCO officials to seek a meeting to discuss Sandline's involvement in PNG.

8. On 22 April 1997 FCO officials telephoned Mr. Grunberg to decline his request.

Child Soldiers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the countries with which he has had recent discussions concerning the use of child soldiers; and if he will make a statement. [78545]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We regularly raise our concerns in bodies such as the UN Commission on Human Rights. We support the mandate of the UN Special Representative for Children in Armed Conflict, including his work with individual countries. We played a leading role in the establishment of the use of child soldiers as a war crime in the statute of the International Criminal Court. We take up individual situations case by case, including, for example, the abduction of children in northern Uganda by the Lord's Resistance Army.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Policies

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what systems she has in place to ensure that policies being developed by her Department are subject to a crime impact (a) assessment and (b) audit and are not likely to lead to enhanced criminal opportunities. [72682]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 24 February 1999]: Whilst there are no formal systems in place, policy development is subject to wide inter-departmental conclusion before being publicly announced and each piece of legislation in Northern Ireland is subject to a Policy Appraisal and Fair Treatment and financial resource implications analysis.

Derryboy Primary School

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pupils at Derryboy Primary School applied for enrolment in the academic year 1998–99 into Saintfield High School; how many of these pupils were (i) accepted and (ii) rejected; and what proposals she has to increase parental choice for secondary education in non-integrated schools for pupils leaving Derryboy Primary School. [78235]

Mr. McFall: Saintfield High School received 5 applications from Derryboy PS for admission for the 1998–99 academic year; 1 was accepted and 4 were rejected. Where a school is oversubscribed with applications for admission, which was the case at that time, Boards of Governors apply their published admissions criteria to decide which applications are to be accepted.

There were, however, places available at other controlled secondary schools within a reasonable distance eg in Comber and Ballynahinch.

The question of the availability of school places, in this case at non-integrated controlled secondary schools, is a matter for the Local Education and Library Board (in this case the South-Eastern Board) in the first instance.

SCOTLAND

Scotland Act 1998 (Consultation Documents)

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the (a) title, (b) cost and (c) date of publication of consultation documents and proposed policy documents and associated papers published by the Scottish Office since Royal Assent was given to the Scotland Bill. [72659]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 2 March 1999]: My Department has issued 106 consultation documents, proposed policy documents and associated papers since Royal Assent was given to the Scotland Bill on 19 November 1998. A comprehensive list has been deposited in the House Library. The list includes the title, cover price and date of publication of each document.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Interception of Communications Act 1985

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many applications for warrants under the Interception of Communications Act 1985 were refused in each of the last five years. [77279]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 24 March 1999]: Records are not kept in a form which would enable the information requested to be extracted without disproportionate cost.

Each application for interception of communications is subject to careful scrutiny at a number of stages before a warrant is issued. The application is submitted by a very senior officer following scrutiny within the police force or agency concerned. Within my Department it will normally be examined by officials at various successive levels of seniority before being presented to me for approval, usually by the Head of The Scottish Office Home Department. I examine each application carefully before issuing the warrant. At any stage in this process, the case may be, and on occasion is, referred back to the applicant police force or agency for clarification or further detail. This may, and occasionally does, result in a decision that the application should be withdrawn or that a warrant should not be issued.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many warrants under the Interception of Communications Act 1985 were (a) in force on 31 December 1998 and (b) were issued during the course of 1998 for (i) the interception of telecommunications, (ii) the interception of letters and (iii) in total. [77277]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 24 March 1999]: The Commissioner appointed under the Interception of Communications Act 1985 publishes figures on the number of interception warrants issued by the Secretary of State in his annual reports. In his report for 1998

(which will shortly be presented to the Prime Minister) the Commissioner will record the following numbers:

Interception warrants issued by the Secretary of State for Scotland: 1998

	Number
Interception warrants in force on 31 December 1998:
Telecommunications	53
Letters	1
Total	54
Interception warrants issued during the course of 1998:
Telecommunications	267
Letters	1
Total	268

Special Needs

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to ensure that the assessment of who qualifies for special needs services is on a consistent basis throughout Scotland. [77423]

Mr. Galbraith [holding answer 24 March 1999]: A wide range of reports and guidance has been issued aimed at removing inequalities and improving access to care and support across the range of education, social work, health and other services.

Equity of access to support appropriate to assessed needs will continue to be a priority.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

New Deal

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost of the New Deal in Scotland in (a) 1997 and (b) 1998; and what the budget cost for (i) 1998–99, (ii) 1999–2000 and (iii) 2000–01. [77831]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 25 March 1999]: The costs and estimates are noted in the table.

£ million

Year	New Deal[1]
1997–98	1.26
April 1998-February 1999	[2]13.98
1998–99 estimate	59.0
1999–2000 estimate	97.3
2000–01 estimate	74.5

[1] The costs quoted relate to the New Deal programmes for 18–24 year olds and for those aged 25 and over.
[2] This figure relates to the payments made by the end of February; it is low in relation to the estimate because of the timelags in claims from, and payments to, providers of various aspects of the programme.

St. Andrew's House

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated cost of the refurbishment of St. Andrew's House currently under way. [77938]

Mr. Dewar: The current estimated cost of the refurbishment of St. Andrew's House is £20 million.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Food Standards Agency Levy

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the total number of food premises in Scotland which will be liable for the proposed Food Standards Agency levy. [77905]

Mr. Galbraith: The estimated number of premises in Scotland liable for the proposed Food Standards Agency levy is approximately 46,000.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Right to Buy Discounts

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the value of the public sector tenants' right to buy discounts in 1997–98. [78215]

Mr. Macdonald: The value of the public sector tenants' right to buy discounts in 1997–98 was £238,918,846.

NHS Superannuation Scheme

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the report by the Government Actuary on his investigation of the National Health Service Superannuation Scheme in Scotland for the period from 1 April 1989 to 31 March 1994. [79338]

Mr. Dewar: I have accepted the report and today placed copies in the Library.

The report concludes that it would be prudent to increase, in the medium term, the rate of contribution required from employers to meet the scheme's future liabilities. The Government Actuary is content with our proposals that the current rate of 4 per cent. of pensionable pay can be maintained until 31 March 2002. Assuming that experience is in line with the assumptions he has made, it will increase to 5.5 per cent. from 1 April 2002, with a further increase to 7 per cent. from 1 April 2005.

The cost of index-linking National Health Service pensions is currently met by the Exchequer. As the report notes, I have agreed with my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury that, in principle, the Scheme would assume its pension increase liabilities from 1 April 1994 under a financial restructuring and our officials are discussing the basis of such changes. In the meantime, the Government Actuary considers that the proposed increases in employer contribution rates are consistent with the nature of the changes likely to be required under the restructuring.

DEFENCE

Falkland Islands

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will review the decision to reduce Tristar flights to the Falklands. [75640]

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will review his Department's decision to reduce the number of Tristar flights to the Falkland Islands. [75756]

Mr. Doug Henderson [pursuant to his replies, 9 March 1999, c. 120 and 10 March 1999, c. 211]: The number of Tristar flights will reduce by one flight per lunar month, not calendar month as originally stated.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent the weaponry held by the Falkland Island Defence Force and by the British troops stationed on the island is compatible. [77992]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Falkland Islands Defence Force (FIDF) possesses a variety of weaponry. The majority of the weapons types are UK manufactured or use UK manufactured ammunition and some are also in use with UK armed forces.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what would be the effect on passenger carriage capacity of the proposed reduction in Tristar flights to the Falklands. [78390]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The reduction in the number of RAF Tristar flights to the Falkland Islands was one of a range of efficiency proposals identified by the Strategic Defence Review. It represents a rationalisation of the use of Tristar aircraft following technical improvements that allow them to carry an increased payload. The effect of this measure, once fully implemented, will be to maintain passenger carriage capacity at its original level.

Trident

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment the Government have made of the conditions under which the Trident system could fulfil a substrategic role through (a) deterrence and (b) use. [77937]

Mr. George Robertson: The purpose of our nuclear forces is to deter aggression against the United Kingdom or its Allies. The Strategic Defence Review confirmed that, in addition to its strategic deterrent role, Trident would also perform the sub-strategic nuclear role, formerly assigned to RAF Tornado aircraft. A sub-strategic element is an essential component of a nuclear deterrent policy. In extreme circumstances of self defence, a capability for the more limited use of nuclear weapons would allow us to signal to an aggressor that he has miscalculated our resolve, without using the full destructive power that Trident offers.

Gibraltar

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the restrictions imposed on British (a) forces, (b) aircraft and (c) vessels travelling (i) to and (ii) from Gibraltar by the Spanish Government. [78350]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Spain does not impose restrictions on the movement of British Forces personnel between Spain and Gibraltar. Spain maintains restrictions on all NATO military aviation movements into and out of Gibraltar, including a ban on military overflights and an air exclusion zone to the North and West of Gibraltar. By means of reservations footnoted to the relevant NATO Standing Agreement, Spain restricts access of UK and other NATO warships to Gibraltar.

NATO Exercise (South Africa)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 8 March 1999, Official Report, column 37, to what the entry in the MOD performance report 1997–98 Table 2–2 refers under South Africa, NATO joint exercise. [78446]

Mr. Doug Henderson: There was an error in the MOD Performance Report 1997–98 table 2–2. The table should have read:

Country
South Africa	Combined arms battle exercise
Spain	NATO joint exercise

The entry under South Africa refers to a combined arms battle exercise conducted jointly by 40 Commando Group of the Royal Marines and the South African Defence Forces, which took place in July and August 1997 as part of Exercise Ocean Wave.

Defence Vetting Agency

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the number of people to be employed by the Defence Vetting Agency; when he expects the Agency to move to York; and if he will make a statement. [78629]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The current strength of the Defence Vetting Agency is about 365. This is planned to reduce to 310 when the Agency collocates at York. The precise dates for collocation and the exact figures depend on a number of associated matters which are not yet determined in detail. However, it is planned to start collocating in early 2000 and complete by early 2001. The Agency's plans will be co-ordinated carefully with the move of HQ 2nd Division to Edinburgh, to take up surplus staff at York, as far as possible and appropriate as they become available.

Reserve Forces

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's civilian employees are member of (a) the Territorial Army and (b) other reserve forces. [78516]

Mr. Doug Henderson: MOD encourages its civilian employees to join the reserve forces and staff regulations make special provisions for paid leave when attending annual camp and other training commitments. However, the information asked for is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the companies which support the Territorial Army by allowing their employees to serve. [78517]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The National Employers' Liaison Committee maintains a list of all employers who declare their support for the volunteer reserve forces and I shall place a copy of the current list in the Library of the House. Not all employers on the list necessarily have reservists in their workforce but, having declared their support, they are likely to be supportive of anyone wanting to join the reserve forces. On 17 March 1999, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister presented a certificate to the 6,000th employer to have pledged support. Some 70 per cent. of the nation's workforce are employed by employers who have declared their support for the volunteer reserve forces. In addition, there are many employers who have not formally pledged their support but do have employees who are members of the volunteer reserve forces.

MOD Police

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the workings of the performance-related pay system for the MOD police since 1994. [78811]

Mr. Doug Henderson: With effect from 1 April 1996 the salaries of the Chief Constable and the Deputy Chief Constable, Ministry of Defence Police, have been determined in line with the provisions applying to the Senior Civil Service, which includes an element related to performance. The salaries of the ranks of Constable to Superintending grade are calculated at 95 per cent. of the level for analogous Home Department Police Forces.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what expenditure his Department has incurred since 1994 in defending legal actions, including industrial tribunals, brought by MOD police personnel relating to terms and conditions of service. [78810]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Ministry of Defence Police have incurred some £125k expenditure since 1994 defending legal actions relating to employment tribunals brought by MOD Police personnel relating to terms and conditions of service.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disabled People

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people responded to the consultation paper on support for disabled people; if he will list those who (a) supported, (b) opposed the proposal to make New Deal interviews compulsory and (c) opposed taking into account income for which people have already contributed against a benefit earned through the payment of contributions. [77539]

Mr. Bayley: Consultation on our proposals for the reform of benefits for disabled people ended on 8 January. 342 responses were received, just over half of which came from organisations representing disabled people. A list of the organisations that responded has been placed in the Library.

150 respondents, including 177 organisations, commented on our proposals to introduce a Single Work-Focused Gateway to benefits for working age claimants. While the vast majority of respondents generally welcomed our initiatives to help disabled people into work, a large number of these felt that final decisions on whether to make interviews compulsory should await consideration of the results of piloting. (Involvement in the New Deal for Disabled People will remain voluntary).

155 respondents, including 90 organisations, commented on our proposal to take some account of occupational and personal pensions against Incapacity Benefit entitlement. Most respondents expressed concerns about this proposal.

Responding organisations and the proposals they commented on are in the table.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people since 1995 who had been receiving invalidity benefit failed the work test when they applied for incapacity benefit. [78280]

Mr. Bayley: When Incapacity Benefit was introduced in 1995, existing Invalidity Benefit recipients were transferred to the new benefit without being required to apply for it. However, with some exceptions, these cases were subject to the All Work Test, which is being applied on a rolling programme over a period of several years.

Information on the numbers of former Invalidity Benefit claimants who have failed the All Work Test since the introduction of Incapacity Benefit is not available for the period April 1995 to August 1996. From September 1996 to August 1998 inclusive, it is estimated that some 39,250 ex-Invalidity Benefit claimants have failed to satisfy the test. In addition, just under 4,000 others have had their claims terminated following failure to return the All Work Test questionnaire, or failure to attend a medical examination.

Income Distribution

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of households receive their main income from (a) work and (b) benefits for each decile of the income distribution below average income, and for each of the last 10 years. [78024]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The information requested it not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average time taken for the CSA to review child maintenance following a request. [78284]

Angela Eagle: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Faith Boardman to Mr. Gerry Steinberg, dated 25 March 1999:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency Reviews.

Under Child Support legislation, there are a number of different reviews that can be requested by parties to an assessment (which will include the non resident parent/person with care and child in Scotland). Any of the interested parties can ask for a review of their assessment by another child support officer if they disagree with the decision of the original child support officer. This is referred to as a second tier review. They may also request a change of circumstance review if a change has occurred that may affect their maintenance assessment.

We do not collect information on average processing times for the clearance of reviews of maintenance assessments. We measure the clearance of reviews against a target set by the Secretary of State. The 1998/99 target requires 80 per cent. of reviews to be cleared within 13 weeks. The age at clearance is measured from the date of the receipt by the Agency. At 28 February 1999 we have exceeded the target by clearing 87 per cent. of reviews within 13 weeks.

There have been significant improvements in the Agency's performance over the last two years despite an increase in workload of over 20 per cent. in that time. We have reviewed the way we handle complaints and we have increased resources for our Client Helplines and the National Enquiry Line, extended our hours of opening to cover 8.00 am to 8.00 pm Monday to Friday and 9.00 am to 5.00 pm on Saturdays and have completed trials to greatly improve and increase clients' opportunities to secure a face to face service. Also, letters of complaint to the Agency have fallen as a percentage of our caseload.

We recognise that, in the past, our standard of service has fallen below what our clients could reasonably expect. We are looking at the ways that we measure our performance to ensure that our focus is on providing a service that meets our clients' needs as well as achieving numerical targets.

I hope this is helpful.

Pensioners

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of pensioner benefit units on income support receive (i) at least one full basic state pension and (ii) some payment of basic state pension. [78965]

Mr. Timms: The information is in the table.

Income support pensioners by level of basic state pension received, Great Britain: August 1998

	Number of pensioner benefit units (000)	Proportion of pensioner benefit units (per cent.)
All cases	1,322	100
Benefit unit with full basic state pension	1,054	79.8
Benefit unit with some payment of basic state pension	257	19.4
Benefit units without basic state pension[1]	11	0.8

[1] Benefit Unit not in receipt of a basic State Pension but receiving a State Retirement Pension eg: cases with Additional Pension or Graduated Retirement benefit.

Notes:

1. Numbers are rounded to the nearest thousand, and percentages are given to one decimal place.
2. Pensioner benefit units are defined as claims where either the claimant and/or partner (if they have one) are of pensionable age.
3. Numbers shown in individual categories with state pensions may be underestimated in couple cases due to incomplete recording of partner's national insurance numbers on the Income Support system.
4. Figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample, and are subject to sampling error.

SERPS

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what records have been kept over the past 15 years by the Benefits Agency of advice given to future pensioners about their SERPS entitlement. [78968]

Mr. Timms: For many years now, records of inquiries of this nature have been retained for only a limited time before being routinely destroyed.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what evidence will be required from pensioners claiming compensation for mis-advice given to them by benefit offices about survivors' entitlement to SERPS. [78967]

Mr. Timms: This issue is currently being given careful consideration. We shall make an announcement in due course.

Benefits Agency/POCL System

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what were the installation costs of the piloted Benefit Agency/POCL system; [78313]

(2) what estimate he has made of the installation cost of the entire Benefits Agency/POCL system. [78315]

Mr. Byers: I have been asked to reply.

The Benefits Agency/ Post Office Counters automation project is being carried out under the Private Finance Initiative and installation costs are therefore the responsibility of the private sector provider, ICL Pathway.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Teachers (Primary Schools)

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the average pupil:teacher ratio for (a) Key Stage 1, (b) Key Stage 2 and (c) all pupils in maintained primary schools in each year from 1979 to 1999. [74738]

Ms Estelle Morris: The available information is shown in the following table:

Pupil:teacher ratios (PTRs) in maintained primary schools in England. Position in January each year

Year	PTR
1979	23.1
1980	22.7
1981	22.6
1982	22.5
1983	22.3
1984	22.1
1985	22.2
1986	22.1
1987	21.9
1988	22.0
1989	22.0
1990	22.0
1991	22.2
1992	22.2
1993	22.4
1994	22.7
1995	22.9
1996	23.2
1997	23.4
1998	23.7

An additional 1,500 teachers were provided in primary schools from September 1998 as the first stage of the Government's commitment to reducing infant class sizes. These will be taken into account in statistics for January 1999 (Provisional) to be published shortly.

Child Care Clubs

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if additional staff will be required within his Department to register childcare clubs for children aged up to 14 years and up to 16 years in the case of disabled children. [78289]

Ms Hodge: As outlined in the memorandum posted in the Vote Office on 17 March, there will be no new requirement for out of school childcare clubs to seek registration. Out of school provision catering for children aged 8 and over which meets the criteria of an accredited organisation's quality assurance scheme will be eligible for support through the childcare tax credit element of the Working Families Tax Credit.

I do not expect these arrangements to require any additional staff within the Department for Education and Employment.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the criteria for registration for clubs providing summer child care; and what is the minimum number of weeks for which clubs would have to provide such care in order to qualify. [78237]

Ms Hodge: Clubs providing summer child care for children under the age of eight must register with their Local Authority under the Children Act 1989. This requirement applies to provision of more than two hours a day and of six days or more in a year.

New Deal (West Sussex)

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much money has been spent on the New Deal for 18 to 24 year olds in the West Sussex Coastal Plain Unit of Delivery. [77912]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 22 March 1999]: Responsibility for the subject of this question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter form Richard Foster to Mr. Tim Loughton, dated 19 March 1999:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked Leigh Lewis to reply to your question about the amount spent on New Deal for 18 to 24 year olds in the West Sussex Coastal Plain Unit of Delivery. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to Mr Lewis as Chief Executive of the Agency. I am replying in his absence.

To the end of February this year, £224,318 had been brought to account in the West Sussex Coastal Plain Unit of Delivery on the New Deal for 18–24 year olds.

I hope this is helpful.

Carers

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to ensure that staff who operate (a) the Single Work Focused Gateway and (b) The New Deal Personal Adviser Service are trained to identify carers and advise them of the services available. [78548]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I am ensuring that ES New Deal Personal Advisers and Advisers operating in a Single Work Focused Advisory capacity use the range of training products that have been developed to equip them with the knowledge and skills needed to work with carers and other client groups.

It is a prerequisite of undertaking advisory duties that staff fully understand the needs of client groups with special needs, and tailored training material has been produced for this purpose. Line managers and trainers then review the understanding of advisers to check that they can: identify jobseekers who have caring responsibilities or who are ex carers; explain the action to take to help carers and ex carers back in to work; and explain how to help them.

This training material was recently sent to the Carers National Association for their review.

In preparation for the introduction of SWFG, we will hold an event for all SWFG Advisers on 17–18 June. This will focus specifically on dealing with special client groups. The event will involve direct input of a number of special clients representative groups including the Carers National Association.

New Deal (Young People)

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on whether the (a) long and (b) short term national insurance based benefits of a participant on the New Deal for 18 to 24-year-olds will be safeguarded in circumstances where the young person is employed in a subsidised New Deal job but whose gross pay is less than the lower earnings limit for national insurance contributions. [78725]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The introduction of the National Minimum Wage on 1 April will result in all young people employed under the New Deal receiving gross pay above the lower earnings limit for national insurance contributions. A small number of New Deal employees may have had gross earnings just below the lower earnings limit threshold this year. In these cases, as with other employees with low earnings, national insurance contributions will not have been paid and credits will not have been awarded.

"Meeting the Challenge of the Millennium"

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will publish the responses received during the consultation on the TECs' "Meeting the Challenge of the Millennium" document, published in July 1998. [78483]

Mr. Mudie: I will make available a summary of the responses received during the consultation on TECs' "Meeting the Challenge of the Millennium" in May 1999.

Standards Task Force

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will announce the replacement Vice Chair of the Standards Task Force. [79407]

Ms Estelle Morris: Professor David Hargreaves has accepted the Secretary of State's personal invitation to become the new vice-chairman of the Standards Task Force working alongside Chris Woodhead.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Hosiery and Knitwear Industry

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he has taken to assist the hosiery and knitwear industry; and if he will make a statement. [78760]

Mr. Battle: My officials have been working with representatives from the knitwear industry to produce a competitiveness analysis of the industry. This will be used to develop an Action Plan to improve the sector's competitiveness. The hosiery sector is included in the Intimate Apparel Export Strategy action plan which my officials will be taking forward with the relevant trade associations.

Competitiveness

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the competitiveness of British companies, with particular reference to (a) productivity, (b) innovation and (c) quality of (i) product and (ii) services. [77633]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 25 March 1999]: The UK's productivity performance has been poor and this has resulted in a standard of living that is below that of our major competitors. While the UK has some of the world's most innovative companies, producing high quality, high value goods and services, it does not have enough. The Competitiveness White Paper and the recent Budget have put in place policies to build UK capabilities, spur innovation, stimulate enterprise and raise productivity.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress he has made in establishing a competitiveness council; and what business interests will be represented on the council. [77787]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 25 March 1999]: Our aim is to have members of the Competitiveness Council appointed by the end of April. Members will be appointed for their individual expertise rather than as representatives of particular business interests, but I do hope to have a broad range of people from small and large businesses, with experience of manufacturing and of service industries.

Company Investment

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the level of investment by UK companies in (a) plant, (b) machinery and (c) product development in the last five years. [77634]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 25 March 1999]: The UK's past record on investment has been disappointing. Business tells us that one of the main factors holding back investment was the UK's record of macroeconomic instability. That is why the Government have acted swiftly to put economic management on a more stable footing and why the Government's White Paper on Competitiveness and recent Budget have introduced measures to stimulate investment and encourage enterprise.

Electronic Commerce

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what targets he has set in respect of the introduction of electronically based commerce in (a) small, (b) medium-sized and (c) large enterprises. [77635]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 25 March 1999]: In the White Paper, "Our Competitive Future: Building the Knowledge Driven Economy", published at the end of last year, the Government have set the target of increasing the number of small businesses wired up to the digital market place from 350,000 to 1 million by 2002. This target covers businesses employing up to 250 people.

Post Office

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to publish the White Paper on the Post Office. [78567]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 25 March 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the right hon. Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean) on 17 March 1999, Official Report, column 701.

Green Transport Plan

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what involvement fleet managers have had in drawing up his Department's Green Transport Plan. [77972]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 22 March 1999]: My Department does not have a fleet manager, but greener management issues are being taken into account in drawing up the plans.

EU Fraud

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) discussions he has had and (b) proposals his Department has put forward at Council of Ministers' meetings in respect of EU fraud; and if he will make a statement. [77780]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 19 March 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary on 19 March 1999, Official Report, columns 858–59.

Defence Sales

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if defence sales in the UK are made in a (a) national, (b) European or (c) global market for competition purposes. [77887]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 19 March 1999]: They are assessed on a case by case basis.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of man-hours that (a) small and medium enterprises and (b) larger companies will require to implement the Working Time Directive in (i) its first year and (ii) subsequent years. [76929]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 16 March 1999]: A Regulatory Impact Assessment on the costs and benefits resulting from the implementation of the Regulations was made, a copy of which is held in the Library of the House.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the state of negotiations on organising the working time of the sectors excluded from the scope of the Working Time Directive; for which sectors the United Kingdom has indicated its (a) agreement and (b) opposition to inclusion; and if a clear qualified majority already exists for these sectors. [78398]

Mr. Byers: The Government have carefully considered the European Commission's 18 November proposals on the extension of the Working Time Directive to the excluded sectors. We wish to provide all workers with fair minimum standards, but recognise that this should not adversely affect the competitiveness of the industries concerned, or the efficient operability of the NHS. We will obviously seek to secure support for our policy aims from other Member States.

Regional Aid

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he plans to publish the Concordat on Regional Grants. [76258]

Mr. Byers: My right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary will publish the concordat in due course.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the European Commission's response to criticisms by the Court of Auditors, in special report 25/98, of the expenditure undertaken on nuclear safety in Central and Eastern Europe and in the newly independent states of the former Soviet Union between 1990 and 1997; and if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of the use of the resources provided by the United Kingdom for nuclear safety improvements under the Tacis and Phare programmes. [78152]

Mr. Foulkes: I have been asked to reply.

Whilst Her Majesty's Government (HMG) welcome the various steps the European Commission has taken over the past year to improve the speed of project delivery in the field of nuclear safety, there is a need for the Commission to be more open to taking on board concerns raised in the Court of Auditors report.

These reflect various issues which HMG have raised with the Commission in recent years, in particular the inflexible and arcane bureaucratic procedures and the failure to make a clear distinction between the type of on-site assistance projects directed at the higher risk reactors (which should be closed as soon as practicable) and those which benefit plants of more recent design.

HMG will continue to work, through the relevant Management Committees for Phare and Tacis and other channels, and in the negotiation of the new Tacis regulation, in an effort to give a more focused strategic direction for the programme and to make further improvements to quality, speed and effectiveness. We welcome the Commission's intention to reform the Financial Regulation, which governs the rules on spending of all EC money, and the steps now being taken to rationalise the tendering and contracting procedures for external aid programmes. HMG believe that a well managed Tacis/Phare Nuclear Safety programme is capable of playing a key role in the wider international effort to enhance safety levels in partner countries in the region.

American Sugar

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans there are for a review of the level of import levy on American sugar. [63122]

Mr. Rooker: I have been asked to reply.

Imports of sugar from the USA are subject to the full import tariff under the EU's Common Customs Tariff, plus the system of safeguard duties agreed under the GATT Uruguay Round. The levels of tariffs on agricultural products are being reduced under the EU's Uruguay Round commitments. Pressure for further reductions can be expected during the next World Trade Organisation round of multilateral trade negotiations due to start in 2000.

TREASURY

Education Expenditure

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of GDP has been spent on education in each of the last 10 years. [74786]

Mr. Milburn: The proportions of cash GDP spent on education in each of the last ten years are as follows. Plans to 2001–02, as set out in the CSR, are also included.

Year	Percentage
1988–89	4.6
1989–90	4.7
1990–91	4.7
1991–92	5.0
1992–93	5.2
1993–94	5.1
1994–95	5.1
1995–96	4.9
1996–97	4.7
1997–98	4.6
1998–99	4.5
1999–2000	4.7
2000–01	4.8
2001–02	4.9

Pensioner Bonds

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria were used in setting the current interest rate for pensioner bonds. [77546]

Ms Hewitt: Pensioners' Bonds are priced like other National Savings products, taking account of the need to compete in the retail savings market, and the need to provide cost-effective financing for the government. Recent reductions in the interest rate on Pensioners' Bonds mainly reflect reductions in medium term interest rates generally, which in turn reflect expectations of lower inflation over the next five years. Lower inflation reduces the erosion of the value of the capital sum invested.

Pensioners' Bonds offer a monthly income which is set at a fixed rate for 5 years. The Chancellor announced in his Budget on 9 March 1999, Official Report, columns 173–90, that National Savings would redesign Pensioners' Bonds to offer a shorter term product. This should provide pensioners with more choice.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the average real interest rate on pensioner bonds in each quarter since they were introduced, using the CPI to measure inflation. [77547]

Ms Hewitt: The table provides the gross nominal and real rates of interest on new Pensioners' Guaranteed Income Bonds in each quarter since 1994. Trends in the nominal interest rate follow those of five year gilts. The recent falls in the real interest rate reflect increased credibility of the Government's ability to meet its inflation target.

1998	Q3	6.10	3.7
1998	Q4	5.18	2.7

[1] The UK does not produce a CPI. The real rate has been calculated by deflating the cash flows over the five year life of the bond by the retail prices index excluding mortgage interest payment (RPIX). An inflation rate of 2½ per cent. from March 1999 has been assumed.

Notes:

1. Gross PGIB interest rate is the quarter average of the simple interest rate quoted on PGIBs.
2. All figures subject to rounding.

Overseas Haulage Companies

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost to his Department of the loss of revenue from (a) fuel and (b) road tax, from overseas haulage companies operating in the UK. [77443]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 18 March 1999]: HM Customs and Excise do not have sufficient reliable information on which to base a published estimate of the loss of revenue from fuel from overseas haulage companies operating in the UK.

The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions have not published any estimate of any loss of vehicle excise duty arising from overseas haulage companies operating in the UK, but believe the amounts involved to be negligible at worst.

Road Fuel Duty

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the level of duty on a litre of (a) leaded petrol, (b) unleaded petrol, (c) ordinary diesel and (d) ultra-low sulphur diesel in the year (i) 2001, (ii) 2005 and (iii) 2010 if the road fuel duty escalator is maintained at its present level. [78018]

Ms Hewitt: Because the escalator is defined in real terms, actual duty rates will depend in future on inflation.

Earnings

Mr. Moore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the percentage of full-time workers in (a) Scotland, (b) each unitary local authority area in Scotland and (c) Great Britain earning in terms of gross pay (A) including and (B) excluding overtime, less than (i) £261.46, (ii) £241.86, (iii) £181.40 and (iv) £136.44 per week for the categories (1) male manual, (2) male non-manual, (3) all male workers, (4) female manual (5) female non-manual, (6) all female workers, (7) all manual, (8) all non-manual and (9) all workers; [78241]

(2) if he will list the average gross weekly earnings (a) including overtime and (b) excluding overtime for full-time workers in (i) Scotland, (ii) each unitary local authority area in Scotland and (iii) Great Britain for (A) all manual, (B) all non-manual and (C) all workers. [78240]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Michael Moore, dated 26 March 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary questions on average earnings.

The New Earnings Survey (NES) can provide earnings data for small geographical areas. However, the release of NES data is restricted to figures which are derived from a sufficiently large sample of employees, and have an acceptable level of accuracy. I have provided the available data for Scotland, the Scottish local authorities and Great Britain in the attached tables. These are based on the 1998 NES, the latest survey for which data are available. These tables are voluminous and copies of them are being placed in the Library of the House rather than reproduced in Hansard.

The NES is based on a one per cent. sample of employees in the PAYE system and is therefore likely to under-represent relatively low paid staff earning below the tax threshold and in particular those who work part-time.

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list for (a) Scotland and (b) each local authority area in Scotland the (i) average weekly earnings, (ii) weekly median earnings and (iii) the distribution of earnings for those in (1) the lowest and (2) the highest decile broken down by (A) manual, (B) non-manual and (C) all workers; [77784]

(2) if he will list the proportion of full-time workers in (a) Scotland, (b) each local authority area in Scotland and (c) Great Britain, with gross hourly earnings below (i) £6.90, (ii) £6.38, (iii) £4.79 and (iv) £3.60 broken down into (1) male, (2) female and (3) all (x) manual and (y) non-manual workers. [77785]

Ms Hewitt [holding answers 23 March 1999]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Alasdair Morgan, dated 26 March 1999:

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reason no external assessment has been made of the plans of his Department for millennium compliance. [78464]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 24 March 1999]: It is accepted that year 2000 plans need some form of overall independent assessment. The Treasury use their internal audit team to carry out this function. Internal Audit is independent of the programme and has the necessary skills to oversee the task.

An external IT assessor is, however, engaged in validating the completed compliance work.

Departmental Running Costs

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the final outturn for 1997–98 for (a) each running costs limit and (b) the MOD's operating costs limit. [79408]

Mr. Milburn: The final outturn for 1997–98 for each running costs limit and the Ministry of Defence's operating costs limit is shown in the table.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Working Time Directive

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many civil servants in his Department have been invited to waive the Working Time Directive requirement to work less than 48 hours a week on 17 consecutive weeks; how many civil servants in his Department have refused to waive the requirement; and what is the total cost of compliance with the Directive. [76815]

Mr. Morley: As a general rule, the core Department, the Pesticides Safety Directorate and the Veterinary Medicines Directorate have agreed that staff will not be asked to work more than 48 hours per week over a 17 week reference period. Where any potential breaches of the Regulations are identified, managers have first been asked to determine whether it is feasible to reduce hours, adjust working patterns or re-design the job and only then to discuss the option of disapplying the 48 hour limit with staff. Compliance costs are not separately identifiable as they have been absorbed within existing budgets.

Responsibility for the implementation of the Working Time Regulations 1998 within the Farming and Rural Conservation Agency, the Central Science Laboratory Agency, the Veterinary Laboratories Agency, the Meat Hygiene Service Agency and the Centre for Environmental Fisheries and Aquaculture Agency rests with Agency Chief Executives and I have asked them to reply to the hon. Member direct.

Letter from P. W. Greig-Smith to Mr. Andrew Tyrie, dated 26 March 1999:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your question regarding the Working Time Directive. I am replying on behalf of the Centre for Environment, Fisheries & Aquaculture Science (CEFAS).

We have a nil return.

Letter from Johnston McNeill to Mr. Andrew Tyrie, dated 26 March 1999:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) your question to the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food enquiring how many civil servants have been invited to waive the Working Time Directive to work less than 48 hours a week on 17 consecutive weeks; how many civil servants have refused to waive the requirement and what is the total cost of compliance with the Directive, has been passed to me to reply as regards this Executive Agency.

The MHS is currently engaged in on-going discussions with UNISON (the union representing meat inspection staff) regarding the implementation of the terms of the Working Time Regulations. A joint MHS/UNISON groups is working towards a collective agreement on the parts of the regulations which are negotiable. This will include an opt-out agreement relating to the '48 hour limit'. I regret that I am unable to provide you with the information you request at this stage. I will forward this information to you as soon as an agreement has been reached.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Andrew Tyrie, dated 26 March 1999:

The Minister has asked me to respond to your question about the Working Time Directive.

As a general rule VLA has agreed that staff will not be asked to work more than 48 hours per week over a 17 week reference period. Where any potential breaches of the Regulations are identified managers have been asked to determine whether it is feasible to reduce hours, adjust working patterns or re-design the job and only then to discuss the option of disapplying the 48 hour limit with staff. We are currently in the process of surveying staff and no individual agreements have yet been signed. Any compliance costs will not be separately identified as they will be absorbed within existing budgets.

Letter from Professor P. I. Stanley to Mr. Andrew Tyrie, dated 26 March 1999:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply, in respect of the Central Science Laboratory (CSL), to your question concerning the Working Time Directive.

As a matter of policy, CSL has agreed that staff will not be asked to work more than 48 hours per week over a 17 weeks reference period. No potential breaches of the Regulations have been identified, but should this arise managers have been asked to reorganise the workload.

The costs of complying with the Regulations are not separately identifiable as they have been absorbed within existing budgets.

Letter from Sarah Nason to Mr. Andrew Tyrie, dated 26 March 1999:

The Minister has asked me to reply, in respect of the Farming and Rural Conservation Agency (FRCA), to your question seeking the number of civil servants in his Department invited to waive the Working Time Directive requirement to work less than 48 hours a week on 17 consecutive weeks; how many of them have refused to waive the requirement; and what the total cost is of compliance with the Directive.

The FRCA Management Board has agreed that, as a general rule, staff will not be asked to work more than 48 hours per week over a 17 week reference period. Where any potential breaches of the Regulations are identified, managers are being asked to determine whether it is feasible to reduce hours or adjust working patterns before discussing the option of disapplying the 48 hour limit with staff. To date, no individual agreements have been signed and no civil servants have refused to waive the requirement. Any compliance costs are not separately identifiable and have been absorbed within existing budgets.

EU Agriculture Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 15 and 16 March; and if he will make a statement. [77550]

Mr. Nick Brown: The EU Agriculture Council planned for 15 and 16 March was cancelled.

Residuary Milk Marketing Board

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if interest payments will be made to the eligible milk producers in respect of their portion of the assets rights and liabilities which the Residuary Milk Marketing Board are currently holding. [77803]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 19 March 1999]: Any interest which accrues to the RMMB's funding and which is not needed for legal and other expenses will be paid to producers eligible for payments.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what are the outstanding disputes and obligations which have to be settled before the assets, rights and liabilities of the Residuary Milk Marketing Board can be distributed; [77801]

(2) when he expects the Residuary Milk Marketing Board to begin the distribution of the remaining surplus assets of the Milk Marketing Board to eligible milk producers. [77805]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 19 March 1999]: The RMMB's remaining tasks are to collect outstanding debts, to settle outstanding litigation and to dispose of outstanding claims against the Board. The Board recently announced its decision to proceed with making payments to producers of £10 million. Any remaining assets will be returned to producers once the outstanding responsibilities of the RMMB have been resolved.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assets, rights and liabilities the Residuary Milk Marketing Board has. [77804]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 19 March 1999]: At 30 September 1998, the RMMB's remaining assets totalled £32.4 million with £2.8 million, excluding interest, owned in damages from contract processors. There were no known outstanding liabilities. Potential liabilities depend on the outcome of the outstanding litigation.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what were the running costs of the Residuary Milk Marketing Board in the last year for which figures are available; and from what source they were funded. [77806]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 19 March 1999]: Withdrawals for administration costs shown in the RMMB's most recent six monthly reports totalled £935,000 for the 12-month period preceding 30 September 1998. Regulation 18(2) of the Milk Marketing Board (Residuary Functions) Regulations 1994 requires that any moneys required by the Board for the discharge of their functions be paid out of the general reserve fund.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how he will determine which milk producers will be eligible to receive payments from the Residuary Milk Marketing Board. [77802]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 19 March 1999]: The criteria by which the RMMB will determine which milk producers will be eligible to receive payments is set out under the Milk Marketing Board (Residuary Functions) Regulations 1994 (S.I. 1994/2759).

Advisory Committee on Animal Feedingstuffs

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the terms of reference of the Advisory Committee on Animal Feedingstuffs. [77997]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The exact terms of reference of the Advisory Committee on Animal Feedingstuffs Committee have yet to be finalised but it is expected that the Committee will advise Health and Agriculture Ministers and, after its establishment the Food Standards Agency, on all aspects of the safety and use of animal feeds and feeding practices not already covered by other advisory committees. There will be particular emphasis on protecting human health and reference to new technical developments and new feed materials, including genetically modified organisms. The Committee will liaise with other independent advisory committees and ensure comprehensive advice is provided where animal feed issues are concerned.

Regional Development Funding

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total budget for the ERDF South West Objective 5b for Devon and Cornwall; how much money has been received by the Government in respect of the fund; what is the actual amount spent; and what is the balance as yet unspent. [78371]

Mr. Meale [holding answer 23 March 1999]: I have been asked to reply.

The ERDF Objective 5b Programmed for the South West is supported by three European Structural Funds: the European Regional Development Fund (ERDF), the European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund (EAGGF) and the European Social Fund (ESF). The Programme runs from 1 January 1994 to 31 December 1999.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the (1) sites in the United Kingdom where genetically modified crops have been grown in breach of the licence conditions and (2) the name of (a) the promoter and (b) owner of the (i) trial and (ii) materials in the trial and (c) any other (A) body and (B) person responsible for conducting such trials. [72554]

Mr. Meacher: There have been two such cases in the UK where a successful prosecution has been taken. The information is as follows:

1. Both cases were located at Joseph Nickersons Farms, Rothwell, Lincolnshire.

2. (a) (b) (i) and (ii) Monsanto plc and Perryfields Holdings Limited.

(c) Nickerson Seeds Limited on behalf of Monsanto plc and Perryfields Holdings Limited.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on which occasions the team of Green Ministers has discussed issues relating to genetic modification. [75088]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 8 March 1999]: The issue of genetic modification has not been discussed by Green Ministers. It is considered within Government by a different, specific, Cabinet Sub-Committee.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will introduce legislation to make biotechnology companies legally and financially liable for any damage to the environment caused by genetically modified crops. [75200]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 10 March 1999]: There is already some protection though Civil law and general product liability. The issue of environmental liability is an important one and the principle that those who damage the environment should pay for remedying the damage caused is one that I would strongly support. The European Commission is currently finalising a White Paper on environmental liability and this may offer a way forward. We expect the White Paper to include the question of damage by genetically modified organisms but need to study the detail of the Commission's proposals before reaching any conclusions.

Biotechnology Industry

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many unminuted pre-arranged meetings have occurred between (a) himself, (b) Ministers in his Department and (c) his officials and representatives of the biotechnical industry sector since 1 May 1997. [74836]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 5 March 1999]: There have been no such meetings involving the Ministers of this Department. Although most meetings involving officials are minuted, my officials have, from time to time, had meetings with the biotechnology companies where minutes are not taken. However, these are always in pursuit of a clear remit from Ministers for specific agreed purposes. Information on the number of such meetings is not available.

Soya Bean Imports

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what steps he will take to examine bulk imports of United States soya beans following the 1999 United States harvest to test whether they contain AgrEvo's Liberty Link soya bean; and if he will make a statement; [75348]

(2) if he will make a statement on the licensing status of AgrEvo's Liberty Link soya bean in the (a) United States of America, (b) European Union and (c) United Kingdom; [75347]

(3) what steps he takes to ensure that unlicensed soya beans do not enter (a) animal feed and (b) the human food chain; and what communication he has had with AgrEvo about the planting and harvesting in the United States of America and subsequent exporting to the United Kingdom of its Liberty Link soya bean. [75349]

Mr. Meacher: AgrEvo's Liberty Link soya bean has been authorised for cultivation and food in the USA but not authorised for cultivation or food in either the European Union or United Kingdom. However, I understand that an application for marketing consent under Council Directive 90/220/EEC has been lodged with an EU member state. I have not had any communication with AgrEvo about this particular variety.

It is illegal to import GM soya unless the variety has approval under Council Directive 90/220/EEC. It is the duty of the importers to ensure that all imported soya has the necessary authorisations. If the product does not get EU consent by the time it is grown commercially in the United States of America and we have reason to believe that the product is being imported illegally the inspection of bulk imports will be arranged. In such circumstances the importer can be prosecuted.

Inspection Charges

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how he calculates the notional costs described in the consultation papers on the proposed Town & Country Planning (Control of Major Accident Hazards) Regulations; and what is the proportion of these costs in relation to the proposed charges for work undertaken by (a) Environment Agency inspectors in Wales, (b) Environment Agency inspectors in England and (c) Scottish Environment Protection Agency inspectors in Scotland. [77214]

Mr. Meale: The notional costs are calculated by the Agencies to reflect the rate of return on capital and a notional insurance premium. The proportion of notional costs in relation to the proposed charges for work undertaken by Environment Agency inspectors in England and Wales is:

(a) and (b) 3 per cent.

The notional element in SEPA charges in Scotland is

(c) 2.5 per cent.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the levels of relevant input costs in (a) Wales, (b) England and (c) Scotland in relation to the proposed inspection charges to be levied by the Environment Agency in Wales and England, and by the Scottish Environment Protection Agency under the proposed Town & Country Planning (Control of Major Accident Hazards) Regulations. [77212]

Mr. Meale: Estimates of the costs of inspection under the COMAH regulations by the Environment Agency in England and Wales and by the Scottish Environment Protection Agency (SEPA) in Scotland are a matter for the two Agencies. The chargeable costs that the Environment Agency estimates that it will incur as a COMAH competent authority in England and Wales are:

(a) and (b) £900,000 in 1999–2000 rising to £2,200,000 in 2000–01 as the work builds up.

These costs will be recovered on the same basis in England and Wales. A split of costs between England and Wales is not available. The costs which SEPA estimates that it will incur as a competent authority for COMAH in Scotland are:

(c) £200,000 in 1999–2000.

Company Licences

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for (a) small and medium-sized enterprises and (b) larger companies (i) all licences and permits issued by his Department and its agencies to companies permitting them to carry out their business, (ii) the cost of each such licence or permit in (A) 1997–98 and (B) 1999–2000 and (iii) the current number of companies which are in receipt of each such licence or permit. [76857]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 16 March 1999]: The licences for which my Department is directly responsible are listed. The information requested for each of these licences is not held centrally and cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost. In some cases, details of individual licences issued are held on public registers, while a data base of guidance and forms is available on the Direct Access Government website.

Designated Area Sets

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make available his Department's designated area sets (GIS) to local authorities. [78724]

Mr. Raynsford: Designate areas within my Department's policy responsibilities are designated by the Non Departmental Public Bodies sponsored by the Department, not directly by the Department itself.

The Inter-departmental Group on Geographic Information (which my Department Chairs) has issued a Charter Standard Statement on Geographic Information that encourages all Government Departments and Agencies to make their geographic information available to all users. Digital forms of the National Statutory designated areas would be part of this initiative.

End of Life Vehicles Directive

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library a copy of the presidency text of the End of Life Vehicles Directive which was put before the Environment Council on 11 March. [78460]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 24 March 1999]: The text considered by the Environment Council on 11 March is a Council working document and as such is subject to the confidentiality of Council proceedings.

Rent Tribunals

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people from ethnic communities sit on rent tribunals covering the Greater London area; and if he will make a statement. [78533]

Mr. Raynsford: There are six members from ethnic minorities appointed to sit on rent tribunals in the Greater London area. This represents seven per cent. of the total membership of the London Rent Assessment Panel, from which rent tribunals are drawn. We want to see the proportion of tribunal members from ethnic minorities more closely reflect that in the national population. Three of the members from ethnic minority communities have been appointed since September 1998.

Illegal Tipping

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what policies he promotes to prevent the practice of fly-tipping; and if he will make a statement. [78585]

Mr. Meale: Stringent controls and severe penalties are in place to discourage the fly-tipping of waste and, where it occurs, to enable the perpetrators to be traced and prosecuted. The main controls and the maximum penalties were set out in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 8 December 1998, Official Report, columns 120–21.

My Department has prepared a Circular explaining these controls and penalties which was issued to magistrates by the Lord Chancellor's Department on 6 February 1998. We wish to encourage the Courts to make full use of the available penalties.

We have made it clear that we expect the Environment Agency to be fair but rigorous in its enforcement of environmental controls; and we support the action being taken by the Agency on fly-tipping. This includes the provision of a free 24 hour hotline for members of the public to report incidents (Tel: 0800 807060).

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he had made of the effect which the introduction of Landfill Tax has made on the practice of fly-tipping. [78586]

Mr. Meale: The Tidy Britain Group has carried out three studies into fly-tipping. The study comprised three surveys and one of its main aims was to establish the types, quantities and locations of fly-tipped waste. The third survey was carried out in partnership with the Environment Agency and was published last month. It suggests a modest increase in fly-tipping over the period from 1994–95 but less than was originally feared by local authorities following the introduction of the landfill tax.

Local Authority Aggregate Credit

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each local authority for which information is available (a) the Aggregate Credit Limit and (b) the percentage of Aggregate Credit Limit of debt outstanding, using figures at 31 March 1997. [78588]

Ms Armstrong: The information requested is not available. Figures for the Aggregate Credit Limit are not collected centrally.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it his policy to collect centrally and publish figures on local authorities' aggregate credit limits; and if he will make a statement on how his Department ensures that local authorities do not exceed their aggregate credit limits. [78587]

Ms Armstrong: I do not consider that it would be helpful to collect figures on local authorities' aggregate credit limits. It is for local authorities external auditors to monitor their compliance with all the requirements of the capital finance system.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those local authorities which provide waste disposal facilities for use by individual council tax payers, without having a statutory responsibility to do so. [78584]

Mr. Meale: All waste disposal authorities are under a statutory duty under Section 51 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to arrange for places (commonly referred to as 'civic amenity sites') to be provided at which persons resident in their area may deposit their household waste free of charge.

National Strategy for Carers

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how he intends to inform all local government staff of the developing policies towards carers outlined in the National Strategy for Carers. [78547]

Ms Armstrong: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions wrote to leaders of councils in England enclosing a copy of the report of the National Carers' Strategy, highlighting the role of local authorities in supporting carers, and asking them to draw the report to the attention of everyone within the authority. A copy of the report has also been sent to all Directors of Housing, Social Services and Education in local authorities in England.

Road Accidents (HGVs)

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the number of road accidents involving a heavy goods vehicle for each month since January 1994. [78481]

Dr. Reid: The number of road accidents involving a Heavy Goods Vehicle which resulted in personal injury is shown in the following table:

Road accidents per month involving at least one Heavy Goods Vehicle[1]: 1994–97

Number of accidents

Month	Year of accident 1994	1995	1996	1997
January	1,046	1,053	941	1,132
February	1,083	979	1,108	1,048

Total	13,178	12,613	12,426	13,122

[1] Accidents may involve more than one Heavy Goods Vehicle.

Council Tax

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the (a) highest and (b) lowest council tax at Band D for a council billing area, after transitional relief grant and council tax benefit, in Merseyside for 1999–2000. [78861]

Ms Armstrong: The highest Band D council tax for the metropolitan districts in Merseyside in 1999–2000 will be £1,172 in Liverpool while the lowest will be £920 in Sefton. No authority in Merseyside is eligible for Reorganisation Transitional Relief Grant in 1999–2000 and figures for the amount of Council Tax Benefit that the authorities expect to provide during the year are not yet available.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what is the (a) highest and (b) lowest council tax at Band D for a council billing area, after transitional relief grant and council tax benefit, in Kent for 1999–2000; [78897]

(2) what is the (a) highest and (b) lowest council tax at Band D for a council billing area, after transitional relief grant and council tax benefit, in Tyne and Wear for 1999–2000; [78899]

(3) what is the (a) highest and (b) lowest council tax at Band D for a council billing area, after transitional relief grant and council tax benefit, in Northumberland for 1999–2000; [78901]

(4) what is the (a) highest and (b) lowest council tax at Band D for a council billing area, after transitional relief grant and council tax benefit, in Lancashire for 1999–2000; [78896]

(5) what is the (a) highest and (b) lowest council tax at Band D for a council billing area, after transitional relief grant and council tax benefit, in Cumbria for 1999–2000; [78898]

(6) what is the (a) highest and (b) lowest council tax at Band D for a council billing area, after transitional relief grant and council tax benefit, in the West Midlands for 1999–2000; [78900]

(7) what is the (a) highest and (b) lowest council tax at Band D for a council billing area, after transitional relief grant and council tax benefit, in North Yorkshire for 1999–2000; [78902]

Ms Armstrong [holding answer 26 March 1999]: The highest and lowest Band D council tax for the shire and metropolitan districts within each of the requested areas in 1999–2000 are in the table. No authority in these areas is eligible for Reorganisation Transitional Relief Grant in 1999–2000 and figures for the amount of Council Tax Benefit that the authorities expect to provide during the year are not yet available.

County	Highest	£	Lowest	£
Lancashire	Preston	959	Lancaster	884
Kent	Maidstone	797	Gravesham	731
Cumbria	Barrow-in-Furness	893	Allerdale	856
Tyne and Wear	Newcastle upon Tyne	978	Sunderland	815
West Midlands	Coventry	968	Solihull	742
Northumberland	Castle Morpeth	908	Blyth Valley	883
North Yorkshire	Ryedale	779	Hambleton	695

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the (a) highest and (b) lowest council tax at band D for a council billing area, after transitional relief grant and council tax benefit, in a London borough for 1999–2000. [78768]

Ms Armstrong [holding answer 26 March 1999]: The highest Band D council tax for the London Boroughs in 1999–2000 will be £912 in Islington while the lowest will be £350 in Westminster. No authority in London is eligible for Reorganisation Transitional Relief Grant in 1999–2000 and figures for the amount of Council Tax Benefit that the authorities expect to provide during the year are not yet available.

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the (a) highest and (b) lowest council tax at band D for a council billing area, after transitional relief grant and council tax benefit, in Cornwall for 1999–2000. [78765]

Ms Armstrong [holding answer 26 March 1999]: The highest band D council tax for the shire districts in Cornwall in 1999–2000 will be £759 in North Cornwall while the lowest will be £738 in Penrith. No authority in Cornwall is eligible for Reorganisation Transitional Relief Grant in 1999–2000 and figures for the amount of Council Tax Benefit that the authorities expect to provide during the year are not yet available.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the (a) highest and (b) lowest council tax at Band D for a council billing area, before transitional relief grant and council tax benefit, in each shire county in England (i) for 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99 and (iii) as proposed for 1999–2000. [78907]

Ms Armstrong [holding answer 26 March 1999]: The requested information has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the (a) highest and (b) lowest council tax at Band D for a council billing area, after transitional relief grant and council tax benefit, in Greater Manchester for 1999–2000. [78908]

Ms Armstrong [holding answer 26 March 1999]: The highest Band D council tax for the metropolitan districts in Greater Manchester in 1999–2000 will be £987 in Manchester while the lowest will be £689 in Trafford. No authority in Greater Manchester is eligible for Reorganisation Transitional Relief Grant in 1999–2000 and figures for the amount of Council Tax Benefit that the authorities expect to provide during the year are not yet available.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the (a) highest and (b) lowest council tax at Band D for a council billing area, after transitional relief grant and council tax benefit, in Northamptonshire for 1999–2000. [78909]

Ms Armstrong [holding answer 26 March 1999]: The highest Band D council tax for the shire districts in Northamptonshire in 1999–2000 will be £797 in South Northamptonshire while the lowest will be £682 in Wellingborough. No authority in Northamptonshire is eligible for Reorganisation Transitional Relief Grant in 1999–2000 and figures for the amount of Council Tax Benefit that the authorities expect to provide during the year are not yet available.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the (a) highest and (b) lowest council tax at Band D for a council billing area, after transitional relief grant and council tax benefit, in (i) Bedfordshire, (ii) Buckinghamshire, (iii) Cambridgeshire, (iv) Cheshire, (v) Devon, (vi) Dorset, (vii) Durham, (viii) East Sussex, (ix) Essex, (x) Gloucestershire, (xi) Hampshire, (xii) Hertfordshire, (xiii) Nottinghamshire and (xiv) West Yorkshire for 1999–2000. [78910]

Ms Armstrong [holding answer 26 March 1999]: The highest and lowest Band D council tax for the shire and metropolitan districts within each of the requested areas in 1999–2000 are shown in the table. No authority in these areas is eligible for Reorganisation Transitional Relief Grant in 1999–2000 and figures for the amount of Council Tax Benefit that the authorities expect to provide during the year are not yet available.

Rail Franchises (Byelaws)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance his Department issues on byelaws drawn up by the privatised rail franchises. [79188]

Ms Glenda Jackson: No formal guidance is issued to rail operators regarding byelaws. However the Department has provided ad hoc advice to the Byelaws Reform Group who are overseeing the adoption of new byelaws by the railways industry. The Group is made up of London Underground, Railtrack, the British Transport Police and representatives of the rail franchise operators. The new byelaws will have to be confirmed by the Secretary of State.

Transport Policy (Disability Organisations)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the disability organisations from which his Department regularly seeks views on the development of transport policy. [79056]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In the first instance we are advised by the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee (DPTAC) which was set up under the Transport Act 1985 to advise the Secretary of State on the transport needs of disabled people. The Act requires that at least half the membership are disabled people; currently over 70 per cent. are disabled.

Officials also attend meetings of the two main umbrella organisations in the field of disability and transport—the Joint Committee on Mobility of Disabled People and the Joint Committee on Mobility of Blind and Partially Sighted People. Those meetings provide an opportunity to report on recent developments and to receive feedback on transport policies.

We also consult a very wide range of other disability organisations as part of public consultation exercises.

New Roads and Street Works Act 1991

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the initiatives currently under way to improve the operation of the provisions of the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991. [78966]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 26 March 1999]: Regulations are being laid under powers in the 1991 Act to facilitate and encourage the electronic transfer of information about street works and other works in the highway between utilities and highway authorities. This will ensure greater consistency and speed in transferring and registering the information, which in turn will help authorities in their co-ordination role.

In the debate on roads policy in the House on 18 March 1999, Official Report, columns 1364–66, I referred to our commitment to act to reduce the disruption and inconvenience of prolonged street works which had already been announced in last year's Integrated Transport White Paper.

There are other proposals being taken forward following earlier consultation: these concern safety measures (signing, lighting and guarding of works), reinstatement, the inspection regime and the recording of underground apparatus.

Capping

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in what circumstances he plans to cap councils which over-spend; and if he will make a statement. [78914]

Ms Armstrong [holding answer 26 March 1999]: My colleagues and I are currently considering the budgets and council taxes set by local authorities for 1999–2000. If we decide to designate any authorities they will be informed in April.

Road Accidents

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people (a) were killed, (b) were seriously injured and (c) suffered minor injuries in road accidents in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [78944]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 26 March 1999]: 3,599 people were killed in road accidents in 1997, 42,957 were seriously injured and 280,978 were slightly injured.

Greenwich Millennium Celebrations

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of potential additional demands upon services provided by the London boroughs of Greenwich and Lewisham arising from the millennium celebrations in Greenwich; what additional resources have been made available to those authorities; and if he will make a statement. [79169]

Ms Armstrong: The Government take the view that any additional costs will be more than offset by the immense long-term rewards the boroughs will reap as a direct outcome of the Millennium Experience and other Millennium activities planned for the area.

Public Sector Housing

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he has taken to encourage the transfer of public sector housing to new landlords. [79020]

Mr. Raynsford: We are keen for local authorities to pursue transfer where it is clearly part of their housing strategy and will improve the living conditions of tenants and the service they receive. However, authorities are under no compulsion to transfer their stock. Our aim is to ensure the delivery of improved efficiency, effectiveness and responsiveness to tenants.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many transfers of local government housing stock have taken place since 1 May 1997. [79021]

Mr. Raynsford: There have been thirty-one transfers of local authority housing under either the Large Scale Voluntary Transfer programme, or with funding from the Estates Renewal Challenge Fund since 1 May 1997.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his proposals for the protection of sites of special scientific interest. [78702]

Mr. Meale: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment on 15 March 1999, Official Report, column 465. Once we have given full consideration to the ideas put forward in responses to the proposals, and completed discussions on some of the more difficult issues, we will announce how we intend to proceed.

Jubilee Line

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 16 March 1999, Official Report, column 576, if he will place a detailed summary of the cost review in the Library. [79166]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We announced the results of LT's cost review on 3 March 1999, Official Report, column 730. The details of the review contain information that, if released, could prejudice London Transport's commercial position: therefore, in line with previous practice, we do not release details of the cost review.

Hardwoods

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his letter of 22 July 1998 (ref. EE/PSO/10679/98), what is the result of the review of current policy on hardwood procurement across Government. [77637]

Mr. Meale: I refer my hon. Friend to my letter of 17 March 1999 informing him of the results of the review of Government policy on timber procurement. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Polling Stations (Disabled Access)

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what funds are available to local authorities to improve access to polling stations for disabled people. [79027]

Ms Armstrong: Acting returning officers may apply to the Home Office for grants towards the cost of providing temporary ramps and specially adapted polling screens, to make polling stations accessible for those disabled voters who wish to vote in person, for national and European elections. The remainder of the cost is funded by the local authority. Grants are not allocated specifically for local elections. The need for revenue expenditure by local authorities is taken into account, along with other spending pressures and the scope for efficiencies, in the local government finance settlement.

"A New Deal for Transport"

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made in publishing the daughter documents to the White Paper, "A New Deal for Transport", Cm 3950. [79534]

Mr. Prescott: Last July's White Paper on the Future of Transport identified nine associated publications which would set out in more detail the proposals in the White Paper. Seven have already been published:

A New Deal for the Railways: response to the Environment, Transport and Regional Affairs Select Committee

A New Deal for Trunk Roads in England

Guidance on local transport plans

Breaking the Logjam: consultation on road user and workplace parking charges

British Shipping—charting a new course

Sustainable distribution: a strategy

From Workhorse to Thoroughbred: a better role for bus travel.

Of the remaining documents, the report on inland waterways will be published in the next few months. The document on road safety policy, setting out the Government's strategy and targets for beyond 2000, will follow in the autumn and will reflect the findings of the speed policy review. We have since announced that a further daughter document, on ports policy, will be published; a policy paper is currently out for consultation and the document should be issued later this year. The Government will also this summer be issuing its action plan to encourage walking.

Household Projections

Mr. Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to publish revised household projections; and if he will make a statement. [79535]

Mr. Prescott: In our policy statement "Planning for the Communities of the Future" published early last year, the Government said that they would put in place new policies in respect of planning for housing which would include a new flexible approach to regional planning involving decentralisation to regional stakeholders; a national 60 per cent. target for the re-use of previously developed land; the creation of a National Land Use Database; and that we would be setting up a task force to advise us on how to make the best use of recycled land.

Our emphasis is on urban renaissance—making our towns and cities places where people want to live—and this theme will be developed in an Urban White Paper which the Government propose to publish later this year.

The Government have implemented all of these initiatives and more. We issued the consultation draft of planning policy guidance note 11 (PPG11) "Regional Planning" last month, together with new guidance on the preparation of development plans (PPG12). Planning policy guidance note 3 "Housing" (PPG3) was published for consultation last week. It introduces a new sequential approach to the release of housing land which will require local planning authorities to consider the re-use of existing property and of previously developed land before releasing greenfield land for housing development. The National Land Use Database is now being compiled and I expect to publish first results shortly.

Together, these represent the Government's new policy direction to planning for housing and mark a clear departure from what has become known as the "predict and provide" approach favoured by the previous Government. That policy is dead.

It has been the practice to publish periodically projections of household growth in England. In keeping with that, the Government Statistical Service (GSS) will be publishing a report later this year setting out the household projections for the period 1996 to 2021 together with a full description of the methodology by which those projections are derived.

The household projections are one input to the process of regional planning, a new round of which is currently in progress. I have therefore decided to make available the main projections for England and the English regions in advance of publication of the full GSS document.

The number of households in England is projected to have grown from 20.2 million in 1996 to about 24.0 million in 2021, an increase of 3.8 million or about 150,000 households per year. It is a smaller increase to that previously projected for the period 1991 to 2016 which was 4.4 million or around 175,000 households a year.

The most important explanation for the reduction in the projected rate of household formation is the changes contained in the most recent marital status projections published by the Government Actuary's Department in January. Recent evidence has shown that cohabitation is increasing at a faster rate than expected, leading to a greater increase in the number of couple households by 2016 than assumed in the previous projections. Changes in the marital status assumption have also led to downward revisions in the proportions of older women who are widows or divorcees.

The projections are not forecasts, estimates or predictions. They are based entirely on what might be expected to occur if previous trends continue and are heavily dependant on the assumptions involved. Such trends can and do change as a result, for example, of demographic or economic factors, as the new cohabiting assumptions show.

I therefore agreed with the Select Committee to publish information about how sensitive the projected total number of households at 2021 might be to changes in underlying assumptions. This information is as follows in tabular form at the end of this statement but, for example, a 1 per cent. change in real interest rates may affect the national projection by over 200,000 households in either direction.

The conclusion of the analysis is that the projected growth of 3.8 million in the number of households in England between 1996 and 2021 is not a precise figure. It reflects one of the potential outcomes but it could be subject to some variability.

In keeping with previous published projections, I am today also announcing household projections for each of the Government Office regions. Again, the Government do not regard the projections as forecasts or predictions of the number of households likely to form. If the new regional projections are compared on a like-for-like basis with those published previously, they indicate a reduced rate of household formation in all regions except the South East where the rate of growth is stable. The projections are as follows:

Household projections: Government Office Regions[1]

	1996 millions	2021 millions	1996–2021 percentage change	1991–2016 percentage change
North East	1.1	1.2	8	16
Yorkshire and the Humber	2.1	2.4	14	19

There are insufficient data available to undertake a sensitivity analysis on the regional projections. However, a significant factor in determining regional household growth is migration from and to other regions and there are some indications that this may be particularly sensitive to economic factors. In this respect, the Government do not believe that past migration trends are necessarily representative of future patterns of regional growth.

Regional projections are published as one input to the process of regional planning. As our consultation draft of PPG11 "Regional Planning" indicates, the household projections should be taken into account in assessing a region's housing needs. Other factors should equally be taken into account so that regional planning bodies should, against the background of need and capacity, take a realistic and responsible approach to planning future housing provision.

The household projections I am publishing today relate to England as a whole and English regions. I recognise that similar information at sub regional level could be useful as background for the regional planning process and the preparation of Regional Planning Guidance and my Department will therefore be writing to the regional planning bodies to make relevant information available in a form consistent with that published as part of the last set of household projections in 1995. The statistics are inherently less reliable at this level of detail and I expect the information to be used only to inform debate as an extrapolation of past trends and not to be used to 'predict and provide'. Rather, I look to regional planning bodies to use their new flexibilites to take account of all relevant factors, against the background of need and capacity, in considering the distribution of growth within a region.

The variations shown are consistent with those exemplified by the Government Actuary's Department in their respective publications on the underlying national population projections and marital status projections. The changes in household formation are not additive.

British Rail

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what make of car has been made available to the new chairman of British Rail; and on what terms. [78802]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The car arrangements for executive Board Members of British Railways are determined by the Board. I understand that the Board has a pool car, which will be available to the Chairman when required.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Enterprise

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the Scottish Office budget for Scottish Enterprise in cash terms and at 1998–99 prices for (a) 1992–93, (b) 1993–94, (c) 1994–95, (d) 1995–96, (e) 1996–97, (f) 1997–98 and (g) 1998–99; and what is his estimate for (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–01 and (iii) 2001–02. [76863]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 16 March 1999]: The Scottish Office Budget for Scottish Enterprise in cash terms and at 1998–99 prices for the years 1992–93 to 1998–99 and the plan figures for 1999–2000 to 2001–02 are as follows:

£ million

Year	Budget	1998–99 prices
1992–93	448.8	520.8
1993–94	451.3	510.1
1994–95	466.9	520.4
1995–96	464.4	502.9
1996–97	476.9	501.1
1997–98	449.5	460.7
1998–99	455.2	455.2
1999–2000 (plans)	427.1	416.7
2000–01 (plans)	435.4	414.4
2001–02 (plans)	468.1	434.68

Plan figures for 1999–2000 are subject to adjustment to reflect annual and in year, post CSR changes to baseline provision. Changes to Scottish Enterprise budget reflects a reduction on their property activities; re-phasing of the Hyundai project, and a realignment of existing training programmes to reflect the introduction of the New Deal, in which Scottish Enterprise will play a key role.

About £300m of New Deal resources will also be available in Scotland over the lifetime of this Parliament by way of Employment Service spending.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Fire Service Budget

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the Scottish Office budget for fire services in Scotland in cash terms and at 1998–99 prices for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98 and (d) 1998–99; and what is his estimate for (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–01 and (iii) 2001–02. [76867]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 16 March 1999]: Fire services in Scotland are a local government responsibility. Total financial provision made available by the Secretary of State for local authority spending on fire services in the form of Grant Aided Expenditure, and capital allocations, together with direct central Government expenditure, has been as follows:

£ million

Year	Cash Terms	1998–99 Prices
1995–96	149	161
1996–97	164	173
1997–98	184	189
1998–99	189	189
1999–2000	197	192
2000–01	206	197
2001–02	213	198

As from 1 July 1999, financial provision for the fire service in Scotland will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Fox Control

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the financial support provided by his Department to fox control associations. [78334]

Mr. Macdonald: Financial support, amounting to 50 per cent. of approved expenditure, is provided to recognised Fox Destruction Clubs under a scheme to prevent the predation of lambs. Total support has averaged around £70,000 per annum in recent years.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Greater Glasgow Health Board

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland for what reason figures on the cancellation of hospital admissions by health boards for the quarters ending 31 March 1997 to 31 December 1998 are not available for hospitals in the Greater Glasgow Health Board area. [78228]

Mr. Galbraith: Information on the cancellation of hospital admissions in the Greater Glasgow Health Board area is not available for the periods requested because of concerns over the accuracy and completeness of the available data, and the consequent misrepresentation of the true position. This is due to difficulties associated with the computerised Patient Administration Systems. Greater Glasgow Health Board and the NHS Trusts are currently working together to resolve this problem, and they expect to be able to provide accurate information on cancellations of hospital admissions, via the new national data collection process to be introduced shortly.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Prisoners

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the sentence range of the prison population for each of the last five years; and what estimate he has made of the current number of inmates with (a) drug and (b) alcohol problems. [78800]

Mr. McLeish: The available information on the average daily sentenced prison population by length of sentence for each of the last five years is provided in the following tables.

Interim figures for the period April 1998 to February 1999 indicate that 25 per cent. of prisoners are testing positive for drugs of abuse, down from 29 per cent. in the financial year 1997–98. Final figures for the financial year 1998–99 will be reported in the 1998–99 Scottish Prison Service Annual Report and Accounts.

There is no direct information available on the current number of inmates with alcohol problems. However, the following information may be of value.

In a study involving a representative sample of prisoners (Cooke, 1994), the level of alcohol dependence among the population was found to be 18.3 per cent. for females and 38.1 per cent. for males. In a more recent study (Gilchrist and Hooke, 1997) conducted in Greenock prison 29 per cent. of prisoners reported that they were drinking over the weekly safe limit for men as set by the Inter-Departmental Working Group. And, in a recent study in Cornton Vale (Loucks, 1997), an estimated 10–15 per cent. of women were found to be addicted to alcohol.

From 1 July 1999, these will be matters for the Scottish Parliament.

NHS Waiting Lists

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each month between 1 April 1998 and 31 January 1999 NHS waiting list figures in Scotland. [79063]

Mr. Galbraith: NHS in Scotland waiting list figures are published quarterly. The inpatient and day case waiting list on 31 March, 30 June, 30 September and 31 December 1998 is provided in the table.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Press Releases

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will set out the conventions governing the propriety and cost of press releases issued by her Department, its agencies and non-departmental bodies; and what is the total cost of the press releases issued since May 1997. [71467]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 16 February 1999]: The cost of Information Services issuing press releases from May 1997 to date is as follows:

Paper £63.75

Post £44,032.40

Total £44,096.15

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many press releases have been issued by her Department, its agencies and non-departmental bodies in each of the years 1990 to 1998. [71452]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 16 February 1999]: The Information Services have issued the following press releases:

Year
1990	(approx) 1,380
1991	(approx) 1,400
1992	(approx) 1,250
1993	1,355
1994	1,080
1995	1,223
1996	1,117
1997	1,180
1998	1,313

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the total number of occasions when (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity since 2 May 1997. [76825]

Marjorie Mowlam: There have been 5 occasions when a departmental special adviser has accompanied me aborad in an official capacity since 2 May 1997. There are no non-departmental special advisers. All travel complied with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and Civil Service Management Code.

Bomb Alerts

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the (i) dates, (ii) times, and (iii) location of each bomb alert in Northern Ireland since 1 September 1998, of which the RUC are aware. [77749]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Green Transport Plan

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what involvement fleet managers have had in drawing up her Department's Green Transport Plan. [77973]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 22 March 1999]: Northern Ireland Departments are pursuing the target for having Green Transport Plans for all headquarters buildings and main buildings occupied by Government Departments and Executive Agencies by March 1999 and for all other key buildings by March 2000. There are no fleets associated with these buildings.

Census Returns

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list all Public Records Act 1958 instruments that have prescribed periods of (a) extended retention or (b) extended closure of decennial census returns for Northern Ireland; and if she will list the class numbers, census years and periods mentioned in the schedules. [78444]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Public Records Act 1958 does not apply to Northern Ireland in respect of access.

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the total annual storage and maintenance costs for all 1841 to 1991 decennial census returns in Northern Ireland. [78436]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Public Record Office holds census records for 1937, 1951, 1961, 1966, 1971, 1981 and 1991. The annual storage and maintenance costs are £39,495.

Parades Commission

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many visits and of what length the Chairman of the Parades Commission has made to Northern Ireland since the inception of the Parades Commission. [79178]

Mr. Ingram: The Chairman of the Parades Commission has paid 100 visits to Northern Ireland, 69 of which have involved one or more overnight stays.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many authorised officers of the Parades Commission have been remunerated over the past 12 months; how they are appointed; and under what terms. [79177]

Mr. Ingram: Since 1 April 1998, a total of 13 persons have been remunerated as Authorised Officers of the Parades Commission. The Authorised Officers are contracted to the Parades Commission by the Mediation Network for Northern Ireland, which is responsible for their appointment and terms of employment.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much the Parades Commission has budgeted for in the coming year for (a) Chairman and Parades Commissioner remuneration, (b) the costs for civil servants seconded to the Parades Commission, (c) the remuneration of authorised officers of the Parades Commission, (d) travelling expenses and (e) office rent. [79173]

Mr. Ingram: The answers are as follows:

(a) £180,000 (£30,000 pay costs for Chairman + 6 x £25,000 for Members)

(b) £254,000 (pay costs for civil servants)

(c) £84,000 (pay costs for Authorised Officers)

(d) £35,000 (travelling expenses for Chairman, Members and Secretariat)

(e) £64,000 (office rent).

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much the Parades Commission has (a) spent to date on and (b) budgeted for consultancy, broken down by spending on (i) training of monitors, (ii) monitoring of parades, (iii) opinion surveys, (iv) project planning, (v) recruitment campaigns, (vi) media advice and (vii) legal costs in the coming 12 months. [79172]

Mr. Ingram: (a) I would refer to the answer given to the hon. Member for Bromsgrove (Miss Kirkbride) on 17 March 1999, Official Report, columns 697–98. Unfortunately the figure given in my reply was incorrect. The total amount paid for consultancy and related services since the inception of the Parades Commission is £267,000. A breakdown of the expenditure is given here.

Training for Stewards/Monitors	42,000
Monitoring research	20,000
Opinion surveys	4,000
Project planning	2,000
Recruitment campaign	10,000
Media and publicity advice and services	122,000
Legal Advice and services	6,000
Surveys, research, other training etc	31,000
Associated costs (advertising, printing etc.)	30,000

(b) The budgeted figure for Consultancy and related services in 1999–2000 is £230,000. This budget is not broken down at this stage into the lower level detail outlined for expenditure to date.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will break down the (a) running costs and (b) programme expenditure of the Parades Commission for the coming year by main spending items. [79171]

Mr. Ingram: The information is as follows:

(a) Running costs—£329,000: £254,000 pay and £75,000 general administrative expenditure (travel and subsistence, office equipment, telecommunications etc.).

(b) Programme costs—£818,000: £64,000 rent, £20,000 publications/printing; £246,000 Mediation Network for Northern Ireland charges, including Authorised Officer costs and related expenditure; £229,000 Commission Members' and Chairman's total costs, £160,000 professional advisers' costs; £50,000 education and monitoring costs; and £49,000 telecommunications, courier charges etc.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when she expects to publish the Parades Commission's Annual report. [79176]

Mr. Ingram: The Parades Commission expects to publish its Annual Report towards the end of April 1999.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will place in the Library a copy of the Parades Commission's consultation document on its proposed changes to its Procedural Rules, the Code of Conduct and Guidelines. [79175]

Mr. Ingram: Copies of the consultation document containing proposed changes to the Code of Conduct, Procedural Rules and Guidelines were placed in the Library of the House on 26 March 1999.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the (a) persons and (b) organisations to whom the Parades Commission has issued for consultation its proposed changes to its Procedural Rules, the Code of Conduct and Guidelines; and if she will (i) provide a list of those who have responded formally to the Parades Commission's consultation document and (ii) make a statement on the further consultation the Parades Commission is undertaking. [79174]

Mr. Ingram: The Parades Commission has consulted a wide range of individuals and organisations about the proposed changes to its statutory documents. These include loyal orders, residents and community groups, business organisations, churches, academics, voluntary bodies, and political representatives. In addition, the Commission placed public notices in the daily newspapers drawing attention to the consultative process, and posted full details on the Commission's website. Respondents to the consultation have not been advised that their response or identity could be made public. It would therefore be inappropriate to list their names here.

The Commission is considering carefully the responses it has received in relation to the draft statutory documents.

DEFENCE

Defence Agencies (Employment)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people are currently employed by the (a) Army Technical Support Centre, (b) Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency, (c) Defence Estates Organisation and (d) Defence Dental Agency; and what the figure was at each Agency's establishment. [71944]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 25 February 1999]: This is a matter for the Chief Executives of the Agencies concerned. I have asked them to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Brigadier A. D. Ball to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 29 March 1999:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the employee numbers for the Army Technical Support Agency (ATSA), as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the ATSA.

The ATSA had 1,085 employees on 1st February 1999, and had 1,274 employees at its Agency launch date on 25th October 1995.

I hope that you find this information helpful.

Letter from Ian C. F. Andrews to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 29 March 1999:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence concerning the number of people currently employed by the Defence Estate Organisation, and employed at the time of the Agency's establishment, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Estate Organisation.

The number of people current employed across the Defence Estate Organisation is 1,423. At the Agency's establishment, on 1 April 1997, there were approximately 1,400.

Letter from Air Vice-Marshal I. G. McIntyre to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 29 March 1999:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number of people currently employed and the figure on formation of the Agency, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Dental Agency.

The Defence Dental Agency currently has 1185 personnel on the payroll of whom 134 are uniformed dental staff within the command of The Health Alliance (THA) British Forces Germany. Payroll responsibility for these staff was transferred to this Agency with effect from 1 April 1998.

Strength on formation of the Agency on 1 March 1996 was 1043. At that time dental staff within THA were not included in the strength.

Letter from C. J. Boyle to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 29 March 1999:

Further to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency (AFPAA), these matters fall within the Chief Executive's responsibility. However, as he is currently away from office, I am replying on his behalf.

When the Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency (AFPAA) formed on 1 April 1997, it employed a total of 1171 staff, comprising both Service and civilian personnel.

Through the Private Finance Initiative (PFI), AFPAA formed a public/private partnership with EDS to deliver most of the Agency's services on its behalf. In order to ensure the continuity of current services and to provide a significant input to the development of new systems, most of the Agency's civilian staff transferred to the private sector, when the partnership became effective on 1 January 1998. The Agency, therefore, currently employs 269 staff.

I hope this explains the position.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many Gulf War veterans, medically tested as part of his Department's research programme, have shown signs of uranium-related illness; and if he will make a statement; [72940]

(2) how many Gulf War veterans have had a medical test since the research programme commenced; and how many are waiting for a test. [72931]

Mr. Doug Henderson: A Gulf veteran who is, or has been, concerned about his or her health may be receiving or have received care, including testing, under various auspices. The Ministry of Defence has only centralised data in respect of its Gulf Veterans' Medical Assessment Programme (MAP). This was established in 1993 to provide veterans who believe that their health may have suffered as a result of the Gulf conflict with as full a diagnosis as possible of their medical conditions. During an assessment at the MAP, all referred veterans receive a standard set of screening tests and are asked by the examining MAP physician to provide detailed information about possible factors to which they may have been exposed during the Gulf conflict. As at 18 March 1999, 3,021 Gulf veterans had been referred to the MAP for a medical assessment. Of these, 34 were waiting to be seen for the first time and 201 had failed to appear for one or more appointments; hence, a total of 235 have yet to receive any tests at the MAP.

With regard to the testing of UK Gulf veterans for the presence of depleted uranium (DU), I refer the hon. Member to a detailed paper setting out my Department's position, which I published on Friday 19 March 1999. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

The MAP is not a research programme. The Ministry of Defence is funding a range of studies into different aspects of Gulf veterans' illnesses. One of these studies—a neuromuscular symptoms study being conducted by a team led by Doctors Michael Rose and Mohammed Shareif at King's College, London—involves carrying out clinical tests on Gulf veterans. A further study on UK Gulf veterans under Professors Simon Wessely and Anthony David of King's College, London, which is being funded by the US Department of Defense, is also conducting clinical tests on UK Gulf veterans. Both these research teams are conducting their studies independently of MOD and we do not have access to the data collected, including any clinical findings.

Naval Manning Agency

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people are currently employed by the Naval Manning Agency; what was the figure at its inception; on what date the Naval Manning Agency published its report for 1997–98; and what was the cost of production of the report. [76895]

Mr. Doug Henderson: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Naval Manning Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Rear Admiral J. M. de Halpert to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 29 March 1999:

I am replying to your questions to the Secretary of State about the number of people employed in the Naval Manning Agency and the costs of publication of the Agency's 1997 98 Report, as these matters fall within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Naval manning Agency.

The Agency currently employs 278 people including four part-time personnel. On Vesting Day (1 July 1996) the Agency employed 292 personnel.

The proof copy of the Agency's 1997–98 Annual Report and Accounts was produced on 28 January 1999, and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House. The final version of the Report is currently with the printers and should be published in April. The cost is expected to be similar to last year's at around £1,600.

I hope you find this helpful.

Weapons Testing (Scotland)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what testing of depleted uranium weapons has taken place in Southern Scotland. [77356]

Mr. Doug Henderson: [holding answer 18 March 1999]: Since the test-firing of depleted uranium (DU) based ammunition was approved in 1979 all testing of such ammunition in southern Scotland has been conducted at Kirkcudbright and West Freugh (near Stanraer). The trials at West Freugh, which took place in 1988 and 1990, tested Vulcan Phalanx ammunition and were very limited in nature, with only 200 small calibre rounds (around 20kg) being fired. The testing of 120mm DU-based ammunition for the Challenger main battle tank, which takes place at Kirkcudbright, started in 1982. Since the end of the Challenger tank development programme in 1997 this testing has been significantly reduced and currently only a small number of rounds are fired each year to check manufacturing quality.

Armed Forces (Uniforms)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's contracts for uniforms for the armed forces were awarded to United Kingdom textile companies in each of the last five years. [77468]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 18 March 1999]: The number of contracts awarded to UK textile companies in each of the last three Financial Years is as follows:

1996–97: 155 contracts

1997–98: 300 contracts

1998–99: 358 contracts.

Earlier details are not available as information on clothing and textile contracts placed by my Department has only been recorded centrally for the last three years.

Cadet Centre, Chorley

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what facilities the new cadet centre in Chorley will provide for cadets; and if these will be the same as at the existing centre on Devonshire Road in Chorley. [77474]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 18 March 1999]: The new cadet centre will provide offices, classrooms and activity area, toilet and washing facilities, secure storage facilities, and a rifle range. All facilities currently enjoyed by the cadets will therefore be reprovided in this new centre, which will be for their sole use.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what efforts Her Majesty's Government are making to obtain medicinal and scientific data about the effects of depleted uranium-based ammunition in Iraq. [77258]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 18 March 1999]: Officials from the Department for International Development (DfID) have been in discussion with the World Health Organisation (WHO) concerning possible projects to improve the overall health situation in Iraq. DfID expects to receive formal proposals — for example, to improve epidemiological surveillance in Iraq, to establish links between medical institutions outside Iraq and to improve Iraq's cancer registration system — from the WHO shortly, which the Government will consider carefully.

The Government are well aware of suggests that there has been an increase in ill-health — including deformities, cancers and birth defects — in southern Iraq, which some commentators have attributed to the use of depleted uranium (DU) based ammunition by Coalition forces during the 1990–91 Gulf conflict. However, the Government have not seen any peer-reviewed epidemiological research data on this population to support these claims and therefore cannot comment on them further. There is currently no evidence that the illnesses of the types described, including cancers, are uniquely associated with exposure to DU. The Government would, of course, consider carefully any medical or scientific data which was presented on this subject.

Sexual Offences (Armed Forces)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in the last year for which figures are available there has been an allegation of (i) rape and (ii) sexual assault within the United Kingdom by a member of the armed forces; and in each case (a) how long a time elapsed before the civil police were informed, (b) if the alleged victim was advised and assisted to ensure there was no inadvertent destruction of evidence, (c) if charges were brought, and (d) where a conviction was secured, what sentences were imposed. [78325]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Ordnance Requalification

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of requalification for (a) 155 mm artillery projectiles, (b) 105 mm artillery projectiles, (c) 120 mm tank projectiles, (d) rocket motors for Sea Wolf and Sea Skua missiles and (e) explosives for ejector seat systems, and what is his estimate of the proportion of the cost that is met from his Department's funds. [78190]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The typical requalification cost for an artillery or tank round of ammunition is about £2 million, of which about £1.5 million is for the charge. For rocket motors the cost is about £5 million and for ejection seat cartridges up to £1 million. Costs vary significantly according to the circumstances, as does the proportion of cost to be met by the Ministry of Defence. These amounts should be set in the context of the overall value of the procurement contracts, which often amount to many tens of millions of pounds. For example, the Extended Range Ordnance/ Modular Charge System contract is worth around £100 million.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many ammunition products for United Kingdom military use will have to be subject to requalification procedures by his Department. [78189]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 22 March 1999]: All ammunition products require Ordnance Board qualification before they are made available for United Kingdom military use. Requalification of explosive products is required whenever there is a prolonged break in production or there has been a change in manufacturer, manufacturing process, or source of raw materials. Therefore it is not possible to determine precisely which future ammunition requirements will induce requalification.

Ammunition (Overseas Suppliers)

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what quotations have been obtained from overseas suppliers for the supply of ammunition products previously supplied by Royal Ordnance Bishopton. [78185]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 22 March 1999]: None. The MOD procures ammunition as a finished product, not as individual components. It is a matter for the prime contractor to choose the source of each of the components, such as casing, explosives, fuses and propellant. British Aerospace has announced that it intends to close Royal Ordnance Bishopton by late 2000. We expect the factory to continue to participate in work on Ministry of Defence contracts awarded to Royal Ordnance and other prime contractors until that date.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the overseas countries from which the United Kingdom currently obtains ammunition products; and if he will list the value of each contract. [78187]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The Ministry of Defence currently procures ammunition products from the USA, France, Germany, Italy, The Netherlands, Norway, Spain, Belgium, Israel, Canada and South Africa. The costs associated with individual contracts are commercially sensitive and I am therefore withholding this information under Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the memorandums of understanding that exist between the United Kingdom and overseas ammunition suppliers. [78188]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 22 March 1999]: Her Majesty's Government normally conclude Memorandums of Understanding only with other national Governments. There are no MOU with overseas ammunition suppliers.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions (a) he and (b) his officials have had with overseas ammunition suppliers in the past year; and if he will list the companies that have been consulted. [78182]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 22 March 1999]: I have not had any discussions about the supply of ammunition with any overseas companies in the past year. However, Ministry of Defence officials have regular contacts on a wide range of issues with defence companies at all levels. These include obtaining information on product ranges and capabilities, the discussion of tenders, and the management and performance of contracts. Details of such contacts in the past year are not held centrally. However, a search of available records indicates that contacts took place with the following ammunition suppliers: Aerojet, Alliant Tech Systems, Armtec, Atlantic Research Corporation, Boeing, Day and Zimmerman, Lockheed Martin, Olin Winchester, Primex, Raytheon, and Team MACS of the USA; Aerospatiale, Celerg, CTA International, and GIAT of France; Alenia, Europea Metalli, Fiat Avio, and Simmel of Italy; Buck Technologies, Diehl, Dynamit Nobel, EBV, GIWS, Junghans, LFK, Mauser, MEN, and Rheinmetall of Germany; MECAR of Belgium; Hirtenberg of Austria; Miltec, Oerlikon, and Swiss Munitions of Switzerland; Eurometaal of The Netherlands, Lapua of Finland, Bofors of Sweden; NAMMO, and Raufoss of Norway; Expal, International Technology of Intallaza of Spain; INDEP of Portugal; Bristol Aerospace, and SNC of Canada; PINDAD of Malaysia; CIS of Singapore; Denel/Somchem, Denel/Swarklip, Denel/Naschem, Pretoria Metal Pressing and Vector of South Africa; IMI, and Rafael of Israel; ADI of Australia; and Micron of India.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment his Department has made of its overseas-based ammunition suppliers with respect to (a) security of supply, (b) exchange rate risk and (c) ability to supply ammunition promptly; [78191]

(2) what assessments have been made of the security of supply provided by each of the United Kingdom's overseas ammunition suppliers; and if he will make a statement. [78186]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The Ministry of Defence considers carefully the issue of security of supply before placing equipment contracts with overseas suppliers. Where necessary, we seek suitable safeguards to ensure satisfactory security of supply.

Contracts contain specific conditions designed to ensure prompt delivery of defence equipment and ammunition products. In order to eliminate exchange rate risks, we aim to place all overseas orders in Sterling. Where this is not possible, we use a variety of measures, including the advance purchase of Deutschmarks and US dollars, to minimise the risk of adverse movements in these currencies.

Royal Ordnance Bishopton

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from the Department for Trade and Industry regarding the closure of Royal Ordnance Bishopton; and if he will make a statement. [78183]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 22 March 1999]: I consulted other Government Ministers, including my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, about the issues surrounding the recent decisions on the Multi Year Buy and Extended Range Ordnance/Modular Charge System competitions, including the impact on Royal Ordnance Bishopton and other Royal Ordnance sites. In addition to work associated with the Modular Charge System, Royal Ordnance informed the Ministry of Defence that it would require further work to be directed to Bishopton, without competition, for the plant to remain open. Even then, the work force would have had to reduce by almost half to around 150 employees. We concluded that £20 million cost premium to keep a much reduced Bishopton open in the short term did not represent good value for the taxpayer.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which foreign Governments have been consulted with regard to the re-sourcing of ammunition supplies to UK forces following the closure of Royal Ordnance Bishopton. [78181]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 22 March 1999]: We have not formally consulted foreign Governments about the supply of ammunition after the closure of Royal Ordnance Bishopton, nor is there a need to do so. We routinely conduct international competitions for the procurement of ammunition. These show that there are many friendly and reliable alternative sources in Europe and further overseas. In the event of an urgent, unforeseen demand for ammunition, we would secure further supplies from friends and allies, as we have successfully done in the past. To facilitate such procurements the UK is a signatory of the international Joint Ballistic MOU, together with France, Germany, Italy and the US, which allows for the strategic and tactical interchange of 155mm ammunition.

Somchem Contract

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the value for money of the contract to supply artillery shell propellant from Somchem; and if he will make a statement. [78192]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 22 March 1999]: Somchem was a clear winner of the competition for the sub-contract for the Modular Charge System for the AS90 howitzer on both cost and technical grounds. The decision to award Somchem the contract, therefore, represents best value for money.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what defence industrial considerations were taken into account in the award of the artillery shell propellant contract to Somchem. [78184]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 22 March 1999]: We considered defence industrial issues very carefully before deciding to procure the Modular Charge System contract from Somchem. We concluded that Royal Ordnance would still be capable of continuing as a major supplier of a wide range of ammunition to the Ministry of Defence. The company remains a key player in the European ammunition business with a continuing role in the future rationalisation process for the industry.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department made of the impact of the current value of the South African Rand when awarding the artillery shell propellant contract to Somchem; and what arrangements have been set in place in the contract with regard to exchange rate fluctuation. [78193]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The contract price for the sub-contract for the supply of the Modular Charge System for the AS90 howitzer has been specified in Sterling. The value of the South African Rand, therefore, has no effect on the contract.

Aircraft Carriers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies he has carried out on the potential to upgrade the Royal Navy's aircraft carriers to meet future requirements. [78777]

Mr. Spellar: Concept studies have examined the feasibility of upgrading and extending the life of the current Invincible-class aircraft carriers. These studies established that the vessels would not be able to meet future requirements. However, there will be further analysis to establish the baseline against which the cost-effectiveness of the future carriers will be assessed.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which companies have been invited to tender for the future Royal Navy aircraft carrier; and what criteria were used to select the companies. [78781]

Mr. Spellar: British Aerospace Defence Systems, Marconi Electronic Systems, Boeing, Lockheed-Martin, Raytheon and Thomson-CSF have been invited to tender for the initial assessment phase of the future aircraft carrier. They were selected from the companies that had expressed interest in the tender, following an assessment of their ability to deliver the programme to cost, time and performance.

155 Transport Regiment

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the possibility of transferring 155 Transport Regiment to North Wales. [78570]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 25 March 1999]: 155 Transport Regiment does not exist. 157 Transport Regiment, whose headquarters is based in Cardiff, has a number of sub-units that are based in South Wales and no consideration was therefore given to transferring the headquarters to North Wales.

Mr. Tony Geraghty

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons, on what date, in what circumstances and manner and under what powers Mr. Tony Geraghty was arrested; when his bail will be ended; what charges are in prospect against him; and if his Department plans to take action in relation to his recently published book. [79019]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Mr. Tony Geraghty's home address was searched on 3 December 1998, under warrant, by Ministry of Defence Police officers investigating alleged offences against the Official Secrets Acts, concerning his book "The Irish War". Mr. Geraghty was arrested and placed on unconditional police bail, he is due to answer his bail on 22 April 1999. A file has been prepared by the Ministry of Defence Police and submitted to the Crown Prosecution Service. The Crown Prosecution Service will determine whether or not Mr. Geraghty will face charges. The Ministry of Defence Police were acting under powers conferred by the Ministry of Defence Police Act 1987.

HMS Vengeance

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 March 1999, Official Report, columns 571–72, on HMS Vengeance, what components were found to be defective; when they were replaced; what effect their failure had on the state of the submarine's reactor; what steps he is taking to enure the safety of similar components on other nuclear powered submarines; and if he will make a statement. [78916]

Mr. Spellar: Two of the Main Coolant Pumps of the rector system were found to be defective. Both pumps continued to provide full output, but showed early signs of longer term degradation in performance. They were replaced between 9 February and 17 March this year. There was no effect on the submarine's reactor. To ensure the safety of such equipment on other nuclear submarines, routine equipment monitoring is undertaken as a matter of course. The original pumps from HMS Vengeance will undergo detailed examination to confirm the cause of the defect.

Chinook Crash

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if the members of the RAF Board of Inquiry investigating the fatal crash of RAF Chinook ZD 576 in 1994 were informed, at the time of the Inquiry, of his Department's case against Textron Lycoming, the manufacturers of the full authority digital engine control system; [78381]

(2) if Boeing treated the full authority digital engine control system fitted to the Chinook Mk2 as flight safety critical at the time of the RAF Chinook crash in June 1994; [78380]

(3) if his testing and evaluation organisation at Boscombe Down treated the full authority digital engine control system fitted to the Chinook Mk2 as flight safety critical at the time of the RAF Chinook crash in June 1994. [78379]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Air Accidents Investigation Branch personnel investigating the crash of RAF Chinook ZD576 in 1994, were informed, at the time of the investigation, of the Ministry of Defence case against Textron Lycoming, the manufacturers of the Full Authority Digital Engine Control system. [78792]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Procurement Programmes

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many defence procurement programmes are running overtime; and in each case by how long. [79101]

Mr. Spellar: Information on time overruns against the original approval on the top 25 defence procurement programmes is published by each year in the Comptroller and Auditor General's reports on the Ministry of Defence "Major Projects Report". Copies of these are in the Library of the House.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Child Soldiers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the countries with which she has had recent discussions concerning the use of child soldiers; and if she will make a statement. [78544]

Mr. Foulkes: Neither I or the Secretary of State have personally had any recent discussions on this issue with countries in which child soldiers are a problem.

This is, however, an issue of deep concern to our Department. In late 1997 the Secretary of State spoke to President Museveni of Uganda about the abduction of many thousands of children by the Lord's Resistance Army, most of whom are forced to become child soldiers or concubines. In Sierra Leone, the British High Commissioner has just agreed with the President Kabbah that children under the age of 16 will be excluded from enlistment in the Sierra Leone armed forces or the civilian defence forces; and that any children taken into custody by ECOMOG will be handed over to UNICEF at the earliest opportunity. We have also provided assistance for children affected by conflict in countries such as Liberia and Sri Lanka.

We have had a number of meetings with the UN Secretary-General's Special Representative for Children and Armed Conflict, Mr. Olara Otunnu, the most recent being on 16 March in London. Mr. Otunnu briefed us about his recent travels in the Great Lakes Region and Sudan. We have offered our full support to ensure that his lobbying and advocacy work to reduce the use of child soldiers is followed up and given practical effect on the ground. Plans for this are under discussion between Mr. Otunnu, UNICEF and our officials.

DFID recently issued the "Policy Statement on Conflict Reduction and Humanitarian Assistance" which describes our general approach to defusing tensions and building sustainable peace through targeted conflict reduction strategies. Progress in implementing these will also help eliminate the child soldier problem.

Departmental Staff (Ethnic Origin)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will provide a breakdown, in numerical and percentage terms, of the ethnic origin, at 1 March, of (a) her private office, (b) Government special advisers, (c) her policy unit and (d) staff in total. [78500]

Mr. Foulkes: (a) Information on the ethnic origin of staff in the Private Office cannot be provided as the small numbers involved could lead to the identification of individuals, contrary to the Code of Practice agreed with the Civil Service trade unions.

(b) In relation to special advisers, I would refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office to my hon. Friend the Member for Brent, East (Mr. Livingstone) on 22 February 1999, Official Report, column 39.

(c) DFID does not maintain a separate Policy Unit in support of Ministers.

(d) My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office will provide this information centrally.

EU Aid

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what representations she has made to the European Commission in the past 12 months about improving the effectiveness and transparency of the EU aid budget; [79065]

(2) what specific steps she has taken in the past 12 months to ensure that the United Kingdom contribution to the EU aid budget has been spent effectively. [79066]

Mr. Foulkes: In December we published our 18 point strategy to improve EC development spending. It has been widely disseminated in the Commission and other member states. Our paper describes the specific, practical measures the Department for International Development is to take to maximise the contribution of the EC's development programmes to the international poverty eradication strategy. The Secretary of State and our officials are pursuing vigorously our strategy with the Commission and with other EC member states for redirecting EC resources to the poorest countries, and for improving the effectiveness and transparency of EU aid spending. The Secretary of State discussed these issues frequently with her European opposite numbers, most recently in Berlin on 18 March and both she and I have had a number of discussions with Members of the European Parliament on this.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much of her budget will be channelled through the EU aid budget in the financial year 1999–2000. [79099]

Mr. Foulkes: We currently forecast expenditure of £750m through the EC in 1999/2000, comprising £248m through the European Development Fund, and £520m through EC budgetised programmes.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many times she or her Minister met former European Commissioner Cresson to discuss EU aid in the past 12 months. [79064]

Mr. Foulkes: At no time in the last 12 months have I, or the Secretary of State met former EU Commissioner Cresson to discuss EU aid.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Human Genetics

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those members of advisory committees to his Department who have declared outside interests with (a) DiaDexus, (b) Cerebus Ltd., (c) SmithKline Beecham, (d) Stanford University, (e) Human Genome Services Inc, (f) Glaxo Wellcome, (g) the Wellcome Institute, (h) Monsanto, and (i) AgrEvo; and if he will specify in each case the advisory committee to which they belong and the nature of the declared interest. [76242]

Mr. Battle: Members of the following executive non-departmental public bodies and advisory committees have declared interests in the organisations listed by the hon. Member.

Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council

Prof. J. Goodfellow:

Chairman of the Wellcome Trust Molecular and Cell Panel, and member of the Base Science Interest Group. Prof. Goodfellow is also married to the senior Vice-President and Head of research for SmithKline Beecham.

Medical Research Council

Prof. L. K. Borysiewicz:

Consultant for SmithKline Beecham. Holds a Wellcome grant.

Prof. E. Johnstone:

Consultant for SmithKline Beecham. Holds a Wellcome Fellowship or grant.

Dr. T. W. Robbins:

Consultant for SmithKline Beecham. Holds a Wellcome Fellowship or grant.

Prof. J. Bell:

Holds a Wellcome Fellowship or grant.

Prof. R. Mirsky:

Holds a Wellcome Fellowship or grant.

Prof. A. M. McGregor:

Holds a Wellcome Fellowship or grant.

Council for Science and Technology

Sir Richard Sykes:

Chairman, Glaxo Wellcome PLC

Human Genetics Advisory Commission

Dr. G. Poste:

Non-Executive Chairman of Diadexus and Cerebrus. Board member of SmithKline Beecham. Also lists in "Who's Who" the fact that he is a Governor of the Centre for Molecular Medicine and Genetics at Stanford University.

Industrial Development Advisory Board

Dr. R. Hawley:

Shareholder of SmithKline Beecham and Glaxo Wellcome PLC.

The Monopolies and Mergers Commission register of members' interests relates to details of potential conflicts of interest registered by members relevant to particular inquires on which they are serving. No interests in the organisations listed by the hon. Member have been registered by such serving members over the last year. The register can be examined on the MMC's website.

Wellcome Trust

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has made to the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, or to his appointed inspector, in relation to the re-opened inquiry into the Wellcome Trust's application for planning permission at Hinxton Hall in South Cambridgeshire. [76070]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 11 March 1999]: I have made no representations either to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, or to his appointed inspector in relation to the re-opened inquiry into the Wellcome Trust's application for planning permission at Hinxton Hall in South Cambridgeshire.

Manchester United

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he is planning to publish his conclusions on the BSkyB bid for Manchester United. [76354]

Mr. Byers: I shall publish the MMC's report as soon as is practicable.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the total number of occasions when (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity since 2 May 1997. [76836]

Mr. Byers: Since 2 May 1997, Special Advisers have travelled abroad on 12 occasions. All travel complied with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

US Import Duties

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what plans he has to compensate all United Kingdom exporters affected by the increase in import duties in the United States; and if he will make a statement; [76784]

(2) if he will compensate fine art publishers for the costs of the increase in United States import duties; and if he will make a statement. [76777]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 15 March 1999]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 4 March that the Government had decided to establish a scheme for the cashmere knitwear industry to guarantee the bonds requested by the United States. The mere threat of US action had been having a particularly significant effect on cashmere, in view of the highly seasonal nature of that industry.

The services of my official are at the disposal of other industries for advice while urgent consultations continue within the European Union and the Word Trade Organisation.

Company Licences

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list for (a) small and medium enterprises and (b) larger companies (i) all licences and permits issued by his Department and its agencies to companies permitting them to carry out their business, (ii) the cost of each such licence or permit in (A) 1997–98 and (B) 1999–2000 and (iii) the current number of companies which are in receipt of each such licence or permit. [76855]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 16 March 1999]: It is not possible to distinguish between small and medium-sized enterprises and large companies in the manner requested.

Private Motor Vehicles (Imports)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his Department's assessment of the effect on Exchequer revenues of the retail purchase and subsequent importation into Britain of private motor vehicles from (a) European Union countries and (d) non-European Union countries. [78133]

Dr. Howells: No figures exist on the effect on Exchequer revenues of importation of private motor vehicles.

Slough Heat and Power

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will announce his decision on Slough Heat and Power Ltd.'s application to extend its existing combined heat and power generating station. [79386]

Mr. Battle: I have today granted consent under Section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 to Slough Heat and Power Ltd.'s application for construction of a 11 MW extension to its existing 80 MW Combined Heat and Power station. The extension, fuelled by 80,000 tonnes of mainly processed waste paper annually, has also today been given planning permission. The decisions have been taken in accordance with the policy set out in the White Paper entitled "Conclusions of the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation and Government response to fourth and fifth Reports of the Trade and Industry Committee" (Cm 4071).

Planning permission has also been granted after consultation with the Slough Borough Council which did not object to the application subject to 40 conditions being included.

Decisions on other applications under consideration will be announced in due course.

Copies of the Press Notice and decision letter are being placed in the Library of the House.

Droite de Suite

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the proposed imposition of droite de suite on the British art market and its likely impact on the work of his Department. [77372]

Dr. Howells: The Directive would cause very real difficulties to the United Kingdom, threatening earnings and jobs in the London art Market. We cannot agree to the Directive as it stands at present. As a result of the Government's previous efforts, significant improvements have been made. However, they do not go far enough and we shall be continuing to work with our EU partners on ways in which the impact of the Directive on the UK can be reduced so as to ensure that we get the best possible deal for Britain. If, and when, the Directive is adopted, the Department of Trade and Industry will be responsible for transposing it into national law, but will do so only after the widest consultation with those most affected.

PRIME MINISTER

Working Time Directive

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Prime Minister how many civil servants in his office have been invited to waive the Working Time Directive requirement to work less than 48 hours a week on 17 consecutive weeks; how many civil servants in his Department have refused to waive the requirement; and what is the total cost of compliance with the Directive. [76814]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 22 March 1999, Official Report, column 53. Information in respect of my office was included in this answer.

Unscom

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 8 March 1999, Official Report, column 15, on Unscom, if he made any contact with the United States Administration when preparing his reply; and if he sought any clarification of the allegations of United States signals intelligence operations under the cover of Unscom in Iraq, from United Kingdom nationals working for Unscom. [78156]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) on 8 March 1999, Official Report, column 15, where I set out the position with regard to these matters.

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Prime Minister if he has discussed with representatives of the biotechnology industry the introduction of a voluntary three-year halt in the planting of herbicide-tolerant genetically modified crops. [77681]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 19 March 1999]: Government officials have been discussing with representatives of the biotechnology industry their proposals for the introduction of genetically modified crops for commercial growing by farmers once all relevant approvals have been granted. Officials have been seeking to obtain assurances from the biotechnology industry that the commercial introduction will be restrained until results from the farm scale evaluations indicate that commercial activity may take place in accordance with the concept of managed development as set out by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment in his statement to the House of Lords Select Committee on EC Regulation of Genetic Modification in Agriculture on 21 October 1998.

The farm scale evaluations are to allow careful studies of the effects of larger scale cultivation of these crops on farmland wildlife, as compared to conventional crops. No specific timescale for commercial introduction has been agreed. We will move to allow cultivation only when we are satisfied that we have enough information about the environmental impacts to be able to make a sound decision.

Tax Take

Mr. Jack: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library his analysis showing that the amount of tax, in pounds, to be paid in (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–2000, (c) 2000–01 and (d) 2001–02 will not increase as a result of the proposals put forward by the Chancellor of the Exchequer. [77996]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 22 March 1999]: As my right hon. Friend the Chancellor announced in his Budget statement, 9 March 1999, Official Report, columns 173–90, as a result of the Budget measures there will be net tax cuts to support work, enterprise and families. Further details can be found in table 1.3 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report.

Departmental Responsibilities

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Prime Minister by which Secretary of State parliamentary questions on the proposed unified Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Department of Trade and Industry trade promotion operation will be answered. [78440]

The Prime Minister: Questions may be addressed to either Secretary of State, since, as was made clear in the announcement on 12 March 1999, Official Report, columns 399–400, the unified FCO/DTI trade promotion and development operation will be the joint responsibility of the Secretaries of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, and for Trade and Industry.

President Suharto

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Prime Minister if he will establish an investigation into the extent of the United Kingdom assets of former President Suharto, of Indonesia, his family and close associates; and if he will freeze the United Kingdom assets of former President Suharto pending the outcome of the results of such an investigation. [78589]

The Prime Minister: Allegations into criminal conduct over which the United Kingdom has jurisdiction are a matter for the police to investigate. United Kingdom confiscation legislation does not permit the restraint of property pending the outcome of any such investigation. Restraint is only obtainable when proceedings have been or are about to be instituted against a person. The powers with respect to international requests for restraint are very similar once a country has been designated by an Order in Council. Indonesia has not, however, been designated for this purpose. It is open to any party which considers that it has a claim to property to avail itself of the normal procedures available in the civil courts.

Child Poverty

Mr. Field: To ask the Prime Minister what measures he uses to define child poverty for the purposes of forming policy. [78482]

The Prime Minister: Child poverty is complex. It is characterised by a number of related factors which can include persistent low family incomes caused by parental unemployment, as well as other factors such as low educational attainment, poor housing and poor health. What therefore matters is taking action in all these areas as we are doing to improve the life chances of all the children in Britain today.

Sudan

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Prime Minister on how many occasions he discussed with the US authorities the evidence presented by them to justify their bombing of the Sudanese factory. [78863]

The Prime Minister: It is established practice that under Section 1(c) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information not to disclose or discuss information received in confidence from foreign Governments.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Prime Minister how many people were (a) injured and (b) killed as a result of the US bombing of the Sudanese factory; and if any of these were military personnel. [78862]

The Prime Minister: As I told the House on 10 March 1999, Official Report, columns 364–65, the attack on Al-Shifa was retaliation for the death of more than 100 innocent people by acts of terrorism in Africa; no one was killed in it. There are no confirmed reports about injuries.

Nigeria

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to visit Nigeria. [79062]

The Prime Minister: Although my plans are not yet fixed, I hope to visit Nigeria later this year.

HEALTH

Black and Ethnic Minorities

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to revise the 1993 good practice guidance on black and ethnic minorities in the NHS. [73882]

Mr. Denham: The contribution of black and ethnic minority staff to the National Health Service is invaluable. As part of our commitment to modernise the NHS, we are determined that all NHS workplaces will be free from racial harassment and discrimination. To that end, we recently launched a major programme of action by publishing "Tackling Racial Harassment in the NHS—A Plan for Action". This, together with the Equalities Framework, to be published later this year, will provide tough targets and standards which all NHS employers must meet.

Capital Investment (Wakefield)

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the time scale for his decision in relation to the Strategic Outline Case for additional capital investment in Wakefield district hospitals. [78719]

Mr. Denham: An announcement on the outcome of the 3rd Capital Prioritisation Exercise will be made shortly.

Pharmacists' Pay

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the percentage increase in pharmacists' pay for 1998–99; and what was the average percentage increase of other NHS salaries. [78756]

Mr. Denham: Hospital Pharmacists on national terms and conditions of service received pay increases of 2 per cent. from 1 April 1998 rising to 3.8 per cent. from 1 December 1998. The same increases were awarded to nurses and the professions allied to Medicine and to all other non-review body staff.

Community pharmacy contractors' remuneration, was increased by 3 per cent. for 1998–99.

Hospital and community health service doctors received increases of 2 per cent. from 1 April 1998 rising to 4.2 per cent. from 1 December 1998.

National Health Service managers on the new national and residual national arrangements received no national increase in 1998 but provision was made for increases to be determined locally. Trust chairs were asked to ensure that the cost of individual pay rises for board members and senior managers were contained within an overall cash envelope of 2.7 per cent.

Anti-impotence Treatment

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the responses received to the consultation on the proposals to restrict the prescribing of anti-impotence treatments on the NHS to specific groups of men; and if he will make a statement. [78788]

Mr. Denham: We have received approximately 800 responses to the consultation which ended on 25 March 1999. No assessment of these has yet been made.

Ship Inspections

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many ships were found to be unhygienic as a result of inspection of ships for nuisance; and how many special notices were served under the provisions of the Public Health (Ships) Regulations 1979 in each year since 1990. [78993]

Ms Jowell: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on 10 March 1999, Official Report, columns 245–46.

Greenwich Millennium Celebrations

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the additional demands upon health services in Greenwich and Lewisham arising from the millennium celebrations; and what additional resources have been made available to the relevant health authorities to meet this demand. [79313]

Mr. Denham: The National Health Service Executive's London regional office is assessing the mechanisms needed to ensure the NHS and partner organisations are well placed to manage the Millennium.

Resources will be given to any affected Health Authorities to cover the cost of additional inpatients admitted to local hospitals from other areas.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with (a) Bexley and Greenwich Health Authority and (b) Greenwich Healthcare NHS Trust regarding the millennium celebrations; and if he will make a statement. [79312]

Mr. Denham: The National Health Service Executive's London regional office is in close and regular contact with local health authorities and NHS trusts, as well as local organisations and stakeholders, on the subject of the millennium celebrations, and will ensure local plans are robust.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the additional demands upon the London Ambulance Service arising from the millennium celebrations; and what additional resources have been made available to the service for this purpose. [79314]

Mr. Denham: The London Ambulance Service is forecasting a 12 per cent. increase in workload in December 1999 and January 2000 over the corresponding months this winter. It is difficult to forecast demand for the night of 31 December/1 January as it is not yet entirely clear what major events will be taking place.

The London Ambulance Service has drawn up proposals to maintain and improve its response to emergencies over the next 12 months, including the Millennium celebrations and is in discussion with health authorities and London regional office of the National Health Service Executive on the implementation and funding of those measures necessary to achieve this.

Human Vaccines

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what decisions were taken on the basis of information obtained from the investigations into BSE (a) to discontinue use of human vaccines and (b) to destroy stocks of human vaccines. [78801]

Ms Jowell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to his three questions on 25 March 1999, Official Report, column 378.

Cancer

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he proposes to (a) designate and (b) accredit a cancer centre for the North West of England as recommended by the Calman-Hine report; [79238]

(2) if he will list his criteria for (a) designating and (b) accrediting regional cancer centres; [79237]

(3) on what dates the regional cancer centres for each region of England and Wales were accredited; [79235]

(4) what factors underlie the length of time taken to accredit a regional cancer centre for the North West of England. [79236]

Mr. Denham: There are no rigid criteria for the designation and accreditation of cancer centres. Flexibility in the early stages of implementation of Calman/Hine reflected regions' different starting points and allowed for approaches to the designation and accreditation process to fit local circumstances. In the North West, accreditation is carried out by external clinical audit and quality control of clinical services. This process will be developed and implemented for cancer centres in the North West in 2000–01.

As part of our work to bring Calman/Hine into line with the national service framework model, we are developing a set of common national standards and performance measures against the new performance framework which will apply across the country. These will be supplemented by a new set of milestones against which progress in implementing Calman/Hine and achieving national targets can be measured.

Food Standards Agency

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many posts will be deleted from establishment in his Department as a result of the establishment of the Food Standards Agency. [79031]

Ms Jowell: There are 76 people in the Joint Food Safety and Standards Group in the Department. These posts will transfer to the Food Standards Agency when it is established.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Education Action Forums

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will set out the legal status of each education action forum; and if that legal status entitles each forum to be exempt from the payment of VAT. [79032]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Action Forum has the legal status of a corporate body. The forum also has exempt charitable status, and all forum members are trustees. The forum is not exempt from the payment of VAT.

Education Action Zones

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will set out the procedures by which his Department monitors the receipt of payments in (a) cash and (b) kind from businesses to education action zones. [79034]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department monitors the receipt of business contributions by education action zones through the financial returns which zones make. A summary of these contributions will be available as part of the audited accounts for each zone for the financial year 1998–99.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if Ofsted will be given responsibility for inspecting education action zones. [79033]

Ms Estelle Morris: Yes.

Education Services

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will list the organisations on the short-list of bodies considered suitable to take over the services of local education authorities and the bodies on the short-list for offering consultancy services; [79022]

(2) if he will list the criteria used to determine the suitability of organisations to be on the short-list of bodies to take over the services of local education authorities or to offer consultancy services; [79023]

(3) what is the basis for his decision not to include the Local Government Association in the list of bodies suitable to take over the services, or offer consultancy to, local education authorities. [79024]

Ms Estelle Morris: As I stated in my reply of 22 February 1999, Official Report, column 18, 98 expressions of interest were received for consultancy work and 107 for the delivery of LEA functions. We are currently conducting negotiations and seeking further information from a number of selected organisations. It is normal commercial practice not to divulge the names of such organisations, as to do so could jeopardise the chances of a fair competition. DfEE officials have written to the LGA, setting out the reasons why they were not successful at the first stage. We hope to announce in April the lists of those organisations which we intend to use to provide consultancy services or to act as function providers. The criteria on which our selection is based are as follows:

Strand 1—improvement action plans.

Evidence provided by the applicant to demonstrate their track record of working with service providers in order to improve service delivery performance.

The evidence should demonstrate a track record of work involving identifying and prioritising tasks and objectives;

analysing roles and functions within organisations; development and assessment of the suitability of options and alternative methods of delivery; detailed implementation and monitoring/management of action plans.

Strand 2—specification preparation and related work

Evidence demonstrating work that requires a proven track record of understanding the type and nature of services provided by LEAs.

Evidence demonstrating that the applicant has prepared service related tender/contract specifications.

Evidence demonstrating the applicant's understanding of the methodology and processes involved in specification preparation.

The quality and nature of the reference sites that the applicant has named for what they consider to be relevant work.

Strand 3—contract and project management

Evidence demonstrating a track record in handling complex contract and project management arrangements.

Evidence demonstrating that they have successfully taken over the management of complex or sensitive contracts or projects at short notice.

Strand 4—financial costings

Evidence demonstrating that the applicant has a track record of establishing base-line service delivery costs.

Evidence demonstrating a track record of undertaking effective efficiency reviews.

Function Providers.

For each strand, applicants were considered on the basis of the evidence they presented on

Their track record of providing services related to that strand or comparable services;

How their experience made them a suitable candidate for an approved list of suppliers for that function strand;

How they intended to develop the specific capabilities required for that function strand.

A range of more specific evidence was considered for each function strand, and I will write to the hon. Member setting these out.

Education Funding Delegations

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many requests have been received by his Department for hon. Members to bring a delegation to meet a Minister to discuss education funding (a) in the past year and (b) in the last three months; and how many of those requests have been refused. [79030]

Mr. Mudie: This information is not recorded and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, but Local Education Authorities have been provided with an average 5.5 per cent. increase in funding for education for the coming year, compared with a 2.4 per cent. increase in inflation and a teachers' pay increase of 3.5 per cent.

Special Schools

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of whether any special schools will close following his Department's programme for action on special educational needs; and if he will make a statement. [79026]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Colchester (Mr. Russell) on 11 March 1999, Official Report, column 314.

Statutory Instruments

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on what date he made the decision to lay (a) S.I., 1999 No. 447 and (b) S.I., 1999 No. 606 before the House. [79028]

Ms Estelle Morris: Statutory Instrument 1999 No. 447 relating to the Education (Grants for Education Support and Training) (England) Regulations 1998 (Amendment No. 2) Regulations 1999 were laid before Parliament on 26 February 1999. S.I. 1999 No. 606 relating to The Education (Education Standards Etc. Grants) (England) Regulations 1999 were laid on 9 March 1999.

Work Permit Applications

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the current average waiting time for an application to the Immigration and Nationality Department for a work permit; and what was the average waiting time in each of the previous three years for which figures are recorded. [78661]

Ms Hodge: Applications for work permits are made to the Department for Education and Employment's Overseas Labour Service. Records are kept on the proportion of applications cleared within four and eight weeks:

	1998–99 (estimated)	1997–98	1996–97
Proportion cleared within four weeks	70	66	73
Proportion cleared within eight weeks	93	91	95
Numbers cleared	73,000	62,258	53,718

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Select Committee Reports

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on (1) what date (a) he and (b) his Department received the leaked copy of the Foreign Affairs Committee First report of Session 1998–99 on Foreign Policy and Human Rights (HC100); and by what method it was received; [77760]

(2) what date (a) he and (b) his Department received the leaked copy of the Foreign Affairs Committee Third report of Session in 1998–99 on European Union Enlargement (HC 86); and by what method it was received. [77835]

Mr. Robin Cook: I refer to my earlier answer to the hon. Member on 4 March 1999, Official Report, column 876.

Overseas Commercial Posts

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a list of overseas commercial posts for United Kingdom-based staff, showing in each case the current grading and indicating for each grade the proportion commercial posts represent of all overseas posts at their grade. [78442]

Mr. Fatchett: I am placing in the Library a list of UK-based overseas jobs with more than 50 per cent. Commercial content. The proportion commercial work represents of the work of all frontline staff overseas at these grades is as follows:

	Percentage
SMS	13.9
DS5	18.9
DS6	46.5
DS7	31.0
DS9	7.3

Frontline work excludes time spent on management or support functions.

Conventional Armed Forces in Europe Treaty

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he has tabled for revising the 1990 conventional armed forces in Europe treaty; and when he next expects to discuss them with (a) the UK's NATO allies, (b) former Soviet bloc countries and (c) other European countries. [78748]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The UK contributed to NATO's comprehensive proposals for adapting the CFE Treaty which were tabled at the negotiations in Vienna during 1998. These proposals, along with ideas from other Treaty parties, are being discussed in Vienna by officials from all 30 States Parties to the Treaty, with a view to signature of an adapted Treaty at the OSCE Summit in November 1999. Other OSCE states are briefed regularly on progress in the talks.

Diplomatic Notes

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about (a) his policy with respect to issuing diplomatic notes to foreign Governments and (b) his policy in respect of the failure of a foreign Government to respond to such a note. [78749]

Mr. Fatchett: British Embassies and High Commissions use diplomatic notes as a customary vehicle for written communication with Ministries of Foreign Affairs in accordance with accepted diplomatic practice.

There is no set policy if a foreign Government fail to respond to a diplomatic note. They are under no formal obligation to reply. If they choose not to, we would consider what action to take in the light of the circumstances of the case.

Egypt (Abductions)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) reports he has received and (b) representations he has made concerning the abduction of Suhir Shihata Gouda in Egypt. [79309]

Mr. Fatchett: We have recently received reports about Suhir Shihata Gouda from international NGOs. Our Embassy in Cairo is making inquiries into the background.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Egyptian authorities about the abduction of Christian women in Egypt. [79310]

Mr. Fatchett: We regularly make representations to the Egyptian authorities when we receive reports of human rights abuses against anyone, regardless of gender or religion. This includes reports of abductions.

Overseas Trade Services

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 18 March 1999, Official Report, column 765, on overseas trade services, if he will place in the Library the relevant accounts for the overseas trade services income for 1997–98. [79311]

Mr. Fatchett: Details of overseas trade service income and expenditure for 1997–98 are contained in the 1999 Foreign Commonwealth Office Departmental Report which will be issued on 31 March 1999; copies will be placed in the Library.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Refreshment Department

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee if he will make a statement on the effect on services for members and staff of the Refreshment Department's modernisation programme. [77415]

Mr. Dennis Turner: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer I gave on 15 February 1999 to my hon. Friend the Member for Crewe and Nantwich (Mrs. Dunwoody), Official Report, columns 421–22, and to my letter of 4 March which was sent to all hon. Members. In my letter, I set out in detail the catering facilities which will, and those which will not, be available to hon. Members and staff during Phase F of the Refreshment Department modernisation programme.

Retirements

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Council if she will discuss with the House of Commons Commission, the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis and officers of the House means by which hon. Members can be informed of prospective retirements and departures of long-serving staff. [77411]

Mrs. Beckett: I have asked the Serjeant at Arms to write to my hon. Friend about this matter.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Departmental Staff (Ethnic Origin)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Council if she will provide a breakdown, in numerical and percentage terms, of the ethnic origin, at 1 March, of (a) her private office, (b) Government special advisers and (c) her Policy Unit. [78509]

Mrs. Beckett: On 1 March 1999 there were six staff in my Private Office, none of whom was of ethnic minority origin. As regards Special Advisers, I would refer my hon. Friend to answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Brent, East (Mr. Livingstone) by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 22 February 1999, Official Report, column 39.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Maclean: To ask the President of the Council what assessment she has made of the 9.9.99 computer bug in formulating Government policy on the millennium bug. [77545]

Mrs. Beckett: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Vale of York (Miss McIntosh) on 22 March 1999, Official Report, column 7.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what safeguards the Government plans to impose to guard against cross-pollination with non-genetically modified plants when genetically modified foods are planted commercially. [75138]

Mr. Rooker: The issue of cross-pollination is considered by the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment (ACRE) when examining each application for release of genetically modified (GM) crops. Appropriate conditions (e.g. separation distances) may be included in a consent, but a consent would not be granted if ACRE considered the risks associated with cross-pollination to be unacceptable. In addition the Government have encouraged the development of industry guidelines which will set out best practice for growing GM crops, and these guidelines will include minimum separation distances between GM and non-GM crops.

Pig Industry

Mr. Sawford: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the financial impact on the British pig industry of the new stall and tether regulations. [75844]

Mr. Rooker: The legislation to ban sow stalls and tethers was introduced in 1991 and allowed the industry an eight year phase-out period. The Government estimate made at that time was that the total compliance cost to industry would be in the region of £9 million taking account of the phase-out period and that many systems would in any case need to be replaced for other reasons.

Farmers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to adopt an early retirement scheme for farmers; and if he will make a statement. [78023]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 22 March 1999]: Support for early retirement is one of the measures provided for in the Rural Development Regulation, recently agreed by the Agriculture Council as part of the CAP reform negotiations. Detailed implementing rules still need to be agreed. No decision has yet been made on which of the measures in the Regulation will be implemented in the UK. We are currently evaluating the views expressed by farmers and other interested parties as a result of the consultation exercise launched in January. Now that the Regulation has been agreed, we will be putting forward more detailed proposals for consultation, taking account of the funds available.

Genetically Modified Animal Feed

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if it is his Department's policy that products derived from animals which eat genetically modified animal feed are safe for human consumption. [78722]

Mr. Rooker: Yes. The Advisory Committee on Novel Food and Processes considers the human food safety implications of animals fed genetically modified material to ensure this.

Farming

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to encourage rotation of planting by (a) species of crops and (b) area of UK farms. [78540]

Mr. Rooker: It is for farmers to decide how best to manage their crop rotations to achieve profitability and meet customer requirements. The Government's role is to provide an appropriate policy framework, which is why it has pressed for CAP reforms aimed at reducing the distortions caused by production-linked subsidies. The Government also aid conversion to organic farming, which relies on crop rotations to maintain soil fertility.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of food-producing land in England is devoted to monoculture. [78541]

Mr. Rooker: The information is not available in the form requested. Information on agricultural land use can be found in "Agriculture in the United Kingdom 1998" which was published on 16 March 1999 and a copy placed in the Library of the House.

Genetically Modified Food Substances

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will provide a list of food substances available in the UK containing genetically modified contents. [78783]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 26 March 1999]: All genetically modified foods on sale in the UK have been approved following a rigorous safety assessment. The Government do not keep details of the use of ingredients in individual food products. However, wherever GM ingredients from GM soya or maize are present in foods, this must be declared in accordance with the requirements of EC Regulation 1139/98 and the Food Labelling (Amendments) Regulations 1999. The only other GM product currently on the market, tomato paste, has been clearly labelled by the manufacturer on a voluntary basis since its launch in 1996.

EU Duties and Subsidies

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what import duties are applied by the European Union to (a) dairy products and (b) meat products from each country of supply; and what subsidies are given on the same goods exported from the EU. [78942]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 26 March 1999]: Figures for the annual import duties applied by the European Union to meat and dairy products are published in the Official Journal of the European Communities, L 292, Volume 41, 30 October 1998, entitled: "Commission Regulation (EC) number 2261/98 of 26 October 1998" amending Annex 1 to Council Regulation (EEC) No. 2658/87 on the tariff and statistical nomenclature and on the Common Customs Tariff.

Additional import duties may be applied on entry to the European Union when certain poultrymeat products are imported at very low prices that may disrupt the internal market. Commission Regulation No 1484/95 implements the system for applying additional duties in the poultrymeat sector, which is published in the Official Journal of the European Communities L 145, 29 June 1995. In order to implement the WTO Brazil/EU Disputes Panel ruling this was amended by Commission Regulation No 623/1999 introducing a new system for calculation which took effect on 25 March 1999. Some imports of beef and veal are allowed into the Community under certain limited concessionary import schemes, but these concessions are limited to a quantity of beef that amounts to 5 per cent. of total community production.

Export refunds for certain dairy products are published in Commission Regulation (EC) No 532/1999 of 11 March 1999, fixing the export refunds on milk and milk products which can be found in the Official Journal of the European Communities, L 63, 12 March 1999. Export refunds for certain pigmeat products are published in Commission Regulation (EC) No 332/1999 of 12 February 1999, which can be found in Official Journal of the European Communities, L 40, 13 February 1999. The latest rates of export refunds for beef and veal were published on 16 March 1999 and can be found in Commission Regulation 565/1999, which can be found in Official Journal of the European Communities, L 70 of 17 March 1999. Export refunds for certain poultrymeat products are published in Commission Regulation (EC) No 395/1999 of 23 February 1999, which can be found in Official Journal of the European Communities, L 48, 24 February 1999. This reflects the remaining refund availability since quota volumes for other products under WTO rules have been exhausted for the year July 1998–99.

Copies can be found in the House Library.

WALES

NHS Staff (Bridgend)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many doctors were employed by Bridgend and District NHS Trust on 30 September 1996. [78006]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: There were 173 doctors (153.7 whole-time equivalent) employed by Bridgend and District NHS Trust as at 30 September 1996.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) nurses and (b) mental care nurses were employed by Bridgend and District NHS Trust on (i) 30 September 1996 and (ii) 30 September 1997. [78005]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Information on nurses employed by Bridgend and District NHS Trust is shown in the following table.

	30 September 1996		30 September 1997
	Number	Whole time equivalent	Number	Whole time equivalent
Nurses	1,575	1,355	1,591	1,357
Mental care nurses	663	630	657	621

Staff employed in the nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff group.

Staff employed in the community psychiatry, other psychiatry, community learning disabilities and other learning disabilities services.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Social Inclusion Programme

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a detailed breakdown of Welsh budget provision for (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02 under the Social Inclusion Programme. [78771]

Mr. Michael: I announced allocations for a dedicated Social Inclusion Programme in December 1998. The amounts are set out:

	£ million
1999–2000	8.0
2000–01	10.0
2001–02	30.0

There are many other budgets across the range of Welsh Office programmes that also contribute to the objective of fostering social Inclusion.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the total amount of charges on matrimonial properties held by the Legal Aid Board. [78519]

Mr. Hoon: The precise impact of the statutory charge can be identified only when all moneys due by way of costs and contributions have been collected into the Fund. The total principal quantified as subject to the statutory charge on property was £196.2 million at the end of March 1998. This amount relates mainly, but not exclusively, to properties which are subject to the charge as a result of matrimonial proceedings. The amount therefore does include statutory charges on property arising out of non-matrimonial proceedings. It is not possible to provide a breakdown between outstanding matrimonial and non-matrimonial charges.

There was £32.8 million accrued interest for outstanding statutory charges on property as at 31 March 1998.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the net cost of matrimonial legal aid for each of the past five years. [78518]

Mr. Hoon: The net cost of matrimonial legal aid, for each of the past five years was as follows:

Year	£
1993–94	266,725,000
1994–95	296,624,000
1995–96	324,862,000
1996–97	345,668,000
1997–98	343,287,000

Conditional Fee Insurance

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what discussions he has had with insurers about the development of the insurance market for conditional fee insurance; and how he proposes to regulate the market. [78520]

Mr. Hoon: My officials and I are in regular contact with the insurance industry on the development of all aspects of legal insurance. Responsibility for the regulation of the insurance market rests with Her Majesty's Treasury. The provision of legal expenses insurance is subject to statutory and self regulation. Insurance companies trading in the United Kingdom have to be authorised in accordance with the Insurance Companies Act 1982. In addition, most companies agree voluntarily to abide by the industry statements and codes of practice of the Association of British Insurers.

Departmental Staff (Ethnic Origin)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will provide a breakdown, in numerical and percentage terms, of the ethnic origin, at 1 March, of (a) his private office, (b) Government special advisers, (c) his Policy Unit and (d) staff in total. [78502]

Mr. Hoon: Information relating to ethnicity in the Lord Chancellor's Department is not usually given where numbers are small enough to enable identification of individuals. This practice complies with an agreement between the Trade Unions and the Department, and assurances given to staff when they are asked to provide the information. However, as the special adviser to the Lord Chancellor and all staff in my private office (irrespective of ethnic origin) have consented to provision of this information, and the Trade Unions have consented to publication, the information requested at (a) and (b) is set out in the table.

The Lord Chancellor's Department does not have a "Policy Unit" as referred to at (c).

The Minister for the Cabinet Office will provide the information requested at (d) for all departments.

Ethnic Origin	Number	Percentage
(a) Minister of State's Private Office
White	3	50.00
Black—of Caribbean origin	1	16.67
Asian—of Indian origin	1	16.67
Asian—of Bangladeshi origin	1	16.67
Response rate		100.00
(b) Government special advisers
White	1	100.00
Response rate		100.00

Immigration Adjudicators

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department how many appeals were made to the Immigration Appeal Tribunal against decisions of an immigration adjudicator in cases in which he has made a decision to deport in the last year for which figures are available. [78616]

Mr. Hoon: This information is not collected and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department how many adjudications are required to deal with appeals against entry clearance refusals; and what estimate he has made of the number needed in each of the next five years. [78690]

Mr. Hoon: The information provided is based on the assumption that it is the number of adjudicators, and not adjudications, that is required. There are 50 full-time and 200 part-time adjudicators and approximately 17 per cent. of their time, equivalent to 2,500 sitting days per year, is spent on appeals against decisions by entry clearance officers. Current plans for the next three years assume that 1,750 days will be necessary per year, rising to 2,250 when the provisions of the Immigration and Asylum Bill for appeals against refusals of visas for family visits, if approved by Parliament are implemented. No forecasts have been made beyond the next three years.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the average waiting time for an adjudicator to determine an appeal against refusal to (a) vary and (b) extend leave to remain. [78624]

Mr. Hoon: Data of this nature in the categories requested is not retained by the Immigration Appellate Authority (IAA). The Immigration Appellate Authority are able to list appeals before adjudicators within approximately 6–8 weeks. Decisions are then typed and sent out. On average this takes 5 weeks.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department in how many of the asylum appeals remitted by the Immigration Appeal Tribunal to the special adjudicator the appeal was allowed by the special adjudicator in each of the last five years. [78675]

Mr. Hoon: This information is not collected and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the average time for a special adjudicator to determine an asylum case remitted to him from the immigration tribunal from the time the case is remitted in the last year for which figures are available. [78678]

Mr. Hoon: The Immigration Appellate Authority are currently able (as at 24 March 1999) to list appeals heard by the Tribunal (both asylum and non asylum) but remitted back to an adjudicator, for hearing within approximately 6–8 weeks. Decisions are then typed and sent out. On average this takes 5 weeks.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the average waiting time for (a) a decision on leave to appeal and (b) the determination of the appeal itself in the case of appeals against refusals to vary or extend leave to remain from an adjudicator to the Immigration Appeal Tribunal in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [78644]

Mr. Hoon: Specific data in the form requested are not retained by the Immigration Appellate Authority.

Immigration Appeal Tribunal

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what proportion of (a) the legally qualified members and (b) the lay members of the Immigration Appeal Tribunal are from an ethnic minority. [78647]

Mr. Hoon: To enable the Lord Chancellor to monitor the effectiveness of policies designed to attract more members of the ethnic community to apply for judicial appointment, candidates are requested to indicate their ethnic origin on their application. This is a recent introduction to the appointment process and candidates are not compelled to answer. Therefore, full and detailed records are not available. However, from records that are available I can indicate that the ethnic origin of the members of the Immigration Appeal Tribunal is as follows:

Of the 25 part-time legal members 11 are White, one is Asian, one is Other and the remaining 12 are unknown;

Of the 5 full-time members 4 are White and one is Asian; and

Of the 26 lay members no breakdown of ethnic origin is available.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Museums and Galleries

9. Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to encourage free admissions to local museums and galleries. [77377]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The revenue funding of local museums is outside the remit of my Department and is a matter for the governing bodies of those museums. However, museums which are registered with the Museums and Galleries Commission can apply to the £7 million HLF Access Fund. Also, for the first time, my Department is spreading its financial support to museums beyond those which it directly funds by means of a £15 million challenge fund for Designated Museums, the majority of which are outside London. By these means we are seeking to raise standards for, and access to, pre-eminent non-national collections.

28. Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the impact on museum attendance of introducing free entry for children. [77397]

Mr. Chris Smith: It is too early to give a precise indication of the impact of introducing free entry for children which I launched for museums funded by my Department at the Natural History Museum this morning.

However, the experience of the Museum of Science and Industry in Manchester, which introduced free access for children at the end of January (at the same time as a major temporary exhibition about dinosaurs), is that child admissions have risen by over 80 per cent.

Millennium Fund (Social Exclusion)

10. Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the contribution which the millennium fund will make to tackling social exclusion. [77378]

Mr. Chris Smith: The Government are committed to ensuring that the Millennium celebrations are truly inclusive, involving people from every part of the country and all sections of society. As well as promoting economic regeneration, many Millennium Commission projects are specifically designed to strengthen and empower individuals and communities, and to foster access to recreational and learning opportunities in areas where this has previously been limited.

Digital Television

11. Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the role of public service broadcasting in delivering digital services. [77379]

Janet Anderson: Digital broadcasting can offer better quality reception and a greater range of services, including interactive services. The Government are determined that these benefits should be available to as many people as possible. Public service broadcasting will have a continuing role to play in ensuring that there are a broad range of high quality services available to listeners and viewers at reasonable cost.

International Olympic Committee

12. Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the effect of the internal changes within the International Olympic Committee on a future British bid to host the Olympic games. [77380]

Mr. Banks: I welcome the recent reforms of the International Olympic Committee so far as they go, and I am sure they will help to restore some confidence in the Olympic Movement. Certainly, this Government will not be supporting a British bid for the Games until we are entirely satisfied that the host city selection process is accountable, open and transparent for all future Olympic bids.

Broadcasting (Wales)

13. Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the future of broadcasting in Wales following the establishment of the National Assembly. [77381]

Janet Anderson: The Government understand that the Welsh Assembly has a legitimate interest in broadcasting in Wales. Broadcasters help to define our national cultures in all parts of the United Kingdom and the Welsh Assembly will have much to contribute to the debate on broadcasting matters. Those based in and serving Wales will continue to benefit from the Government's commitment to regulation with the lightest possible touch. Our aim is to ensure that all viewers are offered a choice of high quality programmes which cater for all interests and all sections of the community.

Schools (Music)

14. Mr. White: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps he is taking to encourage increased musical activity in schools. [77382]

Mr. Chris Smith: I announced last summer the creation of a new independent youth music trust with £30 million ACE Lottery funding over 3 years to work to enable greater access to music making for young people. Under its new name, the National Foundation for Youth Music will go live on 12 April. This initiative, together with the Standards Fund measures announced in January this year will provide a total investment of £180 million for the improvement of music making opportunities for young people, in schools and outside.

Works of Art (Exports)

15. Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to review the rules governing the export of works of art. [77383]

Mr. Alan Howarth: I have no plans for a review of the export system generally.

Sport (Disabled People)

16. Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport in what ways he is supporting sport for disabled people; and if he will make a statement. [77384]

Mr. Banks: We are working closely with the Sports Councils to change the culture and structure of sport to ensure that all sports providers offer a wide range of opportunities to people with disabilities.

People with disabilities must be able to choose when and how they wish to participate, and opportunities should be provided for people with disabilities to be consulted, represented and employed at all levels of sport. Following a National Disability Sport conference in 1997 it was agreed to move towards the establishment of a single agency in England. The English Federation for Disability Sport will act as a first stop shop providing information and advice at regional and national level.

Libraries

17. Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to enhance Britain's library service. [77385]

Mr. Chris Smith: We are making available £70 million through the New Opportunities Fund to create content for the Public Libraries IT network and train library staff in ICT skills, and we have just announced a further £200 million, again through the New Opportunities Fund, to support the development of the network infrastructure. Libraries also potentially stand to benefit from a range of other educational programmes including the £470 million set aside for the development of learning centres under the Capital Modernisation Fund.

Tourism (Manchester)

18. Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to encourage tourism in the Greater Manchester area to coincide with the Commonwealth games in 2002. [77386]

Mr. Chris Smith: As the Government's new tourism strategy, "Tomorrow's Tourism", states, we are committed to bringing major international sporting events to this country. Euro 96 demonstrated the boost which can be given to tourism by such events. The 2002 Commonwealth Games will put Manchester and the North West on the map and will provide a great shop window for the facilities and attractions that the area has to offer the domestic and overseas visitor. Manchester City Council and other nearby local authorities are already working with the North West Tourist Board and the English Sports Council to maximise the tourism potential of these Games.

Scarborough and Whitby

19. Mr. Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how the tourism strategy will help Scarborough and Whitby to develop affordable family holidays. [77387]

Janet Anderson: As our new tourism strategy, "Tomorrow's Tourism", says, the future of our seaside resorts depends on all those involved in both private and public sectors working together to develop the sort of products now needed, with the quality and value for money which visitors expect. The strategy suggests an eight stage regeneration plan for resorts and also identifies further action which should help increase access to tourism for those with low incomes, for families, elderly people and people with disabilities.

NESTA

21. Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport by what means he will monitor the scientific value of investment through the National Endowment for Science, Technology and the Arts. [77389]

Mr. Chris Smith: The National Endowment for Science, Technology and the Arts has just finished consulting on how it intends to operate.

Means of monitoring is one of the issues that has still to be decided. As an independent body I expect NESTA to be responsible for monitoring the value of all of its investments covering science, technology and the arts. I will also expect them to report back to me with their findings.

Departmental Visual Identity

22. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement about the objectives in developing his Department's visual identity. [77390]

Mr. Chris Smith: The Department's new visual identity was designed to:

improve the Department's communications systems;

achieve better value for money in design and print purchasing; and;

produce a new logo and new design guidelines for use by suppliers and staff within the Department.

World Heritage Sites

23. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on his policy on protecting world heritage sites from damage. [77391]

Mr. Alan Howarth: World Heritage Sites are protected by a range of statutory controls. Prior consent is required for works to listed buildings and scheduled monuments, and for natural sites environmental agencies must be consulted on development proposals. Government planning guidance identifies World Heritage Sites and their settings as a key material consideration in the planning process. Management Plans also ensure a rigorous and co-ordinated approach to the protection of such sites.

Museums (Merseyside)

24. Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the impact of the introduction of a single pass for entry to all the national museums on Merseyside on attendance levels. [77392]

Mr. Alan Howarth: In the first year of the introduction of the Eight Pass (July 1997-June 1998), the National Museums and Galleries on Merseyside's annual season ticket, we estimate that there was a drop of about 27 per cent. of visits compared to the previous twelve months. However in the eleven months to the end of February 1999 there is evidence that this trend is being reversed. To enable NMGM to provide better access to its collections, we are providing it with additional funding so that the price of the Eight Pass can be pegged at its current level, and from 27 March admission to NMGM for school age children became free. NMGM also intends that there will be free admission for pensioners in April 2000.

Quest

25. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will set out the first-year programme for the agency Quest. [77394]

Mr. Chris Smith: Quest will undertake up to six major studies a year. Although the first year's programme will be finalised only once the director and advisory board are appointed, I expect it to include a review of targets and indicators used within Funding Agreements, and a review of administrative structures within national bodies in DCMS areas including the Sports Governing Bodies.

National Lottery (Yorkshire and Humberside)

26. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps he is taking to encourage the full use of national lottery money allocated this year for sporting and cultural activities in Yorkshire and Humberside. [77395]

Mr. Banks: Although National Lottery money is not allocated specifically on a regional basis, we want all regions of the country, including Yorkshire and Humberside, to receive their fair share of funds. Measures in the National Lottery Act 1998 and recent changes in Policy Directions to the distributors will help to achieve this. The investigation which the English Sports Council, the Arts Council of England, the Heritage Lottery Fund, the National Lottery Charities Board, the Millennium Commission and the New Opportunities Fund are undertaking into the reasons for the low take-up of funds in coalfield areas will also help to ensure that people in Yorkshire and Humberside benefit as much as possible from the National Lottery.

Millennium Dome (Contracts)

32. Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many zones within the Dome are sponsored with irrevocable contracts. [77401]

Janet Anderson: I would like to point out that not all sponsorship is related to the provision of zones and not all zone costs are met by sponsorship. However, irrevocable sponsorship contracts for the Communicate, Mobility, and National Identity zones have been signed. Other zone sponsors announced by the New Millennium Experience Company are fully committed at Board level and contractual negotiations are progressing well. To date the NMEC has announced £142 million of sponsorship towards the project target of £150 million.

Millennium Dome (Visitors)

34. Kali Mountford: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps are being taken to encourage young people and children from the north of England to visit the millennium dome. [77403]

37. Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to make the dome accessible to children from the north-west from low-income families. [77406]

Janet Anderson: The Millennium Experience is the focus for the nation's millennium celebrations. The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) is therefore keen to ensure that as many people as possible who wish to visit the Dome can do so and that as many people as possible have the opportunity to take part in the associated National Programme of events and activities. The company's ticket pricing structure was announced on 18 March and includes up to one million free Dome admission tickets for schoolchildren under the Education Tours Scheme. There will also be discounted education rates for students/college visits (at £14.50 each) and school visits (£8 each). Details of the full range of prices were placed in the Libraries of the House on 18 March.

The NMEC is not offering special discounts for low income families although the children of all families have the chance to benefit from free admission under the Education Tours Scheme. The overall ticket pricing structure has been informed by the experience and systems of other major visitor attractions both in the public and the private sectors. In addition to visiting the Dome, thousands of schoolchildren are taking part in the National Programme's Schoolnet 2000 project (sponsored by Tesco); the Voices of Promise project (sponsored by Marks and Spencer); and the Our Town Story project (sponsored by McDonalds).

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimates his Department has made of the numbers of people likely to visit the millennium dome in each of the next five years. [77402]

Mr. Chris Smith: During the period of the Millennium Experience—i.e. during the year 2000—the New Millennium Experience are expecting 12 million visitors. From 2001 onwards, numbers will depend upon the outcome of the competition launched by the Government on 4 March to find a long-term, sustainable and viable use for the Millennium Dome.

Millennium Dome (Financial Benefits)

35. Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate he has made of the financial benefits of the millennium dome to each UK region. [77404]

Mr. Chris Smith: No estimate has been made of the financial benefits accruing from the Millennium Dome to each UK region. However, the British Tourist Authority (BTA) has estimated the number of overseas visits to the UK in the year 2000 as 27.5 million and that as a direct result of the Millennium Experience an additional £300-£500 million of overseas tourist revenue will be brought into the UK economy. The "halo" effect could double this figure. The BTA have further estimated that 10,000 to 15,000 new tourist related jobs will be created. This is excellent news for the whole of the UK.

Millennium Dome (Regeneration)

36. Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the impact of the millennium dome on the regeneration of south-east London. [77405]

Janet Anderson: The building of the Millennium Dome, and its proposed long-term retention, will have major regenerative benefits for the whole of London including the south-east, the full effects of which will become increasingly apparent over time.

Before the decision was taken to site the Millennium Dome at Greenwich, the Greenwich Peninsula was one of the largest derelict sites in the country, suffering from heavy contamination. The extensive site preparation works and infrastructure improvements required for the Millennium Experience have acted as the catalyst for a major mixed-use development project on the Peninsula, under the direction of English Partnerships. This project, including the new Millennium Village that is being built in the southern part of the site as a model for sustainable regeneration of a brownfield site, will establish the Peninsula as a vibrant new urban quarter for London, with ensuing economic, social and environmental benefits for the south-east and beyond.

On 4 March the Government launched a competition to find a long-term, sustainable and viable use for the Millennium Dome. We are sure this will bring forward a wide range of imaginative proposals and an outcome that will be of major benefit to the whole of London.

Millennium Dome (Religion)

38. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what decision has been made about a Christian component to the New Year's eve and New Year's day celebratory events at the millennium dome. [77407]

Mr. Chris Smith: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) is currently developing plans for the opening celebrations of the Dome on 31 December this year in discussion with the Government and others including the Lambeth Group. The nature and scope of the celebrations will be announced in due course. 1 January 2000 will be the first day of operation of the Millennium Experience within the Dome. Announcements about the content of the Experience, particularly the individual exhibit zones, are being made by the company as and when it considers such announcements appropriate in the context of its marketing strategy. The company has already confirmed that displays included in the Spirit Zone will reflect the significance of the year 2000 as a major Christian anniversary and include aspects of the birth and life of Christ.

Tourism

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the works council directive's impact on the tourism industry. [77388]

Janet Anderson: The Government will be consulting widely on implementing regulations for the European Works Council Directive, which have to be in place by 15 December 1999. Tourism employers and trade organisations will therefore have the opportunity to make their views known.

Television Licence Fees

Dr. George Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the relative value for money of the television licence fee for those viewers who cannot receive the regional broadcasts appropriate to their home. [77396]

Janet Anderson: A television licence is required to install or use television receiving apparatus to receive any television programme service, as defined by the Broadcasting Act 1990. The licence fee is therefore a payment for permission to receive television broadcasts and not for a service provided. It is payable in full irrespective of the services that can be received or the use made of those services. Linkage of the level of the fee to the services available to, or used by, individual licence holders would undermine the principle of a universal licence fee to fund the BBC's services and would be wholly impractical to administer.

TREASURY

Income Tax

Mr. Pond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost to the Exchequer in the financial year 1999–2000 of replacing the reduced rate of income tax with a 10 per cent. income tax rate that extends from the personal allowance to (a) £9,433 per year and (b) £7,114 per year. [74397]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated full-year costs at 1999–2000 income levels of introducing a 10 per cent. lower rate extending for (a) £5,098 (£9,433 less the 1999–2000 personal allowance of £4,335) and (b) £2,779 (£7,114 less the personal allowance) would be £12 billion and £6 billion, respectively.

Maintenance Payments (Tax Relief)

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people will be affected by the loss of the tax relief for maintenance payments; and what the average amount of the tax relief lost will be. [76843]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 March 1999]: The latest available Survey of Personal Incomes (1996–97) shows around 300,000 taxpayers in receipt of income tax relief for maintenance payments. Of these, an estimated 20,000 will be eligible after 5 April 2000 for the maintenance relief for the 65s and over.

We estimate that the average amount of maintenance relief for 1999–2000 will be around £220.

As a result of the withdrawal of maintenance relief, approximately 10,000 people who receive maintenance under arrangements set up before 15 March 1988 will no longer be taxable on the payments they receive.

London Underground

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to review the CSR if the best value objectives for the public-private partnership for the London Underground cannot be met. [77169]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 16 March 1999]: The Government expect that the PPP will represent best value. As the progress report published by London Transport on 15 March made clear, good progress is being made with implementing the public-private partnership (PPP) for London Underground.

Ways and Means Borrowing

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the size of the Government's overdraft on the Ways and Means account at the Bank of England. [77471]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 18 March 1999]: The size of the outstanding balance of Ways and Means borrowing fluctuates each day, reflecting the seasonal and daily changes in the Government's cash requirements. At the end of February 1999, it stood at £2.8 billion.

Census and Certificate Income

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue has been derived by the Exchequer, since 1990, from the sale of (a) micro-film and other copies of United Kingdom 1841/1851 to 1991 decennial population census enumerators' books and (b) certified copies of 19th and 20th century United Kingdom birth, marriage and death certificates. [78275]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. John M. Taylor, dated 29 March 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on revenue derived from the sale of census books and birth, marriage and death certificates.

The Census Returns from 1901 and 1911 are closed to the public by virtue of Instrument 12 dated 1966 of the Public Records Act 1958. Censuses from 1921 onwards were taken under the terms of the 1920 Census Act as amended by the Census (Confidentiality) Act 1991 which gives protection to personal census information given by the public. Accordingly, there have been no sales of microfilm, or other copies, of the census enumerators' books from the Censuses for 1901–1991. Records from the 1841–1891 Censuses are open to the public and are in the custody of the Public Record Office. Disaggregated sales information from the Public Record Office Copy Service, in the form requested, is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Public Expenditure and Receipts Act 1968 requires that the costs of the service provided must be recovered by the fees levied. Each year the Economic Secretary to the Treasury conducts a review of the fees prescribed by the Registration Acts, including certificate fees, in order to advise the Chancellor of the Exchequer of the need to exercise his powers under the 1968 Act to make an order amending those fees.

Revenue relating to certificate income is as follows:

Year	£ million
1991/92	2.9
1992/93	3.2
1993/94	3.6
1994/95	4.0
1995/96	3.9
1996/97	4.4
1997/98	4.8

Information relating to earlier years could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Fuel Duty Escalator

Dr. Marek: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 25 February 1999, Official Report, column 426, if he will place a copy of his Department's environmental appraisal on the impact of the fuel duty escalator in the Library. [78401]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 23 March 1999]: The environmental appraisal of measures in the 1999 Budget is contained in table 5.1 of the 1999 Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report and Fiscal Strategy and Budget Report, which includes an environmental appraisal of the road fuel duty escalator.

Industrial Disputes

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many working days were lost in the United Kingdom in 1998 as a result of industrial disputes. [78534]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 29 March 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics, I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on industrial disputes.

The estimated number of working days lost to labour disputes in the United Kingdom in 1998 is 282,400.

Jobs (Greater London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the estimated number of new jobs created in the Greater London area in each of the last three years. [78892]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 29 March 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics, I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on job creation.

Information is only available on the net change in the number of jobs and not on the number of new jobs created. The information on net changes in jobs is derived from the Short-term Turnover and Employment Statistics. The following table shows the annual levels and net changes in Civilian Workforce Jobs between December 1996 and December 1998 (the latest available figures).

Civilian Workforce Jobs[1] in Greater London, at December

Thousand

	Level	Net change from previous year
1996	3,872	+78
1997	4,005	+133
1998	4,088	+83

Note:

1. Civilian Workforce Jobs comprise Employee jobs, Self-employment jobs and Government-supported trainees. (only the Employee Jobs component is seasonally adjusted).

New Deal (Over-50s)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he intends to implement the budgetary provision for the £60 per week supplement payable as part of the extension of the New Deal to those aged over 50 years. [78927]

Mrs. Roche: The Employment Credit for people aged over 50, announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Budget on 9 March 1999, Official Report, columns 173–90, will be available in pathfinder areas from October 1999, and nationally in 2000, alongside the New Deal for the over 50s. Further details will be announced in due course.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer of 26 January 1999, Official Report, column 235 and his oral statement on the Budget, of 9 March 1999, Official Report, column 185, if he will make a statement on the difference between the two estimates of the number of pensioner households receiving winter fuel payments. [78525]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 25 March 1999]: In his Budget Statement the Chancellor of the Exchequer was describing pensioner households within the United Kingdom whereas the DSS figure relates to Great Britain only.

Bogus Marriages

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what arrangements exist for the Registrar General to pass on information about suspected bogus marriages to (a) his Department, (b) the police, (c) the Immigration Service and (d) other relevant authorities; [78598]

(2) what guidance is currently given to registrars as to the circumstances which give rise to suspicion that a marriage will be a sham marriage for the purpose of evading immigration control; and what steps they should take to investigate such circumstances; [78602]

(3) what requirements are currently made of registrars to report marriages which they suspect are being entered into for immigration purposes to the Registrar General. [78599]

Ms Hewitt: Long standing informal arrangements exist for the Registrar General to pass information to the Immigration service. No arrangements exist for passing of information to the Home Office, the Treasury, the police or any other relevant authorities.

Where a superintendent registrar suspects that the proposed marriage of a person from abroad has been arranged for the sole purpose of evading statutory immigration controls, he is advised to report the rule facts of the case to the Registrar General.

No specific guidance is issued to registrars defining what might be a sham marriage. They are advised to report the full facts of the case, including their reasons for believing the marriage to be one of convenience, to the Registrar General. The facts and the registrar's supporting comments are then taken into account by the Registrar General in deciding whether or not to pass on details of individual cases to the Immigration Service.

Parliamentary Answers

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will respond to the question from the hon. Member for Bognor Regis and Littlehampton of 9 March for answer on 11 March (ref. 76246). [79100]

Dawn Primarolo: Shortly.

Consumer Goods

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the average retail prices of (a) private motor vehicles, (b) white goods and (c) personal computers in each European Union country in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [78132]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

No information on retail prices as such is available. The tables show the relative prices of these goods across EU countries expressed as an index. The figures shown relate prices in the EU member states to the average for the EU (shown as 100). For the years 1992 and 1993, the EU average is based on EU 12, though results for Sweden, Austria and Finland are included in the table, while the average for following years is based on EU 15.

There is no suitable aggregate for personal computers covering the years requested. 'Personal Transport Equipment' includes cars and motor and pedal bicycles, with cars making up by far the largest part of expenditure on these items. 'Household Appliances and Repairs' includes large domestic appliances, such as cookers and refrigerators, but excludes small electrical goods, such as toasters.

The figures are intended to provide a snapshot rather than a time series. Discontinuities between years arise as a result of changes in the data used (the goods for which prices are collected in one year not being strictly comparable with those used in the following year) and improvements to methodology.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his Department's estimate of the total value of goods sold in the United Kingdom in the categories of (a) private motor vehicles, (b) white goods and (c) personal computers in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [78008]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

Estimates of the value of goods sold to consumers in the United Kingdom are published by the Office for National Statistics in "Consumer Trends" and electronically on the ONS databank, which can be accessed by the House of Commons Library. Purchases of private motor vehicles are shown as series CCQI and white goods as series CDDS in table 2.1 of "Consumer Trends". Purchases of computers are not separately identified but are included within series CDGH, audio-visual goods, also in table 2.1.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Income Distribution

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of households receive their main income from (a) work and (b) benefits for each decile of the income distribution below average income, and for each of the last 10 years. [78024]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The information requested is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the tables.

Notes:

1. All figures are estimates and are taken from the Households Below Average Income (HBAI) data set which is based on either the Family Resources Survey (FRS-table 1) or the Family Expenditure Survey (FES-table 2). Unlike the FES, the FRS does not cover Northern Ireland.
2. FRS based HBAI data are not available prior to the financial year 1994–95. For this reason, FES based data (based on combined financial years, where 1995–96 denotes the combined financial years 1995–96 and 1996–97) back to 1988–89 have been provided as a supplementary table.
3. In previous years, HBAI data were mainly derived from the FES. Following a DSS methodological review in 1995, it was recommended that information from the FRS should be introduced into the HBAI series and that it should replace the FES as the main source of information on low-income households.
4. For the purposes of this analysis, 'main source of income' is defined as being the largest of the three sources of income outlined in the table above.
5. The income measure used is weekly net (disposable) equivalised household income (that is to say income that is adjusted to reflect the composition of the household).
6. The seventh decile (where decile one is the bottom decile) only partially falls below the average income figure; for this reason, figures relating to it have been excluded from the analysis.
7. It should be noted that the results are subject to year on year sampling variation and that more emphasis should be placed on looking at longer-term trends as opposed to annual variations.

Civil Servants (Appraisal)

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what were the appraisal performance markings awarded to civil servants in 1998 for (a) each agency in this Department and (b) the Department broken down by (i) grade, (ii) gender, (iii) ethnicity, (iv) part-time/full-time working and (v) disability; and for (1) each agency and (2) the Department whether the Cabinet Office's four fifths rule for detecting potential adverse impact was applied to the appraisal markings of civil servants in the 1998 report round. [78146]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available has been placed in the Library.

The Cabinet Office's "four fifths" rule is not intended to be an absolute measure and in this Department it is used to complement other tests of statistical significance.

Carers

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what steps he is taking to ensure that staff who operate (a) the Single Work Focused Gateway and (b) the Housing Benefit Service are trained to identify carers and advise them of the services available; [78546]

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure that staff who operate the Single Work Focused Gateway are trained to identify carers and advise them of the services available. [78550]

Angela Eagle: All Single Gateway staff, including those who work for local authorities, will undergo a comprehensive training programme which will ensure that they have the necessary balance of skills in order to deal with a wide range of clients, including carers. The Carers' National Association and other groups are involved in the training of Single Gateway staff.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to treat as income money granted from a college access fund where a jobseeker's allowance claimant is studying under the part-time study concession. [78728]

Angela Eagle: Arrangements for the treatment of payments from college Access Funds have been in place since the Funds were introduced in the 1990–91 academic year.

Up to £20 per week of any regular payments from Access Funds may be disregarded in the calculation of Jobseeker's Allowance paid to part-time students. Any remainder is taken into account as income. One-off lump sum payments are treated as capital. Entitlement to Jobseeker's Allowance is not affected unless a person's capital or savings exceeds £3,000.

There are no plans to change these arrangements.

Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the highest earnings level at which entitlement to the proposed state second pension will equal entitlement to SERPS, during the first phase of operation of the state second pension; and if he will set out the basis of his calculation. [78875]

Mr. Timms: We are currently consulting on our proposals for the State Second Pension. Final decisions, including those on earnings thresholds at which different pension accrual rates apply, will take account of responses received.

Miss H. McNulty

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when Miss H. McNulty (DSS ref: PSC(AE)/107) can reapply for a Social Fund payment for a mobility scooter (Benefits Agency ref: PQ681/2/3/4 and 696/7 98/99). [78784]

Angela Eagle: The administration of the Social Fund is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Winnick, dated 26 March 1999:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking when Miss H McNulty can re-apply for a Social Fund payment for a mobility scooter.

Miss McNulty can re-apply for a payment at any time. The effect of the Secretary of State's Social Fund Direction 7 in its current form, however, means that if her circumstances remain unchanged from the earlier application, a Social Fund Officer cannot make an award for an item that has already been refused within 26 weeks of the date of the earlier application.

Changes to Social Fund Directions from 5 April 1999 mean that there will be no time-limits placed on repeat applications for Budgeting Loans. However the restrictions will continue to apply to Community Care Grants and Crisis Loans.

The first date Miss McNulty can apply for a Community Care Grant or Crisis Loan payment without being affected by Direction 7 is therefore 29 June 1999.

I hope this is helpful.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how he defines the well-being of claimants, as referred to in paragraph 2.11 of Safeguarding Social Security. [79228]

Mr. Timms: The word is used in its ordinary sense of health, success, contentment or welfare. In the context of welfare reform, we consider that this is best achieved by promoting work for those who can, whilst providing security for those who cannot.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which benefit rules are being examined to establish whether their design contributes to (a) fraud and (b) error. [79233]

Mr. Timms: We are currently examining the rules listed in chapter five of the Green Paper "Beating Fraud is Everyone's Business: securing the future" (Cm 4012). In each case, we are assessing the extent to which their design contributes to both fraud and error.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the budget is for the next five years for providing staff with the information technology required to beat fraud. [79229]

Mr. Timms: We will be investing in new technology to modernise the administration of Social Security and to make payments more secure against fraud and error. It is not possible to distinguish the costs of security from those of administration.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the effect of the proposals contained in Safeguarding Social Security upon benefit administration costs. [79219]

Mr. Timms: Delivering a secure system is an integral part of good benefit administration. It is therefore not always possible to specify costs solely directed at safeguarding Social Security. Modernising our computer systems, for example, will deliver a better, as well as a more secure, service to the public.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what target the National Audit Office proposed for reducing fraud and error in income support and jobseeker's allowance. [79216]

Mr. Timms: None.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what monetary incentive will remain for local authorities to detect fraud and error in benefits once the proposals in the Green Paper "Safeguarding Social Security" have been put in place; and if he will make a statement. [79230]

Mr. Timms: We have reformed the local authority anti-fraud incentive scheme to ensure that authorities submit valid claims for additional subsidy payments arising from the detection of genuine cases of benefit fraud. It is equally important to prevent fraud from entering the system. An additional £100 million will be made available to local authorities over the next three years to encourage them to adopt the Verification Framework. Through a series of additional checks, carried out throughout the life of a benefit claim, the Verification Framework will help to prevent benefit fraud and error before it has a chance to occur.

For the longer term we are working with local authorities on the measurement of levels of fraud, the effectiveness of anti-fraud strategies and the whole local authority funding regime.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to adopt a civil law definition of fraud for the purposes of measuring the level of fraud. [79232]

Mr. Timms: We have no such plans.

Single Gateway

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if single mothers using the Single Gateway will be expected to provide the necessary information for pursuing child maintenance payments on their first interview. [79215]

Angela Eagle: The Single Gateway will build on the existing close working relationship between the Benefits Agency and the Child Support Agency. Since last year, lone parents have been helped to complete a child support application when they are visited by Benefits Agency staff at the start of their Income Support claim. Likewise, under the new arrangements, we will help parents with care to pursue child support at the earliest possible stage.

Securing regular child maintenance is one of the keys to helping lone parents move from benefit back into the labour market by providing them with a portable income which will supplement their earnings.

Computer Systems

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many different computer systems are operated by his Department's agencies for the purposes of recording data on claimants, payments and contributions. [79224]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the table.

Mainframe computer systems used for recording data on claimants, payments and contributions

Agency	Computer system
Benefits Agency	Audit Trail Analysis System
	Child Benefit Computer System
	Customer Accounting and Payment Strategy
	Departmental Central Index
	Disability Living Allowance/Attendance Allowance
	Earnings Top Up
	Electronic Stop Notice System
	Family Credit/Disability Working Allowance
	Invalid Care Allowance/Attendance Allowance
	Incapacity Benefit
	Income Support Computer System
	Jobseeker's Allowance Payments System
	National Unemployment Benefit System
	Payment Accounting Strategy
	Pensions Strategy Computer System
	Social Fund Computer System
Child Support Agency	Child Support Computer System
Contributions Agency	National Insurance Records System (2)
War Pensions Agency	War Pensions Computer System

Notes:

1. The Social Security Agency Northern Ireland makes use of the UK systems for the purpose of recording data on claimants, payments and contributions.

2. Where two services are shown in the Computer System Column, e.g. Disability Living Allowance/Attendance Allowance, the two sets of data are held on one system.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the benefits covered by the Personal Details Computer System. [79217]

Mr. Timms: The Personal Details Computer System (PDCS) will provide the Department with a consistent set of customer personal details for use by all benefit systems. This will improve the accounting and security of benefit expenditure.

At present, all personal details previously held by the Child Benefit and Income Support computer systems and on Jobseeker's Allowance, plus all details from new claims to these benefits, are being maintained on PDCS.

New personal details relating to claims for Retirement Pension, short-term and incapacity benefits, Widows Benefit, Maternity Benefit and Severe Disablement Allowance are also being maintained on PDCS, and we have started the transfer of existing records for these benefits.

At present there are over 13.7 million records on this system.

Work-focused Interviews

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security at what intervals claimants will be required to attend repeat work-focused interviews. [79218]

Angela Eagle: I refer my right hon. Friend to the written answer I gave him on 15 February 1999, Official Report, column 556.

National Insurance Numbers

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how long it will take under the proposals in paragraph 3.18 of Safeguarding Social Security to check the integrity of all National Insurance numbers. [79222]

Mr. Timms: There are two proposals in paragraph 3.18. The first will involve the checking of 1.8 million individual payroll items against the Departmental Central Index by April 2000.

The second is about more active management of dormant National Insurance accounts. This would of necessity be a continuing activity because the status of accounts change over time.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what proprietorial checks have been carried out on existing staff involved in the issue of national insurance numbers; [79307]

(2) what reforms have been set in hand to unify the responsibility of staff for the issue of national insurance numbers as described in paragraph 2.10 of Safeguarding Social Security; and if he will make a statement; [79221]

(3) what checks are in place for the recruitment of new staff involved in the issuing of national insurance numbers. [79223]

Mr. Timms: We undertake a range of rigorous recruitment checks which follow Cabinet Office guidelines on all staff prior to employment. All existing Departmental staff are bound by strict rules on propriety which cover, for example, possible conflicts of interest.

We have recently reviewed all of our recruitment and proprietorial checks and found them to be generally sound. However, we are currently undertaking a risk assessment of posts across the Department (including posts involving the allocation of National Insurance numbers) to determine those that are particularly sensitive and may require further checks. In addition, we are already implementing a number of improvements, including even tougher employment checks for new staff, new mandatory management checks to ensure the correct procedures are fully complied with. To provide a further level of assurance our internal audit will carry out their own checks.

Measures have been put in place to strengthen the security and control of National Insurance numbers. To improve management control, the number of staff who can issue National Insurance numbers has been reduced by two thirds from 1,500 to 500. We have also introduced an approvals system whereby all new staff have to be approved by a designated manager.

New Claims

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes have been made to clearance time targets to allow for checks on new claims, [79227]

Mr. Timms: There has been no change to stated clearance time targets to allow for checks on new claims. However, on Income Support claim clearance times are now measured only from the time that a fully completed claim form and all necessary supporting evidence have been received.

Minimum Funding Requirement

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how and when the review of the minimum funding requirement was announced. [79397]

Mr. Timms: Our intention to review the minimum funding requirement was announced in the Green Paper "A new contract for welfare: Partnership in Pensions", which was published on 15 December 1998.

The announcement of the terms of reference of the review was by means of a press release on 3 March. On the same day details of the terms were sent to the National Association of Pension Funds, Confederation of British Industry, Trades Union Congress, the Association of British Insurers and the members of the Faculty and Institute of Actuaries.

Identification

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what instructions will be given to staff on the documents necessary to prove (a) a claimant's identity and (b) a claimant's partner's identity. [79231]

Mr. Timms: Departmental guidance for establishing a customer's identity is available in the form of a guide which is held in all DSS offices; it is called the Evidence of Identity guide. It lists examples of documents that may be used by a customer in order to help establish their identity in order to trace or allocate a National Insurance number.

The same guide is used to guide staff on establishing the identify of a customer's partner or any other adult included in the claim.

Current procedures require staff to look at documentary evidence provided and ask questions specifically directed at the customer to enable the DSS to get a complete picture of the customer's history.

Leaflet GL25 (previously BAL4), available to the customer in all DSS offices, assists customers by telling them the sort of documents that would be helpful to bring in to a DSS office when trying to establish identity.

Married Couples Allowances

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the net impact on a two parent single earner family with two children receiving one and half times average household income, taking into account the increase in child benefit, if the married couples allowance was abolished. [74747]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 4 March 1999]: I have been asked to reply.

A two parent single earner family with two children receiving one and a half times median household income will lose £207 from the abolition of married couple's allowance, but will gain £416 from the Children's Tax Credit in 2001–02.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Justice and Home Affairs Council

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 15 March 1999, Official Report, column 499, for what reasons he has not yet reported to the House on the outcome of the Justice and Home Affairs Council meeting on 12 March. [78427]

Mr. Straw: I reported to the House on the outcome of the Justice and Home Affairs Council meeting on 22 March 1999, Official Report, columns 23–26.

Asylum Seekers (Oxfordshire)

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department further to paragraph 3.8 of "Asylum Seekers Support", if the trust has suggested that (a) Cherwell District and (b) other districts in Oxfordshire satisfy the criteria set out in paragraph 3.1. [78583]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It is too early to say which areas satisfy the criteria in paragraph 3.1 of the Information Document. That document invited expressions of interest from potential support providers. Responses will inform the choice of location of cluster areas.

Earlsfield Police Station

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the (a) current and (b) future use of Earlsfield Police Station, Wandsworth. [78538]

Kate Hoey: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis tells me that Earlsfield Police Station is currently used as a base by officers of the Area Major Investigation Pool (AMIP), and for local sector officers; for meetings of the local Sector Working Group; and, as necessary, for the storage of lost or stolen motor vehicles.

Earlsfield is part of Wandsworth Police Division, which is amalgamating with Battersea Division as part of the Metropolitan Police's overall move to Borough based policing. This amalgamation may lead to a review of the use of Earlsfield as a sector base and for meetings of the Sector Working Group. It is envisaged that the AMIP officers will remain at Earlsfield and that it will continue to be used as necessary for the storage of lost or stolen vehicles.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the monitoring arrangements and assessment standards he plans for the support arrangements set out in Part VI of the Immigration and Asylum Bill. [78883]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The support arrangements are likely to be provided under contract either to local authorities, housing associations, private sector or voluntary sector organisations. Responsibility for monitoring all aspects of the contractual arrangements will fall to the Asylum Support Directorate which will be set up as new body within the Immigration and Nationality Directorate at the Home Office.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what cash payment he proposes to meet the cost of sanitary protection for female asylum seekers. [78790]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The proposals for non-accommodation support provisions are set out in paragraphs 4.18–4.21 of the Information Document "Asylum Seekers Support" which I published on 22 March. It will be for asylum seekers to use this provision to meet all their essential living needs. In circumstances where support is provided wholly in kind, we would expect contractors to make suitable provision for essential living needs.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which retail and supermarket chains have been consulted over the generic voucher scheme proposed in paragraph 4.17 of the document "Asylum Seekers Support", published by his Department on 23 March. [78947]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Inquiries have been made of a number of potential suppliers and local authorities who use voucher schemes. The Information Document itself continues that consultation process and is intended to identify potential providers with an interest in supplying a voucher scheme.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to paragraph 5.18 of the document "Asylum Seekers Support", published on 23 March by his Department, under what circumstances families with children will not continue to receive support while they lawfully remain in the country. [78949]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Families with children who are recognised as refugees or granted exceptional leave to remain will, if they are eligible, be transferred to the main benefits system. Those whose application for asylum is rejected will normally continue to be supported while they lawfully remain in the country. Support would be withdrawn only in exceptional circumstances, for example, if the families were to leave the accommodation provided or were seriously to abuse it.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for support arrangements for asylum seekers whose cases are not dealt with in the six month time scale set down in the Asylum and Immigration Bill. [78798]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: There is no such time scale set out in the Bill. The White Paper "Fairer, Faster and Firmer—A Modern Approach to Immigration and Asylum", indicated in paragraph 8.9, that the Government were aiming to ensure that by April 2001 most initial asylum decisions will be made within two months of receipt and that most appeals to adjudicators will be heard within a further four months.

The support arrangements will be introduced before those targets are met, but are considered to be suitable for cases which take longer than six months overall, provided that such a support arrangement does not continue for several years.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to make an announcement concerning the level of cash payment available to asylum seekers under the Asylum and Immigration Bill. [78795]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: This information is set out in paragraph 4.20–4.21 of the Information Document "Asylum Seekers Support" which I published on 22 March. The Government have concluded that adult asylum seekers should receive £7 per week; children aged 3–18 should receive £3.50 per week; and children aged under 3 years should receive £7 per week in cash.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff will be employed in the new Asylum Support Directorate. [78948]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Home Office commissioned KPMG to conduct a study of the structure and size of the Directorate required to manage the proposed new asylum seeker support arrangements. We are currently assessing the recommendations in that report, but initial indications suggest that approximately 300 staff will be required.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to paragraph 4.12 of the document published on 23 March entitled, "Asylum Seekers Support", if he will list the component elements of essential living needs. [78950]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It is not my intention to specify the individual elements of essential living needs. These will vary for different asylum seekers according to circumstances. The non-accommodation provision listed in paragraphs 4.18–4.21 of the Information Document are intended to cover essential living needs, but it is for asylum seekers to determine how they use the resources available to them.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce for asylum seekers wishing to make inquiries to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate offices at Croydon (a) a freephone service, (b) a free post service and (c) methods by which they can be reimbursed for the cost of telephone and postage for such inquiries; and if he will make a statement. [78799]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The provision in paragraphs 4.18–4.21 of the Information Document "Asylum Seekers Support" which I published on 22 March set out the non-accommodation support provision. This provision is intended to cover any telephone and postage costs incurred by the asylum seeker. Where support is provided mainly in kind, providers will need to provide these services at no cost to the asylum seeker.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the number of asylum seekers who claimed asylum in England and subsequently moved to Scotland in each of the last five years; [78645]

(2) what proportion of asylum seekers applied for asylum in (a) England and Wales, (b) Scotland and (c) Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [78646]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average cost in staff-hours of effecting the removal of a failed asylum applicant in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [78658]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The amount of staff time spent on removals is extremely difficult to quantify. Cases may, depending on their type and complexity take only a few hours to conclude, or many months. Cases might be completed and removal effected, at the port of entry, but many cases will involve appeals, judicial reviews of periods of detention. All incur costs in staff time. An attempt to quantify the staff cost of effecting an asylum removal could, therefore, be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum claimants were removed to a safe third country as a result of him issuing a certificate under section (2)(1)(a) of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996 in the last year for which figures are available. [78619]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: In 1998, 750 asylum seekers were removed to a safe third country following the issue of a certificate under section 2 of Asylum and Immigration Act 1996. Numbers have risen over recent months. In the first two months of this year, over 180 asylum seekers were removed to safe third countries.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the current annual cost of supporting an asylum seeker. [78637]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to my hon. Friend the Member for Dover (Mr. Prosser) on 22 March 1999, Official Report, column 30, which gives the available information on costs of supporting asylum seekers.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many claims for asylum were made by persons who had previously made unsuccessful appeals against a refusal of leave to enter or remain in the United Kingdom in the last year for which figures are available; [78674]

(2) how many persons in possession of a visa or other form of entry clearance applied for asylum following entry to the UK in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and in how many such cases (a) asylum and (b) exceptional leave to remain was granted. [78643]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many refusals of (a) a claim for asylum and (b) an appeal against a refusal of a claim for asylum have been followed by an application for judicial review in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [78673]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information is given in the table:

	1996	1997
Application for leave to move for Judicial Review[1,2]	1,225	1,350
Decisions[1]	915	1,250
Of which granted leave to move[1]	190	320

[1] Figures rounded to the nearest 5
[2] Excludes appeals lodged by the Secretary of State
[3] Estimates based on Crown Office data

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many cases penalties paid by (a) airlines and (b) other carriers were refunded as a result of applications for asylum being granted in each of the last five years. [78688]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Charges amounting to £937,000, relating to 566 individual cases have been refunded over the last five years. A breakdown is as follows:

Year	£
1994	72,000
1995	38,000
1996	86,000
1997	380,000
1998	361,000

All of the refunds related to payments made by airlines. Some of the cases arose prior to the increase in the charge from £1,000 to £2,000 per passenger (i.e. July 1999).

Voting Arrangements

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make it his policy to allow all citizens of pensionable age who wish to do so to vote by post in (a) local, (b) national, (c) European elections and (d) referendums; and if he will make a statement; [78931]

if he will make it his policy to allow all citizens who wish to do so to vote by post in local national and European elections, and in referendums; and if he will make a statement. [78932]

Mr. George Howarth: My Working Party on Electoral Procedures is currently looking at possible changes to absent voting arrangements to encourage participation in the electoral process.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate how many letters at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate offices in Croydon are unopened. [79300]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The number of unopened letters in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) offices fluctuates from day to day with the volume of the postbag. However, as at 19 March there were approximately 3,900 unopened letters in IND offices. Of these, 3,600 were new applications which are readily identifiable from their envelopes and which are routinely sent unopened to caseworkers designated to deal with them, which allows the caseworker to open and deal with correspondence more promptly. An earlier backlog of 18,000 unopened items has now all been opened and sorted. Most letters sent to IND are now opened on the day of receipt.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average time that is taken to answer a telephone call to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate offices in Croydon. [79301]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Calls which connect to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate switchboard are held in a queue until an agent is free to take the call. The average time a caller waits in the queue before their call is dealt with is two and a half minutes.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from (a) foreign Governments, (b) employers and (c) others in the last three months regarding delays by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate in dealing with applications made by foreign nationals in the UK. [78662]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have received a number of representations from interest groups and from the business community about the current delays in processing applications to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. To set out all the details of such representations for the hon. Member would divert staff from the more important task of improving levels of service.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff were employed in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate at the most recent date for which figures are available. [78657]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The total for March 1999 was 5,293.

Immigration Officers (Ports and Airports)

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to reinstate immigration offices at airports to check the documentation of outgoing passengers; and if he will make a statement. [79290]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The previous Administration had already removed, in 1994, embarkation controls for passengers travelling from ferry ports and small airports to destinations within the European Union/European Economic Area, with the consequence that some 40 per cent. of all departing passengers were not seen by an immigration officer. There has never been an embarkation control for Channel Tunnel services.

What was left of the control was, therefore, ineffective in terms of providing a reliable immigration record of a person's departure, and we have since introduced new arrangements following my announcement on 16 March 1998. The new system involves a close partnership between the control authorities and port operators, and is based on intelligence and target led embarkation checks, including the increased use of Closed Circuit Television.

Resources previously engaged in operating embarkation checks have been re-deployed to improve arrivals control. There are no plans to reinstate routine embarkation controls, although immigration officers will continue to retain their powers to examine departing passengers if circumstances require.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the number of non-immigration offences detected as a result of questioning by an immigration officer in the course of dealing with a person seeking leave to enter at a port of entry. [78642]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: When an Immigration Officer discovers evidence of a non immigration offence during the course of an examination, the matter is referred to the appropriate authority (e.g. Her Majesty's Customs and Excise or the Police). This is reflected in the standing instructions to the Immigration Service. No separate assessment of the number of such references, or their outcome, has been made.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions immigration officers exercised their powers to require the captains of ships or aircraft arriving in the United Kingdom to furnish information under the provisions of paragraph 27(2) of Schedule 2 to the Immigration Act 1971. [78672]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It is common practice for immigration officers to use these powers in the general administration of the immigration control and to meet the requirements of the Immigration Carriers Liability Act. No separate record of the number of such requests has been made.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were examined by (a) an immigration officer and (b) a medical inspector or other qualified person under the provisions of paragraphs 2 and 3 of Schedule 2 of the Immigration Act 1971 in the most recent year for which figures are available. [78654]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: All passengers seeking to enter the United Kingdom are subject to examination by an immigration officer, under paragraph 2(1) of Schedule 2, in order to establish their claim to admission. In 1998, this amounted to some 84 million passengers, including British citizens and other European Economic Area nationals.

No central record is kept of the number of passengers examined by a medical inspector under paragraph 2(2).

There has been no comprehensive embarkation control for examinations under paragraph 3 of Schedule 2 at cross-Channel ports since 1994 and at all other ports since April 1998.

Greenwich (Millennium Celebrations)

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the additional demands upon fire services arising from the millennium celebrations in Greenwich; what additional resources have been made available to the London Fire and Civil Defence Authority; and if he will make a statement. [79288]

Mr. George Howarth: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) on 19 January 1999, Official Report, column 410. It is for the fire and civil defence authority to set a budget which will enable it to discharge its statutory responsibilities. Her Majesty's Fire Service Inspectorate are currently undertaking an independent assessment of the preparedness for the Millennium of all fire brigades in England and Wales. This includes the plans that brigades are making to deal with foreseeable increases in demands, major public events and any problems that may arise affecting essential agencies and utilities.

Immigration Officers (Arrests)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many persons were arrested by immigration officers exercising a power of arrest under section 24(2) of the Immigration Act 1971 in the most recent year for which figures are available; [78652]

(2) how many persons were arrested by immigration officers exercising a power of arrest under section 25(3) of the Immigration Act 1971 in the most recent year for which figures are available. [78653]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Immigration officers have hitherto used their powers of arrest under sections 24(2) and 25(3) of the 1971 Act sparingly, both as a matter of policy and because of the practical difficulties which arise because these powers do not have associated powers of search and entry. Information about the number of occasions on which these powers have been used is not recorded centrally and there is no requirement for it to be recorded locally.

Immigration (Appeals)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many appeals against deportation orders have been allowed in the case of persons who have been in the United Kingdom for (a) more than seven years and (b) less than seven years in each of the last 10 years; [78681]

(2) how many persons appealed against a refusal to vary or extend leave to remain by an adjudicator in the last five years for which figures are available; [78668]

(3) how many appeals were (a) made and (b) allowed against his decision to make a deportation order following a recommendation of a court in the last five years for which figures are available; [78696]

(4) how many appeals against the refusal of him to revoke a deportation order were (a) made and (b) allowed in cases where the deportation order had been made following a recommendation of the court in the last five years for which figures are available; [78682]

(5) how many persons who were refused leave to enter the United Kingdom at a time when they held an entry visa or other form of entry clearance appealed against such refusal in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and in how many such cases the appeal was allowed; [78640]

(6) how many appeals against a refusal by him to revoke a deportation order were (a) made and (b) allowed in the last five years for which figures are available; [78693]

(7) how many persons in respect of whom a deportation order had been signed appealed against destination; and in how many such cases the appeal was successful in the last five years for which figures are available. [78683]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information is given in the table.

I regret that it is not possible separately to identify those appeals against deportation recommended by a court, the destination of deportation or where the appellant was in possession of a valid visa or other leave to enter the United Kingdom.

Nor is it possible to determine the period of residence preceding an appeal against deportation.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many cases an application for judicial review was (a) made and (b) granted following a refusal of leave to appeal by Immigration Appeal Tribunal in the last year for which figures are available. [78687]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) in how many cases (a) leave to appeal was granted and (b) an appeal was allowed following an appeal from an adjudicator to the Immigration Appeal Tribunal over a decision (i) to refuse entry clearance or a visa, (ii) to refuse entry to the United Kingdom, (iii) to refuse to vary or extend leave to remain and (iv) to remove a person as an illegal entrant; and what was the average waiting time in each case in the last year for which figures are available; [78666]

(2) how many applications for leave to appeal to the immigration tribunal against a decision of an immigration adjudicator in an asylum case were made (a) in 1998 and (b) in each of the preceding 10 years; and in how many of these cases an appeal was (i) allowed and (ii) remitted to the immigration tribunal. [78677]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information, relating to asylum Tribunal appeals, is given in the table.

I regret that there is no comparable information available regarding non-asylum Tribunal cases.

Appeals to the Immigration Tribunal in asylum cases, excluding dependants, 1994 to 1997

Excludes appeals lodged by the Secretary of State.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average cost of processing and determining an appeal against refusal of a visa or other form of entry clearance. [78692]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information is shown in the table:

Cost of processing and determining entry clearance appeals

	Cost (£)
Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO)	No information available
Immigration Appellate Authority	357.08
Home Office	126.61

FCO costs of processing appeals are only available on an individual post basis.

This is an average unit cost, excluding accommodation costs, for all types of appeal. There is no separate information available for entry clearance appeals.

This is an average unit cost of presenting all appeals. There is no separate information available for entry clearance appeals.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the average waiting time for the determination of appeals against refusal of a visa or other form of entry clearance in each of the last five years; [78691]

(2) what is the average length of time taken for an appeal against a decision to make a deportation order from the notice of appeal to the determination by an adjudicator. [78679]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I regret that the information requested is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average waiting time for (a) a decision on leave to appeal from an Immigration Appeal Tribunal and (b) where leave to appeal is granted, an appeal hearing before the Immigration Appeal Tribunal in cases where an appellant seeks leave to appeal to the Immigration Appeal Tribunal following a decision of a special adjudicator in each of the last five years. [78676]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I regret that it is not possible to determine the average time between the dismissal of an appeal by an adjudicator and the determination of any appeal to the Tribunal without examining individual files.

Immigration (EEA)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the bodies in other European Economic Area states which regulate the provision of (a) advice and (b) services corresponding to immigration advice and services. [78615]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We do not hold a list of the bodies in other European Economic Area (EEA) states which regulate the provision of advice and services corresponding to immigration advice and services. Under Part V of the Immigration and Asylum Bill, it will be a matter for the Immigration Service Commissioner to decide what information he or she will need to obtain in order to consider the cases of advisers whose services may be regulated by an EEA body, and the Commissioner will be entitled to expect any such advisers to provide evidence of the nature of any scheme under which their services are regulated.

Deportation Orders

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many deportation orders were (a) signed and (b) enforced in each of the last three months for which figures are available. [78635]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information requested is given in the Table. It should be noted that a deportation order enforced in one period may have been signed in an earlier period.

Deportation action, October to December 1998

	Number of persons
	October	November	December
Deportation orders signed	80	65	40
Deportation orders enforced	55	55	45

1998 data are provisional.

A deportation order enforced in one period may have been signed in an earlier period.

Note:

All figures are rounded to the nearest 5.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many persons who have been detained following a recommendation for deportation after a criminal conviction applied for and were granted bail in the last year for which figures are available; [78680]

(2) how many cases an application to him to revoke a deportation order whilst the applicant was still in the United Kingdom was (a) made and (b) granted in each of the last five years; [78685]

(3) how many applications he (a) received and (b) granted for the revocation of a deportation order in the last five years for which figures are available. [78694]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information requested can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were removed from the United Kingdom in (a) the last three months, (b) the last year and (c) the last three years for which figures are recorded. [78650]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The latest three months for which a provisional removals total is available are December 1998 to February 1999. During that period, some 9,210 persons were removed, or departed voluntarily from the United Kingdom, under port or enforcement procedures.

The annual totals for the last three years are 26,800 in 1996, 31,110 in 1997 and 34,850 (provisional) in 1998.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many failed asylum applicants were (a) removed and (b) deported voluntarily from the UK in each of the last five years; and what proportion of the total number of failed asylum applicants they represented. [78663]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information on the numbers of asylum refusals, and removals and voluntary departures of persons who have applied for asylum at some stage, in the last five years is given in the table. It should be noted that: the figures for refusal of asylum and exceptional leave relate to initial decisions by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) and do not take account of the outcomes of appeals or other subsequent decisions; and a removal or voluntary departure in one year may relate to a decision to refuse asylum and exceptional leave, or the withdrawal of an asylum application or appeal, in an earlier year. Furthermore, some failed asylum seekers may leave the United Kingdom without the knowledge of IND, or before enforcement action has been initiated, and will not be recorded in the removals and voluntary departures figures. As the available information on refusals and removals of asylum seekers is not therefore directly comparable, it is inappropriate to these figures to calculate removals and voluntary departures as a proportion of refusals.

A person cannot be removed until all rights of appeal in the United Kingdom have been exhausted and thereafter significant barriers to removal may exist, such as a lack of documentation, judicial review or absconding.

Refusals [1], removals and voluntary departures of asylum applicants, excluding dependants, 1994 to 1998 [4]

[2] A removal or voluntary departure in one year may relate to a decision to refuse asylum and exceptional leave taken in an earlier year.
[3] 1998 removed and departed voluntarily figures are estimated.
[4] 1998 data are provisional.
Note:
All figures are rounded.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many recommendations for deportation he received from the courts; and how many he signed in the last year for which figures are available. [78695]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: In 1998, some 340 recommendations for deportation were received from the courts. During the same year, 270 deportation orders were signed following a court recommendation for deportation. These data are provisional. It should be noted that a deportation order signed in one year may relate to a court recommendation received in an earlier year and some sentences may be for more than one year and so the deportation may be signed before their release some time later.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many cases applications for asylum following a decision by him to make a deportation order in respect of the person concerned were (a) received and (b) granted in the last five years for which figures are available. [78686]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information requested is given in the table. It should be noted that a grant of asylum in one year may relate to an application lodged in an earlier period.

Persons applying for asylum after a deportation order had been signed against them [1], number of applications and number of grants of asylum, 1994 to 1998

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the current total number of persons living in the UK who have no legal right to do so; and, of these, how many (a) have had enforcement action initiated against them but not completed, (b) have not yet had enforcement action initiated against them and (c) have absconded. [78665]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: There is no estimate of the total number of persons living in the United Kingdom who have no legal right to do so. There is no figure for the number of persons in the United Kingdom who have no right to be here but against whom enforcement action has not been initiated.

As at January 1999, the number of persons against whom enforcement action has been initiated but not completed (including absconders) stood at 67,000. But some of these may still have outstanding legal appeals which means they cannot be removed yet.

As at the end of November 1998 the number of known absconders was 31,500. This covers persons subject to port or enforcement action who had breached conditions of temporary admission, temporary release or restriction order, or were otherwise known to be out of contact with the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND). Some persons recorded as absconders may have departed from the United Kingdom without the knowledge of IND.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the proportion of lorry drivers who report clandestine entrants to (a) the police and (b) other authorities on discovery of such persons in their vehicles in the UK. [78698]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Without having some idea of the number of drivers who actually discover clandestine entrants in their vehicle, any estimate of the proportion who report the matter can only be speculation. Many clandestine illegal entrants already report to the authorities of their own accord. Our aim should be to prevent them arriving in the first place.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were granted leave to enter the United Kingdom in (a) 1997 and (b) 1998 after being removed from the United Kingdom as a result of a breach of immigration law in the preceding three years. [78601]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has (a) commissioned or (b) evaluated into the carrying out of checks by lorry drivers for the presence of clandestine entrants in their vehicles. [78699]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have had a number of meetings with representatives of the road haulage industry, in the course of which we have discussed possible precautionary measures; and I have made it clear that I am happy to have further discussions if this would be helpful. However, the Home Office has not commissioned any independent research into this subject and has not yet participated in the evaluation of research by others, but officials have advised on the work they have done in this area.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the proportion of road haulage operators and lorry drivers who have experienced incidents involving clandestine entrants. [78701]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Over 9,000 cases of clandestine illegal entry were detected or otherwise came to light during 1998. It is not possible to make an assessment of the proportion of road haulage operators and drivers who were responsible for bringing them into the country. It is not possible either to assess the proportion who were involved in unsuccessful attempts to gain entry to their vehicles.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the proportion of road haulage operators with procedures in place for the prevention of clandestine entrants. [78700]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I am aware that the Road Haulage Association (RHA) has issued guidance to its members on this subject. It is not possible to judge how many will have acted on that advice or obtained advice from elsewhere and, of course, not all operators entering the United Kingdom will be members of the RHA.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were arrested under the provisions of Schedule 2 of the Immigration Act 1971 in the last year for which figures are available. [78655]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Information on the number of people arrested under the provisions of Schedule 2 is not collected centrally.

Provisional figures for 1998 indicate that 27,600 passengers were refused leave to enter and removed, 16,460 illegal entrants were detected and 3,920 people were served with a notice of intention to deport for overstaying or breaching conditions. However, by no means all of these would have been arrested under Schedule 2. Some would have come to light as the result of an application for leave to enter or remain, others may have come to light after being arrested in connection with other matters.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many clandestine entrants were discovered concealed in a vehicle by (i) immigration officials, (ii) port authorities and (iii) the police (a) at a port of entry and (b) subsequently in the last five years for which figures are available. [78618]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Details of the total number of clandestine illegal entrants who were detected or who brought themselves came to notice during each of the past five years are given in the following table. We do not distinguish between cases detected at port of entry and those who come to light subsequently, neither do we distinguish according to who detected them.

Year	Number of clandestine illegal entrants
1994	1,810
1995	3,360
1996	4,110
1997	4,040
1998[1]	9,320

[1] Provisional estimate

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the prevalence of clandestine entrants in vehicles gaining access to the vehicle through its roof. [78617]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I am aware that in some cases there is evidence that entry was gained by this route but we have made no comparative assessment of method of access.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were (a) convicted of an offence under (i) section 24 and (ii) section 25 of the Immigration Act 1971 and (b) sentenced to imprisonment as a result of such a conviction in the last year for which figures are available. [78605]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Information for 1997 held on the Home Office Court Proceedings Database is given in the table.

Persons convicted and persons sentenced to immediate custody at all courts for offences[1] under sections 24 and 25 of Immigration Act 1971 by type of offence, England and Wales, 1997

Immigration Advisers

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those who responded to the consultation document on control of unscrupulous immigration advisers; which consultees were (a) in favour of, (b) in favour subject to specific criticisms of and (c) against, the proposals in the document. [78634]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government's consultation document on the control of unscrupulous immigration advisers did not present a single set of proposals, but invited views on a range of issues and options for change. Of 53 respondents to the paper, all were in favour of regulating those who provide immigration advice for profit and are not already subject to a regulatory system; 22 were in favour of the independent regulation of solicitors; 22 were against regulation of solicitors, but 11 of these expressed some concerns or reservations about the adequacy of the current regulation of solicitors in this field of work.

Child Asylum Seekers

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change the time limit for further representations following interviews in the case of unaccompanied child asylum applicants. [78597]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Children are an extremely vulnerable group and therefore, unaccompanied children will not normally be interviewed about the substance of their claim if it is possible to obtain sufficient information to decide the claim from written representations or other sources.

In the event that an interview was necessary in a particular case, normal time limits would apply, but as in all other cases an extension would normally be granted if there was a good reason for the delay, and full account would be taken of the applicant's vulnerability. Obviously, any undue delay in deciding an application once the circumstances are known would not be in the child's interest.

Bogus Marriages

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many marriages have been reported by the Registrar General to his Department as marriages entered into for the purpose of breaching immigration control since 1994; [78604]

(2) how many reports of sham marriages from the Registrar General to his Department have resulted in action being taken against one or both of the parties for breach of immigration law or control in each year for the last 10 years. [78603]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The number of marriages reported by the Registrar General in each of the past 5 years is given in the following table:

Year	Number of marriages reported
1994	404
1995	467
1996	519
1997	354
1998	450

It is not possible to identify those cases where enforcement action has occurred as a result of this notification as these are not distinguished from other enforcement cases. The information is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate costs.

Leave to Remain

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many applications for (a) leave to remain in the United Kingdom, (b) variation of leave to enter or remain in the United Kingdom and (c) fixing an indefinite leave stamp on an applicant's passport or travel document as the result of the removal or replacement of a previous passport were there in each of the last five years; [78639]

(2) how many persons in receipt of limited leave (a) applied for a variation or extension of their leave to remain and (b) had such an application granted in 1998. [78622]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information relates to initial decisions on applications for an extension of stay, excluding dependants. The numbers of such decisions, excluding those in respect of an asylum application, were:

Year	Number
1994	185,000
1995	169,000
1996	180,000
1997	173,000
1998	157,000

151,000 of the decisions in 1998 were grants of an extension of stay, including indefinite leave to remain. I regret that the other information requested is not available.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the current cost of processing applications for (a) leave to remain in the United Kingdom, (b) the variation of leave to enter or remain in the United Kingdom and (c) the fixing of an indefinite leave stamp on an applicant's passport or travel document as a result of the removal or replacement of a previous passport. [78671]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Our estimate of the average cost of dealing with applications for (a) and (b) is £90. This includes direct costs and overheads, including accommodation. The cost of fixing an indefinite leave stamp on a passport will be significantly less than this.

Embarkation Control

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were charged with an offence after being stopped at embarkation controls (a) in each of the three years before April 1998 and (b) since April 1998. [78651]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I regret that the information requested is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many airlines were waiting for an application for approved gate check status at a port of embarkation to be dealt with on (a) 1 May 1997 and (b) according to the latest figures which are available. [78608]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The figure for 1 May 1997 is not available. The current number is 46 (from 19 airlines).

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average waiting time for an application for approved gate check status at a port of embarkation to be dealt with on (a) 1 May 1997 and (b) according to the latest figures which are available. [78606]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: All applications for approved Gate Check (AGC) status are actioned upon receipt. A site visit is invariably required before AGC status can be granted. The estimated average waiting time for a decision on routine applications is: (a) on 1 May 1997—173 days and (b) currently—144 days.

Citizenship

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average waiting time for an application for British Citizenship in the last year for which figures are available. [78660]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Applications for British Citizenship fall into two categories: naturalisations or registrations. As at the end of February 1999, naturalisations are taking 20 months on average to complete, whilst registrations are taking 7 months. The overall average time is currently 18 months.

Unlawful Discrimination

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into alleged unlawful discrimination arising out of Section 8 of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996. [78620]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Commission for Racial Equality, the Joint Council for the Welfare of Immigrants and the Trades Union Congress have separately recounted to us instances of alleged unlawful discrimination reported to them, but the Home Office has not separately commissioned research.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he carried out with (a) business organisations and (b) others regarding a code of practice for the avoidance of unlawful discrimination by employers who seek to comply with the provisions of section 8 of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996. [78621]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: A Code of Practice for the avoidance of unlawful discrimination was proposed in the White Paper "Fairer, Faster and Firmer—A Modern Approach to Immigration and Asylum", published last July. Comments from business organisations and others were invited at the time of publication.

No business organisations have been directly consulted since then but consultations on the proposal have taken place with the Commission for Racial Equality, (CRE) the Trades Union Congress and other interested organisations. The current proposals provide for the CRE and organisations or associations representative of employers and workers to be consulted on the preparation of the draft code of practice.

Family Visitors

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many family visitors were refused an entry clearance (a) as a visitor, (b) in order to follow a course of study of not more than six months duration and (c) with the intention of studying but without having been accepted for any course of study in the last year for which figures are available. [78667]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested. In 1998, 78,600 persons were refused entry clearance for travel to the United Kingdom other than for settlement, of whom 9,600 were students or prospective students.

Forfeiture Orders

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many orders for forfeiture were made under section 25(6) of the Immigration Act 1971 in each of the last five years. [78669]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Information taken from the Home Office Court Proceedings Database is given in the table.

Number of offenders given forfeiture orders under subsection 25(6) of the Immigration Act 1971, England and Wales, 1993–97

Work Permits

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long he expects the concession to employees requiring work permits for prospective employers in respect of work permit delays to continue. [78703]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: For as long as it is needed. We will keep its operation under review.

Asylum Seekers (Slovakia)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of asylum claims from Slovakian nationals were certified in the last year for which figures are available. [78656]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Of 335 initial decisions made in applications for asylum by nationals of the Slovak Republic in 1998, 27 per cent. were certified.

Asylum Seekers (Eurostar)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has made to the French Government about the arrival in the UK of asylum seekers on Eurostar. [78704]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My right hon. Friend is in close contact with his French counterpart, M Chevènement, about this matter. At their last meeting in Paris on 11 March, they discussed a range of options to deal with the problem, including imposing charges under the carriers' liability arrangements.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals have claimed asylum at (a) Waterloo Station and (b) elsewhere after arriving in the UK on a Eurostar service since 1 January. [78705]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: 535 asylum applications, excluding dependants, were made at Waterloo in January and February 1999. I regret that information on how many asylum applications were made elsewhere after arriving in the United Kingdom on a Eurostar service is not available.

Lost Passports

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints he received regarding the loss of passports of foreign nationals by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate in (a) the last three months and (b) 1998. [78649]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Complaints received by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate are not recorded centrally on the basis of subject matter. Information kept centrally is in respect of the number of compensation claims dealt with as a result of maladministration.

In 1998, 62 claims for compensation were dealt with, the majority of which arose because of lost documents. During 1999, 19 claims for compensation have so far been dealt with. A number of claims received in 1998 and this year remain to be determined.

Forged Documents

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the number of persons seeking to obtain entry to the UK through the use of forged visas or entry clearance documents; and how many such forgeries were detected, in the last year for which figures are available. [78638]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: During 1998, there were 6,338 recorded forgery detections at ports: these include the attempted use of forged or counterfeit documents, the use of fraudulently obtained documents and instances of attempted impersonation. There were 362 cases involving the use of a forged or counterfeit visa. We have not attempted any assessment of the number of forged visas which are not detected.

Visas

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce the stamping of visas to indicate when they have been used. [78689]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: None. The stamping of visas would slow down the immigration control process. One of the aims of the planned reforms set out in the Immigration and Asylum Bill is to develop a flexible and streamlined system of immigration control to enable bona fide travellers to pass through more quickly. We have made provision in the Bill for measures to be introduced to achieve these aims and, in particular, to provide for the issue of a visa or other entry clearance to have the effect of also granting leave to enter. In taking these flexibility measures forward, we will be looking at greater simplification of visa processes and how these and our operations in general might be improved by technological developments in immigration control.

Racist Incidents

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the incidence of (a) racial and religiously motivated attacks and (b) other criminal offences committed against asylum seekers. [78600]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Information on racist incidents is collected centrally, but asylum seekers are not separately identifiable in the statistics.

Airlines (Carrier's Liability)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much is owed in penalties arising out of carrier's liability incurred by airlines more than (a) three months, (b) six months, (c) 12 months and (d) two years after the penalty was incurred. [78609]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: As at 24 March 1999, the amounts owed by airlines were as follows:

(a) more than three months: £6,620,480

(b) more than six months: £4,658,480

(c) more than twelve months: £3,772,480

(d) more than two years: £3,058,480.

These amounts include £1.8 million which is the subject of legally binding agreements, and £1.1 million is covered by outstanding writ action.

Entry Clearance

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons with an entry visa or other form of entry clearance were refused leave to enter on arrival in the United Kingdom in the last five years for which figures are available. [78641]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Information is available only on entry clearance holders refused leave to enter and removed at the 13 largest ports. The figures for 1995–98 are as follows:

Year of removal	Number
1995	530
1996	640
1997	740
1998	720

Immigration Detainees (Bail Applications)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for bail by persons held in detention for immigration reasons under (a) the Immigration Act 1971 and (b) any other provision were made to (i) an adjudicator and (ii) the Immigration Appeal Tribunal; and how many such applications were granted in each year for the last five years. [78670]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information requested can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Police Officers

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of police officers employed in (a) the National Crime Squad and (b) the National Criminal Intelligence Service as at 30 September 1998; if he will list the number of police officers employed at 30 September 1997 on a basis which permits a comparison with (a) and (b) above; and if he will make a statement. [79196]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is set out in the table:

Number of police officers

	National Crime Squad	National Criminal Intelligence Service (NCIS)
30 September 1997	1,325	253
30 September 1998	1,344	238

Information on the number of police officers in NCIS for 30 September 1997 has been provided by the Director General.

The funding of the National Crime Squad and the National Criminal Intelligence Service will increase by 13.8 per cent. and 8.8 per cent. respectively in 1999–2000.

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the strength of police forces in England and Wales as recorded in March 1999; and if he will make a statement. [79195]

Mr. Boateng: This information will be collected in accordance with normal procedures. Once all the returns have been received from police forces and validated, the statistics will be placed in the Library. I expect this information to be available in early June, on the basis of last year's timetable.

Correspondence

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire can expect a reply to his letter of 3 February to the Under-Secretary, the hon. Member for North Warwickshire (Mr. O'Brien), on behalf of his constituent Mr. Perry. [79168]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: A reply to the right hon. Member's letter of 3 February will be sent this week.

Special Adjudicators

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many of the appeal cases before a special adjudicator a certificate was issued by him and on what grounds, in the last year for which figures are available. [78684]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information requested is given in the table.

Para 5(4)c Claim was made after refusal of leave to enter
Para 5(4)d Claim was manifestly fraudulent/evidence was manifestly false
Para 5(4)e Claim was frivolous or vexatious

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the average time taken for an adjudicator to determine an appeal against refusal of leave to enter in each of the last three years; [78623]

(2) what is the average waiting time for an appeal to a special adjudicator in an asylum case between when the claim is refused to the determination of the appeal, according to the most recent figures. [78625]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information is that, on average, the waiting time, over the last six months, for a special adjudicator to determine an asylum appeal is estimated to be 13 months. This relates to the date of the receipt of the appeal at the Independent Appellant Authority not the date of the refusal as requested. Information on non-asylum appeals is not recorded centrally.

Drugs Prevention Initiative

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish a report on the progress of his Department's Drugs Prevention Initiative. [79552]

Mr. George Howarth: I am publishing on 30 March, the Home Office Drugs Prevention Initiative's (DPI) eighth and final progress report.

This report reflects the Initiative's valuable contribution to advancing the case for effective community based drugs prevention over the last 9 years. That contribution was fully recognised in the Government's White Paper on Drugs, "Tackling Drugs to Build a Better Britain", published in April last year. The work of the Initiative, in terms of its good practice findings from its rigorously evaluated demonstration projects, has helped influence thinking and improve the evidence base for drugs prevention.

The Initiative reaches its planned conclusion on 31 March 1999. The White Paper recognised the need for successor arrangements to the Initiative, to support the Government's 10 year anti-drugs strategy. I am pleased to announce that the Home Office Drugs Prevention Advisory Service (DPAS) will replace the DPI from 1 April 1999. The new service will cover the whole of England and will work closely with all Drug Action Teams to encourage good drugs prevention practice and to support their work in delivering the national strategy.

I am placing a copy of the final DPI report in the Library tomorrow at 10.30 am.

Prisoners (Health Care)

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the outcome of the joint Prison Service and NHS Executive review on the future organisation of prisoners' health care; and if he will make a statement. [79553]

Mr. Straw: A copy of the Report by the Joint Prison Service and NHS Executive Working Group on the future organisation of prisoners' health care has been placed in the Library, along with a Table giving a detailed response to the recommendations and action points.

The Report identifies a range of weaknesses with the current organisation and provision of healthcare to prisoners. While there is good work being done, looked at as a whole, there is considerable variation in the organisation, funding, delivery and quality of prisoner health care, with variable links to the NHS. The Report makes clear that this situation is largely the product of a historic legacy of ad hoc development and relative isolation from the NHS. This means that, on the whole, prison health care is reactive rather that proactive; and well developed primary care teams, health needs assessments and appropriately planned services, are the exception rather than the rule.

The Government accept the recommendations and action points set out in the Report and reaffirm the existing aim of prison health care to give prisoners access to the same quality and range of health services as the general public receives from the NHS. The reform of prison healthcare poses problems and issues of a complex nature and will take place against the background of NHS reform. This means that change must be carried out in stages. The Government's response combines immediate action to improve service delivery, with a joint approach to future policy development and further work on identification of prisoner needs, priorities, timescales for improvement and organisation.

First, the Report has identified a number of areas where priority action is needed, and which can begin to be addressed within the existing comprehensive spending settlement. As a start, the Government intend that, by the end of 1999, work will have been carried out to pilot a new prison reception health screening tool. This will help staff more effectively to identify the health needs and status of each individual prisoner and plan how to meet their individual treatment needs. In parallel with this work, a health needs assessment template will be developed to help prisoners and health authorities determine the health needs of their prison population.

With immediate effect, doctors newly appointed to undertake any kind of primary care in prisons will be required to hold a certificate from the Joint Committee on Postgraduate Training for General Practice (JCPTGP) or have recognised equivalent accreditation to practice primary care medicine. Doctors currently providing primary care services who do not hold the JCPTGP certificate will be encouraged to work towards obtaining it. The Government also accept the case made in the Report that nursing care in prisons should be under the direction of registered nurses. Where this is not the case, Prison Service establishments will work towards achieving it as soon as possible.

The Report draws particular attention to the needs of the large number of prisoners with mental health problems. Within the framework of radical reform set out in the Government's White Paper "Modernising Mental Health Services—Safe, sound and supportive", published in December 1998, the needs of prisons will be taken into account when planning all inpatient mental health services including high and medium secure services. And, in order to support prisoners for whom a transfer to hospital would not be appropriate, Health Authorities will ensure that service agreements with NHS Trusts include outreach services for prisoners. These services will aim to provide appropriate mental health care for persons in prison custody and to achieve continuity of care when moving between secure prison accommodation and community mental health services.

Secondly, the Government in particular welcome the proposal for greater joint working between the Prison Service and the NHS. This is in keeping with the Government's broader policy initiative, "Modernising Government", by removing barriers and disincentives to cross-departmental working where that is necessary for the delivery of better and more effective services.

Ministerial and departmental accountabilities will remain as now: the Prison Service being accountable for the provision of primary care and the NHS for specialist services and for care provided in NHS hospitals. But future planning and delivery of prisoner health care will be underpinned by joint working and planning at national, regional and local levels. Practical benefits on the ground are likely to include the proper integration of health promotion and health care into prison regimes, and arrangements to ensure continuity of health care on receipt into custody, transfer to hospital, or on release back to the community. Health improvement programmes will be expected to reflect these objectives.

In order to put the joint organisation and planning of prison health care on a firm footing, the Chief Executive of the NHS Executive and the Director General of the Prison Service, will, as recommended in the Report, establish in the course of 1999 a Joint Prison Health Policy Unit and a Joint Prison Health Care Task Force. These Units, working with the Prison Service and the NHS will lead and manage the process of change.

The Joint Prison Health Policy Unit will be expected to set overall standards and policy, provide clear strategic direction for prison healthcare, and to advise both Home Office and Health Ministers. This Unit will replace the current Prison Service Directorate of Healthcare and will be physically located in the NHS Executive in the Department of Health. The Prison Healthcare Task Force will draw on staff of appropriate experience from the Prison Service, the NHS and other organisations. Its principal roles will be to offer expert advice and support the joint work that prisons and health authorities will need to do in identifying and implementing plans to improve health services to prisoners and in making the best use of available resources. The publication of this Report signals the importance that the Government attach to establishing joint working arrangements between each prison and their local health authority. Prisons and health authorities will be asked to start their joint work in the course of this summer.

Thirdly, this reorganisation will not only greatly strengthen the co-ordination of prison health care, but form the basis for further work, including an assessment of how budget-setting might best reinforce effective care, the identification of prisoner health needs, the formulation of improvement plans and consequent financial implications, and advice on priorities so as to achieve the effective use of resources.

The Report notes that the scale of the problem with prison health care will not become clear until health authorities and prisons have jointly assessed the local health needs and have formulated improvement plans. It is not, therefore, possible at this stage to say when all the objectives set out in the Working Group's Report can be achieved. However, the Government will be taking steps to identify the scale of the problem and the resources needed to improve performance against standards comparable to those available in the community. The Task Force will aim to provide advice on good practice. Also, through pilots and in other ways, it will help to identify different organisational models of local delivery that meet the primary health needs of prisoners and that are cost effective. In the course of next year a formal review will be carried out to assess structural issues, priorities, timescales and future possible resource requirements.

While the arrangements set out above will apply to England, there is a need to ensure consistency throughout the Prison Service including the four prisons in Wales. The Secretary of State for Wales fully endorses the principles behind the Report's recommendations. The Welsh Office, and in due course the Welsh Assembly, will be working with the Department of Health and Prison Service to implement proposals to improve prison health care in ways compatible with Welsh circumstances.

DEFENCE

Strategic Defence Review (Joint Initiatives)

Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress he has made on implementation of the Strategic Defence Review joint initiatives. [79609]

Mr. George Robertson: The Joint Rapid Reaction Forces (JRRF) concept builds on the Joint Rapid Deployment Force to provide a pool of highly capable force elements, maintained at high and very high readiness and trained to undertake short notice force projection operations of all kinds. We plan to have this larger, much improved and more balanced capability in place by October 2001. The forces that are needed to meet the JRRF requirement have already been identified and an initial operational capability will be achieved on 1 April 1999.

The Joint Force Headquarters, which is co-located at Northwood with the Permanent Joint Headquarters in peacetime, will be expanded to enable it to command two simultaneous operations. It will be provided with a dedicated signals squadron drawn from 30 Signal Regiment based at Bramcote in Warwickshire.

The authority of the Chief of Joint Operations, based at Northwood, will be increased and he will assume greater responsibility for Joint training, standards and exercises. To assist him in this task, a new 2* post, that of Chief of Joint Force Operational Readiness and Training (CJFORT) will be created from 1 April 1999.

To meet the need for increased deplorability and flexibility in ground-based air defence, a Joint Rapier Training Unit will be formed at RAF Honington on 1 April 1999.

Recognising that the proliferation of biological and chemical weapons programmes presents a continuing threat to our deployable forces, a Joint NBC Regiment will be established from 1 April 1999, initially at RAF Honington for at least four years. The Regiment will consist of Army personnel mainly from 1st Royal Tank Regiment and RAF personnel from the RAF Regiment. It will also include elements of the Territorial Army and Royal Auxiliary Air Force.

A Defence NBC HQ will be established at Winterbourne Gunner on 1 April 1999. It will control both the Joint NBC Regiment and the Defence NBC Centre, command responsibilities for which will transfer from the Army Training and Recruiting Agency to RAF Strike Command on 1 April 1999.

A Joint Doctrine and concepts Centre will be formed, located at Shrivenham. An Implementation Team will form at the beginning of April in London and will establish an Initial Capability at Shrivenham from September this year. It is planned to achieve a full capability from April 2000.

Reserve Forces

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to continue to call out reservists to support military operations. [79665]

Mr. Doug Henderson: A new call-out order will be made under Section 54 of the Reserve Forces Act 1996. This will allow members of the reserve forces to continue to be called out to support operations in Yugoslavia and in the region of Iraq. The order will cease to have effect on 31 March 2000.

Chemical Defence Programme

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the United Kingdom's chemical defence programme. [79669]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The UK's defence programme is designed to protect against the use of chemical weapons. Such a programme is permitted by the Chemical Weapons Convention, with which the United Kingdom is fully compliant. Under the terms of the Convention, we are required to provide information annually to the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons. In accordance with the Government's commitment to openness, a copy of the summary which has been provided to the Organisation outlining the UK's chemical defence programme for 1998 has been placed in the Library of the House.

Armed Forces (Uniforms)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the countries whose textile companies have been awarded contracts from his Department for armed forces uniforms for the last five years. [77469]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 18 March 1999]: Textile companies from the following countries have been awarded contracts by my Department for Armed Forces uniforms over the past three years:

United Kingdom
Germany
Belgium
Italy
Spain
Canada

Details are available for the last three years only as before this time information on clothing and textiles procurement was not recorded centrally.

Training Costs

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average cost of training a new recruit in each of the armed services. [78782]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Military Transmissions (Interference)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of potential interference to military transmissions from the development of technology to deliver high-speed internet connections via powerlines; and if he will make a statement. [78868]

Mr. Spellar: The Ministry of Defence and the Radiocommunications Agency have investigated the potential for such technology to interfere with military communications. The indications are that it has the potential to interfere with military and other users of the radio spectrum. I understand that the Radiocommunications Agency is consulting affected parties and is preparing to place limits on levels of emitted radio interference to safeguard military and other transmissions.

Iraq

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost to date of the bombs dropped on Iraq by British forces in Operation Desert Fox and subsequent military actions over Iraq. [78972]

Mr. George Robertson: The costs to date of bombs dropped on Iraq by British forces in Operation Desert Fox and subsequent military actions over Iraq is approximately £4 million.

Mesothelioma

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel have (a) been diagnosed as suffering from and (b) died from mesothelioma in the last five years. [77638]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 29 March 1999]: There have been no recorded incidents of Service personnel suffering or dying from mesothelioma in the last five years.

Plutonium Processing

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what capital spending is planned on plutonium processing (a) by his Department and (b) by Hunting Brae in Aldermaston; and if he will make a statement; [79512]

(2) what environmental impact assessment has been made of the effect of new plutonium reprocessing at Aldermaston; what consultation there has been with the Environment Agency; and if he will make a statement. [79511]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to my hon. Friend and place copies of my letters in the House of Commons Library.

RAF Wittering (Air Crash)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to publish the report on safety procedures in respect of the crash of an RAF harrier at RAF Wittering on 31 October 1997. [79509]

Mr. Spellar: The RAF Board of Inquiry process into the accident involving a RAF Harrier GR7 on 31 October 1997 is nearing completion and a summary of its findings will be published in the next few months.

Chinook Helicopter

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if the Air Accident Investigation Branch was able to extract a complete full authority digital engine control fault history from the digital electronic control unit that was destroyed on impact following the crash of RAF Chinook ZD576 in June 1994; [78422]

(2) if the full authority digital engine control system fitted to the Chinook Mk2 was validated before it was brought into operational service; [78423]

(3) if the surviving digital electronic control unit retrieved from the wreckage of RAF Chinook ZD576 in June 1994 had the capacity to record the complete full authority digital engine control fault histories of both engines. [78424]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Departmental Food (Sourcing)

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of pigmeat consumed by his Department's personnel is sourced from outside the United Kingdom. [79337]

Mr. Spellar: The procurement of food for the Armed Forces is contracted to Booker Foodservice who import some 50 per cent. of the bacon and gammon required by the Armed Forces. The balance of the requirement for bacon and gammon and 100 per cent. of the pork requirement is presently sourced in the UK.

MOD Police

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence with whom he has entered into agreements or contracts or signed memorandums of understanding which extend to Ministry of Defence police officers the powers and privileges of constables (a) on land in respect of which he has agreed to provide the services of the Ministry of Defence police under notices published in the London, Belfast and Edinburgh Gazette and (b) in relation to matters connected with anything done for the purposes of the Ministry of Defence or the Defence Council. [75276]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Secretary of State for Defence has agreed to provide the services of the Ministry of Defence Police to:

(a) the Royal Mint, Llantrisant, concerning which a notice was placed in the London Gazette on 5 May 1987;

(b) Devonport Dockyard, concerning which a notice was placed in the London Gazette on 3 March 1997;

(c) Rosyth Dockyard, concerning which a notice was placed in the Edinburgh Gazette on 28 January 1997.

The Secretary of State does not have to enter into an agreement for members of the MOD Police to have the powers and privileges of constables in relation to matters connected with anything done under a contract entered into by him for the purposes of his Department or the Defence Council: jurisdiction is conferred by section 2(2) or section 2(3) of the Ministry of Defence Police Act 1987.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Overseas Territories

Mr. Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his statement of 17 March 1999, Official Report, columns 1125–27, if he will list the British overseas territories that meet in full international standards on money laundering, transparency in regulation of their financial sectors, co-operation with law enforcement authorities and independent financial regulation. [78002]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 23 March 1999]: None at present meets all these requirements. The Overseas Territories are at differing stages of developing regulatory regimes which are acceptable to the international community.

The White Paper on the Overseas Territories expands on the measures we consider necessary to ensure the OTs meet accepted international standards of financial regulation by the end of 1999. HMG will monitor progress in the OTs and continue to provide them with advice and support in drafting and effectively implementing legislation.

An independent review of financial regulation will be conducted in the OTs to check what progress has been made in implementing these measures. The review will also make recommendations on how to deal with issues outstanding and to what timetable. If any OTs are found to be inactive or behind, HMG will seriously consider whether to use our powers to ensure the standards are met.

Exports

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Wirral, South (Mr. Chapman) of 12 March 1999, Official Report, columns 399–400, on exports, what the role of British Trade International will be in respect of the promotion of the export of British nuclear technologies. [78975]

Mr. Fatchett: British Trade International will support the promotion of the export of British nuclear technologies, as Overseas Trade Services did in the past, in conformity with our export and non-proliferation obligations.

Arms Sales

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he proposes to take in response to Recommendation 1382 (1998) of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe concerning the drawing up of a European code of conduct on arms sales. [78874]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Recommendation 1382 (1998) calls for a number of actions by the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe. The Committee of Ministers has instructed the Ad Hoc Committee of Legal Advisers on Public International Law to prepare an opinion on the Recommendation. It is our understanding that there will be no further consideration of the Recommendation by the Committee until the opinion has been received.

Falklands (Human Rights)

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many suspected or actual cases of human rights violations connected with vessels operating in the waters surrounding the Falklands took place in each of the last three years. [79039]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: No cases of human rights abuses involving fishing vessels were recorded by the Royal Falkland Islands Police in 1996. In 1997, three incidents were reported in which mistreatment of seamen was suspected. These were pursued to the extent possible, but legal action could not be taken. Of two reported incidents in 1998, one resulted in the successful prosecution of the Captain of a fishing vessel. Both HMG and FIG take human rights violations seriously and continue to monitor the situation.

Democratic Republic of Congo

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons the four British officials who were expelled on 7 March were visiting the Democratic Republic of Congo. [79165]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Three of the officials were in Kinshasa to conduct a routine review of the Embassy's civil contingency plan, the fourth (a State Department employee on an exchange programme with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office) was there to provide temporary cover for staff absences in the Embassy.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence the Democratic Republic of Congo presented to his Department in support of the detention and expulsion of British Embassy staff and four British officials on 7 March. [79164]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: None.

Algeria

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will urge the Algerian Government, bilaterally and through the EU, to co-operate with the UN Working Group on Enforced and Involuntary Disappearance and to facilitate a visit to the country in order to conduct an independent investigation of disappearance cases. [79014]

Mr. Fatchett: We will continue to urge the Algerian Government to co-operate with all UN human rights mechanisms, including the UN Working Group on Enforced and Involuntary Disappearances, both in our bilateral dialogue and through the EU.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Algerian Government calling on them to release all prisoners held in secret and unacknowledged detention unless they are to be charged with recognisably criminal offences. [79068]

Mr. Fatchett: We regularly raise with the Algerian Government our concerns about alleged human rights violations, both bilaterally and through the EU. To this end we support the work of the UN Working Group on Enforced Disappearances and urge the Algerian Government to honour their obligations to co-operate with this and all other UN human rights mechanisms.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will press for a resolution on Algeria at the United Nations Commission for Human Rights at Geneva. [79013]

Mr. Fatchett: We are our EU partners are considering our positions for this year's Commission on Human Rights, which runs until the end of April. Much will depend on the position taken by the Algerian Government to acknowledge their obligations under the UN Charter and agree to allow in UN Special Rapporteurs on Extra-judicial Executions and on Torture, and co-operate with all UN human rights mechanisms.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the current human rights situation within Algeria. [79012]

Mr. Fatchett: The human rights situation in Algeria continues to cause us concern. In its latest report, the Working Group on Enforced Disappearances of the United Nations Economic and Social Council lists 731 cases of disappearances in Algeria since 1991. Only 11 have been addressed by the Algerian government to the Working Group's satisfaction. Over the same period there have also been numerous allegations of extra-judicial executions and torture by the Algerian security forces.

It is fair to say that the number of new disappearances cited by the UN in the last 12 months is well down on previous years. But this is no substitute for independent investigations into all cases. We continue to urge the Algerian Government to allow independent UN Special Rapporteurs free access to the country to investigate all alleged human rights violations, as they are obliged to do under the UN Charter.

Ambassadors for British Business

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to appoint additional business ambassadors. [79153]

Mr. Fatchett: A small number of Ambassadors for British Business will be retiring from their main business employment in 1999. We may consider replacements for them during the year.

Diplomatic Posts

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many posts in his Department at (a) ambassadorial and (b) Consul-General level have been advertised in the last year. [79073]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: No Ambassadorships were advertised in the last year. The post of Director General Trade and Investment US and Consul General New York, was advertised in September 1998.

Yemen

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations between Britain and Yemen. [79072]

Mr. Fatchett: Our long-standing relations with Yemen have been strained by recent incidents of kidnap involving British tourists, one of which resulted in the death of three British nationals, and by the arrest in Yemen of eight British nationals on terrorist-related charges. We are determined not to allow these set backs to cloud otherwise friendly relations. The Prime Minister wrote to Prime Minister Iriyani again on 24 March to help maintain dialogue at the most senior level, and to press our concerns about serious shortcomings in the legal process in the trial of the British nationals in Aden.

Task Forces

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will list all those task forces and policy reviews with external members established by his Department since May 1997 which have set up (a) sub-groups, (b) working parties and (c) other subsidiary committees; [79265]

(2) if he will list for all task forces and policy reviews with external members established by his Department since May 1997 (a) their dates of establishment, (b) those which have issued final reports and their dates of publication, (c) those which have been terminated and their dates of termination and (d) for those bodies still in existence, expected reporting and termination dates. [79285]

Mr. Fatchett: None.

Ascension Island

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the US Government's contribution to the central fund on Ascension. [79401]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The US Government do not contribute to any central fund on Ascension. The Base on Ascension was built by the US Air Force during the Second World War and is provided free from rent and charges under the terms of the Agreement between the UK and US Governments Concerning the Extension of the Bahamas Long Range Proving Ground by the Establishment of Additional Sites in Ascension Island signed in 1956, as amended.

Sierra Leone

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the United Kingdom will apply the £10 million worth of new assistance for Sierra Leone which he announced on 2 March; what assurances he has received about its use; and what is Her Majesty's Government's policy with regard to arms sales to Sierra Leone. [79670]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary announced on 2 March 1999, Official Report, columns 854–901, a new UK commitment of £10 million to promote stability in Sierra Leone. The objectives are to help the West African Peacekeeping Forces, ECOMOG, push back the rebels; to encourage the rebels to lay down their arms and return to civilian life; and to create a professional and democratically accountable Sierra Leone Army.

Access to this new £10 million package of assistance is conditional upon matching pledges of support from other international donors. I am pleased to report that we have now received the full amount of £10 million in matching donations as a response to our lead in the promotion of lasting peace in Sierra Leone.

Our new package of £10 million will be used as follows:

> We have already given substantial logistic support to ECOMOG to enable it to consolidate the security situation. We have decided that £5 million will now be made available to provide further equipment for ECOMOG. Deliveries of equipment for ECOMOG forces will be arriving shortly;
> £4.5 million will be used to fund a UK programme to train and equip a new Sierra Leone Army. A small UK military advisory team has been deployed to oversee basic training of the new Sierra Leone Army and to assess their longer-term training requirements. As part of this train and equip programme, we will be providing boots and uniforms. We will also be providing rifles and ammunition. We will be delivering this equipment shortly.

As a condition for proceeding with this programme, we have sought and secured assurances from President Kabbah that he will pursue a twin track—diplomatic and military—approach to obtaining a lasting political peace; that recruitment for the new Sierra Leone Army will take place without ethnic discrimination; that children will not be used by the Sierra Leone Armed Forces or the Civil Defence Force; and that equipment supplied by the UK to the Government of Sierra Leone will be used only in accordance with international human rights standards and international humanitarian law.

President Kabbah is also in the process of consulting ECOWAS to ensure that the supply of arms by the UK does not breach the ECOWAS small arms moratorium of October 1998.

UN Security Council Resolution 1171 prohibits the sale or supply of arms and related material to Sierra Leone, other than to the Government of Sierra Leone through named points of entry. There is also an exemption to allow the sale of arms for the sole use in Sierra Leone of ECOMOG or the United Nations. The United Nations Arms Embargo (Amendment) (Sierra Leone) Order 1998 implements the United Nations Arms Embargo on Sierra Leone in the UK. Applications for licences under the Order in Council relating to the sale or supply of arms and related material to the Government of Sierra Leone or ECOMOG or the UN are considered on a case-by-case basis.

Kosovo

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the implications of the closure of the Kosovo-Macedonian border to Kosovan refugees; and if he will make a statement. [79507]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We welcome the reopening of the border between Macedonia and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia on 24 March, following representations by the EU Presidency and others. This will facilitate the work of the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) in helping those who are fleeing Kosovo. The UNHCR can count on the support of the international community.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have been held with the Government of the Russian Federation on the situation in Kosovo. [79515]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: As fellow members of the Contact Group, we have remained in close touch with the Russians throughout the Kosovo crisis. The Prime Minister last discussed Kosovo with Russian Prime Minister Primakov on 25 March. The Foreign Minister discussed Kosovo with Russian Foreign Minister Ivanov on 29 March.

We will gladly take any opportunity to discuss this subject with the Russians. This is a subject on which we want to stay closely in touch.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date requests were made by the UK representative at the UN for a meeting of the Security Council to discuss the situation in Kosovo. [79516]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We took the lead in bringing the situation in Kosovo before the Security Council in the late summer and autumn of 1998. The Security Council has been kept fully informed of developments since then. As Co-Chairs, we briefed the Council on the outcome of the negotiations which took place at Rambouillet and in Paris in February and March.

The Security Council debates on 24 and 26 March demonstrated the strength of support for NATO action.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what undertakings were given to the Government of Montenegro (a) at the Rambouillet Conference and (b) afterwards, concerning military action by NATO forces. [79514]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: No undertakings have been given to the Government of Montenegro concerning NATO military action. However, we have expressed strong support for the political and economic stability of Montenegro, particularly at this critical time for Yugoslavia and Montenegro.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Task Forces

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list for all task forces and policy reviews with external members established by his Department since May 1997 (a) their dates of establishment, (b) those which have issued final reports and their dates of publication, (c) those which have been terminated and their dates of termination and (d) for those bodies still in existence, expected reporting and termination dates. [79286]

Mr. Byers: The information requested is set out in the table.

Review/Task Force	Date established	Actual or expected date of final report	Actual or expected termination date
Review of Company Law	4 March 1998	Spring 2001	Spring 2001
DTI/HMT review of company rescue mechanisms	29 January 1999	July 1999	July 1999
President's Advisory Group	23 July 1997	No written report—advice given orally at meetings.	30 June 1998
Competitiveness Working Parties	1 December 1997	6 April 1998	6 April 1998
Tech Stars Steering Group	December 1997	Not expected to produce written report	Anticipated to be Summer 1999
Oil and Gas Industry Task Force	17 November 1998	Summer 1999	September 1999

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list all those task forces and policy reviews with external members established by his Department since May 1997 which have set up (a) sub-groups, (b) working parties and (c) other subsidiary committees. [79264]

Mr. Byers: Two task forces and policy reviews with external members established by my Department since May 1997 have set up working groups

The Review of Company Law's independent Steering Group has set up six working groups, looking at the purpose of company law and the needs of small and closely-held firms; company formation, capital maintenance and regulation and boundaries of the law; international issues and information and communications technology; vehicles and structure; corporate governance (directors); and corporate governance (shareholders).

The Oil and Gas Industry Task Force has set up seven working groups, looking at long-term vision; competitiveness; fiscal issues; regulation and licensing; skills and training; innovation and technology; and sustainable development.

Caribbean Countries (Trade)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps were taken by his Department to revise European Union policy to protect the United Kingdom's trading relationship with Caribbean countries within World Trade Organisation rules during the period of the United Kingdom presidency. [79096]

Mr. Wilson: The UK's trading relationship with the Caribbean forms part of the wider EU relationship with the ACP countries (sub-Saharan Africa, the Caribbean and Pacific) enshrined in the Lomé Convention. This provides a framework for trade, aid and political relations with the ACP. Under Lomé, ACPs have open access to the EU market for industrial goods and for a wide range of agricultural products.

The current (fourth) Lomé Convention expires in 2000. A negotiating mandate for a new Convention was adopted under the UK Presidency at the General Affairs Council (GAC) on 29 June 1998. The Commission's draft mandate suggested that these new arrangements, after a 5-year roll-over of current arrangements to 2005, should be in the form of Free Trade Areas between the EU and groups (yet to be defined) of ACP countries. In response to the concerns of the UK and some other member states, the mandate as agreed by the Council commits us to examine the position of those ACPs not able to join in FTAs, in order to provide a new framework for trade which will offer them equivalent access to the EU market as at present under Lomé. Whatever the final balance of arrangements, the EU will of course have to ensure that they are compatible with WTO rules.

Those ACP countries who are unable or unwilling to enter into FTA negotiations will still be eligible for the EU Generalised System of Preferences scheme which offers entry into the EU market with reduced import tariffs. However, these provisions are not as generous as Lomé and the ACP have expressed concern that they will lose their market access. The UK as Presidency worked hard to ensure a mandate which clearly indicated that the ACP would retain equivalent market access under the GSP and that GSP terms would need to be improved during the review of the scheme in 2004.

We believe that these revisions reflect the interests of the Caribbean and our other Lomé partners.

Departmental Staff (Ethnic Origin)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will provide a breakdown, in numerical and percentage terms, of the ethnic origin, at 1 March, of (a) his private office, (b) Government special advisers, (c) his Policy Unit and (d) staff in total. [78506]

Mr. Byers: (a) On 1 March 1999, the DTI employed 71 staff in Private Offices and Parliamentary and Correspondence Sections, of whom 15 were known to be of ethnic minority origin (i.e. 21 per cent.).

(b) I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 22 February 1999, Official Report, column 39.

(c) The Department does not have a separate Policy Unit.

(d) My right hon. Friend, the Minister for the Cabinet Office and Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster will provide information in a written answer shortly.

Parental Leave

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what estimate he has made of the number of employees of (a) small and medium enterprises and (b) larger companies who will opt to take paternity leave each year; [76670]

(2) what estimate he has made for (a) small and medium enterprises and (b) larger companies of the number of man hours that will be spent each year administering the new paternity leave directive; [76671]

(3) if he will estimate the average annual cost to (a) a small or medium enterprise and (b) a larger company of employing and training additional staff to cover for employees on paternity leave. [76791]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 16 March 1999]: We shall be consulting on the detailed implementation. Only when this has been completed can a realistic estimate be made of the Parental Leave Directive.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effect on British companies and information technology users of the legislation introduced in the United States of America limiting the liability and damages that can be awarded in millennium bug-related cases. [78871]

Mr. Wills: The so-called 'Good Samaritan' legislation in the United States of America, which provides companies with limited liability protection for certain statements regarding Year 2000 compliance, is designed to stimulate public disclosure of those companies' millennium bug preparations. It has been suggested that this limited protection may lead companies and individuals to seek redress in overseas countries such as the UK. My Department has considered this issue and concluded that there is no substantive evidence to suggest that UK companies will as a result be exposed to a greater risk of litigation. I believe that, in practice, the 'Good Samaritan' legislation has to date provided no protection for US companies in lawsuits about the Bug.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will assess the advantages and disadvantages of introducing legislation to limit the liability and damages that can be awarded in millennium bug-related cases. [78870]

Mr. Wills: This issue has been addressed within my Department in consideration of preparations for the millennium. It is possible that the introduction of limitations of this type would encourage companies to divulge additional information on their state of readiness, but this could unreasonably limit the availability of existing remedies available to consumers under, for example, the Sale of Goods Act 1979. The issue of disclosure in the UK is being addressed by Action 2000's Pledge 2000, whereby companies can make declarations of intent confirming their commitment to exchange information to allow others in their supply chains to prepare for the Year 2000, and to using dispute resolution outside the courts wherever possible. I believe that, on balance, the case for further legislation of this type has not been made.

Export Controls

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 15 March 1999, Official Report, column 475, on export controls, what amount of the debt arising from Export Credits Guarantee Department claims were repaid between November 1997 and February 1999 by the Governments of (a) Algeria and (b) Jordan. [78951]

Mr. Wilson: In the period from 1 November 1997 to 28 February 1999 Algeria paid £1 million of principal and £19 million of interest under the UK/Algeria Debt Agreements. Under the current UK/Jordan Debt Agreements principal repayments do not commence until June 1999. Interest paid during the period amounted to some £23 million.

Competitiveness

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the business leaders who have contributed to the six competitiveness working parties. [77790]

Market Reports

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to change the current scale of charges for market reports; and if he will make a statement. [78433]

Mr. Wilson: The Export Forum report, placed in the Library of both Houses, concluded that the current level of prices was close to what the market will bear. A review of the chargeable services themselves is planned to start in April and the new Chief Executive of British Trade International, Sir David Wright (current Ambassador to Tokyo), will wish to consider the outcome of the review before decisions are taken.

Export Promotion

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to increase (a) awareness and (b) take-up of the Export Marketing Research Scheme; and what funding has been made available for the (i) current and (ii) next financial year. [78431]

Mr. Wilson: The Scheme's budget for the current financial year is £1,195,000. £1,550,000 has been allocated for 1999–2000. My officials and the Scheme's contractor (British Chambers of Commerce) have drawn up and are implementing a comprehensive action plan to increase awareness and take-up of the Scheme. This includes:

Direct mail to eligible companies of more than 20 employees

8,000 letters sent out; 400 have contacted BCC asking for additional information and 18 applications have been received to date

The placing of editorial material in relevant publications

Ensuring presence at organised events and speaking at export clubs

EMRS was represented at 28 events (exhibitions, seminars etc) in 1998

An Internet presence:

www.britishchambers.org.uk

Staging regional "Showcase" events for companies

10 showcases presented to 285 companies; 19 applications have arisen

The publication of a regular EMRS Newsletter which is distributed to over 3000 past and prospective customers as well as intermediaries.

Steps are also being taken to refresh intermediaries' knowledge of the scheme through:

3 half day showcases held in 1998 completing national coverage for intermediaries and export advisers (52 attended)

4 two-day training courses in export marketing research specifically tailored to the business advisers (50 attended)

Direct mail to 300 trade associations. BCC are currently discussing projects with 20 different trade associations.

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he proposes to continue support from his Department for the Languages for Export Advisory Scheme. [78432]

Mr. Wilson: The Languages for Export Advisory Scheme is currently being reviewed as part of the normal evaluation programme for DTI schemes. The Chief Executive and board of British Trade International will consider the future of the Scheme after the review is completed.

Overseas Postings

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library a list of staff of his Department currently posted overseas identifying (a) the capacity in which they are posted, (b) their grade and (c) their terms of service. [78439]

Mr. Wilson: At senior levels (Range 10 and above) 26 managers are in post overseas. Below that level, 12 officers are in posts under the Overseas Attachment Training Scheme. A small number of additional staff are likely, at any time, to be in posts overseas. Details of these are not kept centrally in a form which enables the data readily to be aggregated.

It would not be appropriate to list individuals' appointments and terms of conditions as requested. Most of these staff are on loan to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, usually on FCO terms of service. Others are on secondment or detached duty, for example to the European Commission, on the terms of the receiving organisation.

Sterling Rates

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of each one per cent. increase in sterling against the euro on (a) industrial profits and (b) jobs in manufacturing. [77591]

Mr. Byers: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 11 February 1999, Official Report, column 403.

Fixed Rate Export Finance Scheme

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of ECGD's Fixed Rate Export Finance Scheme. [79666]

Mr. Wilson: Over the past year, the Government have been undertaking a fundamental review of ECGD's financing support for UK exports, including the FREF arrangements which have been scheduled to expire on 31 March 1999. The review has included a formal consultation process and follow-up work involving ECGD, Treasury and Bank of England officials as well as representatives from the UK exporting community. A number of options are being evaluated. More time is needed to complete the review and for ECGD to negotiate with the banks an appropriate successor to the current scheme. The current arrangements are, therefore, being rolled forward for a further 6 months.

Objective 2 Areas

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the eligibility of areas under Objective 2. [79667]

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to make an announcement on the distribution of EU structural funds for the regeneration of deprived areas. [78990]

Mr. Wills: The discussions between Member States and the Commission on the reform of the Structural and Cohesion Funds were concluded at the Berlin Council on 25 March.

I am pleased to say that the UK has negotiated an outcome that is fair and affordable to all future and existing Member States, including the UK. One notable success for the UK was the securing of the safety net which maintains two thirds of the existing Objective 2 and 5b population coverage.

The Government will consult widely with all those with an interest, principally local and regional bodies, on the determination of proposed areas and the criteria to be used to ensure that we target the areas of greatest need. Careful consideration will be given to the relative needs of different areas across the UK. I am issuing today a public consultation document which will set out the basis on which interested parties will be invited to make their submissions. I am also placing copies of the document in the Library of the House and the Vote Office.

Those wishing to make representations should do so to the appropriate Government Office in England, the Scottish Office, the Welsh Office and the Department of Finance and Personnel in Northern Ireland. Other Departments with an interest include the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Foods for fisheries and rural areas and the Department of Culture, Media and Sport for tourist-dependent areas, the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions and the Department for Education and Employment.

In order to meet the likely deadline of mid-June for submission of the proposed Objective 2 areas to the European Commission by each Member State, the public consultation will end on 25 May 1999.

Renewable Energy Generation

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when he expects to publish his consultation paper on renewable energy generation; and if he will make a statement; [79085]

(2) what targets he has established for the generation of electricity from renewable sources. [79086]

Mr. Battle: I have today published a consultation paper "New and Renewable Energy—Prospects for the 21st Century" which reports on the outcome of the Government's review of new and renewable energy policy.

The Renewables Review paper demonstrates that there is tremendous potential for renewables to become a fully competitive part of UK energy supply. Renewables make an important contribution to secure, sustainable and diverse energy supplies in the UK. They are an essential element of a cost-effective climate change programme and will help the Government meet their environmental objectives at the least cost to the customer. Renewables play a vital role in enabling the UK to meet its environmental targets of reducing greenhouse gases by 12.5% by 2012, and the goal of reducing carbon dioxide emissions by 20% by 2010.

The document shows that producing 10% of UK electricity from renewables appears to be feasible. The Government intend working towards a target of renewable energy providing 10% of UK electricity supplies, cost effectively, as soon as possible. I want to achieve this by 2010. However, this should not be seen as an end in itself, but a step forward on the road to making renewables a strong, world-beating industry.

There are already considerable benefits of the renewables industry. The UK industry employs 3,500 people. Through creating an export drive, and by further developing the industry and the UK market, up to 45,000 jobs could be created.

The Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation (NFFO) has already provided over £600 million of support for renewables. Support for renewables under NFFO will accelerate in the first decade of the next century and could rise to around £150 million a year. NFFO has played a major part in stimulating the industry and bringing down the costs of renewables. As a result of NFFO, an industry of some 700 organisations has been developed. This is why the Government want to see how NFFO can evolve, and to see how it can help the industry to thrive even more.

The review document therefore presents options for possible ways to support renewables while they are reaching market prices. It looks at both the costs and benefits of moving towards a greater use of renewables. In particular, it looks at options for a revised NFFO in the competitive energy markets of the future.

In addition, the Government have provided an increased budget for DTI's New and Renewable Energy Support Programme. They have allocated £43.5 million over the next three years for R&D to help achieve its aim.

The Government are pressing ahead with reform—electricity liberalisation, for instance, is giving consumers the ability to choose their electricity supplier—including green electricity. Suppliers are now offering green tariffs and the Government hope consumers will take up this opportunity to stimulate growth in renewables.

Solar energy also has real potential in the longer term. This is why the Government have recently asked for industry's involvement in taking forward three major new photovoltaic initiatives. In addition, last year I switched on the first solar panel system for a British school, as part of the Government's Foresight Scolar programme. I believe that such schemes can play a valuable part in the development of the UK renewables industry.

This report identifies key issues and challenges which the Government and industry would need to pursue. Issues examined in the paper include: planning arrangements; opportunities for developing energy crops; and arrangements to ensure that embedded generators—those directly connected to local distribution systems, often the case with renewables producers—receive a fair price for their electricity. It seeks views on the issues raised to enable the Government to frame their future policy.

I look forward to receiving those views, and plan to make a further announcement about the way forward in due course. The Government are committed to encouraging sustainable development, to ensure a better quality of life for all.

PRIME MINISTER

Royal Household

Kali Mountford: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the future of the grant-in-aid to the Royal Household for communications and information work. [79671]

The Prime Minister: Subject to the approval of Parliament, from 1 April 1999 the Government intend to merge the small grant-in-aid that was established last year on the COI vote with the property services grant-in-aid on the vote of the Department for Culture, Media and Sport. This will avoid the circularity of the COI providing the Royal Household with the funds to purchase specialist services partly from itself. Communications and information expenditure will be separately identifiable in the Report of the merged grant-in-aid prepared by the Royal Household, copies of which the Secretary of State will place annually in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament. As now, the Memorandum of Understanding will make clear that the Department does not have any responsibility for the functions and engagements undertaken by The Queen and Members of the Royal Family or for the Royal Household's decisions on the content of the communications and information provided from the grant-in-aid.

OSCE

Kali Mountford: To ask the Prime Minister if there are any changes in the composition of the United Kingdom delegation to the Parliamentary Assembly of the Organisation on Security and Co-operation in Europe. [79672]

The Prime Minister: The right hon. and learned Member for North-East Fife (Mr. Campbell) becomes a full representative of the delegation in place of the hon. Member for Richmond Park (Dr. Tonge), who now becomes a substitute member.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Diarmuid O'Neil

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Attorney-General when the Crown Prosecution Service will take a decision about whether criminal charges should be brought as a consequence of the police investigation into the death of Diarmuid O'Neil. [78964]

The Attorney-General: The investigation report of the Metropolitan Police is being carefully considered by the Crown Prosecution Service in accordance with the tests set out in the Code for Crown Prosecutors. A decision on whether any criminal charges should be brought will be made as soon as possible after the case has been reviewed.

Hamilton v. Al Fayed Judgment

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Attorney-General if he will place a copy of the authorised transcript of the judgment in the Hamilton v. Al Fayed appeal in the Library. [79838]

The Solicitor-General: A copy of the Times Law Report is held in the Library. A copy of the authorised transcript will be placed in the Library as soon as it is available.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Planning Costs

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the proposed Town & Country Planning (Control of Major Accident Hazards) Regulations will be devolved matters for (a) the National Assembly of Wales and (b) the Scottish Parliament. [77213]

Mr. Meale: Not for the part of the Control of Major Accidents Hazards Regulations (COMAH) which relates to health and safety. COMAH also contains environmental requirements. Environment matters are to be devolved in Scotland. Ministerial functions in connection with the provision of information by the competent authority, insofar as the exercise of these functions concerns the environment in Scotland, are transferred to Scottish Ministers by virtue of section 53 of the Scotland Act 1998.

Commission for Integrated Transport

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will announce the appointments to the Commission for Integrated Transport; and if he will make a statement. [79571]

Mr. Prescott: I have today appointed David Begg as Chair and Sir Trevor Chinn as Vice-Chair of the new Commission for Integrated Transport. The selection process for the other members of the Commission is still under way, but I hope to be able to announce the complete composition of the Commission by May. It will then begin its work of building on the consensus established around last year's Transport White Paper.

David Begg, who was prominent in advising the Government during the preparation of the White Paper, has established a reputation for action in tackling Edinburgh's transport problems, and has the dynamism and commitment to make the Commission an influential voice in realising the objectives of the White Paper. Sir Trevor, who is Chairman of the motor services group Lex, will support Professor Begg by bringing an understanding of people's attitudes to transport, including the views of motorists.

I am delighted that Professor Begg and Sir Trevor have agreed to work together to lead the Commission. The Commission's success in helping put integrated transport into practice will depend on it having the authority and energy to press transport policy forward. It will need to bring with it all those involved in providing transport services and all of us affected by its impacts. Professor Begg and Sir Trevor, coming from different backgrounds but sharing the same goal of a better, more sustainable transport system, are the right combination to ensure the Commission makes a real difference. Together they constitute a balanced team who look forward to establishing an effective Commission and adding real value to the transport debate.

Departmental Cash Limits

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to change his Department's cash limits for 1998–99. [79771]

Mr. Prescott: The cash limit for Class VI, Vote 4 (local government and regional policy, England) will be reduced by £2,300,000 from £32,294,969,000 to £32,292,669,000. This decrease reflects savings on special grant in support of Private Finance Initiative projects, resulting from delays in starting some projects. It will allow increases of £1,000,000 in the DETR/LGR (local government reorganisation) non-voted cash limit and £1,300,000 in the DETR/LACAP(E) (local authority capital—environment) non-voted cash limit.

The DETR/LGR (local government reorganisation) non-voted cash limit will be increased by £1,000,000 from £127,300,000 to £128,300,000, to meet increased demand for supplementary credit approvals in connection with the commutation of annual loan charges and grants to local authorities on 1 October 1992.

The DETR/LACAP(E) (local authority capital—environment) non-voted cash limit will be increased by £1,300,000 from £928,232,000 to £929,532,000, to provide other capital support for the London Borough of Haringey.

The Housing Action Trusts' external finance limit will be increased by £2,000,000 from £89,000,000 to £91,000,000. Changed spending priorities within the Single Regeneration Budget mean that a proposed transfer from the Housing Action Trusts to the Challenge Fund is no longer necessary.

The DETR/ERDF (European regional development fund) non-voted cash limit will be increased by £26,450,000 from £208,550,000 to £235,000,000, to allow for increased spending resulting from changes in policy to allow payments in advance of receipts.

The DETR/OES (other environmental services) non-voted cash limit will be increased by £12,624,000 from £19,841,000 to £32,465,000 to provide for supplementary credit approvals to local authorities to cover their capital contributions to the Commission for the New Towns under road cost sharing arrangements. The DETR/NT (New Towns) non-voted cash limit will consequently be reduced by £12,624,000 from minus £115,600,000 to minus £128,224,000.

Balloon Safety

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to improve the safety of passengers in balloons. [78319]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The operation of commercial passenger balloons is regulated by the Civil Aviation Authority Safety Regulation Group (CAA SRG). While the safety standards and requirements for these flights are well-established they remain under constant scrutiny by the CAA. Consequently, ballooning operates to a very high safety standard and there has been only one fatal accident in the last 10 years.

One additional safety measure to be implemented soon will require Balloon Air Operator Certificate Holders to produce and operate to a Company Safety Management System. The CAA will provide advice and assistance in establishing this system which is part of an introductory programme for all aircraft undertaking public transport operations.

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many accidents there have been involving power lines and passenger balloons in each of the last 10 years. [78320]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Civil Aviation Authority have provided accident figures for commercial balloons involving power lines as follows:

		Injuries
Year	Collision with cables	Fatal	Serious	Minor
1990	0	0	0	0
1991	1	0	0	0
1992	4	0	3	3
1993	5	0	1	3
1994	2	0	1	0
1995	2	0	2	0
1996	3	0	2	1
1997	2	1	8	4
1998	2	0	0	2
Total	21	1	17	13

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many (a) fatalities and (b) injuries have resulted from accidents involving passenger balloons in each of the last 10 years. [78318]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Civil Aviation Authority have provided accident figures for commercial balloons as follows:

		Injuries
Year	Total accidents	Fatal	Serious	Minor
1990	0	0	0	0
1991	8	0	4	5
1992	11	0	9	13
1993	11	0	7	5
1994	11	0	7	18
1995	7	0	5	0
1996	6	0	4	2
1997	6	1	12	20
1998	6	0	3	3
Total	66	1	51	66

Cyclists

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to make it an offence for motorists to advance to a cyclists' advance stop line at traffic lights. [78732]

Ms Glenda Jackson: It is an offence, under section 36 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 and by virtue of the Traffic Signs Regulations 1994, to proceed beyond any stop line as shown in diagram 1001 in those Regulations and placed in conjunction with light signals when the red signal is showing. At junctions where an advance stop line for cyclists is provided Rule 154 of the current Highway Code instructs motorists that they must wait behind the first white line reached.

Insurance Cover (Local Authorities)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what (a) representations and (b) requests for assistance he has received from local authorities on the withdrawal of insurance cover due to the threat of the millennium bug; and if he will make a statement. [79211]

Mr. Meale: We have received one representation—from Bournemouth Borough Council—seeking assistance on the withdrawal of insurance cover due to the threat of the Millennium Bug. It is a matter for each individual council to put in place such arrangements as it considers appropriate and practicable to meet the risks posed by the Millennium Bug.

Fluoridated Drinking Water

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proportion of the UK population receives fluoridated drinking water; what measures are being taken to ensure that the systems for the control of dosage will not be affected by the millennium bug; and if he will make a statement. [79016]

Mr. Meale: About 10 per cent. of the population receives fluoridated drinking water supplies. The Drinking Water Inspectorate, during its inspections of water companies in England and Wales in 1998, examined the companies' general arrangements for maintaining the wholesomeness and quality of their supplies both during and after the millennium. The Inspectorate was satisfied with the progress being made by companies and will continue to keep the matter under surveillance during 1999.

Yaverland Sewerage Works

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the timing of the introduction of secondary sewage treatment at the sewerage works under construction at Yaverland, Sandown, Isle of Wight. [78571]

Mr. Meale [holding answer 26 March 1999]: The Government have said that we wish to see secondary treatment installed on the Isle of Wight as soon as practicable. Southern Water need various consents from Government to proceed with the works. They are currently in the process of providing the necessary supporting information and we are putting pressure on them to do so as soon as possible.

Council Houses

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many local authority owned dwellings are empty in each English shire county; and if he will make a statement. [78905]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 26 March 1999]: I have placed in the Library a table presenting the latest information on the number of vacant dwellings owned by local authorities in each English shire county (as in existence before the creation of unitary authorities), and reported by them at 1 April 1998.

Planning Applications

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many planning applications since May 1997 he has called in following a resolution by the relevant local planning authority to refuse planning permission. [79160]

Mr. Raynsford: None.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of (a) the quantity and (b) the trend rate of growth of annual United Kingdom CO_2 emissions generated by (i) the household sector, (ii) industry excluding power generators, (iii) power generators, (iv) the service sector and (v) other sectors. [79190]

Mr. Meale: The following table gives estimates of CO_2 emissions in 1997 and 1998 from the UK's greenhouse gas emissions inventory. The 1998 data are provisional. The table also gives estimated growth rates based on the trends observed since 1990.

	Emissions in 1997 (million tonnes carbon)	Emissions in 1998 (million tonnes carbon, provisional)	Trend (% per year)
Household Sector	23	23	0.3
Industry excluding power generators	41	41	0.3
Power generators	40	41	−3
Service sector	9	8	0.2
Other sectors	43	43	0.1

Other sectors include transport, land use change and waste. The land use change emissions estimates are currently under review.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the current estimate of (a) the quantity and (b) the trend rate of growth of annual CO_2 emissions in respect of (i) power generation as a whole, (ii) gas-powered generators, (iii) coal-powered generators and (iv) other power producers. [79191]

Mr. Meale: The following table gives estimates of CO_2 emissions in 1997 and 1998 from the UK's greenhouse gas emissions inventory. The 1998 data are provisional. The Table also gives estimated growth rates based on the trends observed since 1990, rounded to the nearest per cent.

	Emissions in 1997 (million tonnes carbon)	Emissions in 1998 (million tonnes carbon, provisional)	Trend (% per year)
Power generation as a whole	40	41	−3
Gas powered generators	12	12	+50
Coal powered generators	27	27	−6
Other power producers	1	1	−10

Other power producers include oil powered generators and the incineration of municipal solid waste.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the effect on the level of carbon dioxide emissions of (a) the moratorium on gas-powered electricity generation, and (b) the use of a fuel mix chosen solely on cost grounds. [79234]

Mr. Meale [holding answer 29 March 1999]: The environmental impact of the Government's programme of reform of the electricity market is discussed in Annex H of the White Paper 'Conclusions of the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation and Government response to fourth and fifth Reports from the Trade and Industry Committee' (Cm 4071). This makes clear that the new policy does not aim to achieve any particular outcome on fuel mix. The Government have therefore not sought to provide a quantification of the effect of the policy on CO_2 emissions or fuel mix relative to what would have occurred in its absence. The Department of Trade and Industry is currently developing a set of scenarios on future CO_2 emissions from energy use in the United Kingdom. These scenarios will take the new policy on fuels for electricity generation into account and will be used to inform decisions on the scope and nature of additional policies to meet our commitments on reducing emissions of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases.

School Buses (Fuel Duty)

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will extend fuel duty rebate to coach operators who operate contracted school bus services. [79402]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have at present no plans to change the eligibility arrangements for fuel duty rebate. Bus services which only take pupils to or from school are not eligible for rebate. However, bus services provided or secured by a local education authority are eligible for rebate if they are registered with the Traffic Commissioner as a local bus service, and if they are normally available to, and are used by, members of the general public.

Departmental Web Site

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on which dates in 1999 the Department's web site relating to releases into the environment was updated; how frequently he plans to update the site; and if he will make a statement. [79093]

Mr. Meale: The DETR's Web site updated information from the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment on the following dates: 26 January, 3 February, 9 February, 10 February, 18 February, 22 February, 24 February and 16 March. These pages are amongst the top ten most popular of this site's environmental information pages. The Web site will continue to be updated as and when required.

British Rail

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many staff are currently employed by British Rail; and what are their functions. [78981]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I understand from the British Railways Board that the latest (March 1999) staff in post figure is 2,363. Of these, 2,194 work for the British Transport Police. The remaining 169 staff are largely employed on the administration, and sale where appropriate, of the BR property estate, on other residual BR functions and central services such as finance and legal.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the total wages bill for British Rail for the last 12 month for which figures are available. [78

Ms Glenda Jackson: The total staff costs of the BR Board for the year to 31 March 1998 are shown on page 21 of the BR Annual Accounts 1997–98. Total salaries and wages in that year were £83.7 million. This related to an end year employment figure of 2,386, down from 4,328 at end 1996–97.

Water Prices

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress is being made in respect of the future regulation of water prices; and if he will make a statement. [79102]

Mr. Meale: On 1 March 1999 Ministers announced their guidance to the Director General of Water Services on the programmes of investment in environmental and water quality improvements by water and sewerage companies that he should assume in setting their price limits for the period 2000–01 to 2004–05. While the setting of price limits is the responsibility of the Director, the required investment programme of some £8 billion of quality improvements over five years should allow room for significant price reductions in 2000–01. The Director will announce his provisional determinations of price limits in July.

Under proposals in the Water Industry Bill, currently before Parliament, household water customers would gain increased choice in the method of calculation of their individual bills. The Bill also proposes new powers for the Director and Ministers to regulate the provisions of companies' charges schemes.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will introduce regulations to limit Heavy Goods Vehicles to the inside lane on busy commuter motorways. [78960]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Goods vehicles with a maximum laden weight exceeding 7.5 tonnes are already banned from the outside lane of motorways with three or more lanes. We do not believe that a further restriction to the inner lane is justified for road safety reasons. It would cause a queue to form in the inner lane, moving at the speed of the slowest. Journey times are often a significant factor for hauliers, and drivers might be tempted to divert from motorways to less suitable roads through towns where accident rates are higher and there are more vulnerable road users, such as pedestrians and cyclists.

Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to mark the 25 anniversary of the laying of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974. [79664]

Mr. Prescott: I intend to take forward a strategic appraisal of health and safety to mark the 25th anniversary of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974. This legislation has delivered significant improvement in standards of health and safety at work. But we cannot be complacent: people continue to lose their lives and suffer serious injury at work. Not only does this have a terrible human cost, but it also jeopardises the competitiveness of our economy.

It is not my intention to revisit the basic structures of the Act, but I want to inject new impetus and relaunch the health and safety agenda. We also need to make sure that our approach to regulation continues to be appropriate for the changing world of work as we enter the next millennium, but without simply adding new and unnecessary regulatory burdens to business, especially small and medium-sized enterprises. Our aim must be to reduce the rate of workplace accidents and ill-health still further, crucially by working with all stakeholders to demonstrate that a healthy, well protected workforce is not only right, but is good for business and good for society.

I will launch a public consultation document, jointly with the Health and Safety Commission, in the summer to open up a debate on this important issue.

Opencast Coal Mining

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he proposes to publish revised planning guidance for opencast coal mining. [79770]

Mr. Caborn: We have published revised Mineral Planning Guidance on Coal Mining and Colliery Spoil Disposal today. This meets the major concerns expressed in the 10 Point Plan for Opencast Coal issued before the General Election and firmly puts the interests of protecting the environment and local communities first.

The revised guidance takes account of our pre-election commitments, the final conclusions of the Energy review published in October 1998 and the responses to the draft guidance issued for public consultation in October 1998.

The guidance will ensure that planning permission for opencast coal mining is only given where the development is environmentally acceptable or provides over-riding local or community benefits. If neither of these requirements is met, there should be a presumption against opencast coal.

Landfill Tax Credit Scheme

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions under the Landfill Tax Credit Scheme which organisations have been registered under the Group Environmental Body Scheme; and how much has been awarded to environmental bodies under this scheme. [78556]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

This is a matter for the Regulator for the environmental bodies credit scheme. I have passed on my hon. Friend's question to them and asked them to reply direct. The Regulator is:

Entrust Ltd.,
Suite 2, 5th Floor,
Acre House,
2 Town Square,
Sale,
M33 7WZ.

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions under the Landfill Tax Credit Scheme how much has been awarded under the Group Environmental Body Scheme to (a) Albany Architecture Heritage Trust, (b) Enventure, (c) Global Balance Trust, (d) Global Wildlife Trust, (e) Triedar Ltd., Salisbury, (f) Cory Environmental Trust, Thurrock, and (g) Cory Environmental Ltd.; and if he will list the environmental projects which have been supported by these organisations. [78582]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is best provided by the Regulator for the environmental bodies credit scheme. I have passed my hon. Friend's question to them and asked them to reply direct. The Regulator is:

Entrust Ltd.,
Suite 2, 5th Floor,
Acre House,
2 Town Square,
Sale,
M33 7WZ.

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions under the Landfill Tax Credit scheme how much has been awarded to environmental bodies since January; and what percentage of this total is a voluntary donation from landfill operators. [78555]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

Entrust, who is the Regulator for the environmental bodies scheme, has been notified by the environmental bodies of awards of £6.56 million since 1 January 1999. All donations by landfill site operators through the scheme are voluntary, although they can receive landfill tax credits of 90 per cent. against their donations.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Guest Houses and Hotels

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received on the six bed-space rule relating to the business rate for small guest houses and hotels; and if he will make a statement. [78429]

Janet Anderson: I received representations on this subject during a recent meeting with the Chairman of the National Council of Hotels Associations. The matter has also been raised with me by tourism business people during visits to various parts of England. The Government have no current plans to amend the "six-person test" for non-domestic rates, although matters such as these are kept under review.

Millennium Festival Bids

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the successful bids for millennium festival awards in the north-west. [78785]

Janet Anderson: A list of successful bids is shown in the following table. This information is also available on the Millennium Commission's website (www.millennium.gov.uk). In addition, the North West has benefited from Watson Steel of Bolton winning the contract to provide the steel for the structure of the Dome.

National Lottery

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much money has been allocated to good causes each year since the inception of the National Lottery. [79239]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 29 March 1999]: The table shows total income for the good causes (including interest) by calender year since the inception of the National Lottery:

Year	£
1994	82,605,591
1995	1,342,426,919
1996	1,591,480,120
1997	1,865,661,561
1998	1,955,875,555

The first National Lottery draw took place on November 1994.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Aghalane Bridge

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the previous Aghalane Bridge was destroyed; and what was the purpose of destroying it. [78271]

Mr. Ingram: Aghalane Bridge was destroyed in an explosion on 21 November 1972 by a person or persons unknown, but believed to have been a Loyalist paramilitary group.

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the projected cost for the reconstruction of the Aghalane Bridge; what proportion of the bridge is in Northern Ireland; and what are the respective shares of the total cost of reinstatement to be borne by British and Irish Republic public funds. [78274]

Mr. Ingram: The projected cost of the contract for the reconstruction of Aghalane Bridge is expected to be £862,000. The British Government are bearing the full cost of the reconstructed bridge and have received £500,000 grant aid from the European Regional Development Fund, Special Support Programme for Peace and Reconciliation.

In addition to the projected cost of £862,000, the scheme to reconstruct the bridge has attracted additional costs arising out from the geotechnical investigation, consultant's fees and laboratory charges, which are estimated to amount to £45,000. These costs have been included as part of the road-works for the northern approach to the bridge.

The reconstructed bridge is 30 metres long, 15 metres of which is on the Northern Ireland side of the border.

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the cost of approach roadworks relating to the Aghalane Bridge reconstruction for each year since preparations commenced; and to what extent approach works in the Irish Republic have been (a) managed, (b) paid for and (c) subsidised by the Department of the Environment (NI). [78273]

Mr. Ingram: DEO(NI) Roads Service has been involved only in the construction of the Northern approach to the bridge, including such work on the Southern side of the Woodford River as was necessary to construct the bridge. To date, the cost of these roadworks is estimated to be £1,930,720, including a projected expenditure of £292,152 in the coming financial year. In addition to the construction costs, this estimate includes the cost of geotechnical investigations, consultant's fees and laboratory charges, as well as an allowance for land acquisition and landscaping.

Roads Service expect to receive a grant from the European Regional Development Fund, Special Support Programme for Peace and Reconciliation, to the value of £1,061,250.

The costs each year are as follows:

Year	Expenditure (£)
1995–96	2,777
1996–97	20,025
1997–98	543,955
1998–99	1,071,811
1999–2000	292,152
Total	1,930,720

Projected

Apart from the works necessary to construct the bridge, indicated above, Roads Service have not managed, paid for or subsidised any of the approach works in the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many terrorist attacks took place on civilians on the road between Aghalane Bridge and Teemore Cross (a) prior to and (b) after the destruction of the previous bridge; if she will give details of the deaths and injuries inflicted; and what was the total compensation paid by the Northern Ireland Office as a result. [78272]

Mr. Ingram: RUC records indicate that one terrorist incident took place in that immediate area, the murder of Thomas (part-time UDR) and Emily Bullock at their home at Killynick on 21 September 1972. The Northern Ireland Office did receive claims, which I understand were later withdrawn.

National Sports Stadium

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will provide details of the membership of the Working Group established to investigate the possibility of a national sports stadium for Northern Ireland; what are its terms of reference; and when the Working Group intends to hold its first meeting. [79343]

Mr. McFall: The membership of the Working Group to be established to investigate the possibility of a national sports stadium for Northern Ireland will represent the following interests:

Chairman:

To be appointed by the Sports Council for Northern Ireland

Members:

Representative from the Department of the Environment

Representative from the Belfast City Council

Two representatives from the Private Sector

One representative from each of Rugby, Soccer, Gaelic Sports and Athletics.

The Working Group's terms of reference are:

To explore the need for, and feasibility of providing a national stadium, in particular:

- to consult with relevant sporting interests to determine their willingness to participate in the promotion and operation of a national stadium
- to identify a potential promoter/owner/operator
- to assess the potential regenerative impact of a national stadium
- to examine the capital and recurrent funding implications and associated locational issues
- to examine the potential relationships and linkages with relevant public and private sector organisations
- to construct an outline business case
- to determine what further steps should be taken.

The Working Group intends to hold its first meeting in early April.

WALES

Company Licences

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for (a) small and medium enterprises and (b) larger companies (i) all licences and permits issued by his Department and its agencies to companies permitting them to carry out their business, (ii) the cost of each such licence or permit in (A) 1997–98 and (B) 1999–2000 and (iii) the current number of companies which are in receipt of each such licence or permit. [76853]

Retail Parks

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the expenditure by (a) local authorities and (b) the WDA on the development of out of town retail parks in the last year for which figures are available. [78229]

Mr. Hain: Information on local authority expenditure on the development of out of town retail parks is not held by my Department.

No WDA expenditure has been put into such developments in the last year.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Inward Investment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the current levels of inward investment in (a) Wales and (b) Flintshire. [78956]

Mr. Hain: I am delighted with the 17,402 new jobs and associated capital investment of £1.3 billion promised by the inward investment projects recorded for Wales by the Welsh Development Agency since May 1997. Flintshire's contribution of almost 2,400 new jobs and capital investment of £582 million is a tribute to the people of the area.

But, I want to see even greater success in the future in terms of a higher level of inward investment and in terms of the growth of indigenous companies. And I want to see this success distributed throughout Wales.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Badgers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement concerning badgers and bovine tuberculosis in Wales. [78961]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: We are greatly concerned about the increased incidence of bovine TB in Wales. The Government's five point strategy based on the recommendations in the Krebs report is the right strategy for dealing with the problem. No one should underestimate the seriousness of bovine TB and we will take the necessary steps to contain it.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

A550

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to reduce traffic congestion on the A550 Woodbank English Border Junction. [78962]

Mr. Hain: The Woodbank Junction scheme is almost entirely situated in Cheshire, and is the responsibility of the Highways Agency. It will be for the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, in conjunction with the Highways Agency to carry out the route study proposed in the English Roads Review. Progress on this will continue to be closely monitored by the Welsh Office.

Following the transfer of functions, monitoring progress will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Beef

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he has taken to promote Welsh beef. [78959]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Beef is a vital part of the livestock industry in Wales and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales has taken a number of measures to promote quality beef produced by our farmers. A Welsh Agri-Food Action Plan for the Lamb and Beef sector, drawn up by the industry, was launched on 8 March with the support of the Welsh Office and the WDA.

The Plan sets out to strengthen the image of Welsh beef as an extensively-reared grass-fed product; develop export markets and niche markets;

develop stronger marketing arrangements through the marketing support that is available through the Welsh Development Agency and Welsh Lamb and Beef Promotions; build a bigger stake for farmers in the supply chain;

develop added value processing;

encourage livestock markets to re-appraise their position and plan for the future; develop farm and supply chain certification as the market demands that assurance schemes are necessary throughout the supply chain.

In addition, the Welsh Office is supporting projects to promote quality beef from Wales:

ADAS—Welsh Beef Industry Viability Project—this project aims to assist beef production systems and promote quality through concentrating on farm assurance, efficient production, traceability, marketing and the establishment of producer groups. The total project cost is some £1.2 million over a period of four years;

Welsh Development Agency—Promotion and Marketing of Welsh Beef—the objective of this project is to stimulate consumer demand for Welsh beef through a strategic marketing and promotional campaign. The total project cost is some £0.821 million; and

Welsh Black Cattle Society—Improving quality and marketing of Welsh Black Cattle. The total project cost is £0.490 million

In future, following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the Assembly.

Hospitals (Flintshire)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future of (a) the longstay hospital at Meadowsleigh, Penyffordd, Flintshire and (b) the Dobshill Hospital, Flintshire; and if he will make a statement. [78953]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The future of these hospitals is a matter for North Wales Health Authority. I understand that this Authority is in the process of completing a review, the purpose of which is to establish what community hospital services are currently provided and what are required to support local communities over the next 5 years. The Authority intends to publish and consult upon a 5 year strategic plan shortly.

School Libraries

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the amount of money to be made available for school libraries in (a) high schools, (b) primary schools, (c) infant and (d) nursery schools in Flintshire in 1999–2000; and if he will make a statement. [78954]

Mr. Hain: This is a matter for the local education authority and for schools to decide in the light of local needs and priorities.

However, school libraries have an important role to play in the drive to raise standards of literacy. As part of the additional £4 million for books announced following the Budget, schools in Flintshire will receive £204,000. In addition Flintshire's share of the money which we are making available through the Grants for Education Support and Training programme in 1999–2000 specifically to support literacy is nearly £110,000.

We have also recognised the contribution which school librarians can make to teaching and learning and they are eligible to receive the training in the use of information and communications technologies funded from the Lottery through the New Opportunities Fund.

Mixed-sex Wards

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if it is Government policy to reduce the number of mixed-sex wards in NHS hospitals in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [79392]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Rather than concentrate on the narrow issue of single sex accommodation, NHS Wales should address the wider and arguably more important area of privacy and dignity.

Some trust hospitals' existing washing and toilet facilities still fall short of the acceptable standards for meeting privacy and dignity, and all trusts are working towards this goal. In addition, trusts bring to the attention of all staff the importance of meeting patients' needs and wishes for privacy and dignity through their induction programmes.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the number of mixed-sex wards in NHS hospitals in each local authority area; and if he will make a statement. [79388]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: An estimate of the number of mixed-sex wards in NHS hospitals in each local authority area could be made only at a disproportionate cost.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many patients are in mixed-sex wards in the Royal Gwent Hospital; [79393]

(2) how many mixed-sex wards there are currently in the Royal Gwent Hospital. [79394]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Of the 33 wards at Royal Gwent hospital 29 wards, with 675 beds, are mixed sex. However each ward is made up of bays and each bay is single sex.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Blood Donors

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money was spent by his Department in 1998 to encourage people to give blood. [79391]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: In addition to the Department of Health's expenditure which benefits both England and Wales, in the 1998–99 financial year the Welsh Office spent just under £6,000 to encourage more blood donors.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Nurse Recruitment

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money his Department will spend in the current financial year on advertisements intended to encourage people to return to the nursing profession. [79389]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The Welsh Office has spent £12,000 in the current financial year on its nurse recruitment campaign. As a result of a survey of individual Trusts' needs, advertisements will be placed in local newspapers in the new financial year to attract registered nurses back to the NHS in Wales. These additional costs are as yet unknown.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Spree Offenders

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of youth crime is committed by spree offenders; and if he will estimate the proportion of such offenders who do not fall under the Government's definition of persistent young offenders. [78776]

Mr. Boateng: It is not possible to provide the information requested, as there is no generally recognised definition of a spree offender. While information is not collected separately on spree offenders, many of the fast-track schemes across the country include spree offenders as well as the Government's definition of persistent young offenders. Some of those regarded as spree offenders will fall within the category of persistent young offenders in any event.

Rape Crisis Networks

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what resources the Government intends to devote to refuge and rape crisis networks for (a) 1999 to 2000 and (b) future years. [78872]

Mr. Boateng: The main national umbrella organisations for local refuge projects are the Women's Aid Federation of England and its sister organisations in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

In 1999 to 2000, Women's Aid (England) is to receive a total of £229,795. The Department of Health will contribute £107,500 core funding, £29,205 for an awareness-raising project and £49,000 for a national telephone helpline service. The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions will contribute £44,000 under the Special Grants Programme to develop training opportunities, resources and facilities.

Core funding to Welsh Women's Aid is provided by the Welsh Office. Figures for 1999 to 2000 have not yet been finalised.

The Scottish Office has committed £226,000 to Scottish Women's Aid for 1999 to 2000. From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

In Northern Ireland in 1999 to 2000, the Department of Health and Social Services will fund Northern Ireland Women's Aid for core administration work and project funding, to a value of £170,000. The Northern Ireland Office has set aside £30,000 to fund the Women's Aid helpline.

The majority of Government funding for refuges themselves is indirect and, therefore, cannot be quantified. It includes the funding of registered social landlords through the Housing Corporation, some funding through local authorities and the Single Regeneration Budget, and some funding of revenue costs through the payment of housing benefit to residents.

The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, the Department of Health and the Women's Unit have commissioned a package of research into the accommodation and support services available in England to those experiencing domestic violence. This information will be used to assist local authorities in making decisions about what further provision they need to make in their localities.

In Northern Ireland, the Department of the Environment intends to commit £1.8 million capital funding and £1.4 million revenue funding in 1999 to 2000 to women's refuges. In 2000 to 2001, these figures will be £0.6 million capital and £1.4 million revenue, and in 2001 to 2002 they will be £1.7 million capital and £1.4 million revenue.

Rape crisis centres currently receive public funds through, for example, local authorities, rather than central Government funding. The Government's consultation paper "Supporting people", published in December 1998, contains proposals for an improved funding framework for support services of this kind. The consultation period ended on 5 February and the responses are now being analysed. We cannot yet give precise commitments, but we have guaranteed that the total budget in 1999 to 2000 for the new "Supporting people" scheme will be at least the same as what was spent in 1998 to 1999 in the various budgets that the scheme will replace.

In Northern Ireland in 1999 to 2000, the Department of Health and Social Services will provide £31,000 core funding for the Rape Crisis and Sexual Abuse Centre and £54,000 core funding to Nexus, a voluntary organisation providing a counselling service for adult victims of rape and sexual abuse.

Policing (Party Conferences)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department contributed to the cost of policing the Conservative Party Conference in Bournemouth in 1998; how much it plans to contribute for the Labour Party Conference in Bournemouth in 1999; and if he will make a statement. [79015]

Mr. Boateng: The Dorset Police Authority received a special grant of £750,000 as a contribution to the additional costs the force incurred in policing the Conservative Party Conference at Bournemouth in October 1998. The total additional costs incurred were £829,000.

The Dorset Police Authority will receive special grant of up to £1.6 million for the additional costs of policing this year's Labour Party Conference at Bournemouth. This is against total costs estimated by the force to be £1.7 million.

Drug Treatment and Testing Orders

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders have been (a) assessed for a drug treatment and testing order and (b) made subject to such an order in the pilot areas for drug treatment and testing order; and how many of those made subject to an order have subsequently breached the order. [79204]

Mr. George Howarth: As at 26 March 1999:

(a) 130 offenders had been referred for assessment for a drug treatment and testing order in the three pilot areas; and

(b) 38 offenders had been sentenced to a drug treatment and testing order by courts in the pilot areas. Of those orders, seven had been the subject of breach proceedings which, in six cases had resulted in the order being revoked.

Young Offenders

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many 10 to 17-year-olds were convicted of offences involving (a) supply and (b) possession of illegal drugs; and how many of such offences involved Class A drugs in the last five years for which figures are available. [79209]

Mr. Boateng: Information taken from the Home Office Court Appearance Databases is given in the table.

Persons aged 10–17 years convicted at all courts of certain drug offences[1], England and Wales, 1993–97

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what proportion of offences were committed by persistent young offenders in the last five years for which figures are available; [79206]

(2) how many offences were committed by persistent young offenders in the last five years for which figures are available. [79207]

Mr. Boateng: It is not possible to determine the proportion and number of offences committed by persistent young offenders. It is, however, possible to estimate the proportion of convictions for standard list offences that are accounted for by those aged 10 to 17 with three or more previous court appearances for such offences.

The table contains the relevant available information based on samples of offenders sentenced in the years 1993 to 1997.

Percentage of convictions[1] for standard list offences[2] accounted for by offenders aged 10–17 with three or more previous court appearances for such offences

	Percentage of those convicted aged 10–17	Percentage of all convictions
1997	22	3
1997 old basis[3]	22	3
1996	20	2
1996 old basis[3]	20	3
1995	21	3
1994	21	3
1993	25	3

[1] Counting one conviction per court appearance
[2] Standard list offences consist of all indictable offences and some of the more serious summary offences
[3] Excluding standard list offences added to the list on 1 January 1996

The Government's definition of a persistent young offender is: a young person aged 10–17 who has been sentenced by any criminal court in the United Kingdom on three or more separate occasions for one or more recordable offence, and within three years of the last sentencing occasion is subsequently arrested or has information against him for a further recordable offence.In this context, "recordable" means the class of offences that must be recorded on the Police National Computer. This class of offences is generally broader than the "standard list". This means that the percentages quoted above relate to a category of persistent young offenders that is more restrictive than the Government definition. It should also be noted that it is not possible to determine the percentage of convictions and cautions accounted for by this group.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offences were committed by 10 to 17-years-old offenders (a) in total and (b) as a proportion of all offences in the last five years for which figures are available. [79208]

Mr. Boateng: It is not possible to present a full picture of the offences committed by young people aged 10 to 17 because much crime is not reported and not all reported crime is cleared up. The best indicator we have of youth crime is the number of young people known to have been involved in offending, that is, who have been cautioned by the police for, or convicted by the courts of, a crime.

The available information, as given in the table, is taken from the Home Office Cautions and Court Proceedings Databases.

Number of offenders aged 10–17 years cautioned or convicted of all offences as a proportion of all offenders, England and Wales, 1993–1997

Life Sentence (Murder)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 24 March 1999, Official Report, column 237, what is the minimum possible tariff to be served by a person serving a life sentence following a conviction for murder. [79084]

Mr. George Howarth: The tariff is set by the Secretary of State following consideration of advice from the judiciary on the punitive period necessary to satisfy the requirements of retribution and general deterrence. Tariff length varies according to the circumstances of the particular offence and there is no minimum period. However, tariffs of less than eight years for murder would be set only in exceptional circumstances.

Lancet Inquiry

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police officers have been charged with offences discovered during the Lancet inquiry; [79094]

(2) what discussions he has had with the Police Complaints Authority regarding the progress of the Lancet inquiry into alleged police corruption in Cleveland; and if he will make a statement; [79098]

(3) what steps he is taking to monitor the progress of the Lancet inquiry into the alleged police corruption in Cleveland; and if he will make a statement; [79212]

Mr. Boateng: The Operation Lancet inquiry into allegations of police corruption in Cleveland is being supervised by the Police Complaints Authority (PCA), and it is for the PCA to monitor the progress of the inquiry. The length of the investigation is a matter for the investigating officer and the PCA. I have not discussed the inquiry with the PCA. It would not be appropriate for me to comment on criminal or disciplinary investigations, including Operation Lancet, not least because my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has a role in the disciplinary process as the appellate authority, and my right hon. Friend may in the future be called upon in that capacity to consider any disciplinary appeals from offenders arising from this inquiry.

No police officers have been charged with offences as a result of Operation Lancet inquiry to date, but the inquiry is continuing and I understand that a number of possible criminal and disciplinary matters are still under investigation. There has been close consultation with the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) throughout the inquiry. A file on drugs-related issues was delivered to the CPS on 4 December 1998 and is now with Treasury Counsel.

Crime (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what studies have been (a) made and (b) commissioned by his Department on the breakdown of crimes committed by the different ethnic minorities; and if he will make a statement. [79291]

Mr. Straw: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the right hon. Member for Bromley and Chislehurst (Mr. Forth) on 2 February 1999, Official Report, column 554.

Correspondence

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average time he took to respond substantively to letters from hon. Members in each of the last 12 months. [79299]

Mr. Straw: On the basis of available information, the average time taken to respond substantively to letters from hon. Members to which I personally replied is listed in working days.

1998–99	Working days
March	30
April	26

Police and Prison Services (Ethnic Origin)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a breakdown of (i) the Police Service and (ii) the Prison Service in England and Wales by ethnic origin and grade. [79048]

Mr. Boateng: Detailed information about the number of police officers by rank and ethnic origin is collected annually by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary. The information in the table is for 31 March 1998.

Police Service—Police Officers by rank and ethnic group as at 31 March 1998

	Asian	Black	Other	Total
Asst. Chief Constable	1	—	—	1
Superintendent	1	2	1	4
Chief Inspector	3	9	7	19
Inspector	19	9	10	38
Sergeant	87	83	59	229
Constable	687	936	437	2,060
Total	798	1,039	514	2,351

In addition, there were 132 ethnic minority police officers seconded to central services.

There were 719 Asian, 1,405 black and 609 other civilian support staff from the ethnic minorities employed in the Police Service at the end of March 1998, a total of 2,733. It is not possible to provide information by grade.

Numbers of Prison Service staff by grade and ethnic origin as at March 1999 are set out in tables that have been placed in the Library.

Audit Commission Report

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Audit Commission report, "Action Stations: Improving the Management of the Police Estate". [79379]

Mr. Boateng: The Government welcome the report. Its recommendations will play a significant part in ensuring that the management of the police estate is given proper emphasis in releasing savings for redeployment into front-line policing and delivering best value.

London Crime Study

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place the study into crime in London carried out by Dr. Marion Fitzgerald, in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [79194]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 29 March 1999]: Dr. Fitzgerald has not undertaken a study into crime in London.

Dr. Fitzgerald did prepare a briefing paper for Ministers on ethnicity and criminality, which consolidated some data from small-scale local studies, previously published material and some material that has yet to be published.

It has been the practice of successive Governments that such internal briefing papers are not themselves published.

Dr. Fitzgerald's published research while with the Home Office has included:

Ethnic Minorities and the criminal justice system: Research Study No. 20.

The Royal Commission on Criminal Justice (1993).

Ethnic Minorities Victimisation and Racial Harassment: Findings from the 1988 and 1992 British Crime Surveys with Hale C.

Home Office, Research Development and Statistics Directorate (HORS 154) (1996).

Ethnic monitoring in police forces: A beginning with Sibbett R.

Home Office, Research, Development and Statistics Directorate (HORS 173) (1997).

Evaluation of the Racially Aggravated Offences in the Crime and Disorder Act 1998.

Home Office, Research, Development and Statistics Directorate (Spring 2001).

I am happy to make available to the right hon. Member a full list of relevant published research in this field.

Asylum Interviews

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he intends to introduce tape recording of asylum interviews. [79769]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have decided to pilot tape recording of asylum interviews. Some interviews, at ports and in Croydon should be tape recorded from May. A report on the pilot, including its impact on the Immigration Appellate Authority, is planned for the New Year.

Football-related Legislation

Mr. Alan Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the outcome of the public consultation exercise on the Review of Football-related Legislation which was published on 27 November 1998. [79772]

Kate Hoey: The document entitled "Review of Football-related Legislation" set out 29 proposals for discussion on measures to help to prevent and minimise football hooliganism at designated football matches in England and Wales and overseas.

The consultation period ended on 27 January and some 50 responses were received from organisations and individuals. The overwhelming response to the measures was supportive. Respondents to the document as a whole recognised the need for measures to be introduced to deal with the loopholes in the present legislation. They also indicated strong support for those proposals aimed at dealing with measures to help to prevent those convicted of football-related offences from attending designated football matches. I am placing a summary of the responses in the Library.

The response to the public consultation exercise has been made known to the hon. Member for West Chelmsford (Mr. Burns) whose Bill, the Football (Offences and Disorder) Bill, is due for its Second Reading on 16 April.

Criminal Justice System

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to publish the criminal justice system plans. [79821]

Mr. Straw: The Attorney-General, the Lord Chancellor and I will be publishing jointly a strategic and business plan for the criminal justice system in England and Wales at 12 noon on 31 March 1999. The plans describe the aims, objectives and performance targets which the Government expect the criminal justice system as a whole to deliver. Copies of the plans will be placed in the Library.

Scout Association

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from the Scout Association regarding the cost to them of checking adults with the Criminal Records Bureau; and if he will make a statement. [79320]

Mr. Boateng: We have received representations from a number of voluntary organisations, including the Scout Association, about charging for checks from the Criminal Records Bureau. We considered very carefully whether there was any way in which free checks could be provided for volunteers. While we acknowledge the valuable contribution volunteers make, we have concluded that it would not be practicable to provide any free checks from the Criminal Records Bureau for volunteers or for any other groups.

We realise that this is unwelcome news, but providing free checks would prove an unsustainable burden on the public purse and may increase demand for certificates from the bureau to an uncontrollable extent. In addition, we do not consider it would be fair to allow volunteers to have free certificates when there are other equally deserving groups, such as the unemployed or the disabled. The cost of the fees for certificates from the bureau will be kept to the minimum necessary to recoup costs.

Senator Pinochet

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the cost so far to the Exchequer of the arrest, confinement and protection of and legal proceedings relating to Senator Pinochet. [79345]

Mr. Straw: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs. Gillan) on 9 February 1999, Official Report, column 143.

For security reasons, it has been the policy of successive Governments not to provide information about police operations relating to protection. The Home Office allocated £200,000 to the Surrey police force to assist with the unexpected costs to the force of Senator Pinochet's residence in Wentworth.

On the cost so far of legal proceedings I understand that my right hon. Friend the Attorney-General will be answering a written question laid by my hon. Friend the Member for Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East (Dr. Kumar).

Police (London)

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what will be the role of police/community consultative groups once the Greater London Authority and the Police Authority for London are established; if existing police/community consultative groups will be retained with the same composition and functions; and if he will make a statement. [79508]

Kate Hoey: The Government place considerable importance on there being effective community consultation on policing matters. Police and Community Consultative Groups (PCGGs) play a major role in this process, as I emphasised in the debate on section 17 of the Greater London Authority Bill in Standing Committee A on 16 March 1999, Official Report, columns 1276–82. PCCGs are not statutory bodies—but they are the primary means by which many police authorities choose to discharge their duty to obtain the views of local people.

When the Metropolitan Police Authority (MPA) is created, it will take on the duty, currently held by the Metropolitan police Commissioner, of obtaining the views of people in the Metropolitan police district. It will be for the MPA to decide how best to discharge this duty, just as police authorities elsewhere in England and Wales must decide how best to obtain the views of people in their area. If the MPA considers that PCCGs are working well, we have every reason to believe that it will want to retain them.

Police Forces

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what means other than HM Inspectorate of Constabularies he is able to assess the (a) independence, (b) training, (c) skills and (d) resources of non-Home Office police forces; and if he will make a statement. [79319]

Mr. Boateng: The responsibility for managing and supervising the operation of non-Home Office police forces rests with the employing bodies of those organisations.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the last occasion HM Inspector of Constabularies made an inspection of the Port of Liverpool Police; and if he will make a statement. [79318]

Mr. Boateng: The last inspection of the Port of Liverpool police by HM Inspector of Constabularies was in 1978.

Bereavement Damages

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will amend Section 1A of the Fatal Accidents Act 1976 regarding bereavement damages to take into account the death of an only son; and if he will make a statement. [78764]

Mr. Hoon: I have been asked to reply.

Section 1A of the Fatal Accidents Act 1996 provides for bereavement damages to be claimed by the parents of unmarried children who are under the age of 18. This applies to both parents where the child was legitimate, and to the mother only in the case of an illegitimate child. This is an area which we keep regularly under review. The Law Commission considered bereavement damages in its consultation paper "Claims for Wrongful Death" (Consultation Paper No. 148) and hopes to produce its report later this year. The Government will consider the Law Commission's recommendations carefully when they are received.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Conditional Fee Arrangements

Sir Nicholas Lyell: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will publish details of legal fees and insurance products available to litigants with conditional fee agreements. [79340]

Mr. Hoon: As the right hon. and learned Gentleman knows, the details of legal fees are a matter of privilege between the lawyer and his client and cannot, therefore, be collected centrally. Insurance products to support the use of conditional fees are coming into the market regularly. I doubt that a comprehensive list of products exists or can be put together, given the vibrant and expanding nature of this market.

Judges (Guidance)

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will issue guidance to the judges setting out the way in which the principle of the separation of powers should operate. [79432]

Mr. Hoon: Judicial education is the responsibility of the Judicial Studies Board (JSB), which is an independent non-departmental public body and is chaired by Lord Justice Henry.

The JSB does not issue policy guidance, but its training seminars enable judges to learn from experienced judges, academics and other experts, and to discuss constitutional issues. The planned JSB training on the Human Rights Act 1998 and the European Convention on Human Rights will provide a further opportunity for judges to address the separation of powers. In any event the doctrine of the separation of powers is well understood by the judiciary as a whole.

Judges (Appointments)

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will review the arrangements for appointing judges, with particular reference to the introduction of an independent element. [79431]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor keeps the arrangements for appointing judges under review. Lay people are already involved in the shortlisting and interviewing of applicants for judicial office below High Court level, and they will continue to play a valuable part in the judicial appointments process. The Lord Chancellor is still considering the possibility of proceeding with consultation on the issues relating to the possible creation of a Judicial Appointments Commission.

SCOTLAND

Conferences (Costs)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department, its agencies and related public bodies on all conferences in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98, (c) 1998–99 and (d) 1999–2000; what was the date, cost and purpose of each conference held externally since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [69199]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 8 February 1999]: As the information is lengthy, I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those people he has appointed to public bodies since 1 November 1998, indicating the positions to which they have been appointed; and whether they receive remuneration. [76463]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 18 March 1999]: As the list is lengthy, I shall write to my hon. Friend and place a copy in the Library of the House.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Homelessness

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many homeless people there were in Scotland in each year since 1992. [77766]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 25 March 1999]: The table gives, for each year since 1992–93, the number of households that applied to local authorities under the homeless persons legislation, the number of households that local authorities assessed as homeless or potentially homeless, and the number which the local authorities determined to have a priority need. Information on the number of applications for 1997–98 and the first two quarters of 1998–99 will be published in the Housing Quarterly Trends Statistical Bulletin on 31 March 1999.

Number of applications and assessments made under the homeless persons legislation

Year	Number of applications	Number assessed homeless or potentially homeless	Number homeless or potentially homeless and in priority need
1992–93	42,822	30,100	19,800
1993–94	43,038	30,900	18,300
1994–95	41,495	31,600	17,500
1995–96	40,936	30,300	16,900
1996–97	41,010	30,600	16,800

European Scrutiny Committee

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if (a) Ministers, (b) special advisers and (c) civil servants saw the European Scrutiny Committee questions brief in advance of the appearance of the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State before the Committee on 16 February. [77848]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 19 March 1999]: It has been a common, but not universal, practice over a long period for Committees to agree to give officials an indication of the broad areas they intend to cover at the hearing to ensure that the evidence session is as effective and productive as possible. I was informed of the broad areas of questioning in advance of the Committee hearing on 16 February.

Census Returns

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the total annual storage and maintenance costs for all 1841 to 1991 decennial census returns in Scotland. [78435]

Mr. McLeish: Annual costs of storage and maintenance of all the 1841 to 1991 decennial census returns for Scotland are estimated at £75,000.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all Public Records Act 1958 instruments that have prescribed periods of (a) extended retention or (b) extended closure of decennial census returns for Scotland; and if he will list the class numbers, census years and periods mentioned in the schedules. [78443]

Mr. McLeish: The legislation referred to does not apply to Scotland. Scottish census records remain in the custody of the originating department, the General Register Office for Scotland, and under the control of the Registrar General for Scotland.

The present position in Scotland is that the census returns up to and including those of 1891 are open to public inspection. The Registrar General's policy on census returns for 1901 or later years was agreed in 1974 by the then Secretary of State for Scotland and announced in Parliament on 23 May 1974, Official Report, columns 272–73. This confirmed that Scottish census returns would not be made available until 100 years after the census to which they relate, and that only in exceptional circumstances could closed census returns be accessed. These public access provisions were affirmed by the present Government in the 2001 Census White Paper published on 4 March. The circumstances are:

> where application is made to the Registrar General for specific information to be supplied from records of a closed census, taken on or before 1931; and > where this application is made for the specific purpose of assisting an individual to resolve a question of his or her legal inheritance.

The closure period is intended to safeguard the confidentiality of the personal information collected in the census, and successive Governments have honoured an undertaking that the information would remain confidential. Protection of the credibility of the undertaking is crucial to maintaining the quality of the information collected.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Trunk Roads Review

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will announce the results of the strategic review of the Scottish trunk road programme; and if he will list in his announcement the starting date of the agreed projects. [79240]

Mr. Macdonald: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Galloway and Upper Nithsdale (Mr. Morgan) on 23 March 1999, Official Report, column 149.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Outpatient Appointments

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in respect of each hospital in Scotland, how many outpatient appointments were made during 1998; and, in each case, what was the number of patients who waited (a) three to six months and (b) more than six months from referral to appointment. [78735]

Mr. Galbraith: Information on waiting times for outpatient appointments is available for the length of time patients waited for their first outpatient appointment following referral by a general medical practitioner (GMP)/general dental practitioner(GDP).

Data on the total number of outpatient attendances, the number of patients who received a first outpatient appointment following GMP/GDP referral, and the number of patients who waited three to six months and more than six months for a first outpatient appointment following GMP/GDP referral, by NHS Trust, during 1998, is provided in the table.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Performance Targets

Mrs. Heal: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what performance targets he has set his Department's agencies for 1999–2000; and if he will make a statement. [79807]

Mr. Darling: The targets I have set the Executive Agencies for 1999–2000 are as given.

They reflect our determination to reform the Welfare State and to modernise the Social Security system to encourage work for those who can and provide security for those who cannot.

They underpin the Departmental Aim and Objectives set out in our Public Service Agreement.

Further information on the Agencies' plans for 1999–2000 is contained in their individual business plans which have been published today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

The targets for 1999–2000 are:

Benefits Agency Targets—1999–2000.

Active Customer Focused Services

1. To support the programme of welfare reform and modernisation in particular by:

implementing DMA closer working with Child Support Agency, Employment Service, Local Authorities and others and jointly working on welfare to work including:

the New Deals

the Single Work Focused Gateway Pilots, and Employment Zones

commencing implementation of an active modern service for pensioners ensuring that all staff are informed of, and kept up to date with, welfare reform and modern service delivery changes.

2. To publish by June 1999 a revised BA Charter in accordance with central guidance and to then baseline performance and achieve agreed targets.

Secure and Accurate Services

3. To implement programme protection plans in order to reduce, by at least 10 per cent., benefit losses from fraud and error in Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance, by 31 March 2002.

Investing in our People

4. To work with the Department in developing a staffing index and contribute to the reduction in public sector sick absences by reducing absences by 6 per cent. by March 2000.

Effective Management of Money

5. To agree with the Department the principles and baseline, for the operation of efficiency indices and to commence pilot operation of these during 1999–2000.

6. To cover the costs of pay and price inflation and other pressures through efficiency savings, equivalent to an average of 4 per cent. per year of running cost provision.

7. To recover £150 million in cases where benefit has been overpaid and to pilot an incentive scheme agreed with the Department and HM Treasury to enable targets to be set for 2000–01 based on increasing the amount of debt recovered.

Quality, Efficient Organisational Processes

8. To support the programme of welfare reform and modernisation in particular by:

supporting Modern Service one activity.

CSA Targets 1999–2000

Case compliance [1]

To collect child maintenance and arrears from 70 per cent. of non resident parents with maintenance liability due to be paid through the Agency's collection service.

Cash Compliance [1]

To collect 67 per cent. of child maintenance and arrears due for payment through the Agency's collection service.

Minimum Service Standards [2]

To reach a specified level of performance in a series of customer service standards. The minimum service standards are:

65 per cent. of new maintenance applications to be cleared within 20 weeks;

97 per cent. of payments made to the parent with care (or their bank or building society) to be made within 10 working days of receipt from the non resident parent;

Where a client is dissatisfied with a Child Support Officer's decision and requests a review; or where a change of circumstances requires a review; 88 per cent. to be cleared within 12 weeks;

The National Enquiry Line (NEL) to respond to 80 per cent. of telephone calls within 20 seconds;

60 per cent. of letters to be answered within 10 working days of receipt;

97 per cent. of clients to be seen within 10 minutes of the time of a pre-booked appointment;

90 per cent. of complaints to be acknowledged within 2 working days of receipt;

To respond with a full reply to 75 per cent. of complaints, within 10 working days of receipt;

80 per cent. of telephone calls to client helplines to be answered first time;

90 per cent. of customers surveyed on quality call backs (following contact with NEL/Client Helplines and face to face) to be at least satisfied with the service they have received; to reduce the number of complaints received compared to current caseload to less than 0.28 per cent.

Accuracy

The cash value of all assessments checked in the year to be correct in at least 78 per cent. of cases.

Efficiency

To deliver existing services within the running costs total, implying an annual efficiency gain of at least 4 per cent.

Milestone targets

(a) Debt Reduction

To develop and agree with the Department and Treasury a robust debt reduction measure by 30 June 1999 to be run as an internal measure for the remainder of the year.

(b) DMA

To deliver DMA in accordance with the agreed timetable. To work with DSS HQ and the Appeals Service to enable accurate reporting of performance and agree baseline data to enable targets to be set for 2000–2001.

(c) Efficiency/cost

To agree with the Department the principles and baseline for the operation of an Efficiency/cost measure and to begin pilot operation of the index during 1999–2000.

(d) Staffing Index

To work with the Department in developing a staffing index and contribute to the reduction in public sector sick absences by reducing absences by 6 per cent. in 1999–2000.

(e) Service First Charter

(i) To review the existing CSA Customer Charter and produce proposals for the customer service measures to be included in a revised charter by 30 June 1999.

(ii) To put in place the arrangements to collect information on performance against the revised measures and where appropriate to propose additional or alternative standards in the minimum service target by 30 September 1999.

(iii) To reach agreement on a revised CSA Customer Charter, drawn up in accordance with central guidance, by 31 December 1999.

Notes:

[1] Compliance targets will cover maintenance arising from full maintenance assessments paid though the Agency's collection service. Taken together, and including maintenance arranged for direct payment this should produce a total of £850 million in maintenance collected and arranged.

[2] Including timeliness of assessments and money transmission.

ITSA Targets: 1999–2000

Non-financial business results

1. Work for the Department, and with its IS/IT suppliers, to support Welfare Reform and the Modern Service Programme by active involvement in Modern Service 1, including taking forward the

IS/IT supply lead within the Department and enabling the Modern Service Programme and others to make use of appropriate IS/IT supply routes.

2. Develop Modern Service Programme IS/IT deliverables to specified time and quality standards including the identification and provision of IS/IT to support the Single Work Focused Gateway pilots.

3. Deliver an agreed IS/IT work programme for the support and enhancement of existing systems to budget, time and quality to the satisfaction of customers.

4. Manage the Year 2000 Programme within the Department ensuring date change risks are identified and managed, and that compliance and assurance work is completed according to agreed timescales and standards.

People satisfaction

5. Promote the most effective use of people by:

Achieving re-recognition of Investor in People accreditation by 1 January 2000.

Working with the Department to define and develop a Staffing Index in line with the Department's Output and Performance Analysis.

Develop and implement a health care strategy in order to contribute towards the reduction in public sector sickness levels by reducing absences by 2 per cent. in 1999–2000.

Customer Satisfaction

6. Achieve agreed targeted improvement of our customer satisfaction rating using the Business Excellence Model (BEM), an industry wide business improvement framework.

Financial business results

7. Manage the Agency's income and expenditure (derived from normal trading activities), as presented on audited accruals accounts, so that the Agency recovers its full economic costs from customers within a tolerance of +/–2 per cent.

8. Reduce unit costs and prices to deliver an overall efficiency improvement of 2 per cent. to the Department and work with the Department to define and develop the principles and baseline for the operation of efficiency indices and commence pilot operations of these during 1999–2000.

WPA Targets: 1999–2000

Putting Service First

1. To deliver a first-class service to war pensioners and war widows by achieving the standards set in the Agency's Service First Charter.

2. For 90 per cent. of all claims to meet the quality criteria.

Working in partnerships

3. To agree improvements in the end to end Decision Making and Appeals process with the Agency and the Pensions Appeals Tribunal to reduce the overall time taken for clearance of decisions and appeals, to improve notifications and the subsequent implementation of decisions together with improved monitoring and meaningful targets.

Managing Change

4. To implement the proposals approved by the Secretary of State from the Prior Options Review to the agreed standards and timetable.

Valuing our People

5. To work with the Department in developing a Staffing Index and to reduce our sickness absence levels by 7 per cent. during 1999–2000.

Efficiency

6. To agree with the Department the principles and baseline for the operation of Efficiency Indices and to commence pilot operations of these in 1999–2000.

7. To generate efficiencies during 1999–00 that will enable the War Pensions Agency to absorb the impact of financial pressures equivalent to 4 per cent. of running costs.

Fraud

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how the 30 per cent. penalty for minor fraud is collected; what is the cash value of penalties imposed to date; and how much has been collected. [79225]

Mr. Timms: Questions relating to Benefits Agency operational matters are the responsibility of its Chief Executive, Peter Mathison. He will reply to my right hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Frank Field, dated 29 March 1999:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how the 30 per cent. penalty for minor fraud is collected, what the cash value of the penalties imposed to date is, and how much has been collected.

An administrative penalty is recovered by exactly the same methods as those used to recover the related overpaid benefits. Recovery of an administrative penalty does not commence until the related overpayment has been recovered. The total value of administrative penalties that have been imposed to date is £246,187.

Information about the amount collected is not currently available. Enhancements to the system for recording this information have been requested and it is hoped they will be in place by July 1999.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

War Pensions

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recipients of war pensions live in (a) the Harborough district, (b) Oadby and Wigston Borough and (c) the Harborough constituency; and how many will be resident within the Harborough primary care group area. [78415]

Mr. Bayley: One of the key aims is that delivery of service should be simpler and more efficient. Questions on operational matters concerning the War Pensions Agency are for its Chief Executive, Mr. Gordon Hextall. I have asked him to write to the hon. and learned Member.

Letter from Gordon Hextall to Mr. Edward Garnier, dated 29 March 1999:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the number of War Pensioners living in the Harborough district, Oadby and Wigston Borough and Harborough constituency and how many will be resident within the Harborough primary care group area.

Unfortunately this information is not available in the form for which you ask and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, our records do show that, in March 1998 (the latest date for which figures are available) there were 6,876 War Disablement Pensions and 1,641 War Widows Pensions in payment within the Derbyshire, Leicestershire and Staffordshire War Pensions Committee area, which covers the counties shown in its title.

I hope this is helpful and I am sorry that I cannot be more precise.

Performance Management Regime

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what flexibility the new performance management regime allows managers in spending their budgets with particular reference to the (a) administration and (b) benefit budget. [79226]

Mr. Timms: The administration of the Benefits Agency is a matter for its Chief Executive, Peter Mathison. He will write to my right hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Frank Field, dated 29 March 1999:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what flexibility the new performance management regime allows managers in spending their budgets with particular reference to the (a) administration and (b) benefit budget.

The flexibility offered to the Area Director is limited to his administration budget. There is no mechanism under Government Accounting rules which allows for flexibility between administration and benefit budgets.

The new performance management regime refers to the new Public Service Agreement (PSA) target to reduce, by at least 30 per cent., benefit losses from fraud and errors in Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance by 31 March 2007. This replaces the present annual Secretary of State target for weekly benefit savings from counter-fraud activities.

The new regime is to be funded by the Departmental Programme Protection Fund, a single source of funding designed to deliver the PSA target. This replaces Security and Control Programme funding for the Benefits Agency from 1 April 1999.

The current regime ties Area Directors to activity volume targets for new claims activity and targeted reviews. Emphasis has been placed on detection by setting targets for fraud savings from cases examined by fraud officers.

The new regime offers Area Directors much more flexibility in how funding can be used. They are no longer restricted by activity targets but can be more responsive to local conditions and knowledge. The emphasis is on each Area Director producing, and being accountable for, a Programme Protection Plan which shows how they can optimise their available resources to contribute towards achieving the PSA target. They will all provide evidence, supported by further tiers of programme indicators and management information, of how they are contributing towards the overall PSA target. Whilst they will have more flexibility on how their money is spent, the Area Director will account for how the funds are being targeted to best effects.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Income Support

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what reduction in the pieces of advice on Income Support claims has been made in the new code of practice. [79220]

Angela Eagle: The administration of Income Support is the responsibility of Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my right hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Frank Field, dated 29 March 1999:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what reduction in the pieces of advice on Income Support claims has been made in the new code of practice.

Since the mid-nineties procedural guidance for staff dealing with Income Support claims and changes has been contained in the Income Support Guide (ISG). This occupied 12 binders. The Evidence Project was set up to take forward improvements in accuracy, security, and efficiency in Income Support processing. As part of this process the Guide Improvement Project was set up to re-write the existing Income Support guidance.

There were also, around 25 handbooks and additionally, 450 separate amendments, bulletins, and circulars issued to staff in a variety of formats and from a number of different sources. Many of these updates were themselves superseded by new developments. This was inevitably the cause of some inconsistency and confusion.

In October 1998 all of the information contained in the documents described in the previous two paragraphs was replaced by IS Guidance and Procedures (GAP). The GAP was produced as a single source of guidance incorporating all previously held instructions contained in the handbooks, guides, and bulletins. The GAP currently consists of eleven volumes with examples, flowcharts, and desk aids; in effect drawing together all of the current guidance in a new and consistent format. The Adjudication Officer's Guide will remain in its present format and the guidance that relates to Back to Work Bonus and Child Maintenance Bonus will be incorporated into the GAP at a future date.

This overhaul was necessary to avoid compromising the efficiency of staff in collecting, assessing, and checking the evidence required to properly process Income Support claims. Early indications are that the GAP has been well received by staff in the field.

Thank you for the opportunity to explain.

National Insurance Scheme

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the (a) number and (b) percentage of former contributors to the National Insurance Scheme who are not entitled to a state retirement pension. [78285]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

It is estimated that there are about 400,000 people over State pension age and resident in Great Britain who do not receive a State Retirement Pension. This represents about 4 per cent. of pensioners resident in Great Britain. It includes those who have contributed to the National Insurance scheme but who have paid insufficient contributions to satisfy the conditions for receiving a State pension.

Notes:

1. Figures are for Great Britain, and are rounded to the nearest hundred thousand.

2. Percentages are rounded to the nearest whole number.

Pensions Strategy Computer System (PSCS) which contains a 5 per cent. sample of all persons in receipt of a State Retirement Pension at September 1998.

Tribunal Pilot Scheme

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of appeals in social security appeal tribunals have been upheld under the new flexible tribunal pilot scheme; and what is the average percentage under the traditional tribunal of three persons. [79341]

Angela Eagle: The most recent figures available, for the period 1 December 1998 to 31 January 1999, indicate that in Social Security appeal tribunal hearings, constituted under the new flexible tribunal arrangements, the proportion of appeals upheld (that is, decided in favour of the appellant) was 30.07 per cent. During the same period the proportion of appeals upheld by three-person Social Security appeal tribunals was 27.36 per cent., a figure close to the half-yearly average of 28.36 per cent.

Select Committee Report

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 19 March 1999, Official Report, columns 839–40, on Select Committee reports, if he or his ministerial colleagues have discussed with other hon. Members the contents of Social Security Committee (a) draft reports, (b) reports prior to their issue and (c) embargoed copies of reports. [79017]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 29 March 1999]: Ministers have discussions with hon. Members on a variety of topics, some of which may become subjects of Social Security Committee reports.

Carers

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how he intends to inform all DSS and Benefits Agency staff of the developing policies towards carers outlined in the national strategy for carers. [78551]

Mr. Bayley: The report of the National Carers' Strategy is an important document for all Government Departments. As an employer we recognise the importance of personnel policies which meet the needs of our staff, a number of whom have caring responsibilities for elderly, sick or disabled relatives. Without such policies, it would be difficult to recruit and retain the best people and significant numbers of our staff would be unable to achieve their full potential. It is clearly in our business interests to ensure that our workforce is committed and contented and this means that we must take account of caring commitments. Our policies have developed and are still developing in line with the changing requirements of staff whilst taking account of the National Carers Strategy.

All of the Department's business units have recently been involved in reviews of their childcare and family friendly policies. One of the outcomes of this assessment is that there is a need to communicate our strategy for staff with caring responsibilities more effectively. Consequently the Benefits Agency issued a booklet, "Work and Family" to all its staff in November and DSS HQ are intending to do the same.

Where staff are involved in designing and implementing policy initiatives and commitments, such as the Single Work Focused Gateway and the State Second Pension, we are already taking steps to ensure that they will receive the appropriate information and training to support the Strategy's main objectives.

NIRS2

Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to deal with delays in pension payments due to computer breakdown at the Contributions Agency in Newcastle. [78050]

Mr. Timms: A statement on the steps taken to minimise disruption in pension payments and other benefits due to delays in implementing facilities on the Contributions Agency computer, the National Insurance Recording System (NIRS2) was set out by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security in his written answer on 15 March 1999, Official Report, columns 486–88.

Pensioners (Income Support)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the estimated costs to the Exchequer in the current financial year of (a) housing benefit and (b) council tax relief to those pensioners who qualify as a result of being on income support. [78937]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the table.

£ million

	1998–99 estimated outturn, cash
Housing benefit	2,256
Council tax benefit	659

Source:
The figures underlie the 1999 Departmental Report

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated total cost of Income Support paid to those pensioners who qualify in the current financial year. [78936]

Mr. Timms: The total programme cost of Income Support paid to pensioners in 1998–99 is estimated to be £3,641 million.

Note:

"Pensioners" for Income Support purposes, means a single person aged 60 or over, or a couple (counted as one benefit unit) where one or both members is aged 60 or over.

Source:

Social Security Departmental Report 1999–2000.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners (a) receive and (b) do not receive Income Support. [78938]

Mr. Timms: As at August 1998, there were estimated to be 1,637,000 pensioners who were either in receipt of Income Support, or the partner of a person in receipt of Income Support. The estimated number of pensioners not dependent on Income Support in 1998 is 8,816,000.

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. Pensioners are defined as men aged 65 or over, and women aged 60 or over.
3. In the case of a couple, for Income Support purposes the claim by one partner includes both members.
4. The estimates of Income Support recipients are based on a 5 per cent. sample and are therefore subject to a degree of error.
5. The total pension age population of Great Britain for 1998 is estimated to be 10,453,000 based on a population projection for 1998 provided by the Government Actuary's Department.

Sources:

1. Income Support Quarterly Statistical Enquiry August 1998.
2. Official Population Projections of Government Actuaries Department, 1998.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the proportion of pensioners aged 65 to 69 years who are receiving income support in 1998–99; and if he will estimate the corresponding percentage for this cohort in (a) 2000, (b) 2010 and (c) 2020, assuming that the minimum income guarantee is linked to earnings. [78864]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

The proportion of pensioners aged 65 to 69 who are in private households and receiving Income Support is estimated to be 8 per cent. for 1998–99 and 9 per cent. for 2000–01.

The information is not available for the years 2010 and 2020. Previous estimates of the number of pensioners receiving Income Support in these years have been made using the Department's PENSIM model. These estimates can only give a broad indication of the likely order of magnitude of figures so far into the future, and are heavily rounded. Reliable estimates of sub-groups of this caseload and therefore of the proportion of pensioners aged 65 to 69 who are receiving Income Support are not available.

Notes:

1. Estimates are consistent with the forecasts for Income Support included in the Departmental Report.
2. Figures are rounded to the nearest percentage point.
3. Estimates exclude pensioners in residential care and nursing homes.

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 10 March 1999, Official Report, column 252–53, on pensioner incomes, if he will provide the same information excluding couples where neither partner is over state pension age. [78884]

Mr. Timms: The information is in the tables.

Notes:

1. Figures are given to the nearest 10,000 pensioner benefit units, although they are not necessarily accurate to that degree. Figures of less than 5,000 pensioners are denoted by '*'.
2. Figures may not sum to row or column totals due to rounding.
3. Figures should be treated with caution since taxpaying status is not directly measured by the Family Resources Survey, but has been imputed using a model based on policies announced up to and including the 1998 Budget statement.
4. Pensioner benefit units are defined as single people aged 60 and over and couples (married or cohabiting) where at least one partner is aged over State pension age (65 and over, for men, 60 and over for women). Couples are allocated to age bands according to the age of the older partner.
5. Tax paying pensioner benefit units are defined as those where at least one individual in the benefit unit is modelled as liable to income tax.

Second Tier Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will calculate the second tier pension entitlement under (a) SERPS, (b) the first phase of the State Second Pension and (c) the second phase of the State Second Pension for those earning (i) £15,000, (ii) £17,000 and (iii) £19,000. [78867]

Mr. Timms: The information is in the table.

Second tier pension entitlement in 2051

Annual Earnings	SERPS	State Second Pension Phase 1 Carries on to	State Second Pension Phase 2 Contracted in	State Second Pension Phase 2 Contracted out[1]
15,000	46	61	50	61
17,000	51	63	50	63
19,000	54	65	50	65

[1] Assumes that an individual contracts out of the State Second Pension and contributes only their rebate to an appropriate personal pension.

Notes:

1. The information is based on the thresholds set out in the Green Paper.
2. It is likely that the upper threshold of £18,500 contained in the Green Paper will be revised upwards following consultation to reflect the policy intention that higher earners should get broadly the same entitlement from phase 1 of State Second Pension as from SERPS.
3. The hypothetical individual in this example is assumed to: begin work at 16 years old in 2002, work for 49 years until retirement, earn the specified amounts in 1998 earnings terms throughout their working life.
4. Only National Insurance rebates are paid into the appropriate personal pension.
5. Real earnings growth is assumed to be 1.5 per cent.
6. Amounts are rounded to the nearest pound.

Non-pension Savings

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the level of non-pension saving among those in the £9,000-£18,500 earnings range who are not currently members of an occupational or personal pension scheme. [78866]

Mr. Timms: Data drawn from the 1997–98 Family Resources Survey (GB) suggest that, of those earning between £9,000 and £18,500 in 1997–98 and who, at that time, were not a member of an occupational or personal pension scheme, 40 per cent. had no non-pension saving.

Notes:

1. The results are based on survey data, and are therefore subject to sampling error. In particular, information collected on pensions and other savings are subject to higher non-response and mis-reporting than other parts of the Family Resources Survey, and so these results should be treated as indicative of the likely order of magnitude only.
2. Figures rounded to the nearest 5 per cent.

Social Fund

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many Social Fund claimants have reached the limit of £1,000 for a loan. [78807]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested. However, in the financial year 1997–98, a total of 9,053 Social Fund loan applications were refused purely because the applicant had reached the loan limit of £1,000. This represents around 1 per cent. of all loan refusals.

Stakeholder Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the definition of earnings used to calculate the level of rebates for stakeholder pensions will include payments of working families tax credit. [78865]

Mr. Timms: No. It is expected that the earnings used for calculating rebates for stakeholder pension schemes will be the same as for other contracted-out pension schemes. Such earnings do not currently include any payment of Family Credit and will not include payments of Working Families Tax Credit when it is introduced.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many meetings he has had with hon. Members to discuss the Child Support Agency; how many complaints he has received about the Agency since 1 February; and when he plans next to visit the Agency. [79047]

Angela Eagle: My noble Friend Baroness Hollis of Heigham, the Minister with day to day responsibility for child support, has had a number of meetings with hon. Members to discuss the child support Green Paper proposals. In February 1999 the Child Support Agency received 3,682 complaints from individuals and hon. Members. My Ministerial colleagues and I have received 130 letters from hon. Members over the same period, though not all of these relate to operational issues. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security is planning to visit the Child Support Agency again in the near future.

Family Incomes

Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the dates of (i) supplementary benefit and (ii) income support for (a) a couple with two children under 11 and (b) a lone parent with one child under 11 (1) in real terms and (2) as a proportion of average earnings at each uprating since 1979. [79054]

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Overseas Students

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) at which UK universities overseas students are currently studying; and where these students are from; [78122]

(2) how many overseas students are currently studying in Great Britain. [78129]

Mr. Mudie: Tables showing the numbers and domiciles of overseas students in individual UK higher education institutions in 1997–98 have been prepared from statistical records collected by the Higher Education Statistics Agency. Copies have been placed in the Library.

In 1997–98 there were 266,000 overseas students studying in higher education and further education institutions in Great Britain.

Pupil Numbers

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each (a) metropolitan district Council, (b) shire district council, (c) unitary council, (d) shire county council and (e) London borough council the current number of (i) primary school and (ii) secondary school pupils. [74806]

Ms Estelle Morris: The information requested is given in a table, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Key Stage 2 Statistics

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools entered pupils for the level 6 (i) Science, (ii) English and (iii) Mathematics paper in Key Stage 2 SATS tests in 1998, 1997 and 1996 broken down by (a) local education authority and (b) type of school. [79329]

Ms Estelle Morris: The number of schools who entered at least one child for the level 6 test in the Key Stage 2 National Curriculum Assessment tests broken down by subject and school type is shown in the table.

Education Funding

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what amount of Derbyshire County Council's total education budget was not passed on to schools in (a) 1996, (b) 1997 and (c) 1998. [79342]

Ms Estelle Morris: The amount of the General Schools Budget which was not included in the Aggregated Schools Budget in Derbyshire in the years in question was as follows:

1996–97	82,089,000
1997–98	68,006,000
1998–99	71,567,000

We expect that there will be a substantial reduction in amounts held centrally by Local Education Authorities in 1999–2000 as a result of increased delegation to schools under the new Fair Funding framework.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will estimate the amount in cash terms of (a) funding from his Department per pupil in Derbyshire between 1996–97 and 1997–98 and (b) the funding allocated by Derbyshire County Council to each school, per pupil, over the same period. [79362]

Ms Estelle Morris: This question cannot be answered in the form in which it has been tabled. Education SSAs have a wider coverage than funding which can be allocated to schools. They have to cover costs such as home-to-school transport, school meals, and some central costs which cannot be delegated to schools, such as the LEA contribution to the Standards Fund. In addition, pupils are counted at different dates for the purposes of calculating education SSAs and allocating school funding respectively.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much was spent in total on education in Derbyshire at constant prices in each of the last five years from all public sources of funds. [79364]

Ms Estelle Morris: No "like-for like" data exist on total expenditure in Derbyshire on education over the last five years from all public sources of funds. The following table sets out Derbyshire's overall education spending, net of specific grants, in each of the last five years but it is not possible to adjust the figures for each year to take account of local government reorganisation and changes in local authority functions, such as the reform of inter-authority recoupment or the nursery voucher scheme, to give a true picture. Since we took office, some £18 million has been supported through the Standards Fund programme in Derbyshire and the authority has received capital allocations of some £18 million. There has been an underlying increase in Derbyshire's education SSA for 1999–2000 of £15.6 million or 6.1 per cent.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average standard spending assessment provision for (a) primary and (b) secondary pupils in each English local education authority area in (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 1998–99, in current prices. [79366]

School Meal Services

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list in ascending order the difference between income and expenditure for school meal services for each county over the last 10 years. [79365]

Ms Estelle Morris: This question cannot be answered in the form in which it has been tabled. Expenditure and income for the school meal service will inevitably vary according to the proportion of children entitled to free school meals and of children attending grant-maintained schools in the area of each Local Education Authority.

Youth Unemployment

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the impact of the New Deal on the number of unemployed young people. [77829]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Since New Deal Pathfinders were introduced in January 1998, unemployment amongst the eligible group has fallen by 35 per cent. compared with a fall of 4 per cent. for those not eligible.

The youth labour market is very dynamic and so some people would have left the claimant count without the help provided by New Deal. Nevertheless, initial evidence comparing Pathfinder with non-Pathfinder areas suggests that the New Deal has increased the flows of young people out of unemployment and the flow into jobs. The impact of New Deal is being addressed through a comprehensive evaluation programme. All final reports from the evaluation will be published and copies placed in the Library.

Schools, Watford

Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the effect of his policy on inner-city education on schools in Watford; and if he will make a statement. [78543]

Ms Estelle Morris: The programme announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 22 March 1999, Official Report, columns 21–22 to raise standards in inner cities applies in the first instance in six target areas only. The lessons learnt during the "Excellence in Cities" programme will in time benefit all schools. Watford schools already benefit from our national policies to raise standards and from the significant additional investment which the Government are making in the education system.

Woodcote Infant School, Croydon

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received from Croydon LEA concerning the funding of the expansion of Woodcote Infant School, to receive a three form entry per annum. [78713]

Ms Estelle Morris: Croydon Education Authority has submitted applications to the Department under both Annual Capital Guidelines and infant class size policy for the expansion of Woodcote Infant School. The school did not qualify for Annual Capital Guideline funding for 1999–2000 but discussions are continuing between the Department and Croydon Education Authority about what funding will be available from the Department to enable the infant class size limit to be met.

School Regulation

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list in respect of (i) treaty articles, (ii) directives and (iii) regulations concerning tenders and contracts, (a) made and (b) supervised by his Department, the commercial requirements which apply in relation to (1) inspection of schools and (2) fulfilling the functions of named local education authorities and (3) assumption of management responsibilities of individual schools from local education authorities. [78806]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department for Education and Employment neither makes nor supervises contracts for the inspection of schools, which are the responsibility of Ofsted. The management of maintained schools is the responsibility of each school's governing body, with support as necessary from the local education authority.

The Department is making preparations to let and supervise contracts for the discharge of functions of local education authorities which are failing adequately to discharge their statutory functions. These contracts, including those for consultancy services, are subject to Council Directive 92–50, relating to the co-ordination of procedures for the award of public service contracts. The Directive is made under Articles 57(2) and 66 of the Treaty of Rome. The implementing regulations are the Public Service Contract Regulations 1993 number 3228.

New Deal (Young People)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much money has been spent to date on the new deal for 18–24 year olds in the Herefordshire and Worcestershire unit of delivery. [78494]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 25 March 1999]: Responsibility for the subject of this question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter form Peter Collis to Mr. Paul Keetch, dated 30 March 1999:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked Leigh Lewis to reply to your question about how much money has been spent to date on the New Deal for 18–24 year olds in the Herefordshire and Worcestershire Unit of Delivery. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to Mr. Lewis as Chief Executive Agency. I am replying in his absence.

To the end of February £631,854 has been brought to account in the Herefordshire and Worcestershire Unit of Delivery on the New Deal for 18–24 year olds.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the largest number of recruits that have been taken on by any one company under the New Deal for Young People. [79433]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. David Maclean, dated 30 March 1999:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply to your question about the largest number of recruits taken on by any one company under the New Deal for young people. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Three quarters of young people joining companies under the New Deal go into unsubsidised jobs. We have no central statistics which break down these job starts by employer not least because the same employer may trade, and recruit, under many different names. As regards subsided job starts, the largest number of starters with a single company is 80.

I hope this is helpful.

New Deal (Over-50s)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what will be the criteria for inclusion in the extension of the new deal to those aged over 50 years. [78925]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The new initiative will be open to people aged over 50, out of work for six months or more and on income replacement benefits including Jobseekers Allowance and Incapacity Benefit, and their dependant partners. We intend to consult on the precise eligibility criteria and I will be writing to a number of individuals and organisations shortly.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the extension of the new deal to those aged over 50 years, announced in the Budget, will be implemented. [78926]

Mr. Andrew Smith: We will begin to introduce this new initiative from October 1999 in pathfinder areas with full national implementation in early 2000. Details of the pathfinder areas will be announced by early summer.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of people over the age of 50 years in the Greater London area who have benefited from the New Deal; and if he will make a statement. [78536]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Responsibility for the subject of this question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Peter Collis to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 30 March 1999:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked Leigh Lewis to reply to your question about the number of people over the age of 50 years who have benefited from New Deal in the Greater London area. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to Mr. Lewis as Chief Executive of the Agency. I am replying in his absence.

The Government Statistical Service figures to the end of January show that 5,032 people over the age of 50 have started the New Deal in Greater London.

You may be aware that in November last year the Employment Service launched 28 New Deal pilots for people over the age of 25. Four of these pilots are based in Greater London and aim to look at innovative ways to help long term unemployed people over the age of 25 back into the labour market.

You will, of course, also be aware that the Chancellor recently announced a further package of help for people over the age of 50 who have been unemployed for more than six months. This includes a cash employment credit for people entering employment, as well as personal adviser and job search support and a training subsidy.

I hope this is helpful.

Head Teachers (Pay)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of head teachers has been awarded a nine per cent. pay rise. [77322]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 18 March 1999]: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, has confirmed that all teachers, including head teachers, will receive a general increase of 3.5 per cent. from 1 April 1999. In addition, under proposals announced by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, on 1 February 1999 which are still subject to detailed consultation, head teachers' pay will be restructured from 1 September 1999. That announcement referred to an average increase of 9.5 per cent. (including the 3.5 per cent. general increase) for head teachers of small primary schools. The group of head teachers in question are the heads of primary schools with fewer than 100 pupils, who comprise 11.5 per cent. of all head teachers. Other primary head teachers will receive an average increase of 6.5 per cent. and secondary head teachers will receive an average increase of five per cent. (including the 3.5 per cent. general increase).

Higher Education

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for each of the years from 1997–98 to 2000–01, what is the total resource allocation awarded to universities and other higher education institutions from public funds; what is the total number of actual and projected full-time equivalent higher education students; and what is the average level of resource allocation from public funds to each student. [77882]

Mr. Mudie: The following table sets out the Government's plans for higher education over the period 1997–98 to 2000–01. The plans are expressed in terms of publicly planned funding for higher education, including private contributions towards tuition fees which institutions will retain.

The table shows total publicly planned resources for higher education, the total number of actual and projected full-time equivalent student numbers, and the average unit of funding per student.

Publicly planned higher education funding (cash)[1] and student numbers in England

£ million

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–00	2000–01
Grants to HEFCE & TTA	3,667	3,674	4,138	4,268
Additional HEFCE grants earmarked for capital investment in: infrastructure and IT	—	—	35	50
research	—	—	50	100
Estimated tuition fee income:
public contributions from LEAs	997	1,006	599	520
private contributions from students	—	130	235	333
Funds for measures to widen access	22	41	74	76
Total publicly planned funds	4,686	4,851	5,131	5,347
Total FTE students[2] (thousands)	1,014	1,019	1,035	1,052
Unit of funding[3] (£ per FTE)	4,600	4,720	4,800	4,870

[1] Publicly planned funds for higher education include grants to the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) and, from 1995, to the Teacher Training Agency (TTA) for both recurrent and capital purposes. In addition the plans take account of publicly planned tuition fee income and funds for specific measures to widen access which go mainly to the students.

[2] FTE student numbers cover all home and other EU undergraduate and postgraduate students studying both full and part-time in English universities and colleges.

The unit of funding per FTE is based on publicly planned HE funds excluding earmarked grants for capital investment and the research infrastructure, and funds for specific measures to widen access. Figures have been rounded to the nearest £10. The figures are consistent with grant letters to the HEFCE and are different to those in my answer on 7 December 1998, Official Report col. 90, which required adjustment for consistency with the figures provided there for earlier years.

Individual Learning Account

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to allow students in further and higher education to pay (a) tuition fees and (b) maintenance from individual learning accounts that have been enhanced by the student's family or employer. [77881]

Mr. Mudie: Individual learning accounts will be available to all from April 2000. The Government incentives for individual learning accounts (including the £150 for the first million starter accounts) will be targeted on those in work, for whom no help is currently available. They will be able to use incentives to support a wide range of learning opportunities to improve skills and qualifications.

Education Grants

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if applications for grants under the Education (Grants for Education Support and Training) (England) Regulations 1998, as amended by the Education (Grants for Education Support and Training) (England) Regulations 1998 (Amendment No. 2) Regulations 1999, submitted before the Regulations are revoked on 1 April, will be considered under those Regulations. [79029]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 29 March 1999]: Applications for payment of grant allocated under the programme for the 1998–99 financial year ending 31 March 1999 are considered under S.I. 1998 No. 656, the Education (Grants for Education Support and Training) (England) Regulations 1998 and the amendments to this S.I. that come into force before 31 March.

Examination Verification Staff

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the adequacy of checks made on the suitability of staff working for examination verification bodies in further education. [79210]

Mr. Mudie: Awarding bodies are independent organisations responsible for their own recruitment procedures. However, the Qualifications Curriculum Authority (QCA), has responsibility for monitoring activities of the awarding bodies in order to promote public confidence in the quality, rigour, fairness and consistency of standards of qualifications.

As part of its statutory regulatory procedures, QCA will require awarding bodies offering accredited national qualifications to meet specified criteria, including procedures for the appointment, training and monitoring of suitable specialists and assessors.

The Qualifications and Curriculum Assessment Authority for Wales (ACCAC) has a parallel responsibility.

Tertiary College Heads

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will investigate the circumstances under which heads of tertiary colleges criticised in National Audit Office reports are re-employed at senior levels in organisations which provide a service to their former employers. [79205]

Mr. Mudie: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State would certainly wish to investigate any such case involving appointment to a publicly-funded body.

Teacher Promotions

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what funds he has estimated will be required to implement his policy on the promotion of teachers in the next five years. [78813]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Technical Document on Pay and Performance Management, published on 1 February 1999, indicated that for the two financial years 2000–01 and 2001–02, up to £1 billion is available to support the implementation of the Green Paper, "Teachers: meeting the challenge of change." Much the largest single element of this will be the new pay arrangements. Expenditure plans have not yet been fixed beyond the financial year 2001–02. The implementation of the Green Paper proposals will be one of the issues considered when they are.

London Schools (Closures)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools in each of the London education authorities have been closed during the last three years. [78535]

Ms Estelle Morris: The following table shows, for each of the last three years, the number of schools in the London Local Education Authorities where there has been a decision (whether by the Authority or the Secretary of State) to close the school. A number of these have not yet been implemented.

	Number of schools closed
1996
Greenwich	1
Sutton	1
1997
Camden	1
Kingston upon Thames	1
Lambeth	3
1998
Hammersmith and Fulham	1
Islington	1

The table excludes closures due to amalgamation of infant and junior schools.

Grammar Schools (London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many grammar school places are at present available in the Greater London area. [78893]

Ms Estelle Morris: The total capacity (more open enrolment basis) for the 19 grammar schools in the Greater London area was 17,017 at April 1998. The total number of pupils was 17,057 at January 1998. Ten of these schools have a total of 678 more pupils than their capacity.

New Deal (Single Gateway)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what changes the Government plans to make to the Single Gateway to Benefit before its implementation. [78919]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Government have announced plans to forge a new culture in the benefits system which puts work first and provides a modern, integrated, flexible service for all. Pilots will begin in June to test the effectiveness of providing a Single Work-Focused Gateway into the benefits system. Intensive work is taking place to put these pilots into operation in four areas from June and a further eight areas from November. We shall evaluate the pilots thoroughly to inform decisions about wider implementation of the Single Gateway approach.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to extend the use of specialised agencies in the New Deal Gateway process. [78918]

Mr. Andrew Smith: In last year's Budget statement my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced an additional £50 million investment in the New Deal Gateway, of which £10 million was allocated to enhance specialist provision to help with such problems as homelessness and drug or alcohol dependency. More recently New Deal personal advisers have been reminded of the need to make full use of the help available from partner organisations, including specialist agencies. We are also currently developing more effective ways of assessing at an early stage in the Gateway whether young people are in particular need of specialist help.

I will shortly be inviting New Deal partnerships to submit proposals for innovative approaches to delivering New Deal locally which we might support from our new Innovation Fund. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced additional resources for the Fund in this year's Budget. One of the priority areas for support will be proposals to implement recommendations from the New Deal Task Force report, "Meeting the needs of disadvantaged young people". I hope that some partnerships will come forward with proposals to implement and test out the report's recommendation that specialist agencies could provide effective case-management for young people with particularly severe problems during their time on New Deal.

HEALTH

Mortality Rates (Young Men)

16. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to reduce mortality rates of young men, with particular reference to men in their early-30s. [77714]

Ms Jowell: Mortality rates in some groups of young men are cause for concern. In those aged 30–34, specifically, there has been a progressive increase in rates since 1986 associated, for instance, with increased deaths from suicides, drug and alcohol abuse and infectious diseases (e.g. AIDS). These offset reductions in deaths from other causes (e.g. accidents, cancer and heart disease). The "Independent Inquiry into Inequalities in Health" highlighted, for example, suicide rates in young men and some action has already been taken. Reducing health inequalities is a key aim of our health strategy and the forthcoming "Our Healthier Nation" White Paper will focus on relevant conditions.

Health Authority Funding (Gloucestershire)

17. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the financial settlement for Gloucestershire health authority for the next financial year. [77715]

Mr. Denham: Gloucestershire health authority has been allocated £334.6 million for 1999–2000, which represents a cash increase of £17.4 million (5.5 per cent.).

Primary Care Groups

18. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the implementation of primary care groups of general practitioners. [77716]

Mr. Denham: Primary care groups have been implemented to enable family doctors and nurses to shape and develop services locally in a way which better meets the needs of their population and which improves the health of their community.

37. Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress made in establishing primary care groups. [77735]

Mr. Denham: 481 primary care groups, covering the whole of England, will become operational from April, charged with tackling health inequalities and delivering improvements in the quality and efficiency of patient services.

Skin Cancer

19. Ms Kingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action his Department is taking to raise public awareness of the dangers of skin cancer. [77717]

Ms Jowell: Skin cancers are largely preventable and we continue to work closely with a wide range of public bodies to raise public awareness of the sun's harmful effects. The Health Education Authority's annual sun awareness week and the new ultra-violet solar index being developed with the Meteorological Office are examples of the work the Department of Health is supporting to provide people with information on the day-to-day strength of the sun's rays and its capacity to burn, advice on the measures a person can take to lessen risks of sunburn, and information on the early detection and treatment of skin cancers.

Dental Services

20. Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to ensure that everybody has access to a local NHS dentist. [77718]

Mr. Denham: The investing in dentistry (IID) initiative, which we launched in September 1997, and the personal dental services (PDS) scheme, which we announced on 1 January 1998, can both help to improve access to national health service dentistry. IID provides grants to enable dentists to expand existing practices and set up new ones in those areas of the country where the provision of NHS dental services is inadequate and oral health inequalities are most acute. PDS encourages health authorities to work with dentists to develop a variety of new arrangements to improve access to NHS dentistry.

22. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the underspend on his Department's "investing in dentistry" initiative. [77720]

Mr. Denham: We expect all the funding available for 1998–99 for investing in dentistry (IID) to be assigned by the end of the financial year. Funding available in the first year of IID was not fully utilised, as most approvals became due for payment in the second year of the scheme.

30. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the "investing in dentistry" initiative. [77728]

Mr. Denham: Investing in dentistry has been extremely effective. We have approved over £8 million of grants which will enable around 650,000 people to receive access to national health service dentistry. All dentists receiving grants will be monitored by their health authority to ensure that the conditions of the grant are met; if the dentist does not meet the commitment to provide NHS dentistry to the number of people specified, the grant can be reclaimed in whole or in part.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will extend the principles of clinical governance outlined in "A First Class Service" to dentists working in the general dental services. [79414]

Mr. Denham: Health Service Circular 1999/065 "Clinical Governance: Quality in the new NHS" makes it clear that clinical governance arrangements will include general dental practitioners, optometrists and pharmacists. Clinical Governance in the General Dental Services will be implemented to a similar time scale as the rest of the national health service.

To develop clinical governance in the GDS we will build on the elements already in place, underpinned by continuing professional development and strengthened by self-regulation.

Care Leavers

21. Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress on improving services for young people leaving local authority care since the publication of "Quality Protects". [77719]

Mr. Hutton: All local authorities were required to submit quality protects management action plans to the Department of Health by 31 January. The management action plans had to set out, among other information, the local authorities' plans for improving the services for young people leaving care. This is one of the six priority areas for the payment of the £375 million children's social services special grant.

We shall be publishing the findings of our evaluation of the management action plans in a national overview report due out in the summer.

Waiting Lists

23. Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the number of people on NHS hospital waiting lists (a) on 1 May 1997 and (b) today. [77721]

Mr. Denham: The Government inherited the largest and fastest-rising waiting lists ever. We promised that by April 1999 waiting lists would be lower than the position we inherited of 1.158 million. We have delivered this promise a month early by reducing waiting lists by 193,000 since last April to 1.12 million.

IVF Treatment

24. Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ensure equality of access to IVF treatment. [77722]

Ms Jowell: We have pledged to tackle unacceptable levels of geographical variations in access to in-vitro fertilisation treatment and have set in motion a programme of work to achieve that aim. A Department of Health survey of current health authority infertility service provision will take place shortly to enable the cost implications of any policy changes to be estimated. The Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists aim to complete their third, and final, set of evidence-based clinical guidelines on infertility this autumn and these will indicate the circumstances in which infertility treatment can be most clinically effective. We can then move towards fairer access to national health service infertility services, where those most able to benefit from such treatment receive it.

Residential and Nursing Homes

25. Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to publish his report on national required standards for residential and nursing homes for older people. [77723]

Mr. Hutton: The report will be published when further work has been done on the likely impact on providers, in accordance with Cabinet Office guidance on regulatory impact assessments.

Breast Cancer

26. Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to reduce waiting times for breast cancer treatment. [77724]

Mr. Hutton: Considerable progress has already been made through the on-going implementation of Calman/Hine. In addition, the Government have invested £20 million over the past 18 months in breast cancer services to speed access to diagnosis and treatment. Quarterly monitoring of "The New NHS" White Paper breast cancer two-week target begins on 1 April.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence he has assessed on the success rates of early screening programmes in treating breast cancer. [77703]

Mr. Hutton: In 1996–97 the national health service breast screening programme, for the first time, matched the cancer detection rate of the original Swedish clinical trial in 1986 on which it was based. The majority of these cancers were small, early cancers which are easier to treat. Based on these results, it is estimated that the programme could be saving 1,250 lives each year.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reports he has received on errors made by the Chesterfield and North Derbyshire Hospital Trust in diagnosing breast cancer; and if he will make a statement. [78939]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 26 March 1999]: We are aware of the two terrible cases which have been the subject of media attention and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has written to both women to express his feelings of deep regret that they have had such an awful experience.

We have asked the regional director of public health in Trent to commission a comprehensive review of the circumstances to ensure that everything possible is done to avoid this happening again. The review team will include an expert nominated by the Royal College of Pathologists. My right hon. Friend will be kept informed of progress and will be fully appraised of the conclusions and recommendations of the review team, which will be published.

Adoption

27. Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the waiting times for children for adoptive families. [77725]

Mr. Hutton: Some children needing new families wait too long to be placed with adoptive parents. Decisions about their future should be made more quickly and decisively. We are determined to transform the adoption service through our "Quality Protects" programme.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many full service agencies for inter-country adoption are registered in the United Kingdom. [78326]

Mr. Hutton: Each local authority may act as an adoption agency for inter-country adoptions. In addition, there are 2 voluntary adoption agencies which are approved under section 3 of the Adoption Act 1976 to act as an adoption society in England and Wales which are also approved to act in overseas adoptions. Applications from two other adoption agencies to act in overseas adoptions have been received recently.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the job description of the Section Head (Adoption) in his Department. [78306]

Mr. Hutton: The section head advises Ministers on domestic and inter-country adoption matters and, on behalf of my right hon Friend the Secretary of State, manages the Department's function as the central authority for England for inter-country adoption.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many adoption applications for adoption within the UK were received in each year since 1990; and of these how many resulted in adoptions. [78328]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not available centrally. The Department processes applications only for inter-country adoptions. Domestic adoption applications are processed by the local authority concerned.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many adoption applications for inter-country adoptions were received in each year since 1990; and how many of these resulted in adoptions being completed. [78327]

Mr. Hutton: The Department does not hold information about the number of children adopted from abroad, only about the number of inter-country adoption applications it has processed since 1993. These will account for the majority of such adoptions since then and are set out as in the table.

Year	Number of inter-country adoption applications processed by the Department
1993	101
1994	115
1995	154
1996	308
1997	223
1998	258
Total	1,159

Winter Fuel Allowance

28. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact the Chancellor's increase in the senior citizens winter fuel allowance will have on the health of senior citizens. [77726]

Ms Jowell: By announcing in his recent Budget statement an increase from £20 to £100 in the winter fuel allowance payable to pensioner households, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor clearly signalled the Government's intention to tackle fuel poverty. By benefiting those older people most at risk, this substantial fivefold increase will contribute to combating the many health problems related to cold conditions in homes.

Radiotherapy Services (North-West)

29. Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made to reduce the above average waiting times for -radiotherapy treatment in the north-west region caused by a lack of linear accelerators. [77727]

Mr. Denham: Since the Royal College of Radiologists collected the data which it published in July 1998, a new radiotherapy unit with two linear accelerators has opened in Preston. In that time, the number of machines serving people in the north west and north Wales has increased from 12 to 16. Work is currently under way to house a third machine at Preston, which will come into service next year.

A report commissioned by the National Health Service Executive North-West, which will make recommendations about the level of provision of radiotherapy treatment machines in the region, is due shortly.

Complementary Medicine

31. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the change in the total funding for complementary medicine services from health authority budgets in the past year. [77729]

Ms Jowell: Information about health authority spending on complementary medicine services is not available centrally.

It is for local purchasers and clinicians to decide how their resources would best be used to meet the health needs of their populations, having taken into account all of the available evidence as to the most appropriate and effective forms of treatment, whether conventional or complementary. We shall, however, be studying the use that the new primary care groups make of complementary medicine.

Accident and Emergency Services (North-east London)

32. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on plans to improve accident and emergency services in north-east London. [77730]

Mr. Denham: On 16 February my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced that £30 million from the modernisation fund will be spent on improving England's accident and emergency services. In north-east London, Whipps Cross Hospital and Oldchurch Hospital have received £695,000 and £748,000 respectively to redevelop and modernise their accident and emergency units. These figures include awards from the National Health Service Executive's London Regional Office.

On 15 March 1999, Official Report, columns 707–20, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced that an extra £70 million-£80 million would be made available from her Majesty's Treasury aimed at new and better ways of staffing and organising accident and emergency services in England, including the introduction of emergency nurse practitioners, greater use of tele-medicine and tackling long trolley waits.

Mental Health Institutions (Medical Emergencies)

33. Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will include in the code of practice under the Mental Health Acts a requirement for mental health institutions to have procedures for dealing with medical emergencies. [77731]

Mr. Hutton: The Mental Health Act 1983 code of practice provides guidance on the treatment, care and management of patients, with respect to their mental disorder, who are detained under the Mental Health Act 1983. The code does not provide detailed guidance on procedures for dealing with medical emergencies in mental health institutions. It is for each mental health trust to ensure that policies and procedures are in place for dealing with medical emergencies involving all psychiatric patients, not just those detained under the Act.

Long-term Care

34. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his proposed timetable for the implementation of the recommendations of the royal commission on long-term care. [77732]

Mr. Hutton: There is already action in hand relating to several of the Royal Commission's recommendations. Others will require more detailed consideration over the coming months.

Beta-interferon

35. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the prescription of beta-interferon for multiple sclerosis sufferers. [77733]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow) today, Official Report, column 845.

Renal Services

36. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what additional resources his Department has made available for renal unit facilities. [77734]

Mr. Denham: Funds for specific services or aspects of treatment provided by the national health service are not separately identified either nationally or within individual health authority or NHS trust allocations. The pressures on renal services were identified during the comprehensive spending review process and were taken into account when calculating the final settlement for the NHS. However, it is for individual HAs to decide the resources which should be devoted to the provision of renal services in the context of local priorities and needs. The "National Priorities Guidance 1999/2000–2001/02" makes it clear that this is an area where HAs are expected to secure improvements.

Multiple Sclerosis

38. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on Government policy on the provision of health services to patients with multiple sclerosis. [77736]

Mr. Denham: The national health service provides health care on the basis of clinical need. This includes the health services which may be required by people with multiple sclerosis ranging from primary care to specialist services.

Guidance on betainterferon was issued to the national health service in November 1995.

Mental Health (Children)

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what investment the Government plan to make over the next three years to help children with (a) attention deficit disorder, (b) phobias, (c) depression and (d) other mental health problems. [77708]

Mr. Hutton: The Government are making an additional £84 million available over three years from April 1999 to improve provision of appropriate, high-quality care and treatment for children and young people by building up locally based child and adolescent mental health services. These services address a range of child and adolescent mental health problems, including emotional and behavioural disorders such as attention deficit disorder, phobias and depression.

Cancer

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths occurred last year from (i) prostate, (ii) breast, (iii) lung and (iv) colon cancer; and what was the amount of Government funding for (a) treatment and (b) research allocated to each of those cancers. [77572]

Mr. Hutton: The number of deaths in England and Wales in 1997 (the latest data available) for the following cancers are given in the table.

ICD code		Men	Women
ICD9 185	Prostate	8,523	—
ICD9 174/5	Breast	67	11,980
ICD9 162	Trachea, bronchus and lung	19,087	10,889
ICD9 153	Colon	5,125	5,323

Information about the cost of treatment classified by disease is not routinely collected locally, hence there is no collation of such data centrally. However, approximately 6.3 per cent. of national health service hospital expenditure is on cancer.

The Government fund health and medical research in a number of ways. The Department funds research and development to support its work on policy development and evaluation in health and social care. The Department also manages the national health service research and development levy, which is used to support research and development of relevance to the national health service in hospitals, general practice and other health care settings, and to fund the NHS research and development programme. In addition, the Medical Research Council (MRC), which receives most of its income via grant-in-aid from the Office of Science and Technology in the Department of Trade and Industry, funds medical research as part of the Government's funding of the science and engineering base.

Management of much of the research supported by the NHS research and development levy is devolved, and details of expenditure at project level are not collected routinely by the Department. During 1997–98, the Department invested the following amount on directly commissioned research: £187,000 on lung cancer; £29,000 on prostate cancer; £832,000 on breast cancer and £197,000 on bowel cancer.

During 1997–98, the MRC spent £691,000 on lung cancer; £18,000 on prostate cancer; £3,328,000 on breast cancer and £1,469,000 on bowel cancer. The MRC's figures relate to research specifically into these named cancers, and research which has been classified as being undertaken in one of these sites may well have implications in another and vice versa. As a guide, the MRC spent £13.2 million on cancer in 1994–95.

Studies in cancer should be viewed in the context of a large body of basic MRC research which underpins, and is of some relevance, to them. This includes the study of molecules and cells (£64.5 million in 1997–98), genetics and health (£52.4 million) and infections and immunity (£60.3 million).

In addition to the MRC's funding of the specified cancers, it is also supporting 10 trials, details of which are listed. These trials are co-ordinated by the MRC cancer trials office (CTO), which supports about 30 trials at any one time. Costs cannot be ascribed to individual studies, but, as a guide, the CTO's budget in 1997–98 was approximately £1 million.

MRC Trials

Breast cancer:

A randomised trial of epirubicin and cyclophosphamide vs. epirubicin and paclitaxel in metastatic breast cancer

Bowel cancer:

A randomised trial of intravenous versus intrahepatic arteria 5-FU and leucovorin for colorectal liver metastases

A randomised trial comparing 2 durations and 3 systemic chemotherapy regimens in the palliative treatment of advanced colorectal cancer

Lung cancer:

The Big Lung Trial: a randomised trial of cisplatin-based chemotherapy for all patients with non-small cell lung cancer;

A randomised trial of supportive treatment with or without immediate thoracic radiotherapy in the prevention and palliation of symptoms in inoperable NSCLC;

A randomised trial of pre-operative chemotherapy versus radiotherapy in patients with stage IIIA NSCLC;

A randomised trial of ifosfamide, carboplatin and etoposide with mid-cycle vincristine (VICE) vs. standard practice chemotherapy in patients with SCLC and good performance status;

A randomised trial of surgical resection with or without pre-operative chemotherapy in patients with operable NSCLC;

Prostate cancer:

A randomised double-blind placebo-controlled trial of adjuvant oral sodium clodronate in patients commencing or responding to initial hormone therapy for metastatic adenocarcinoma comparing time to symptomatic bone progression;

A randomised trial of high dose therapy in localised cancer of the prostate using conformal radiotherapy techniques.

Project details of work directly funded by the Department or supported through the NHS research and development levy can be found on the National Research Register (NRR). This is available in the Library and most medical libraries on CD Rom, and on the Internet: http://www.doh.gov.uk/nrr.htm. The NRR also contains many details of projects/trials funded by the MRC and other funders.

Cancer Care Services

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department makes available to the public on the quality and performance of cancer care services; and if he will make a statement. [78222]

Mr. Hutton: A range of information is available which has a bearing on the quality and performance of cancer care services. Annual statistical bulletins on the breast and cervical screening programmes in England give information on uptake, coverage and detection rates. The Office for National Statistics publishes the following information on cancer incidence, cancer survival and mortality:

	Source
Incidence	Cancer Statistics Registrations England and Wales 1992 ONS Series MB1
Cancer survival	ONS Monitor MB1 98/1 Cancer survival in England and Wales: 1981 and 1989 registrations
Mortality	Mortality Statistics Cause England and Wales 1997 ONS Series DH2 No.24

Waiting list data by specialty are collected and published quarterly in both the "Department of Health NHS Executive Hospital Waiting List Statistics: England" for inpatients and the "Department of Health NHS Executive Waiting Times for First Outpatient Appointments in England: Detailed Statistics" for outpatients. Data are available at specialty level for both health authorities and national health service trusts. Cancer treatment data may be contained within some of the various specialty classifications. Hospital episode statistics, which show the number of finished consultant episodes, are also collected. Copies of all publications are available in the Library.

High level performance indicators (HLPIs) will be published shortly, which will include a number of indicators for cancer services. The HLPIs aim to provide an overview of how the NHS is performing, encourage national and local improvements in performance and support public accountability.

A cancer information strategy, within the wider health information strategy, is currently being developed, which will streamline information sources. Areas for action which have been identified include developing a core cancer information pack for patients, carers and other users; information requirements of primary care; and patient-centred information systems.

Chronic Fatigue Syndrome

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he is assessing on specialist support for CFS/ME (a) nationally and (b) in the Northern Region. [78484]

Mr. Hutton: We are not currently assessing any proposals nationally or in the northern region on specialist support for chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalomyelitis (CFS/ME). The national health service provides a considerable number of services to which people suffering from CFS/ME have access, and such patients are seen within a wide range of hospital specialties. The recently established CFS/ME working group will produce guidance aimed at improving the quality of this care and treatment. The CFS/ME working group will complete its work by the summer of 2000 and the guidance will be published later that year.

Carers

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how he will inform health care service providers of the developing policies towards carers outlined in the national strategy for carers. [78553]

Mr. Hutton: A copy of the national strategy, "Caring about Carers", was sent to chief executives of health authorities and national health service trusts on 8 February. The Chief Executive of the National Health Service Executive wrote to all chief executives personally on 11 March emphasising his commitment to implementation of the national strategy. Further information will be sent directly to all doctors in England by the Chief Medical Officer. The Department is also working closely with organisations representing general practitioners, nurses and managers in general practice on publicising the national strategy to primary care teams. Further opportunities for informing the national health service about supporting carers will be taken as they arise, and in the context of a wide range of initiatives under way in my Department.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will discuss with ministerial colleagues methods of establishing a one-stop shop advice service for carers. [78554]

Mr. Hutton: The issue of how best to provide information and advice for carers was fully discussed in the course of developing our national carers' strategy. We will be working to provide carers with improved information in a range of different ways—through helplines, including NHS Direct, through an improved network of local support services and carers' centres, and through information technology. Carers' centres and carer support services already provide information and advice on a wide range of issues. We will help them to do this better, such as by providing information on our policies and services on the internet. We also intend to help the staff of all services that support carers to become knowledgeable about the issues which concern them and about other local services which can help them.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he intends to take to ensure that primary health care providers are able to (a) identify and (b) provide services to carers. [78552]

Mr. Hutton: The national priorities guidance for the health and social services for 1999–2000 requires primary care teams to identify patients who are carers or who have carers. We are working with a number of organisations, including the medical and nursing royal colleges, on ways of ensuring that primary care teams support carers, in particular by helping them to maintain their own health and by providing them with information about other services in their area.

Violence against Women

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals the Government have to develop the strategy agreed in the Beijing Platform for Action for tackling all forms of violence against women. [78873]

Ms Jowell: We will shortly be releasing a report outlining an integrated approach to preventing violence against women. This report will promote inter-agency working and will include measures based on prevention, and the provision of protection and justice. The report's development has been informed by research into the causes and consequences of violence against women and the effectiveness of preventive measures.

The United Kingdom is fully committed to opposing trafficking in women and its associated activities. The UK has comprehensive laws in place to deal with those who engage in activities associated with trafficking and prostitution and measures are in place to ensure that victims are dealt with fairly.

Prescriptions

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the savings to the NHS if pharmacists were permitted to prescribe the limited selection of drugs that district nurses may prescribe. [78885]

Mr. Denham: No estimate has been made of whether allowing pharmacists to prescribe a limited selection of drugs would lead to savings or to additional costs.

NHSNet

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the acceptability to GP practices of NHSNet in respect of (a) security, (b) cost and (c) speed relative to other internet providers. [78924]

Mr. Denham: The NHSNet is a private communications network dedicated to national health service purposes and as such it is fundamentally more secure than equivalent public networks such as the internet.

The initial cost of connecting general practitioners to NHSNet will be met from modernisation funds. GPs will have to meet any increased costs related to telephone call charges and this is estimated to be £400 per practice per annum in the first instance. However, this cost will be treated as a practice expense and will be met indirectly through the expenses element in the gross fees and allowances paid to GPs.

NHSNet is capable of delivering information as quickly as the best internet providers.

Prescriptions (Pensioners)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what cost was incurred by his Department in the most recent available year in respect of NHS prescriptions to pensioners. [78934]

Mr. Denham: In 1997, the estimated cost of prescription items dispensed by community pharmacies and appliance contractors to persons aged 60 and over was £1,906 million.

This is the net ingredient cost, which is the basic cost of a drug and does not take account of discounts, dispensing costs, fees or prescription charge income. Information about the cost of prescriptions dispensed in the community by dispensing doctors or dispensed in hospitals to persons aged 60 and over is not available.

Herbal Medicines

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his Department's policies in respect of herbal remedies. [79505]

Ms Jowell: Our overall objective is that the public should have access to a wide range of safe, high-quality herbal medicines with appropriate information about the use of the product. There are currently two contrasting routes to the market for herbal medicines. Licensed herbal medicines have to meet rigorous standards of safety, quality and efficacy. Unlicensed herbal remedies in the UK do not have to meet any specific standards for safety, quality or efficacy.

We fully share the view, which was expressed at a recent meeting held by my noble Friend Baroness Hayman, by a range of organisations working in the natural health sector, that the current regulatory arrangements for herbal medicines have significant weaknesses and require review. The regime for unlicensed medicines does not give systematic protection to the public against low-quality and unsafe unlicensed herbal remedies which are known to reach the UK market. Nor does it permit manufacturers legally to give written information to consumers about the intended use of the product. In contrast, elements of the regime for licensed medicines—particularly some of the efficacy requirements—are difficult for responsible companies to satisfy in relation to herbal medicines. We believe that there is a need to work towards arrangements which provide better protection and information to the public, while continuing to allow responsible business and practitioners to operate effectively.

We have asked the Medicines Control Agency to examine options for achieving our objectives for herbal medicines, consulting widely with interested organisations. Medicines law operates within a European framework. Accordingly, we will need to develop a position which is realistically achievable within the European Union. We intend to participate actively and constructively in any on-going EU discussions about future regulatory arrangements for herbal medicines.

Medical Devices Agency

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the key targets for 1999–2000 for the Medical Devices Agency. [79614]

Ms Jowell: We have agreed the agency's key targets for 1999–2000 and copies have been placed in the Library.

Day-care Services

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the levels of charges by local authorities for non-residential day-care services; and what plans he has to introduce guidance on the appropriate levels of such charges. [78920]

Mr. Hutton: Information on charges made to individuals for non-residential services is not available centrally. However, the total amounts reported by local authorities as having been received from clients in the form of fees and charges, in 1996–97, for different services are collected centrally, and are available in the form of computer tables on the Department's World Wide Web pages [Internet reference http:\\www.open.gov.uk/doh/publ /pssstat.htm] for all local authorities in England.

We will consider what action to take to make the present charging system for non-residential services more equitable, including the case for guidance on appropriate levels of charges, when we have assessed the recommendations of the royal commission's report on long-term care, and the results of a survey by the Audit Commission on local authority charging practices.

Lamotrigine

Mr. Lock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has commissioned into the safety of the drug, Lamotrigine. [67006]

Mr. Denham: As for all marketed medicines, the available research into the safety of lamotrigine was assessed at the time of granting the marketing authorisation and continues to be evaluated by the Medicines Control Agency. Recognised side effects of lamotrigine are included in the authorised product information and the British National Formulary.

Mr. Lock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations have been made to his Department since the drug Lamotrigine was licensed for use in Britain, arising out of or related to the use of this drug or arising out of or connected to side effects suspected to be related to the use of this drug. [67005]

Mr. Denham: The Medicines Control Agency, which is responsible for drug regulation in the United Kingdom, has received 35 inquiries relating to lamotrigine from health professionals and members of the public since the marketing authorisation was granted in 1991.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farmers (North-west)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to visit farmers in Chorley and Bolton. [77526]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 18 March 1999]: I have no plans at present to visit farmers in Chorley and Bolton. I undertake regular visits to different regions in England and other parts of the UK to consult with farmer representatives and farmers themselves on matters of interest to them. I hope, as part of that programme, to be able to visit Lancashire.

OTMS

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he has taken to review the over-30-months scheme; and if he will make a statement. [78211]

Mr. Rooker: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him on 7 December 1998, Official Report, column 104, to which I have nothing further to add at the present time.

Cutting Plants (Veterinary Inspections)

Mr. Curry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what will be the average annual cost of moving from monthly to weekly and then daily veterinary supervision in a licensed cutting plant handling under five tonnes of meat per week. [78409]

Mr. Rooker: Based on a licensed cutting plant handling under five tonnes of meat per week, with veterinary attendance of one hour per day and weekly working assumed to be five days, the average annual cost of moving from monthly to weekly to daily veterinary supervision will be:

Monthly inspection—annual cost (12 hours): £342

Weekly inspection—annual cost (52 hours): £1,482

Daily inspection—annual cost (260 hours): £7,410.

Mr. Curry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the average cost of daily veterinary inspections as a percentage of turn-over for the category of plant which handles (a) under five tonnes and (b) between 250 and 5,000 tonnes of meat per week. [78416]

Mr. Rooker: The average annual costs of daily veterinary inspections at these premises will be:

Plant handling under five tonnes of meat

Annual cost: £7,410

(based on supervision of one hour/day)

Plant handling between 250 and 5,000 tonnes of meat per week

Annual cost: £17,289

(based on average supervision of two hours/day).

Information on the turnover of licensed premises is not available I regret that I am therefore unable to provide a percentage of turnover value.

Milk

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what sums have been invested in the modernisation of the United Kingdom milk processing industry in each year from 1995 to date; and what Government financial support for investment has been provided in each year. [78195]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 23 March 1999]: Information on total investment in the modernisation of the United Kingdom milk processing industry is not held centrally.

Government financial support for investment from 1995 to date is as follows:

	1995	1996	1997	1998
Regional Selective Assistance	385,000	75,000	30,000	1,400,000
Processing and Marketing Grants	585,638	706,867	813,046	1,065,192
Objective 5b	0	0	0	429,501
LEADER II Projects	0	0	0	2,758
Mid Wales Development Grant	47,000	0	208,000	0
Total	1,017,638	799,329	1,051,046	3,638,933

The Objective 5b scheme began in 1995, however no payments were made until 1998.

Potatoes

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research has been (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated by his Department with regard to the ecological links between the cultivation of potatoes and the existence of the aquatic flies and similar fauna vital for the survival of young salmon and trout; and if he will make a statement. [78879]

Mr. Rooker: No research of this type has been commissioned or evaluated.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research is being undertaken by his Department (a) directly and (b) by contract to outside bodies on the genetic modification of potatoes; and if he will make a statement. [78878]

Mr. Rooker: My Department currently funds two research projects involving the genetic modification of potatoes. Both projects involve strategic R&D to investigate genetic manipulation as a possible means to reduce the use of chemicals during the growth and storage of potato tubers.

A three-year project within the Cell Engineering LINK programme started in 1996 and is due to end on 30 April. The LINK consortium comprises the University of Leeds and Advanced Technologies (Cambridge) Ltd. Government contributors come from MAFF and the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council. The aim of this project is to investigate the feasibility of genetic modification as a means of reducing damage by nematodes and thus reduce the use of chemical nematicides.

A second three-year project funded by MAFF at the University of Nottingham started in February 1999. HRI-Wellesbourne is a sub-contractor on this project, which also receives an "in-kind" contribution from Advanced Technologies (Cambridge) Ltd. The aim of this project is to investigate specific biochemical changes occurring in potato tubers which affect their storage behaviour.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the incidence of tuberculosis in (a) badgers and (b) cattle in each of the last three years in Cheshire; and if he will make a statement. [78787]

Mr. Rooker: With respect to part (a) of the question, the incidence of TB in badgers has not been systematically studied in Great Britain outside the Woodchester Park area. With regard to part (b) of the question, there were no confirmed TB incidents in cattle herds in Cheshire in 1996 or 1997. There were two confirmed TB incidents in herds in Cheshire in 1998.

Abattoirs

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards small abattoirs. [79536]

Mr. Rooker: Small abattoirs make a valuable contribution to the economy, but they cannot be exempt from the requirements of EU law.

Bovine Somatotropin

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the health implications of the consumption of dairy products where bovine somatotropin has been used in the production process. [78984]

Mr. Rooker: Bovine somatotropin (BST) occurs naturally in all cows milk. The manufactured form of BST is not currently permitted for use in the EU. If its use were to be authorised, it would be classified as a veterinary medicinal product. Products have previously been assessed by independent scientific committees against the statutory criteria of safety, quality and efficacy. I asked the independent Veterinary Products Committee to set up a Working Group, which is currently consulting the latest scientific information on animal and human safety, and the Committee is expected to offer advice to Ministers on the safety of BST in the summer.

CABINET OFFICE

Drugs Misuse

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what assessment he has made of the degree of correlation between the level of law enforcement on the possession and use of illegal drugs and the overall level of availability of illegal drugs in the United Kingdom since the appointment of the Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator. [79333]

Mr. George Howarth: I have been asked to reply.

Such a simple correlation is not possible as there are many factors, other than the level of law enforcement, which could impact on the availability of illegal drugs on our streets. Furthermore, although statistics are collected on the number and weight of seizures of illicit drugs, we have no measure at present of the overall size of the drugs market, or the percentage of illegal drugs seized, which would allow comparisons to be made.

A methodology is being developed to measure the key corporate objective under the availability aim of the Drugs Strategy to reduce access to drugs among young people. It is intended to provide a better understanding of the impact of law enforcement measures on the availability of drugs in the United Kingdom.

Senior Salaries

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what was the average percentage increase in salaries of members of the Senior Civil Service for 1998–99; and to what extent the pay awards were staged. [78769]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The average individual increase in 1998–99 (before staging) was 5.44 per cent. 2 per cent. of the pay award was paid on 1 April 1998 and the remainder on 1 December 1998. The individual average percentage in-year increase taking account of staging was 3.15 per cent.

Task Forces

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will list for all task forces and policy reviews with external members established by his Department since May 1997 (a) their dates of establishment, (b) those which have issued final reports and their dates of publication, (c) those which have been terminated and their dates of termination and (d) for those bodies still in existence, expected reporting and termination dates. [79272]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The information is given in the table.

Task force/policy review	Date established	Date of publication of final report	Date of termination	Expected reporting and termination dates
Better regulation Task Force	15 September 1997	—	—	No termination date set
Review of Export Promotions	18 June 1998	12 March 1999	12 March 1999	—
Modernising Government Quality Schemes Task Force	26 January 1999	—	—	December 1999

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will list all those task forces and policy reviews with external members established by his Department since May 1997 which have set up (a) sub-groups, (b) working parties and (c) other subsidiary committees. [79250]

Mr. Kilfoyle: (a) Sub-groups—The Better Regulation Task Force; (b) working parties—none; (c) other subsidiary committees—none.

Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office which public bodies remain outside the jurisdiction of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration. [79248]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The vast majority of executive non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) and those advisory NDPBs which have significant dealings with members of the public are now within the parliamentary ombudsman's jurisdiction. Those which remain outside his jurisdiction generally have few or no dealings with members of the public or are within the jurisdiction of another ombudsman, for example, the Local Government Ombudsman, or else have external adjudicators.

There are some exceptions to this, where the Government have decided that it would be inappropriate to bring a particular executive NDPB within the parliamentary ombudsman's jurisdiction, because of the nature of the body's work. These are listed:

Agricultural Wages Board for England and Wales
Alcohol Education and Research Council
Audit Commission
Criminal Cases Review Commission
Crown Agents Holding and Realisation Board
Funding Agency for Schools
Gaming Board
Horserace Totalisator Board
Horticulture Research International Independent Commission for Police Complaints
Police Authority for Northern Ireland
Police Complaints Authority
Policyholders Protection Board
Student Loans Company

Ofwat customer service committees are excluded from the parliamentary ombudsman's jurisdiction as complaints from members of the public may be taken to the Director General of Water Services.

The British-Russia Centre and the British Association for Central and Eastern Europe, which are currently outside the parliamentary ombudsman's jurisdiction are shortly to be brought within his remit.

Public Services

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what he will do to ease public access and improve efficiency in dealing with complaints across different public services in England. [79668]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I am pleased to announce that the Government are about to undertake a review of the organisation of public sector ombudsmen in England. The review will be conducted by a team in the Cabinet Office and its terms of reference are as follows:

> The review will consider whether the present arrangements for the organisation of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration, the Health Service Commissioner for England and the Local Government Ombudsman in England are in the best interest of complainants and others against a background of moves towards the more integrated provision of public services; and whether those arrangements hinder achieving better value for money.
> The review will also consider the potential interaction between those ombudsmen and other independent complaints authorities, such as the Independent Housing Ombudsman and the Data Protection Registrar.
> The review will make recommendations about the public sector Ombudsmen, including recommendations on their statutory powers and duties, having regard for constitutional issues.

This review will support the Modernising Government agenda by examining the scope for a more joined-up ombudsman system for England.

TREASURY

Working Time Directive

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter inviting civil servants in his Department to waive Working Time Directive requirements. [79424]

Ms Hewitt: I have done so.

Births

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the percentage of births, live and stillborn, with birth weight (a) under 2,500g and (b) under

3,000g (i) stillborn in the United Kingdom and (ii) live and stillborn in the 10 wards with the highest percentage of births under 2,500g; and if he will give these figures for each of the past five years; [78754]

(2) if he will list the percentage of births where birth weight was under 2,500g which were (a) stillborn and (b) live births for each of the past 10 years. [78789]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Frank Field, dated 30 March 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary questions on births.

The information requested for the percentage of all births with selected birthweights in the United Kingdom, 1993–1997, is shown in the attached table 1. Similar information for the ten wards with the highest percentages can only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

The percentages of births where birth weight was under 2,500g which were stillborn and live are shown in the attached table 2.

Office for National Statistics

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Preseli, Pembrokeshire (Ms Lawrence) of 24 February 1999, Official Report, column 285, on the Office for National Statistics, what progress has been made with the restructuring of the management board; where the post of director of finance and corporate services has been advertised; and by when the new board is planned to be in place. [79396]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. David Kidney, dated 30 March 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on the restructuring of the ONS management board.

The ONS Board has been restructured so that it consists of:

The Director of ONS

A Director of Economic Statistics

A Director of Social Statistics

A Director of Methodology and Quality

A Director of Corporate Services

Interim appointments from current ONS staff have been made to these posts from 1 April, and job descriptions for the posts are in preparation. I am discussing with the Civil Service Commissioners how best to attract external applications for the Corporate Services post, which I expect to be advertised in late April. Arrangements for filling the other posts are still being considered.

Employment (Merseyside)

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of people in work in (a) Birkenhead and (b) the Wirral in 1979 and at the latest date for which figures are available broken down between (i) full-time and (ii) part-time work. [79214]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 29 March 1999]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Frank Field, dated 30 March 1999:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on employment.

Information is available for the number of Employee Jobs, derived from the Annual Employment Survey (AES) for September 1997 (latest available date) and the Census of Employment for September 1981 (the closest available date to 1979). The persons who hold these jobs may live outside the area shown.

Investment Companies

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will announce the timetable for the introduction of legislation to enable cash and fund-of-fund open-ended investment companies to be launched in the UK domestic market; and when authorisation of cash and fund-of-fund open-ended investment companies will enable ISA providers to promote such companies as an alternative to authorised unit trust schemes. [79344]

Ms Hewitt: The Financial Services and Markets Bill will include a provision to make orders allowing the formation of a wide range of open-ended investment companies (oeics). The aim will be to create a single corporate code for all authorised oeics. The Financial Services Authority will then be able to authorise oeics with a broad range of investment objectives. These could include cash and fund-of-fund open-ended investment companies.

Existing cash and fund-of-fund authorised unit trusts are eligible for inclusion in ISAs. Changes to the tax regulations permitting cash and fund-of-fund open-ended investment companies to be offered as ISA products will be introduced once these are established in law and are authorised by the Financial Services Authority.

Energy Levy

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what advice he has received on the likely impact on the United Kingdom steel industry's international competitiveness of the climate change levy at the indicative levels currently proposed; [79349]

(2) how he plans to ensure, in introducing the proposed energy levy, that United Kingdom manufacturing exports are not unfairly disadvantaged in world markets. [79348]

Ms Hewitt: In line with the Statement of Intent on Environmental Taxation, the Government considered carefully the potential impact of the climate change levy on the international competitiveness of United Kingdom industry. The design of the levy closely follows Lord Marshall's recommendations. Its introduction will involve no increase in the overall burden of taxation on business. The Government intend to recycle the revenues to business through a cut of 0.5 percentage points in the main rate of employer National Insurance Contributions. Businesses will also benefit from an additional £50 million for schemes aimed at providing energy efficiency directly and stimulating the take-up of renewable sources of energy.

The Government also recognise the need for special consideration to be given to the position of energy intensive industries given their energy usage, the separate Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control regulation and their exposure to international competition. In line with the recommendations made by the CBI, the Government will not be taking a blanket "across the board" approach to setting the appropriate level of the new levy. Subject to any legal and practical constraints, the Government intend to set significantly lower rates for those energy intensive sectors that agree targets for improving energy efficiency which meet the Government's criteria.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will establish criteria for defining an energy-intensive industry, to be exempted from the new energy tax, and if he will publish a ranked list of manufacturing sectors in terms of their energy intensity. [79197]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 29 March 1999]: The Chancellor announced in the recent Budget that, subject to any legal and practical constraints, the Government intend to set significantly lower rates for energy intensive sectors that agree targets for improving energy efficiency. Sites in sectors covered by the EU Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control Directive will be eligible. The Deputy Prime Minister, along with Ministers from the DTI and HM Treasury, met with the energy intensive sectors on 29 March to begin these negotiations.

Lord Marshall's report, "Economic Instruments and the Business Use of Energy", which was published on 3 November 1998, contains an analysis of energy intensity by business sector.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of companies which will be liable for his proposed energy tax. [79384]

Ms Hewitt: In the draft Regulatory Impact Assessment published by Customs and Excise on 9 March they commented that we expect that fewer than 1,000 businesses will be liable to account for the levy. Following Custom's consultation a more accurate figure will be calculated.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by what method tax revenue from the new energy tax will be collected by energy utilities. [79195]

Ms Hewitt: It will be for energy suppliers to decide how they pass on the climate change levy to their business customers. We expect most suppliers to include it in the unit price, but it will be up to them to choose whether to identify it as a separate amount.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps the Government have taken to ensure that their proposed energy tax is compliant with (a) the rules of EU Single Market and (b) the rules of the World Trade Organisation. [79180]

Ms Hewitt: The EU rules governing the harmonisation of taxes within the Single Market permit member states to introduce national taxes provided they do not give rise to border-crossing formalities in trade between member states, nor infringe State Aid rules. Customs and Excise's consultation paper on the design and administration of the levy, published on 9 March, proposes a treatment of the imports and exports of energy products which meets our obligations concerning trade between member states. And following the announcement of the climate change levy in the Budget, I informed the European Commission of the Government's announcement. The Government are working closely with the European Commission to help ensure that the proposed scheme to set significantly lower rates for energy intensive sectors that agree targets for improving energy efficiency is compatible with State Aid rules. In doing so, we shall also take into account our obligations under the World Trade Organisation.

Select Committee Reports

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answers of 16 March 1999, Official Report, columns 641–42 and 19 March 1999, Official Report, column 857, for what reasons he did not provide the information requested about his (a) political advisers, (b) officials and (c) Ministers. [78528]

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 22 March 1999, Official Report, column 101, for what reason he did not provide the information requested relating to the receipt by his parliamentary private secretary of the draft report of the Social Security Committee. [79193]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answers 25 and 29 March 1999]: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave on 16 March 1999, Official Report, columns 641–42, which gives a detailed account of the position.

Public Opinion Polls

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a full report of the questions asked and answers given in all the public opinion polls commissioned by the Treasury since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement on the policy objective of commissioning public opinion polls. [72026]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 22 February 1999]: The Government are committed to providing modern public services which are responsive to the needs of the public. Although the Treasury undertakes various public opinion research, this is usually in the form of business and economic surveys. The Treasury has not commissioned specific public opinion polls since 1 May 1997.

Limbless Association

Mr. Colman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if tax relief under the Millennium Gift Aid scheme is available in respect of the services provided by the Limbless Association in the UK. [79342]

Ms Hewitt: The Millennium Gift Aid scheme is for donations to UK charities to support education and anti-poverty projects in the world's poorest countries. Donations to support services provided in the UK would generally not qualify.

I am unable to comment on a particular organisation's tax affairs.

Millennium Compliance

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the recent report of the Financial Services Agency on millennium compliance; and if he will make a statement. [79385]

Ms Hewitt: As the FSA has made clear, the primary responsibility for ensuring high levels of Year 2000 preparedness lies with the industry itself. But the FSA regards the issue as a major supervisory priority. It recently made public, on an aggregated basis, its assessment of the state of readiness in financial institutions. The UK financial services sector is generally regarded as a leader in working towards Year 2000 preparedness. Within that overall picture, though, a small number of firms appears to be less ready than others. The FSA has challenged these firms either to show that this assessment is out of date or rapidly produce a plan for remedial action. It has also made clear that – where there is no better way to protect depositors, investors or policyholders or the integrity of markets – it will take supervisory action.

The decisions on whether to take such action are the statutory responsibility of the FSA, though the Treasury will continue to liaise closely with them.

Endowment Mortgages Mis-selling

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will establish a review of the estimated £1.5 billion of mis-sold endowment mortgages on the same basis as the recent pensions mis-selling review. [79187]

Ms Hewitt: The Financial Services Authority has confirmed that it is currently gathering information with a view to considering if such a review is necessary.

Mr. Charlie Whelan

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what duties Mr. Charlie Whelan has undertaken for Treasury Ministers since 4 January; [79890]

(2) how many times Mr. Charlie Whelan has visited HM Treasury since 4 January. [79915]

Mr. Gordon Brown: Mr. Whelan resigned from the Treasury with effect from 13 January. Since then he has not undertaken any duties for Treasury Ministers.

Exchange Rates

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the impact on employment of a 5 per cent. increase in the value of the pound against the euro, assuming no other changes of policy or external circumstance over a two year period. [79215]

Ms Hewitt: Assuming that the exchange rate were to increase with all other things remaining equal, there would tend to be a depressing effect on output, employment, and inflation in the short term. However, this is a wholly artificial assumption, not least because the Bank of England is required to set interest rates to hit a symmetrical inflation target.

Property Transactions (Stamp Duty)

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many property transactions worth (a) over £250,000 and (b) over £500,000 took place in 1998; and how many of these related to (i) commercial property, (ii) domestic property and (iii) intellectual property; [79045]

(2) what proportion of stamp duty revenue from property transactions worth (a) over £250,000 and (b) over £500,000 in 1998 related to (i) domestic property, (ii) commercial property and (iii) intellectual property. [79044]

Ms Hewitt: Information on stamp duty revenue is normally presented on a financial year basis. Provisional estimates for 1998–99 are given in the table.

1998–1999 (provisional)

Price Band	Number[1] of transactions (thousands)	Net[2] receipts (£ million)	Proportion[3] of net receipts %
Transactions over £250,000 but not over £500,000
Residential transactions	40	245	80
Commercial property and land transactions	10	65	20
Total	45	310	100
Transactions over £500,000
Residential transactions	5	215	20
Commercial property and land transactions	10	825	80
Total	15	1,040	100
All transactions over £250,000
Residential transactions	45	460	35
Commercial property and land transactions	20	890	65
Total	65	1,350	100

[1] Transactions rounded to the nearest 5,000. Figures are rounded individually and may not sum to the totals shown.
[2] Net receipts rounded to the nearest £5 million.
[3] Proportions rounded to the nearest 5 per cent.

It is estimated that stamp duty on transactions of intellectual property amount to about £5 million in 1998–99 from about 2,000 transactions. No further details are available on such transactions.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the total number of occasions when (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity since 2 May 1997. [76821]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Chancellor to the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs. Gillan) on 22 October 1998, Official Report, column 1200. All arrangements for overseas travel by Treasury Special Advisers are consistent with the requirements set out in the Ministerial Code.

Working Families Tax Credit

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if people eligible for the working families tax credit will receive free prescriptions. [78311]

Mrs. Roche: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Paymaster General to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb) on 15 March 1999, Official Report, column 517.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Debt Relief

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what mechanisms her Department is developing to ensure that the proceeds of debt relief are invested in measures aimed at reducing poverty. [79519]

Clare Short: I strongly agree that the resources freed up by debt relief need to be invested in poverty reduction programmes if we are to achieve the international development targets, including halving the proportion of people living in extreme poverty by 2015. We are pressing for the link between debt relief and poverty reduction to be examined and strengthened during the fundamental review of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative, which is underway.

HIPC debt relief is available only to countries following programmes agreed with the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank. We are working with these organisations to ensure that programmes are designed to promote high quality growth, and that the resources freed up by debt relief are allocated to poverty reduction programmes. Following last year's review of IMF's Enhanced Structural Adjustment Facility (ESAF), we are working with the Fund to ensure that more priority is given to the social impact of programmes, and that more attention is paid to including civil society in the design of programmes, to increase their poverty impact.

In addition, following proposals put forward by the UK, the World Bank is developing a set of general principles of good practice in social policy in consultation with the IMF. We envisage these principles should be drawn upon by the IMF and the World Bank in the design of programmes, to ensure that they protect and promote spending on health and education.

Primary Education

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support her Department is currently giving to developing countries to improve the quality of primary education. [79531]

Clare Short: Our education programmes for developing countries in support of the international goals of universal primary education and gender equity in primary and secondary education include agreements on policies which ensure that our assistance has a beneficial and sustainable effect, and that quality is not compromised in pursuit of the quantified development targets.

Where required, we provide technical assistance to address quality issues such as teacher training and the curriculum, and make substantial contributions to quality in the form of books and learning materials. In Uganda and India, we are supporting the development of appropriate and good quality schools and classroom learning environments as part of our wider support to primary education in those countries.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support her Department is giving to developing countries to meet the target of universal primary education by 2015; and what progress has been made to date. [79524]

Clare Short: In our White Paper we undertook to seek to meet the target of universal primary education by 2015. We have committed over £200 million to basic education in a number of countries including Ghana, India, Zambia, Malawi, South Africa, Pakistan, Bangladesh, and our largest ever single education pledge of £67 million for Uganda. These and substantial new programmes under development will contribute to the international target for universal primary education. It is too early to report progress towards the development goals. DFID programmes cannot be measured in isolation. Progress will be monitored through international education statistics collated and published by UNESCO and other multilateral organisations, including the OECD.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to increase the proportion of bi-lateral aid invested in primary education. [79518]

Clare Short: As we set out in our White paper, we are committed to the international development targets, including Universal Primary Education by 2015. In the Government's first year in office (1997/98), we spent over £13 million of bilateral funds on primary education. This was an increase of £5 million over the previous year. Subsequent major commitments of over £200 million, plus new programmes currently being developed in a number of countries, amounting to at least £200 million will substantially increase the proportion of our bilateral assistance invested in primary education.

Education (Gender Equality)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on progress to date towards the achievement of the international development goal of gender equality in education. [79520]

Clare Short: As we made clear in our White Paper in November 1997, we are committed to the international goals of universal primary education by 2015 and gender equity in primary and secondary education by 2005.

We have committed over £200 million to basic education in a number of countries including Ghana, India, Zambia, Malawi, South Africa, Pakistan, Bangladesh, and our largest ever single education pledge of £67 million for Uganda. These and other new programmes under development are a reflection of our understanding based on strong evidence that investment in the education of girls is the single, most effective way to reduce poverty.

We are committed to supporting governments that give priority to the education of girls within their education systems. It is too early to report progress towards the development goals. DFID programmes cannot be measured in isolation and progress towards the education development targets will be monitored through international education statistics collated and published by UNESCO and other multilateral organisations, including work by the OECD on indicators of development.

Montserrat

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent scientific re-assessment she has received of volcanic risks in Montserrat; and if she will make a statement. [79060]

Clare Short: The latest volcanic assessment was undertaken earlier this month. The review concluded that there has been no resumption of magmatic eruption since March 1998, and that risk levels of a major volcanic eruption are now similar to those in other Caribbean volcanic islands.

I have placed copies of the full report in the Libraries of the House.

Task Forces

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list all those task forces and policy reviews with external members established by her Department since May 1997 which have set up (a) sub-groups, (b) working parties and (c) other subsidiary committees. [79255]

Clare Short: There are no bodies which fall into these categories.

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list for all task forces and policy reviews with external members established by her Department since May 1997 (a) their dates of establishment, (b) those which have issued final reports and their dates of publication, (c) those which have been terminated and their dates of termination and (d) for those bodies still in existence, expected reporting and termination dates [79278]

Clare Short: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the right hon. Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean) on 22 February 1999, Official Report, column 14.

Soviet Military Testing

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action has been taken by Her Majesty's Government to provide aid to (a) Kazakhstan and (b) other former Soviet republics to tackle the effects of radioactive fallout from Soviet military testing [79545]

Clare Short: Following discussions with the Kazakh authorities, the Department for International Development has plans to support a community based land use plan for the Semipalatinsk region of Kazakhstan. We plan to implement the project later this year after consultation with representatives of provincial government, local communities, NGOs, and central Government in Kazakhstan.

There are no other former Soviet republics receiving aid to tackle the effects of radioactive fallout from Soviet military testing.

Asbestosis Sufferers (Legal Aid)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which officials had discussions with GJW, on how many occasions and on what dates, concerning the wish by Cape plc to amend the Access to Justice [Lords] Bill to ban foreign workers suffering from asbestosis obtaining legal aid. [78740]

Clare Short: No officials in my Department have had any discussions with G. J. Ward concerning any wish by Cape plc to amend the Access to Justice [Lords] Bill.

DEFENCE

Harrier GR7 Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the average flying hours in (a) 1997 and (b) 1998 for Harrier GR7 aircraft in service with the RAF. [67693]

Mr. Doug Henderson: In both 1997 and 1998, Harrier GR7 aircraft have each flown an average of 23 hours per month.

Special Advisers

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the overseas trips on his behalf, and who met the costs, undertaken by each of his special advisers since May 1997. [74644]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 4 March 1999]: Overseas visits (on my behalf) undertaken by my two special advisers since 1 May 1997 are as listed. The costs of these visits were met as appropriate either from my travel budget or from that of the senior official or military officer whom the special adviser was accompanying. In most cases travel was by military flight.

British Deployment (Balkans)

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British personnel are currently deployed in the Balkans; and if he will make a statement. [78407]

Mr. George Robertson: On 30 March, there were some 9,680 personnel committed to operations in the Balkans region, excluding Defence Attache staff. This includes some 4,700 personnel in Greece and Macedonia in connection with operations relating to Kosovo, some 4,500 personnel serving with SFOR in Bosnia and Croatia, and some 480 Royal Navy personnel in the area aboard the frigates HMS Iron Duke and HMS Somerset and the submarine HMS Splended. In addition, there are some 450 RAF personnel in Italy supporting NATO air operations over the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and in support of SFOR.

Aircraft Carriers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what requirements his Department has given to tenderers concerning the construction of the Royal Navy's future aircraft carriers. [78780]

Mr. Spellar: The potential prime contractors have been informed that the future aircraft carriers will be built and outfitted in the UK in line with current Government policy and that the first ship should be in service with the Royal Navy by 2012 and the second by 2015.

Mine Counter-measures (Adriatic Sea)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on maritime mine counter measures in the Adriatic, and what assessment he has made of the dangers to shipping from an increase in tensions in Kosovo. [79423]

Mr. George Robertson: We assess that there is no substantial threat to shipping in the Adriatic as a result of the current Kosovo crisis. Should this situation change, NATO has Mine Counter measures assets available to meet any threat which might arise.

Defence Aviation Repair Agency

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the formation of the Defence Aviation Repair Agency, and what key targets have been set for 1999–2000. [79913]

Mr. Spellar: On 1 April 1999 the Defence Aviation Repair Agency (DARA) will be established as a Defence Agency. The DARA will be responsible for the provision of deep aviation repair and overhaul facilities to meet the UK's Defence needs. It will enable the MOD's requirements for third line aircraft servicing to be focused on one primary provider. The DARA's Chief Executive will be Mr. Steve Hill and its Head Office will be at RAF St. Athan, Vale of Glamorgan. The Agency will employ 1,726 military and 5,099 civilian staff at four locations in the UK—Almondbank, Fleetlands, RAF Sealand and RAF St. Athan.

The creation of the Agency will improve Defence aviation repair delivery by focusing on customer requirements. It will also offer scope for exploiting the synergy between helicopter and fixed wing repair facilities and provide a clear line of accountability for service delivery. The DARA's corporate aim will be "To meet the needs of the UK's armed forces for responsive and cost effective in-house deep aviation repair"

The Chief Executive has been set the following Key Targets for the first year of operation:

Quantity

To achieve 95 per cent. of the agreed programme of aircraft repair work.

Cost

To keep within the approved operating cost budget while delivering the agreed programme of work.

Timeliness

To meet 95 per cent. of the agreed turn round times for aircraft, helicopter engines and transmission systems.

Quality Standard

To achieve a high quality index rating to be specified in the DARA Business Plan based on the following quality elements:

Acknowledgement of a customer concern.

Investigation and response to customer concerns.

Attributable quality failings.

Attributable incident reports.

Efficiency

(i) To increase overall efficiency by 5 per cent.

(ii) To achieve an increase in sales of repayment work (i.e. non MOD) of at least 25 per cent. in FY 99/00 from a baseline of £9 million.

Defence Procurement Agency

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the formation of the Defence Procurement Agency, and what key targets have been set for 1999–2000. [79859]

Mr. George Robertson: As we announced following our Strategic Defence Review the Defence Procurement Agency, DPA, will be launched as a Vote funded agency on 1 April 1999. It will be an executive agency under the Chief of Defence Procurement, Sir Robert Walmsley. He will be the Chief Executive and will be directly accountable to Ministers. The aim of the DPA will be to procure new equipment for the Armed Forces in response to approved requirements and to provide other procurement related services to its customers in and beyond the Ministry of Defence.

The Agency's main presence will be at its headquarters at Abbey Wood, Bristol, as well as at other locations in the UK and overseas.

The Agency will be organised in accordance with the principles underlying the Strategic Defence Review and specifically the Smart Procurement Initiative. The majority of its people will belong to Integrated Project Teams arranged in groups and accountable to the Agency's executive board. The executive board will be collectively accountable through the Chief Executive for the aggregate performance of the agency.

We have established five Key Targets to determine the effectiveness of the Agency during its first year of operation. We shall report results in the summer of next year. In addition to these in year targets the Agency remains committed to achieving savings of at least £2 billion by March 2008 by the application of Smart Procurement techniques.

The first three Targets apply to the range of projects covered by the Major Projects Report, which my Department submits annually to the House. Like the other Targets they are a starting point in what we intend to be a process of continuous improvement. Targets 2 and 3 are compatible with goals set in the 1999–2002 Public Service Agreement (PSA), adapted to enable cumulative performance to be measured. Target 5 also reflects one of the goals featured in the PSA.

The DPA's Key Targets for 1999–2000 are:

Key Targets

1. Predicted achievement of customers' core requirements for projects	85%
2. Average cumulative slippage of in service dates at 31 March 2000 not to exceed	26 months
3. Average cumulative cost variation at 31 March 2000 not to exceed	4%
4. Obtain customers' assessments of standards of DPA performance', to set a baseline for targets in subsequent years	March 2000
5. While continuing to meet the demands of the procurement programme, reduce the operating costs of the DPA in relation to the 1997–98 costs of the Procurement Executive by	10%

[1]About ten core requirements per project will be agreed between the DPA and MOD headquarters, defining the essential characteristics of the equipment. This target has been pitched at a level consistent with achievement of a target of 97% by March 2002.

[2]Variation between in service date (ISD) approved at "Main Gate" (the major investment decision point) and currently predicted ISD.

[3]Variation between cost approved at Main Gate and current estimate.

[4]Assessments will be made in relation to agreed outputs specified in Customer Supplier Agreements relating to pre and post Main Gate project management, provision of technical, safety and other services and management of certain nuclear activities. The aggregated score will be used as the basis for progressively higher targets year by year.

Smart Procurement

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement (a) on progress in implementing the Smart Procurement Initiative and (b) the Defence Logistics Organisation. [79889]

Mr. George Robertson: The Smart Procurement Initiative launched in our Strategic Defence Review offers major improvements in the way in which the Ministry of Defence buys and maintains equipment, and supports the Armed Forces. Smart Procurement encompasses the Defence Procurement Agency (DPA), the formation of which we are announcing separately today, and the new Defence Logistics Organisation (DLO), headed by the new Chief of Defence Logistics. Both of these new organisations will form on 1 April 1999.

We remain committed to deliver the £2 billion of savings over 10 years which we promised from Smart Procurement, and we have identified clear scope for further savings on top of that. The close working relationship between the DPA and DLO, needed to help deliver these savings, is being achieved in part through the creation of Integrated Project Teams or IPTs. These include staff from both the procurement and support organisations, as well as necessary contracts, finance, operational user and—in particular—industry expertise. We want to foster an enhanced partnership with industry, to reduce risk, encourage innovation and increase the competitiveness of defence industry.

The 10 pilot projects where we have been trialling Smart Procurement techniques and the IPT concept are already starting to indicate new savings running to several hundreds of millions of pounds over their life. They have also identified significant opportunities to get equipment into service faster, or—for equipment already in service—improve its availability and reliability. For example, the Type 23 frigate IPT is looking to reduce the length of an upgrade programme by 30 per cent. and the VC10 IPT has already identified initiatives to achieve a 10 per cent. increase in serviceability.

Soon after Easter we will launch the first wave of IPTs covering 23 projects or groups of projects in the DPA and DLO. Over the course of the coming year, the remainder of projects will migrate to this new structure, with a total of about 150 Teams forming in all, some 90 in the DPA and 60 in the DLO.

We have streamlined our internal procedures for taking decisions on equipment procurement, and will be reconfiguring MOD Headquarters to ensure that there is a clear central customer for equipment.

The Chief of Defence Logistics, General Sir Sam Cowan, will formally take up his post on 1 April 1999, bringing together the areas of the Chief of Fleet Support, the Quartermaster General and the Air Member for Logistics into a single Defence Logistics Organisation. This will be the largest Joint organisation in Defence, and accounts for some £4.6 billion of expenditure each year. The DLO will become a fully unified logistics structure in April 2000. This offers real prospects for delivering an improved service to the front line at lower cost. A significant proportion of the savings we foresee will come from the Defence Logistics Organisation applying Smart Procurement techniques. There will also be savings in downstream support costs, by ensuring that the whole life costs of equipment are properly considered when procurement decisions are taken.

We expect the DLO to make significant improvements in our logistic support, for example: in the ways we procure, manage, repair and store defence munitions; in the procurement and management of fuel; and in the use of lean support techniques. We hope to be able to make further announcements here in the coming months. We are also committed to delivering major reductions in our current holdings of non-explosive stores and to rationalisation of our stock procurement, leading to reductions of £130 million a year from 2001–02 onwards.

Defence Transport and Movements Agency

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the formation of the Defence Transport and Movements Agency; and what key targets have been set for 1999–2000. [79897]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The formation of the new Defence Transport and Movements Agency (DTMA), providing defence-wide operational and administrative transport and movements services, was announced as part of the Strategic Defence Review. The DTMA will form on 1 April this year incorporating the Defence Transport and Movements Executive, the Defence Freight Distribution Group, the Joint Transport and Movements staff from Northwood, the Passengers Reservation Centre in London, and the Air Movements Executive from High Wycombe. The Chief Executive has been set the following Key Targets for 1999–2000:

Key Target 1:

To meet customers' requirements as specified in Customer Supplier Agreements to deliver:

at least 90 per cent. of Agency transactions within agreed criteria; at least 90 per cent. of the services provided under call-off contracts at a satisfactory level.

Key Target 2:

To establish baseline data for administrative unit costs by 31 December 1999.

Key Target 3:

To demonstrate net added value.

Key Target 4:

To achieve at least a satisfactory rating in the provision of operational transport and movements support.

I have endorsed the Framework Document and Corporate Plan for this new Agency and will place copies of these documents in the Library of the House.

Defence Estate Organisation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Defence Estate Organisation. [79991]

Mr. Spellar: One of the major issues addressed during the Strategic Defence Review, was how to improve the overall management of the Defence Estate, an important strategic and national asset.

A number of key recommendations were made affecting the role of the Defence Estate Organisation (DEO), which was originally launched as a Defence Agency in 1997. These were, that the Chief Executive should be accountable for working to users to ensure that the Defence Estate is managed efficiently as a whole to support the deliver of Defence Capability, that the Agency should assume responsibility for all aspects of the surplus property disposal programme and that the Agency should develop a new model for construction procurement.

The effect of these recommendations has been to place major new responsibilities on the Agency and a fundamental review of the role, processes and organisation of the DEO was undertaken and a major change programme has been put in place.

A new Framework Document and Corporate Plan have been produced and copies will be placed in the Library of the House. Key Targets for the Agency, which will now be known as Defence Estates (DE), are being finalised and will be published shortly.

The work to be undertaken by DE, under the title SMART CONSTRUCTION, aims for the widest possible use of Prime Contracting. Whilst focusing on the MOD's estate requirements, it is also an integral part of the necessary reform of the UK Construction Industry which is a Government-wide initiative.

Logistics Support Services (RAF) Agency

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Logistics Support Services (RAF) Agency. [79896]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The roles and responsibilities of the organisations involved in the provision of integrated logistic support to new projects and in-service equipments in the RAF have been reviewed in order to streamline process, remove duplication and overlap and implement efficiencies.

Changes include:

a. combining two related functional areas already located in Glasgow into a single business unit;

b. transferring related work form RAF Logistics Command at RAF Wyton to the new business unit in Glasgow;

c. brigading all integrated logistic support activities within an enlarged Logistic Support Services (RAF) Agency but with constituent elements remaining at their current locations.

The net effect of these changes is to save 43 posts at a saving of just over £1m per year. In doing so, and from 1 April 1999, the Defence Codification Agency (DCA) in Glasgow will cease to be a separate Defence Agency and be absorbed into the Logistic Support Services Agency (RAF).

Key targets for the Logistic Support Services (RAF) Agency for the financial Year 1999–2000 are:

To produce 85 per. cent of all deliverables by the target date agreed with the sponsor.

To deliver 80 per. cent of all outputs at the cost agreed with the sponsor.

To produce 90 per. cent of all deliverables to the sponsor's complete satisfaction.

To achieve a 3 per. cent reduction in the cost of a productive hour.

Copies of the revised Framework Document and Corporate Plan for the Agency will be placed in the House Library.

Defence Storage and Distribution Agency

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the formation of the Defence Storage and Distribution Agency; and what key targets have been set for 1999–2000. [79894]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The formation of the new Defence Storage and Distribution (DSDA), for the storage and distribution of non-explosive stores, was announced as part of the Strategic Defence Review. The DSDA will form on 1 April this year incorporating the majority of the Army Base Storage and Distribution Agency, storage functions at RAF Stafford, the Central Services Establishment at Llangennech and the Procurement Executive Storage Depot at Aston Down. The Chief Executive has been set the following Key Targets for 1999–2000.

Key Target 1:

To meet customers' requirements as specified in Customer Supplier Agreements (CSAs), against the following standards:

- at least 95 per. cent of issues to consumers to be within specified supply chain processing times;
- at least 95 per. cent of receipts to be processed within agreed time limits;
- no more than one in every thousand issues to be subject to an accepted discrepancy report;
- the level and value of stock written off as a result of DSDA actions to be less than agreed levels.

Key Target 2:

To achieve and average 2.5 per. cent reduction in the unit cost of output.

Key Target 3:

To achieve an average 5 per. cent reduction in receipts processing times.

Key Target 4:

To achieve a 2.5 per. cent reduction in the cost of quality failures.

I have endorsed the Framework Document and Corporate Plan for this new Agency and will place copies of these documents in the Library of the House.

Long Service Awards

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the outcome of the review of long service awards in the armed forces. [79892]

Mr. George Robertson: Her Majesty the Queen has graciously approved the institution of a new award to be known as the Queen's Volunteer Reserves Medal to recognise outstanding service in the volunteer reserve forces. It will apply to volunteer reserves in all three Services and will be open to service men and women of any rank.

Her Majesty the Queen has also graciously approved the institution of a new award to be known as the Volunteer Reserves Service Medal to recognise 10 years continuous efficient service in the volunteer reserve forces. The Volunteer Reserves Medal will replace the Royal Naval Reserve Decoration, the Royal Naval Reserve Long Service and Good Conduct Medal, the Efficiency Decoration, the Efficiency Medal and the Air Efficiency Award. It will apply to volunteer reserves in all three Services and will be open to serve men and women of any rank.

As far as the Long Service and Good Conduct Medals of the Regular Armed Forces are concerned, I have concluded that it is not necessary to recommend to Her Majesty any change in the existing awards.

Kosovo

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the circumstances under which British land troops would be sent into Kosovo; and in what capacity they would act. [78766]

Mr. George Robertson: As the Government have repeatedly made clear the UK will only deploy troops into Kosovo to help implement a peace agreement, with the consent of both parties.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information members of the British armed forces have been given in relation to possible posting to Kosovo. [78767]

Mr. George Robertson: It has been made clear to our Armed Forces that we would deploy ground forces to Kosovo only if the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia authorities accept the entry of a NATO-led force in order to implement a peace agreement. Our people are well aware that we have no plans to fight our way into Kosovo.

Glen Road

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when and to whom in his Department Lieutenant Colonel Worsley-Tonks reported the contents of his conversation with Chris Aindow at the end of 1994 concerning events on the Glen Road on 30 September 1990; by whom it was considered; and what action was taken. [78737]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Ministry of Defence officials have spoken to Lieutenant Colonel Worsley-Tonks, who has retired from the Army, who said that he has no recollection of the alleged conversation with Mr. Aindow. Therefore the issue of onward reporting within the MOD does not arise.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when and to whom in his Department Colonel Fletcher of the Parachute Regiment reported the contents of his conversation with Chris Aindow in January 1995 concerning events on the Glen Road on 30 September 1990; by whom it was considered; and what action was taken. [78738]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Ministry of Defence officials have spoken to Colonel Fletcher who remembers that a conversation took place with Mr. Aindow, who was no longer a serving soldier, some four years ago. Although he cannot recall the precise details Colonel Fletcher recalls that Mr. Aindow discussed the possibility of a further court case. Colonel Fletcher advised him to tell the truth at any subsequent hearing and took no further action.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what approach his Department made to the lawyers acting for Chris Aindow requesting a copy of Chris Aindow's affidavit describing the events on the Glen Road on 30 September 1990. [78739]

Mr. Doug Henderson: No approach has been made by my Department to the lawyers of Chris Aindow for a copy of the affidavit describing the events on the Glen Road on 30 September 1990, although a reporter from the Sunday Express provided the MOD Press Office with extracts from the affidavit in which Chris Aindow alleges that he spoke to two Senior Officers after his release from prison in 1994.

NATO (Spain)

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Spain's joining of NATO's integrated military structure has created impediments to the use of Gibraltar by NATO naval, military and air forces. [78969]

Mr. Doug Henderson: No impediments in the use of Gibraltar by NATO forces have been created by Spain's joining NATO's Integrated Military Structure.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the restrictions in the movements of (a) NATO ships and (b) NATO aircraft that were being applied by Spain at the point when Spain joined NATO's integrated military structure; and whether any of those restrictions have now been lifted; [78970]

(2) if he will list the restrictions in the movements of (a) Royal Navy ships and (b) RAF aircraft that were being applied by Spain at the point when Spain joined NATO's integrated military structure; and whether any of those restrictions have now been lifted. [78971]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Spain maintains restrictions on all NATO military aviation movements into and out of Gibraltar, including a ban on military overflights and an air exclusion zone to the North and West of Gibraltar. By means of reservations footnoted to the relevant NATO Standing Agreement, Spain restricts access of UK and other NATO warships to Gibraltar. Discussions in June 1998 between FCO/Spanish MFA officials led to agreement on the lifting of some of the restrictions, air diversions in an emergency and the use of Gibraltar-based assets in NATO exercises.

Gulf War Veterans

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 10 March 1999, Official Report, column 209, on British Gulf war veterans, if the available tests under a medical assessment programme will include a test specifically to detect the presence of depleted uranium. [79067]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I refer my hon. Friend to my answers of 10 March 1999, Official Report, columns 208–09, and 15 March 1999, Official Report, columns 502–04, and to the detailed paper, "Testing for the presence of depleted uranium in UK veterans of the Gulf conflict: The Current Position", which I published on 19 March. A copy of the paper was sent to my hon. Friend last week and copies were also placed in the Library of the House.

Defence Housing Executive

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Defence Housing Executive. [79990]

Mr. Spellar: Following a review of options it has been concluded that the most appropriate way forward would be for the Defence Housing Executive to become an Agency of the Ministry of Defence with effect from 1 April 1999.

In order to ensure that the Agency operates in the best interests of its customers and in an efficient and cost effective manner, I have agreed five Key Targets with the Chief Executive for the first year of the Agency's work.

The following four key targets will measure the extent to which the Defence Housing Executive is delivering housing in the correct quantity, to the required standard and within the appropriate time frame.

Key Target 1:

To house at least 60 per cent. of families in accommodation that matches their entitlement by posting date or on return to Great Britain from overseas, and at least 90 per cent. within 28 days of that date.

Key Target 2:

Less than 10 per cent. of occupants should experience significant defects within 14 days of moving in.

Key Target 3:

To complete the planned upgrade of 1,766 properties by 31 March 2000.

Key Target 4:

To complete:

at least 95 per cent. of emergency repairs within 24 hours of notification;

at least 90 per cent. of urgent repairs within 5 working days of notification; at least 90 per cent. of routine repairs within 2 months of notification.

The fifth and final key target will measure the efficiency and cost effectiveness of the Defence Housing Executive, including the aim to reduce the number of empty properties to achieve a management margin of 13 per cent. by April 2002.

Key Target 5:

To achieve a unit cost of housing of less than £5,400.

Copies of the Defence Housing Executive Framework Document and 1999 Corporate Plan will be placed in the Library of the House.

Lobbyists

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list, including names and dates, of all meetings that (a) he, (b) his officials, (c) his advisers and (d) his PPS have held during (i) 1997, (ii) 1998 and (iii) 1999 with people who work for political lobbying firms or for businesses that are members of the Public Relations Consultants Association. [79652]

Mr. George Robertson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 9 March 1999, Official Report, column 168. The Ministerial Code also applies to Parliamentary Private Secretaries when attending any meetings in an official or semi-official capacity.

Wellington Barracks, Chelsea

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future development of Wellington Barracks, Chelsea. [79421]

Mr. Spellar: Initial planning is in hand for the possible refurbishment of Wellington Barracks in the London Borough of Westminster during the early years of the next decade.

TREASURY

Dividend Tax Credits

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a breakdown of the average amoun of tax credits reclaimed on dividends in 1995–96 and 1996–97 by each decile for (a) non-taxpayers aged over 65 years and (b) all non-tax paying individuals. [67471]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 25 January 1999]: Latest available estimates for 1995–96 and 1996–97, derived from the Survey of Personal Incomes, are given in the table.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will provide a breakdown of the number of (a) non-taxpayers aged over 65 years and (b) all non-taxpaying persons reclaiming tax credits on dividends in 1996–97 in the categories (i) under £20, (ii) £21 to £50, (iii) £51 to £100, (iv) £101 to £200 and (v) over £200 reclaimed; [67636]

(2) what estimate he has made of the average value of shares held by (a) non-taxpayers aged over 65 years and (b) all non-taxpaying individuals reclaiming tax credits in 1995–96 and 1996–97 in the categories (i) under £20, (ii) £21 to £50, (iii) £51 to £100, (iv) £100 to £200 and (v) over £200 reclaimed. [67473]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 25 January 1999]: Estimates of the numbers of people claiming payments of dividend tax credits, derived from the 1996–97 Survey of Personal Incomes, are given in the table, but share holdings or values are not known, so it is not possible to estimate the average value of shares held by these people.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many times ministers in his Department have met their counterparts in the US Government since 1 June 1998; and if he will list the dates and locations of each meeting, the ministers involved on each occasion, and the name of the US counterpart at each meeting. [77153]

Ms Hewitt: The Chancellor of the Exchequer met the US Treasury Secretary, Robert Rubin, on 2 October (Washington), 16 December (Washington), 29 January (Davos, Switzerland) and 20 February (Cologne).

Married Couples Allowance

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many couples with children, in the tax year 2000–01, will face a loss as a result of abolition of the married couples allowance in April 2000, broken down by type of housing tenure; and what the average loss will be. [76842]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 March 1999]: An approximate breakdown by housing tenure of the number of married couples who will no longer benefit from the married couple's allowance in 2000–01 and have children eligible for child benefit is shown in the table. These estimates are based on the Family Expenditure Survey.

Housing tenure	Number (Million)
Rented	0.6
Housing Association	0.1
Owned	4.1
Rent free	0.1
Total	4.9

Childless Couples

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what data his Department has collated on the number of individuals in childless married couples who pay income tax; and if he will breakdown that number by housing tenure. [77008]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 16 March 1999]: The Inland Revenue does not currently collect data on the number of taxpayers with or without children, but an approximate breakdown by housing tenure of the number of married couples who benefit from the married couple's allowance in 1998–99 and have no children eligible for child benefit is shown in the table. These estimates are based on the Family Expenditure Survey.

	Numbers (Million)
Rented	0.5
Housing association	0.1
Owned	5.1
Rent free	0.1
Total	5.8

Budget

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effect in (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01 of his budgets to date on the total tax burden in (i) cash terms and (ii) as a percentage of GDP. [78808]

Dawn Primarolo: Table B9 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report shows forecasts of taxes and social security contributions, net of tax credits, as a per cent. of GDP. Forecasts of taxes and social security contributions, net of tax credits, in cash terms are published in Table B10. Forecasts of money GDP are published in Table B4.

Mortgage Interest Tax Relief

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Government adopted the international national accounting convention which requires mortgage interest tax relief to be shown as public expenditure for budgetary purposes. [79059]

Mrs. Roche: National accounts are prepared in accordance with internationally agreed guidelines. The Office for National Statistics (ONS) decided to adopt the new European System of Accounts (ESA 95) as the standard for the National Accounts Blue Book published in September 1998. In national accounts prepared under ESA95, all payments of Mortgage Interest Relief are shown as part of Total Managed Expenditure (TME).

Budget Leaflets

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the cost of (a) preparing, (b) printing and (c) distributing the Budget 99 leaflet. [79398]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 23 March 1999, Official Report, columns 207–08.

Pensioners

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answers of 24 March 1999, Official Report, columns 255–56, if he will explain the reason for the fall in the number of pensioners from 10,700,000 in 1998–99 to 9,950,000 in 1999–2000. [79170]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 29 March 1999]: The figure of 10.7 million in 1998–99 covers all pensioners whereas the figure of 9.95 million for 1999–2000 excludes those paying income tax at a marginal rate of 20 per cent., as specified in the question.

Public Service Agreements

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Government intends to publish the remaining public service agreements and the measures which will be used to monitor their success. [80117]

Mr. Milburn: The Government are today publishing a White Paper (CM 4315) which is a supplement to "Public Services for the Future: Modernisation, Reform, Accountability" (CM 4181 published in December 1998). It includes PSAs for the Department of Social Security, Sure Start, the utility regulators (Offer/Ofgas, Oftel, and Ofwat), the Office of Fair Trading and the Charity Commission. PSAs for the Countryside Agency and the Northern Ireland Office will follow later in the year. I have today also published a booklet, "The Government's Measures of Success: Output Performance Analyses", which includes the measures the Government will be using to track progress against the PSA targets. Copies are available in the Vote Office.

Scottish Variable Rate

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will publish his assessment of the regulatory impact of the Scottish Variable Rate. [80118]

Mrs. Roche: Copies of the regulatory impact assessment have today been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Funding Policy

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will publish details of funding arrangements between the Government and the Scottish Parliament, the National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Assembly. [80119]

Mr. Milburn: I have today placed in the Library of both Houses of Parliament copies of a Statement of Funding Policy. This document fulfils the Government's commitment to make the financial arrangements with the Scottish Parliament, National Assembly for Wales and Northern Ireland Assembly a matter of public record.

Petroleum

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the proportion of the retail price of petroleum taken by tax in each member state of the European Union, the United States of America and Canada; [76571]

(2) if he will list the average retail price of petroleum in each OECD country, taking account of his Budget measures. [76570]

Mr. Battle: I have been asked to reply.

Unleaded petrol prices in mid-December 1998 and the percentage of taxes in the price are as follows:

	Average price (pence per litre)		Percentage of tax
	Total	Of which taxes
United Kingdom	63.9	53.5	83.7
Austria	54.7	38.2	69.9
Belgium	58.5	45.7	78.2
Denmark	56.3	43.0	76.4
Finland	61.0	50.3	82.5
France	62.7	52.1	83.1
Germany	55.4	42.8	77.3
Greece	41.1	28.3	68.8
Ireland	51.3	35.5	69.1
Italy	62.0	47.4	76.4
Luxembourg	42.6	28.9	67.9
Netherlands	64.3	49.9	77.6
Portugal	54.9	40.8	74.4
Spain	44.1	31.7	71.8
Sweden	58.5	44.7	76.4
Canada[1]	20.4	11.0	53.8
USA[1]	19.1	6.0	31.5

[1] Q4 1998

Note:

The Duty on UK premium unleaded petrol was increased by 3.22 p/litre in the Budget of 9 March 1999, taking the average price to around 66.4 p/litre, and the total tax component to 86 per cent.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Government Codes and Cypher School

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the following documents, relating to the Government Codes and Cypher School's work in the Second World War, will be released to the Public Record Office: (a) "The History of Hut 8" by A. S. Mahon, (b) "Turing's Treatise on the Enigma" and (c) "The German Navy's Use of Special Intelligence" by McMahon; if these documents have been made available outside the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [75132]

Mr. Robin Cook: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 23 March 1999, Official Report, columns 142–43.

GCHQ

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessments have been made of the environmental and social impact of the remaining options for the development of GCHQ; and if he will publish them; [76376]

(2) when he expects to announce the location for the redevelopment of GCHQ; [76377]

(3) which sites are currently being considered for the redevelopment of GCHQ; [76374]

(4) what representations he has recently received regarding (a) retention of GCHQ at Benhall and (b) development of a site for GCHQ at Brockworth. [76375]

Mr. Robin Cook: Since October 1998 two sites have been under consideration for the redevelopment of GCHQ: GCHQ's existing Benhall site and a site at the Gloucester Business Park, Brockworth. I have received a number of representations in support of the Benhall site, including from the hon. Member.

I expect to consider a recommendation from GCHQ shortly. That recommendation will take account of all relevant factors, including environmental and social considerations. When I announce my decision, I will set out the role which those factors played in it.

Former European Commissioners

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the payments due to be made by the European Commission to those Commissioners who recently resigned. [79156]

Ms Quin: Payments to outgoing Commissioners are governed by the provisions in Council Regulation 422/67/EEC. We have made clear our belief that payments should not be paid to any Commissioner found guilty of fraud or misconduct.

General Affairs Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the outcome of the General Affairs Council held in Brussels on 22 and 23 March; and if he will make a statement. [79095]

Ms Quin: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I represented the UK at the General Affairs Council in Brussels on 22 March 1999. Foreign Ministers met on Sunday 21 March in advance of the General Affairs Council to discuss Agenda 2000 and the future of the European Commission.

The Council adopted the A points listed in document 6859/99 and noted the resolutions, decisions and opinions adopted by the European Parliament in its sessions of 8–12 February and 24–25 February listed in documents 5793/99 and 5796/99. Copies of the documents listing the A points and resolutions will be placed in the House Libraries as soon as they become available.

The Council agreed as an "A" point that the Commission should start screening Maltese legislation as soon as possible for compatibility with the Union acquis, and that Malta will be invited to the next meeting of the European Conference, at Foreign Minister level under the Finnish Presidency. We welcome the Council's decision, which is in line with our support for Malta's accession to the EU.

Future of the European Commission

Ministers discussed options for appointing a new Commission in preparation for a decision at the Special European Council in Berlin on 24–25 March. The General Affairs Council issued a declaration on the resignation of the Commission.

Agenda 2000

Ministers also prepared for negotiations by Heads of State and Government in Berlin on the Agenda 2000 package. Ministers' discussion focused mainly on the future financing of the EU.

Statute of Members of the European Parliament

Ministers discussed progress in the negotiations on a Statute for MEPs. All Member States supported the need for early Council agreement, including tough action on allowances. The Council hopes to reach political agreement with the European Parliament before the June European Elections.

EU/South Africa

Ministers once again discussed a compromise package to conclude the long-running negotiations on a Trade and Co-operation Agreement with South Africa. Although differences narrowed to some extent, final agreement was not possible. The Council asked the Commission to continue contacts with member states with a view to reaching agreement at the Berlin Council.

EU/US Relations

The Council debated the trade disputes with the US on the EU's banana regime, the EU ban on hormones in beef and the proposed regulation on aircraft fitted with hushkits. On bananas, the Council reiterated its support for the Commission in seeking a resolution of the dispute which respects WTO rules. On hormones, the Council agreed that the Commission should continue to explore with the US and Canada options for reaching agreement on a temporary compensation package, as well as labelling. On hushkits, the Council encouraged the Commission to continue its discussions with the US with a view to finding possible solutions.

EU/Egypt

The Council discussed the ongoing negotiations with Egypt for an Association Agreement. The Council concluded that the Commission should continue negotiations and report back to a future Council.

Western Balkans

Ministers discussed the deteriorating situation in Kosovo, and in particular the latest offensive by the FRY security forces. The Council urged the FRY authorities in the strongest terms to stop the violence immediately, recalled the warning of severest consequences for the FRY from the international community if they did not comply, and expressed its support for the international community's determination to take the necessary action to avoid a humanitarian catastrophe. The Council also urged the KLA to refrain from acts of violence. It condemned the killing of civilians on both sides. The EU urged President Milosevic to reverse his course of obstruction, to seize the last chance for a peaceful solution and to accept the fair and balanced outcome represented by the Rambouillet Accords.

Middle East Peace Process

Ministers discussed the MEPP and the implications of a possible unilateral declaration of statehood by the Palestinians on 4 May 1999 (the expiry of the five year transitional period established under the Oslo Accords). This was the first Ministerial level discussion of the 4 May issue. It was agreed that discussion should continue at a later date.

Human Rights/China

The Council decided that the EU would not change its position on China at this year's UN Commission on Human Rights (UNCHR). The EU would continue to express publicly its growing concerns about human rights in China at the UNCHR, as well as at bilateral and EU high-level meetings with China. It would remain in close contact with its main partners in pursuit of the common objective of achieving concrete improvements in human rights in China, and keep its policy under regular review in the light of developments there.

ASEM Foreign Ministers' Meeting

The Presidency briefed partners on preparations for the Asia-Europe Foreign Ministers' Meeting to be held in Berlin on 29 March.

EU/ASEAN Foreign Ministers' Meeting

The Presidency informed partners that the EU/ASEAN Foreign Ministers' Meeting (planned for 30 March in Berlin) would not now go ahead.

Common Strategy on Russia

The Council discussed preparation of the first of the EU's common strategies, designed to strengthen the EU's relationship with Russia and to increase coherence of work on Russia across the Pillars. Ministers welcomed progress so far and called for the Common Strategy to be ready for the Cologne European Council in June.

Western European Union

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals have been made by the presidency of the European Union at (a) the General Affairs Council and (b) other ministerial councils concerning the development of the role of the Western European Union; on what date he expects the Treaty of Amsterdam to take effect; and if he will place related European Union and Western European Union documents in the Library. [78998]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Presidency of the European Union have made no formal proposals considering the development of the role of the Western European Union at the General Affairs Council or any other ministerial councils.

The Treaty of Amsterdam will enter into force once the last remaining countries, France and Greece, have deposited their instruments of ratification with the Italian Government. They are expected to do so shortly. If they do so before 15 April 1999, the Treaty will enter into force on 1 May 1999.

Foreign Ministers Conference

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the agenda for the Euro-Med Foreign Ministers Conference on 15 to 16 April. [79576]

Ms Quin: The draft agenda is as follows:

Wednesday 15 April

Official Opening Session

Working Session 1

1.1 Contribution of the EuroMed Partnership to constructive developments in the Mediterranean Region

1.2 Political and Security Partnership

Friday 16 April

Working Session 2

2.1 EU Financial Assistance to MED Partners

2.2 Economic and Financial Partnership

2.3 Partnership in Social, Cultural and Human Affairs

Closing Session.

Mr. Clive Allison

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 1 February 1999, Official Report, column 431, what discussions with French Ministers and officials (i) have taken place and (ii) are scheduled to take place concerning (a) the death of Mr. Clive Allison in May 1998 and the degree of co-operation with the British coroner in that case and (b) the degree of co-operation of French officials with British coroners. [79525]

Mr. Fatchett: On 30 November, Baroness Symons, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, met senior French officials of the Ministry of Interior to discuss the handling of deaths of British Nationals and to press for more vigorous investigations by the French authorities.

We have had no discussions with French Ministers specifically concerning the death of Clive Allison in France. Nor have Ministers discussed the degree of co-operation with British coroners in this case. No Ministerial discussions are scheduled to take place on either topic.

The Consular Division of the FCO forwarded HM Coroners's letter requesting a police report into Mr. Allison's death to the French authorities in June 1998. The French authorities issued a report which was passed to HM Coroner on 4 September. In a letter dated 5 October, HM Coroner requested more information regarding Mr. Allison's death. His request was translated and forwarded to the French authorities on 6 November. Our Consulate in Lyon continues to press for a response.

French officials have no direct contact with British Coroners. Requests from HM Coroner for reports into the death of a British national in France are directed to the French authorities through the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. Co-operation is good; the French authorities have to comply with their own formalities. Requests for supplementary information may take longer for the French to process.

Cornish

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if a Department has been identified to co-ordinate policy on the Cornish language. [79890]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: It has now been agreed that the Department for Environment, Transport and the Regions, through the Government office for the south-west, should co-ordinate Government policy on the Cornish Language. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office will retain overall responsibility for the Council of Europe's Charter for Regional or Minority Languages.

GJW

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which officials in his Department had discussions with GJW, on how many occasions and on what dates concerning the wish by Cape plc to amend the Access to Justice Bill [Lords] to ban foreign workers of British companies obtaining legal aid; and if the statement by his Department's officials that the decision to pursue the case in the UK courts would be seen as a lack of faith in the South African legal system was made with the knowledge of Ministers. [78745]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: No discussions have been held between the FCO and GJW on possible amendments to the Access to Justice Bill.

Telephone calls were received from an unidentified caller who asked about the case, but no opinion of the kind referred to by my hon. Friend was expressed by FCO officials.

This is not a foreign policy issue. It is a matter for the Lord Chancellor's Department. Inquiries on this issue have been referred to them.

Council of Europe (Membership)

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries within the former Soviet Union are eligible in principle to be admitted to the Council of Europe by virtue of their geographical position. [79199]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Countries within the former Soviet Union eligible in principle to be admitted to the Council of Europe are:

Armenia

Azerbaijan

Belarus, and Georgia.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries formerly within the Soviet Union have applied for admission to the Council of Europe. [79198]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Countries formerly within the Soviet Union which applied for membership of the Council of Europe and which are now members are: Moldova, Russia and Ukraine. Countries formerly within the Soviet Union which have applied but have yet to become members of the Council of Europe are Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus and Georgia. Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania are also now members of the Council of Europe.

Gibraltar

Mr. Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 22 March 1999, Official Report, column 58, if he will make a statement on the measures which the Government of Gibraltar and the Gibraltar Financial Services Commission need to have in place before Her Majesty's Government will be in a position to approve the passporting by Gibraltar-based credit institutions of banking services into the United Kingdom and elsewhere in the European Union. [79442]

Ms Quin: The remaining measure which the Government of Gibraltar need to have in place before Her Majesty's Government will be in a position to approve passporting of banking services by the Gibraltar-based credit institutions is the establishment of a Deposit Guarantee Scheme. We understand that the necessary legislation has been passed by the Gibraltar House of Assembly and will enter into force shortly.

In addition, Her Majesty's Government will need to amend the Banking Act 1987 before Gibraltar-based credit institutions will be in a position to passport banking services into the United Kingdom.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the establishment of staff at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate offices at Croydon by civil service grade; and how many vacancies at each grade currently exist. [78797]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The following lists staff by grade employed at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate offices in Croydon:

Grade	Number
Senior Civil Service Grades	13
Grade 6	5
Grade 7	43
Senior Executive Officer	50

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average number of members of the public who attended the Immigration and Nationality Directorate offices in Croydon per day in the last 12 months; and what is the average number of such persons interviewed by officials. [79298]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The average number of callers who attended the Immigration and Nationality Directorate offices per day during the 12 month period from March 1998 to February 1999 was:

Public Caller Unit (PCU): 673

Asylum Screening Unit: 362.

With the exception of the four days in March 1999 when the doors were closed early in the PCU as the result of a temporary problem, all callers to the PCU during this period were assisted by officials.

Immigration and Asylum Bill

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those organisations which have made representations to his Department since the publication of the Immigration and Asylum Bill. [78796]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The Government proposed that the Bill should be considered by a Special Standing Committee. The representations submitted by organisations in response to the Committee's request for evidence will be published in the Official Report.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applications have been determined finally in the last five years; and how many were (a) allowed and (b) refused. [79296]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I regret that the information requested in not available.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applications have been made in each of the last 12 months by (a) persons already in the UK and (b) persons arriving at ports of entry. [79297]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The requested information is given in the table.

Applications received for asylum in the United Kingdom, excluding dependants, by location of application

	Total applications	Applied at port	Applied in country
March 1998	3,200	1,555	1,640
April 1998	3,135	1,500	1,635
May 1998	3,110	1,465	1,645
June 1998	3,575	1,790	1,785
July 1998	4,215	1,940	2,275

Figures rounded to the nearest 5

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will estimate the annual cost to (a) central Government and (b) local authorities of providing financial support to persons whose rights of appeal under immigration and asylum law have been exhausted; [79306]

(2) how many persons whose rights of appeal under immigration and asylum law have been exhausted are receiving (a) NHS treatment, (b) state financial benefits, (c) local authority housing and (d) state education. [79304]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the monetary cost in the past three years for which figures are available to (a) central Government and (b) local government of support for asylum seekers. [79305]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Asylum support costs are currently divided between the Department of Social Security and the Department of Health. In 1996–97, asylum support cost £407.7 million, of which £395 million was borne by the Department of Social Security. In 1997–98, asylum support cost £375 million, of which £305 million was borne by the Department of Social Security. Department of Health costs for 1998–99 are estimated at £190 million. Comparable costs for the Department of Social Security for 1998–99 are not yet available.

The Department of Health has responsibility for three types of grant to local authorities for asylum seeker support. These are for asylum seekers who are supported under the National Assistance Act 1948, asylum seekers with families supported under the Children Act 1948 and unaccompanied children. As local authority expenditure above a set threshold is subject to only partial reimbursement, the full costs of asylum seeker support to local government are not known.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he proposes to take (a) to discover the whereabouts of and (b) to deport those who have lost all their appeals under immigration and asylum law and who remain unlawfully in the UK. [79292]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Immigration Service has established procedures to discover the whereabouts of those persons who remain unlawfully in the United Kingdom, based upon the use of intelligence, the work of a dedicated absconder tracing team and liaison with other agencies such as the Department of Social Security and police. Details of absconders are also entered on the Police National Computer.

The Immigration and Asylum Bill currently before Parliament contains a range of measures to strengthen enforcement of the immigration laws. Among proposed changes that will assist immigration officers in this respect are increased powers of arrest, and new powers to search for and seize evidence. We also intend extending the present powers to fingerprint inadequately documented passengers and immigration offenders.

The Bill also provides for a new combined appeal process to prevent those at the end of the process from making further appeals in an attempt to frustrate removal, and a simplified administrative procedure to replace deportation in routine cases.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the number of people who have lost all their appeals under immigration and asylum law and remain unlawfully in the UK. [79289]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information requested is not available in the form requested.

The available information relates to the number of failed asylum seekers, excluding dependants, who have exhausted their rights of appeal (including any who did not submit an appeal against the refusal of asylum) and who are the subject of port or enforcement action. As at November 1998, that figure was estimated to be 24,000.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the number of asylum applicants currently in the UK with whom the authorities have lost contact. [79294]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: As at November 1998, the number of known asylum absconders—those who have applied for asylum at some stage—was 20,000. This covers persons subject to port or enforcement action who have breached conditions of temporary admission, temporary release or restriction order, or are otherwise known to be out of contact with the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND). Some persons recorded as absconders may have departed from the United Kingdom without the knowledge of IND. Information is not available on the numbers of in-country asylum seekers who have not had enforcement action initiated against them but who are out of contact with IND.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department takes to renew contact with asylum applicants with whom contact has been lost. [79293]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It is the responsibility of the asylum applicant to remain in contact with the Home Office. Failure to do so will result in refusal of the asylum claim for non compliance and consequent action to enforce departure, subject to any appeal.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were deported from the UK in each of the last five years following final refusal of asylum applications. [79295]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The available information, relating to removals and voluntary departures under port and enforcement procedures of persons who have applied for asylum at some stage, is given in the table. Failed asylum seekers are only removed once all their rights of appeal in the United Kingdom have been exhausted. It should be noted that the figures may include some persons who withdrew their asylum application or appeal before a decision or determination had been reached.

Removals and voluntary departures of asylum applicants, excluding dependants, 1994 to 1998[1]

Number of persons

	Removed	Departed voluntarily
1994	1,640	580
1995	2,270	900
1996	3,680	1,140
1997	5,340	1,790
1998[2]	5,020	1,770

[1] 1998 removed and departed voluntarily figures are estimated
[2] 1998 data are provisional

Note:
All figures are rounded to the nearest 10

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the annual cost of enforcement action against failed asylum applicants by (a) the immigration service and (b) the police service in each of the last five years. [78659]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 29 March 1999]: This information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Racial Discrimination

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans the Government have to secure agreement for a European Union directive to require member states to take action to eliminate racial discrimination. [79011]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government welcome the new provisions in Article 13 of the Amsterdam Treaty, which will provide a legal base for taking Community action against racism and other forms of discrimination. The Government plan to continue to play a full and positive part in the development of Community action to tackle racial discrimination once the Treaty comes into force.

Money Forgery

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the nature of the outstanding issue relating to the term forgery of money and means of payment to be re-examined by COREPER, pursuant to the EU Justice and Home Affairs Council of 12 March. [79491]

Kate Hoey: The issue relates to a request from one member state for this form of crime to be legally defined before the Justice and Home Affairs Council agrees to extend Europol's mandate. The request is in line with Article 43(3) of the Europol Convention.

Prison Service

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on continued agency status for the Prison Service; if a revised Framework Document has now been finalised; when he intends to publish the Prison Service's Corporate and Business plans; and what changes he has made to the Prison Service's Key Indicators for 1990–2000. [80077]

Mr. Straw: I announced in my reply to my hon. Friend for Northampton, North (Ms Keeble) on 1 February 1999, Official Report, columns 430–31, that the Prison Service will remain an agency of the Home Office.

The new Framework Document is now complete and I am today placing copies of it in the Library. The Framework Document governs the relationship between the Prison Service and the core Home Office, setting out the roles of the principal players and bodies including the Prison Service Strategy Board to be chaired by my noble Friend, Lord Williams, the Minister with responsibility for prisons and probation, within a framework of responsibilities and accountabilities. The document reflects the Government's commitment to take proper ministerial responsibility for the service and the role of the Prison Service as a major component of the wider criminal justice system. It includes material about the planning framework and the Key Performance Indicators (KPIs).

The Prison Service's Corporate Plan for 1999–2000 to 2001–02 and Business Plan for 1999–2000 is published today. A copy has been placed in the Library.

The Prison Service's KPIs are kept under review regularly to ensure that they reflect current key priorities for the Service. For 1999–2000, the Prison Service will introduce new performance measures arising from the Home Office Public Service Agreement. I have approved new measures for escapes from contracted-out escorts, staff sickness, cost per prisoner and the time taken to respond to correspondence.

The KPI on overcrowding will be changed to measure the percentage of the prison population held two to a cell designed for one. This will better reflect the impact of overcrowding on individual prisoners.

Two existing measures will be discontinued next year: time out of cell and staff training. With the emphasis now being given to regimes designed to reduce re-offending, and the gradual introduction of in-cell TV, it is becoming more important to measure what prisoners do when out of their cells than the length of time they are unlocked. Staff training will remain important. A primary focus for the Service in 1999–2000 is to gain Investors in People accreditation which requires evidence of properly targeted training and development for all staff.

The full list of KPI measures, and specific targets for 1999–2000 are:

Escapes:

To ensure no category A prisoners escape.

To ensure that the number of escapes from prisons, and escorts undertaken by Prison Service staff, expressed as a proportion of the prison population, is lower than 0.05 per cent.

To ensure that the number of escapes from contracted-out escorts is no more than 1 per 20,000 prisoners handled.

Assaults:

To ensure that the number of positive adjudications of assault on staff, prisoners, and others, expressed as a proportion of the average population, is lower than 9 per cent.

Drugs:

To ensure that the rate of positive results from random drug tests is lower than 18.5 per cent.

Overcrowding:

To ensure that the number of prisoners held two to a cell designed for one, expressed as a percentage of the population, does not exceed 18 per cent.

Purposeful activity:

To ensure that prisoners spend on average at least 24 hours per week engaged in purposeful activity.

Offending behaviour programmes:

To ensure that there are at least 3,600 completions by prisoners of offending behaviour programmes accredited as being effective in reducing re-offending, of which 700 should be completions of sex offender treatment programmes.

Cost per place:

To ensure that the average cost per uncrowded prison place does not exceed £26,208.

Cost per prisoner:

To ensure that the average cost per prisoner does not exceed £27,392.

Staff sickness:

To ensure that average staff sickness does not exceed 12.5 working days per person.

Correspondence handling:

To ensure that 95 per cent. of correspondence receives a reply within 20 days by October 1999.

The target for staff sickness is provisional and will be reviewed later in the year following an independent audit of data quality.

Prisons Ombudsman

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the changes to the terms of reference of the Prisons Ombudsman. [80078]

Mr. Straw: Following an internal Home Office review last November (a copy of which is in the Library), I have decided to revise and extend the terms of reference of the Prisons Ombudsman. The revised terms of reference, which have been agreed with the Ombudsman, will come into effect from 1 May. They will allow the Ombudsman a wider role in considering complaints made by prisoners, by additionally including investigation of official advice upon which Ministers' decisions are made. A full copy of the Prisons Ombudsman's revised terms has been placed in the Library.

Departmental Mileage Rates

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the mileage rates applicable from January 1999 to staff, indicating changes which have been made to encourage staff to switch from cars to public transport and other less polluting forms of travel. [79441]

Mr. Straw: The Mileage Allowance Rates applicable from January 1999 are as follows:

	Engine capacity/p per mile
Home Office (excluding Prison Service)
Motor Vehicle Rates:
Public Transport Rate	23.8p per mile

The Home Office is committed to reducing the impact that its business travel has on the environment. Before undertaking any business travel, staff and their line managers consider whether the visit/attendance at a meeting is really necessary, whether the objectives of the meeting could be met through correspondence, e-mail, fax or telephone and whether Video-conferencing facilities could be used. If it is considered necessary, staff must use public transport unless there are operational grounds for using private vehicles/hire cars, for example, carrying heavy equipment, or if the route is poorly served by public transport.There are currently two rates of mileage allowance—Standard Rate and Public Transport Rate. The Home Office operates a strict policy when considering the payment of allowances to officers who use their private vehicles for business travel, including prior authorisation from line managers when Standard Rate Mileage Allowance is claimed. This ensures that private vehicles are only used when absolutely necessary.

Whilst those areas which have higher than average business travel have been targeted since January 1999 in an effort to promote the switch to public transport, it is also proposed to pursue the option of a single rate of Standard Rate Motor Mileage Allowance in the new financial year. If adopted, this should encourage the use of smaller cars and further encourage the use of public transport through a reduced rate of Motor Mileage Allowance for larger engine cars. The Home Office also has allowances for the use of motorcycles and pedal cycles for official travel and increases to the rates will also be sought in the new financial year.

Millennium Celebrations

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to issue guidance on the operation of the licensing laws and late night extensions for millennium celebrations on 31 December 1999 and 1 January 2000; and if he will make a statement. [79550]

Mr. George Howarth: We will announce shortly the outcome of the consultation on proposals for extending permitted hours on the Millennium Eve and subsequent New Year's Eves.

Election Candidates

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the decision by some returning officers not to allow candidates to describe themselves as Labour and Co-operative Party on the ballot paper. [79336]

Mr. George Howarth: My Department has issued advice to returning officers suggesting that a candidate who wishes to use a description on the ballot paper which might lead voters to associate him or her with more than one political party should be able to do so as long as the description is authorised by certificates issued by, or on behalf, of the nominating officers of both parties.

Departmental Capital Investment

Siobhain McDonagh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his Department's strategy for managing capital investment and assets by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [79517]

Mr. Straw: In line with the requirements outlined in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report, the Home Office now has a comprehensive strategy for capital investment and asset management.

The strategy covers both the Home Office's approach to future capital investment and the efficient use of existing assets. The strategy provides a framework for longer term plans to be built upon. It is the first such investment strategy for the Home Office. The Department intends to publish an updated strategy each year.

A copy of the strategy has been placed in the Library and on the Home Office website. Additional copies are available from the Home Office Press Office. The published document include the Capital Investment Strategy of the Charity Commission, which has also been placed in the Library.

Passports

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what security checks on passport applications were waived at the (a) Liverpool and (b) Newport offices; and for what period. [79372]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Security checks have never been waived in the Liverpool and Newport passport offices. The question appears to be directed at recent media reports of a suspension of security checks by the Passport Agency. Managers have allowed staff to exercise wider discretion on issuing passports if they had no significant doubt about the identity of the applicant.

These instructions were withdrawn but they did not imply any suspension or relaxation in the Agency's proper security checks on passport applications.

A range of automatic and discretionary checks are undertaken at different stages of the passport issuing process to prevent and detect fraud. Additional automatic security checks are undertaken under the new issuing system operating in our Liverpool and Newport offices which also require examiners to adopt a more systematic approach to confirming an applicant's eligibility for passport facilities.

The Agency is now doing more security checking than it has ever done.

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the roll-out of the new IT systems for the passport offices is currently expected to take place. [79370]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The new high technology driven passport issuing arrangements have already been introduced into the Liverpool and Newport passport offices. The Passport Agency's present plans are for the roll-out of these new arrangements to commence in the Belfast passport office on 30 July, in the Peterborough office on 10 September, in the Glasgow office on 17 September and in the London office in early January 2000.

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average turnaround for passport applications at (a) Liverpool, (b) Newport and (c) all other offices. [79369]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Passport Agency does not measure its turnround time by averages, but by the maximum turnround time. The current position in working days on maximum turnrounds for non-urgent passport applications is shown:

Office	Number
Belfast	16
Glasgow	16
Liverpool	27
London	6
Newport	34
Peterborough	13

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff were employed at (a) Liverpool and (b) Newport passport offices (i) at the latest available date and (ii) one year previously. [79373]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The number of staff employed in the Liverpool and Newport Passport Offices at the end of February 1999 and February 1998 broken down into permanent and seasonal staff is shown in the table:

	Liverpool		Newport
	February 1998	February 1999	February 1998	February 1999
Permanent Full time	189.5	192.5	192	167
Permanent Part Year	86	77.5	30	65
Fixed Term Contracts	3		62	58
Casuals	174	25	161	17
Total	452.5	295	445	307

During this 12 month period, around 100 Liverpool staff and 94 Newport staff transferred to Siemens Business Services as part of the outsourcing project.

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many passports were being processed at the (a) Liverpool and (b) Newport offices in the latest month for which figures are available; what is the target for the rate of processing; and when that target was originally expected to be reached. [79371]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: In February 1999, the Liverpool and Newport passport offices processed 72,702 and 74,547 passports respectively. The monthly target for each office is 120,000 issues. That target was originally expected to be achieved by the end of 1998.

Senator Pinochet

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the cost of court proceedings to date in connection with the extradition of Senator Pinochet; and if he will make a statement. [79092]

The Attorney-General: I have been asked to reply.

There have been proceedings in Bow Street Magistrates Court, the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court and the House of Lords. These hearings have involved work by lawyers and officials in the Crown Prosecution Service, the Home Office and the Treasury Solicitor's Department as well as counsel instructed for the Spanish Authorities, the Home Office, Senator Pinochet, Amnesty International and the Amicus Curiae.

It is not possible at this stage to provide a detailed estimate of all the cost of court proceedings. However, for costs incurred by the Home Office I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by the Secretary of State for the Home Department to the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs. Gillan) on 9 February 1999, Official Report, column 143. Additionally, costs incurred by the Treasury Solicitor's Department in respect of counsel instructed as amicus curiae total approximately £14,000.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Task Forces

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list for all task forces and policy reviews with external members established by his Department since May 1997 (a) their dates of establishment, (b) those which have issued final reports and their dates of publication, (c) those which have been terminated and their dates of termination and (d) for those bodies still in existence, expected reporting and termination dates. [79271]

The Attorney-General: On 12 June 1997 I established the review of the Crown Prosecution Service under the chairmanship of the right hon. Sir Iain Glidewell, a retired Lord Justice of Appeal. He was assisted by Sir Geoffrey Dear (a retired HM Inspector of Constabulary) and Mr. Robert McFarland (a retired Chief Executive of a multinational company). Their Report was published on 1 June 1998.

In February 1998 I established a Working Party to review the system of appointing Counsel to act for the Crown in civil cases and to monitor the use of advocates appointed to act. The Working Party was chaired by the then Solicitor-General (Lord Falconer QC) and included representatives from the Bar Council (Laura Cox and Lincoln Crawford) and the two First Treasury Counsel.

I announced I had accepted their recommendations in a written answer on 30 July 1998, Official Report, column 407. A copy of the Working Party's report has been placed in the Library of each House.

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list all those task forces and policy reviews with external members established by his Department since May 1997 which have set up (a) sub-groups, (b) working parties and (c) other subsidiary committees. [79249]

The Attorney-General: On 12 June 1997 I established the review of the Crown Prosecution Service under the chairmanship of the right hon. Sir Iain Glidewell, a retired Lord Justice of Appeal. In February 1998 I established a Working Party to review the system of appointing Counsel to act for the Crown in civil cases and to monitor the use of advocates appointed to act. Neither of these set up sub groups, working parties or subsidiary committees.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. McCabe: To ask the Attorney-General what assessment he has made of the impact of reforms to the Crown Prosecution Service on the performance of the service, with particular reference to (a) the working relationship between the Police and the CPS and (b) the proportion of successful prosecutions. [79383]

The Attorney-General: Reforms to the CPS following the Glidewell Report are still being implemented. Under its new DPP and Chief Executive, the CPS is making good progress, but key recommendations such as those concerning the relationship between the Police and CPS remain under consideration at this stage. I hope to be able to make a further announcement soon.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Employees

Mr. Vaz: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, if he will provide a breakdown by ethnicity and grade of employees of the House of Commons Commission. [79053]

Mr. Kirkwood: Employees of the House of Commons Commission are asked to supply information about their ethnic origin on a voluntary basis. Not all choose to reply, so our database is incomplete.

The ethnic origins of those staff who have chosen to supply information are set out in the table. In order to preserve confidentiality, we have grouped together some categories which would otherwise have contained fewer than five people.

CABINET OFFICE

Commissioner for Public Appointments

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office which ministerial appointments remain (a) outside the scope of the Nolan rules and (b) the jurisdiction of the Commissioner for Public Appointments. [79247]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The First Nolan Report set out a draft Code of Practice for public appointments procedures and recommended the establishment of an independent Commissioner for Public Appointments. The Commissioner's current Code of Practice reflects the Nolan rules. Ministers make appointments to a wide range of bodies, for example the judiciary, tribunals, boards of visitors and time-limited bodies, which are outside the remit of the Commissioner. The Commissioner's remit covers ministerial appointments to advisory and executive non-departmental public bodies, NHS bodies, the utility regulators, and the boards of public corporations and nationalised industries.

Marsham Street Offices

Mr. Gray: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when the Government offices in Marsham Street will be demolished. [79493]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated under the terms of the Framework Document to the Property Advisers to the Civil Estate. I have asked its Chief Executive, Mr. John Locke, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John C. Locke to Mr. James Gray, dated April 1999:

The Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office, Peter Kilfoyle, has asked me as Chief Executive of Property Advisers to the Civil Estate (PACE) to respond to your Parliamentary Question about the demolition of 2 Marsham Street.

2 Marsham Street is being considered by a major Government Department as temporary decant space in a PFI scheme whilst its premises are being refurbished. The current position is that the decision on the re-use of the building has been delayed because the assessment of the PFI bids which will form the basis of Departmental funding for the programme of works is taking longer than expected. Current thinking is that the evaluation will be completed by September 1999, but re-use is integral to all the bids being considered.

If re-use of 2 Marsham Street cannot be justified in Exchequer terms then the demolition process will be restarted and PACE will seek Ministerial approval to place the contract for demolition. The work is expected to take some 18 months following the letting of a contract.

Drug Misuse

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what assessment he has made of the overall equality in provision of drug misuse education and treatment across the United Kingdom since the publication of the Government's strategy document, "Tackling Drugs to Build a Better Britain". [79332]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: None. The UK Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator will report shortly on his assessment of provision of drugs education and treatment in England, based on the information in the local plans of Drug Action Teams which he received at the beginning of the year. It is for the Secretaries of State for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland respectively to provide support for drugs education and treatment appropriate to their needs.

UK Anti-drugs Co-ordinator

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office (1) when he intends to publish the United Kingdom Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator's first annual report and national plan; [79334]

(2) what criteria he will use to assess the effectiveness of Her Majesty's Government's anti-drugs misuse strategy since the appointment of the Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator. [79335]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: Progress towards key performance targets will be carefully monitored over the 10 years of the strategy. The targets relate to reducing young people's drug misuse and drug-related offending, increasing participation in drug treatment programmes and reducing access. Details of targets will be included in the UK Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator's first annual report and national plan due to be published shortly.

Special Advisers

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office, pursuant to his answer of 16 November 1998, Official Report, column 354, what was the average increase in the salaries of special advisers in 1998–99; and how many special advisers are in each pay band. [79857]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: There was no single annual pay award for 1998–99. Special Advisers' pay was restructured as set out in my answer of 16 November 1998. The increases varied depending on the individuals, the work they are now doing compared with previously, and the extent to which their jobs and responsibilities had been restructured. There was also an attempt to correct anomalies created by the previous arrangements, particularly as regards the lowest paid Special Advisers. Performance pay, which used to apply, was dropped.

The increases was staged giving an average in year increase of 5.9 per cent. This was achieved within the pay bill for the year of £3.6 million, which the Prime Minister announced on 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 664.

The table sets out the number of Special Advisers in each of the new pay bands.

Special Advisers in each pay band

	Pay Band A	Pay Band B	Pay Band C
	26,000–45,000	40,000–60,000	54,000–76,056
Total	30	21	15

The following three appointments are outside the Special Adviser pay range and therefore excluded from the above totals.

		Salary
Jonathan Powell	Prime Minister's Chief of Staff	91,014
Alastair Campbell	Prime Minister's Chief Press Secretary	91,014
Keith Hellawell	UK Anti Drugs Co-ordinator	106,057

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will list the total number of occasions when (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity since 2 May 1997. [76833]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: Between 2 May 1997 and 28 February 1999, my Special Advisers have made visits overseas on 14 occasions in an official capacity. All travel complied with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Asbestosis (Legal Aid)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what instructions were given to the head of the Better Government Unit to co-ordinate policy towards the wish of Cape plc to achieve changes in the Access to Government Bill [Lords] to prevent former workers suffering from asbestosis receiving legal aid; and on how many occasions he met representatives of G J W or Cape plc. [78744]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The report to which this question refers has no foundation in fact. No instructions were given, and the official named had no meetings or other contacts with the firms concerned.

Reviews and Task Forces

Mr. Soames: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many of the Government reviews and task forces announced since 1 May 1997 have concluded their work; and which have yet to report. [72899]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I am sorry for the delay in replying to the hon. Member.

Responsibility for the establishment and management of task forces and reviews rests with individual Ministers. Detailed information about Task Forces and Reviews is not held centrally.

I have today placed in the Libraries of the House a list of those established since 1 May 1997 which have yet to report, together with anticipated report dates.

Select Committee Documents

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will list the leaked Select Committee documents that reached (a) him, (b) his Ministers, (c) his officials, (d) his advisers and (e) departmental parliamentary private secretaries during (i) 1997, (ii) 1998 and (iii) 1999. [77928]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend's answer to the right hon. Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean) on 17 March 1999, Official Report, columns 709–10.

Departmental Staff (Ethnic Origin)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will provide a breakdown, in numerical and percentage terms, of the ethnic origin, at 1 March, of (a) his private office, (b) Government special advisers, (c) his Policy Unit and (d) staff in total. [78512]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Information about the ethnic origin of civil servants is collected in Government Departments through voluntary, confidential questionnaires.

(a) As at 1 March there were 7 staff of ethnic minority origin in the Department's Private Office. This represents 24 per cent. of staff in the Department's private office.

(b) My answer to the question asked by my hon. Friend the Member for Brent, East (Mr. Livingstone), 22 February 1999, Official Report, column 39, refers to this matter.

(c) I do not have a policy unit.

(d) Civil Service personnel statistics are collated and published annually for staff in post at 1 April by the Cabinet Office. Information for staff in total for 1 April 1998 is the latest available and is given in the table.

Advisory Committee Appointments

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office, pursuant to his answer of 17 March 1999, Official Report, column 710, for what reasons current information on appointments to Government advisory committees is not held centrally; and if he will make it his policy that such information be held centrally in future. [79504]

Mr. Kilfoyle: There are over 36,000 appointments to non-departmental public bodies including advisory committees. These are the responsibility of the relevant sponsoring Minister and department. Departments post information on current appointments every six months to the Public Appointments Unit Internet Directory at (http://www.open.gov.uk/pau/paupoint.htm).

Lobbyists

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will publish a list, including names and dates, of all meetings that (a) he, (b) his officials, (c) his advisers and (d) his PPS have held during (i) 1997, (ii) 1998 and (iii) 1999 with people who work for political lobbying firms or for businesses that are members of the Public Relations Consultants Association. [79654]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 9 March 1999, Official Report, column 168. Any meetings involving PPSs in an official or semi-official capacity are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Social Fund

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the Northern Ireland Social Fund discretionary budget will be for 1999–2000. [79992]

Mr. McFall: I am pleased to announce that the Social Fund gross discretionary budget for 1999–2000 will be £42.82 million. £9.86 million will be allocated to grants; £32.86 million to loans and £0.1 million will be held as a contingency reserve. The new allocations represent an increase of £2.27 million over the gross budget set at April 1998.

This increase in the Social Fund budget will ensure that more people receive help and that the Fund continues to play an important role in targeting resources to those most in need. Details of the individual District budget allocations, together with a note explaining the basis on which they have been made, have been placed in the Library today.

Violent Incidents

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if she will list for the week ended 20 March the number of violent incidents involving paramilitary groups which took place in Northern Ireland; and how many involved (i) Loyalist and (ii) Republican groups; [78928]

(2) if she will list for the week ended 20 March the number of (a) punishment beatings and (b) punishment shootings which took place in Northern Ireland; and how many in each category were committed by (i) Loyalist and (ii) Republican groups. [78929]

Mr. Ingram: The number of security incidents during the period 14 March-20 March 1999 are as shown:

Deaths—2

Shooting incidents—2

Bombing incidents—2.

The number of casualties as a result of paramilitary-style attacks during the period are as follows:

	Loyalist	Republican
Assaults	2	0
Total	2	0

Notes:
1. Figures may be subject to minor amendment.
2. The shooting and bombing incidents cannot as yet be attributed to a grouping.

Murders (Clear-up Rates)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information she has obtained on the clear-up rates for murders committed by Loyalists and Republicans since 1969. [79993]

Mr. Ingram: From 1969, to March 24 1999, there have been 882 murders attributed to Loyalist groups. Murder charges have been brought in relation to 421 of these, a clear up rate of 49.5 per cent.

With regard to Republican murders, out of 1,926 murders murder charges have been brought in relation to 515 cases, a clear up rate of 28 per cent.

PRIME MINISTER

Senior Salaries Review Body

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the latest reports and recommendations of the Review Body on Senior Salaries. [80172]

The Prime Minister: Two Reports from the Review Body on Senior Salaries are published today. One on the initial pay, allowances, pensions and severance arrangements for Members of the Scottish Parliament, the National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Assembly; and a second on the salaries for Ministers and Office-holders and office support for Members in those bodies, and on certain Parliamentary Development Recommendations outstanding from the Review Body's 1996 Review of Parliamentary pay and allowances. Copies are available in the Vote Office and the Libraries of the House. I am grateful to the Chairman and the Members of the Review Body for their work.

The main recommendations of the Review Body with regard to pay in the devolved institutions are:

Members' Salaries	£
Scottish Parliament	39,000
Northern Ireland Assembly	37,000
National Assembly for Wales	33,500

Salaries for Ministers and Office-holders (Paid in addition to a Member's salary)	£
Ministerial Salary for First Minister for Scotland, First Secretary for Wales, and First Minister for Northern Ireland	62,556
Ministerial Salary for Deputy First Minister in Northern Ireland	47,503
Salary for Ministerial duties in the Executive of the Scottish Parliament, National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Assembly	32,451
Office-holder Salary for Presiding Officer of the Scottish Parliament, the National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Assembly	32,451

The Government have decided that they will accept all of these recommendations with the exception of that for the Deputy First Minister in Northern Ireland. In view of the unique political situation in Northern Ireland and the joint responsibility which the Deputy First Minister is expected to exercise with the First Minister, the Government believe that there should be parity of salary between these two posts. Consequently, the salary for the Deputy First Minister will also be £62,556.

In accordance with the Review Body's recommendation on an annual pay review for the salaries in the devolved institutions, these figures will be uprated with effect from 1 April 1999 and annually thereafter by the same percentage as the average of the movements in the mid-points of the nine Senior Civil Service pay bands below Permanent Secretary. This is the same mechanism as is used for Westminster Parliamentary salaries.

On the recommendations on allowances which the Review Body makes in the two Reports, the Government has decided that they form a useful starting point for the development of comprehensive and tightly controlled allowance systems within the new institutions. As the Review Body itself acknowledges, it is not yet possible to know exactly what the allowances will need to cover and some of the recommendations themselves point to further work. The Government believe that further work needs to be done on the basis of the recommendations and that this is best done by the Scottish Parliament, the National Assembly for Wales and the Northern Ireland Assembly themselves. We would expect them to put in place as soon as possible an appropriate but closely controlled system, mindful of the need for a prudent approach and the need to justify to the taxpayer any significant divergence from the recommendations made by the Review Body.

In both of the Reports on the new devolved institutions the SSRB noted the difficulty of judging the correct level of pay and allowances when the institutions were not yet in operation. In both cases the SSRB recommended an early review, in 2001, which would be based on the evidence of two years of operation rather than on the current basis of the anticipation of roles and responsibilities. The Government recognise the difficulty expressed by the SSRB and fully accept the arguments for a review in 2001.

In relation to Ministers in the UK Government, the Review Body recommends that the salaries for Ministers below Cabinet level in the House of Lords and certain other Office holders in the House of Lords, including the Leader of the Opposition and the Opposition Chief Whip, should be increased as follows:

Junior Ministers and other Office Holders in the House of Lords

	Current salary	Salary after SSRB recommendation	Salary from 1 April 1999
Minister of State	53,264	61,764	64,426
Parliamentary Under Secretary	44,832	53,332	55,631
Government Chief Whip	53,264	61,764	64,426
Deputy Chief Whip	44,832	53,332	55,631
Government Whip	40,547	49,047	51,161
Leader of the Opposition	44,832	53,332	55,631
Opposition Chief Whip	40,547	49,047	51,161
Chairman of Committees	53,264	61,764	64,426
Principal Deputy Chairman	49,052	57,552	60,032

Increase in line with SSRB recommendation for these and other Ministerial and Parliamentary salaries

This recommendation reflects the Review Body's finding that, since the 1996 changes to the pay arrangements for Ministers in the Commons, the salaries of these posts in the Lords has fallen behind to an unreasonable extent. The proposed one-off increase of £8,500 is broadly equivalent to the amount by which the MP's salary paid to Ministers in the Commons was abated prior to the 1996 changes and so restores the relativity. The Government support the arguments put forward by the Review Body that such an increase for these posts is fair and reasonable. We shall be bringing forward a draft Order for consideration by each House to implement the recommended changes.

The Review Body also makes a series of recommendations relating to the central provision of IT equipment for Members' offices, both at Westminster and in their constituencies. The Government are not persuaded by the arguments put forward for enforced central provision of such equipment as this would remove Members' choice in determining what equipment they needed, and how much of the Office Costs Allowance they wish individually to spend on it. The Government agree, however, that there may be cost and other advantages in central bulk procurement of IT equipment for those Members who wish to pursue such an approach. We propose therefore to invite the Information Committee to explore this option further and report its views to the House.

Al Shifa

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place a copy of the letter from the former engineer of the Al Shifa factory in Khartoum dated 19 March to him and his reply in the Library. [78723]

The Prime Minister: I am aware that my hon. Friend raised this issue in the House on 24 March 1999, Official Report, columns 366–68, and read extracts from a letter from Mr. Carnaffin into the record of the House. I also note that the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett), agreed in that debate to meet Mr. Carnaffin to talk to him about the engineering involved in the factory. I am happy to place any exchange of correspondence with Mr. Carnaffin in the Library of the House.

Ministerial Code

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the compatibility of the answer by the Chancellor of the Exchequer of 19 March 1999, Official Report, column 857, with paragraphs 1(iii) to (iv) of the Ministerial Code. [78526]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 25 March 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the oral answer I gave to the hon. Member for Arundel and South Downs (Mr. Flight) today, Official Report, column 1080.

Berlin Summit

Mr. Hood: To ask the Prime Minister what was the outcome of the Berlin Summit held on 24 and 25 March; and if he will make a statement. [79496]

Mr. Jack: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions took place at the Berlin Council on new methods to counter fraud and mismanagement in the Community; and what new measures were agreed. [79775]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend and the right hon. Member to the statement I made to the House on 29 March 1999, Official Report, columns 731–47.

EU Budget

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the effect of the EU Summit Agreement in Berlin on the net UK contribution to the EU budget. [79572]

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the cost to the United Kingdom for each of the years from 1999–2000 to 2007–08 of the agreement on the United Kingdom's EU budget rebate reached at the Berlin summit on 25 March; and if he will make a statement. [79582]

Mr. Chope: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will express in (i) sterling and (ii) euros the level of the United Kingdom's (a) net contribution to the EU budget and (b) EU budget rebate against which he has calculated gains and losses in describing the outcome of the Berlin summit; [79561]

(2) if the United Kingdom will continue to be the second largest net contributor to the EU budget over the planning period on which the Berlin summit reached agreement. [79562]

The Prime Minister: I refer the right hon. and hon. Members to my statement to the House on 29 March 1999, Official Report, columns 732–47.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister what structural budget reforms in the European Union were achieved at the Berlin summit; and if he will make a statement. [79581]

The Prime Minister: Following agreement at the Berlin European Council on 26 March, it was agreed that for the Structural Funds the budget for 2000–06 will be 213 billion euro (1999 prices). This is an 11 per cent. reduction on the Commission's original proposal, and is in line with the UK's objective of stabilising the overall EU budget.

Kosovo

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment (a) NATO leaders and (b) Her Majesty's Government made at the time they announced that there would be no question of ground forces of NATO being used in Kosovo of the likelihood of retaliatory action by (i) Serb armed forces and (ii) Serb militia units against unprotected persons in Kosovo; and if he will make a statement. [79812]

The Prime Minister: From the beginning of the negotiations for a political settlement in Kosovo, we and our allies have been agreed that any such settlement would require the presence in Kosovo of a multi-national military force to oversee its implementation. This remains the position. NATO forces in Macedonia would deploy into Kosovo once a settlement has been concluded, and with the consent of the parties involved. We have all along made it clear that a force of the size and capability required to dictate and enforce a settlement would take a long time to assemble, and would not prevent Milosevic from carrying out his ethnic cleansing activities in the intervening period. The murderous actions of the Serb security forces against the Kosovar Albanian population began before NATO launched its air strikes. However, unless Milosevic complies with the demands of the international community, NATO airstrikes are the only way of stopping him.

Child Poverty

Mr. Jack: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 29 March 1999, Official Report, column 496, to the right hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field), if he will publish his definition of child poverty. [79811]

The Prime Minister: Child poverty is complex and can be defined in a number of ways. Below half average income is used by some as a proxy for those living in poverty, and using that proxy the last two budgets will lift 700,000 children out of poverty. But we are past the definition debate; we are tackling the causes of poverty. The most important priority is to understand and tackle the factors that damage the life opportunities of our children.

Lobbyists

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Prime Minister if he will publish a list, including names and dates, of all meetings that (a) he, (b) his officials, (c) his advisers and (d) his PPS have held during (i) 1997, (ii) 1998 and (iii) 1999 with people who work for political lobbying firms or for businesses that are members of the Public Relations Consultants Association. [79655]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 9 March 1999, Official Report, column 168. The requirements of the Ministerial Code also apply to Parliamentary Private Secretaries when attending any meetings in an official or semi-official capacity.

Articles (Foreign Media)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy to deposit in the Library those articles which he writes for publication in the foreign media. [79492]

The Prime Minister: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given to him by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett), on 10 March 1999, Official Report, column 232.

Ministerial Interests

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Prime Minister which Ministers have declared interests with (a) pharmaceutical and (b) biotechnology committees; and if he will indicate in the case of each such Minister the nature of the interest declared. [79503]

The Prime Minister: This information is not held centrally. Section 9 of the "Ministerial Code" makes it clear that it is for individual Ministers to order their affairs so that no conflict arises or is thought to arise between their private interests (financial or otherwise) and their public duties. They should normally make their own decisions on how best to proceed, consulting me only when there is any doubt. Ministers are also covered by the terms of one of the Registers of Members of Lords' Interests as appropriate.

World Trade Organisation

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister when he last discussed issues related to the World Trade Organisation with President Clinton. [78985]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 30 March 1999]: I am in regular contact with President Clinton on a range of matters. It is established practice under Section 1(c) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information not to disclose or discuss information received in confidence from foreign Governments.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what role he plays in co-ordinating Government policy on issues relating to the World Trade Organisation. [78987]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 30 March 1999]: All Government Ministers are collectively responsible for Government policy. Decisions are taken in a variety of ways depending on the subject. My role in World Trade Organisation issues is no exception to this general principle.

Biotechnology

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what steps he takes to ensure that members of his staff who are aware of donations to the Labour Party from biotechnology companies are not responsible for advising him on decisions on matters related to biotechnology issues. [78988]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 30 March 1999]: All advice is submitted to me in accordance with the requirements of the "Ministerial Code" and the "Civil Service Code".

WALES

Water Levels

8. Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will discuss with the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions proposals to change the statutory water levels currently in force for (a) the Clywedog and (b) other dams in Wales. [78066]

Mr. Michael: Reservoir levels in Wales are a matter for the Environment Agency and relevant water undertakers. The statutory water levels set for the Clywedog and other dams in Wales reflect the balance between the principal purpose of the management of water resources and the mitigation of flooding.

Cwm Bypass

9. Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the bypass road proposed for Cwm in Blaenau Gwent. [78067]

Mr. Hain: Although regrettably we were unable to include the Cwm bypass scheme in our priority list of projects to start in the next five years, we have allocated Blaenau Gwent Borough Council £200,000 in this coming year to enable preparation work on the scheme to continue.

Following the transfer of functions, any further bid for Transport Grant support will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Health Authorities and Trusts

10. Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the latest estimate of the current year deficits of the health authorities and health trusts in Wales; and what steps is he taking to ensure that they have adequate funds for 1999–2000. [78068]

Mr. Michael: Welsh health authorities and their trusts are currently forecasting an income and expenditure deficit of £21 million in 1998–99. Following the Comprehensive Spending Review, I announced an additional £1 billion for the NHS over the three years from 1999–2000. £175 million of this is for next year. I am able to add to this some £65 million from funds being carried forward from the current year and following careful consideration of previous spending plans. Of the £240 million thus available in 1999–2000, health authorities will receive a cash increase of £168 million, including £134 million for hospital and community health services. This is additional to £18 million waiting lists funding now being made recurrent.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Road Signs

11. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to standardise road signs in Wales. [78069]

Mr. Hain: Monolingual traffic signs for use on roads in the UK are prescribed in the Traffic Signs Regulations and General Directions 1994. In order to ensure that bilingual traffic signs are designed to the same national standards, the Department has produced a full set of drawings which have been issued to local authorities in Wales.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Community Health Councils

12. Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the outcome of the consultation on community health councils in Wales. [78070]

Mr. Michael: Responses to public consultation on "Involving the Public" confirmed the need to strengthen the role of Community Health Councils at all levels. The decisions I announced on 16 March were based on a careful consideration of the community interests to be represented in different parts of Wales, the local authority areas concerned and the need for an effective interface with NHS trusts and health authorities.

Increasing the number of CHCs to 28 based on nine "federations" will allow the Councils to retain and develop their local roots and at the same time exert more effective influence within the NHS. I will be meeting representatives of the CHCs shortly to discuss the implementation of the new arrangements.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Agenda 2000

13. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the impact of the Agenda 2000 proposals on farm incomes in Wales. [78071]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Welsh Office economists are working to estimate the likely impact of the CAP reform agreement on farm incomes. These estimates will be available shortly.

National Assembly Building

14. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the additional costs involved in moving from the temporary National Assembly building to the Assembly's permanent location. [78072]

Mr. Michael: The Explanatory and Financial Memorandum of the Government of Wales Bill stated that the estimated capital costs of establishing the National Assembly would be £17 million. The costs of the temporary accommodation in Crickhowell House and the construction of the new Assembly building were included in this estimate. It is too early to estimate the costs of transferring some functions of the Assembly from Crickhowell House into the new building.

A5/A55 (Compensation)

15. Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from landowners and tenants on compensation for the loss of land taken up by improvements to the A5/A55 on Anglesey. [78073]

Mr. Hain: The Welsh Office has received representations from landowners and occupiers affected by the road scheme as part of the negotiation process between their Agents and the Department's Agents on the appropriate level of compensation for the land taken for the road scheme.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Drugs Misuse

16. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to increase awareness of the dangers of drugs misuse in rural areas of Wales. [78074]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Drug misuse is prevalent in all areas of Wales. The current Welsh Drug and Alcohol Strategy, "Forward Together", addresses the needs of both rural and urban areas in Wales. Throughout Wales Drug and Alcohol Action Teams are responsible for tackling drug and alcohol misuse and for encouraging local agencies to develop activities and services appropriate to the local situation. In rural areas this has included, for example, a reconfiguration of service provision, enabling greater access for those in need.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Welsh Assembly Hotline

17. Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is (a) the total cost to date of, (b) the total number of calls received to date and (c) the estimated annual cost of the Welsh Assembly information hotline. [78075]

Mr. Michael: There has been no cost for dealing with the 550 calls made to the information line since it opened. The cost of managing the information line, line rental and sending out booklets to callers is £1,400. There will be no annual cost for the helpline which is supported by BT.

EU Structural Funds

18. Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on progress on obtaining EU structural funds for Wales. [78076]

Mr. Michael: I am pleased that the Council of Ministers meeting in Berlin last week agreed the Agenda 2000 proposals which include the regulations for the Structural Funds programmes for the Union from 2000–06. These programmes will include Objective 1 status for West Wales and the Valleys. Agreement of areas eligible for Objective 2 status is subject to further discussions with the UK according to the agreed regulations. The remaining areas of the Principality will secure Objective 3 support. The Berlin agreement is subject to ratification by the European Parliament.

20. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what sum has he earmarked from within the Welsh block for 1999–2000, for spending on projects associated with European structural funds; and what is the figure for the current financial year. [78078]

Mr. Michael: The information is set out in the following table:

	1998–99 plans	1999–2000 plans
European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund (EAGGF)	7,032	9,223
Financial Instrument Fisheries Guidance (FIFG)	254	50
European Regional Development Fund	36,046	9,046
Total	43,332	18,319

Figures are consistent with Welsh Office Departmental Report (Cm 4216) but provision available for FIFG for 1999–2000 has been increased to 964, to reflect current commitments and to assess new bids.

In addition £35.7 million which has been carried forward as a result of underspends in previous years is available to this programme.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the total sums received as a result of assisted area status for (i) the former area of Alyn and Deeside District Council, (ii) the former Clwyd County Council and (iii) the current Flintshire County Council since the status was conferred; and if he will make a statement. [78955]

Mr. Hain: The Assisted Area is designated for the purpose of allocating aid to industry. The beneficiaries of that aid are companies seeking financial assistance toward investment projects which will create or safeguard employment in that area. All, or parts, of these authorities have been included in the Assisted Area since 1972. In that time a wide range of assistance, including grant aid, has been provided to companies by the Welsh Office, the Department of Trade and Industry, the Welsh Development Agency, the Development Board for Rural Wales, the Wales Tourist Board, the Training and Enterprise Councils, local authorities and other business development organisations. Information on all of these is not held centrally.

Grants offered since 1984 under Regional Selective Assistance (the main form of regional aid in Wales), the revised Regional Development Grant and Regional Enterprise Grant were as follows:

£ million

	Former District of Alyn and Deeside	Former County of Clwyd	Flintshire
Regional Selective Assistance	40.2	129.2	12.9
Regional Enterprise Grants[2]	1.9	6.0	0.4
Regional Development Grants[3]	43.4[4]	119.4

[1] Information up to 31 March 1996
[2] Information since 1 April 1996
[3] Regional Enterprise Grant scheme began 1 April 1988
[4] Regional Development Grant scheme began 29 November 1984, closed 31 March 1988

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

CAP Reform

19. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has met representatives of the farming unions in Wales to discuss the impact of CAP reform on Welsh agriculture. [78077]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: My right hon. Friend and I have met with representatives of the farming unions in Wales on numerous occasions during the negotiations on the CAP reforms. The provisional agreement reached by the Agriculture Council represents a significant change in the direction of the CAP—a direction for which the UK Government has been strongly pressing.

The Welsh Office is currently assessing how the proposed reforms will affect farmers in Wales and we will be discussing this farther with the industry in due course.

Clinical Negligence

21. Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to identify and reduce the incidence of clinical negligence in the health service in Wales. [78079]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: I take the need to identify and reduce the incidence of clinical negligence very seriously. Work has been in hand for some time to achieve this aim. We have changed the funding basis of the Welsh Risk Pool so that those with bad claims records pay more. We have also implemented minimum risk standards for pool members, to identify and address potential problem areas. Failure to achieve these standards again means higher Pool contribution levels. Finally, in our consultation document, "Quality Care and Clinical Excellence" we focus on improving the quality of care, ensuring that clinical decisions are based on the most up-to-date evidence of what is known to be effective.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Welsh Economy

22. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the impact of the agreements reached at the Council of Ministers' meeting on the Welsh economy. [78080]

Mr. Michael: The Council of Ministers' meeting in Berlin reached agreement on the Agenda 2000 package of reform to the EU. This package includes the next wave of enlargement of the Union, reform of the Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) and the next round of Structural Funds programmes. The economy of west Wales and the Valleys will receive a major boost from the award of Objective 1 status which will bring around £1.2 billion in aid for economic and social development over seven years. Reforms to the CAP will help the agriculture sector in Wales increase competitiveness, enhance food safety and food quality and ensure a fair standard of living and stable farm incomes.

Employment (Non-Welsh Speakers)

23. Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received regarding employment opportunities for non-Welsh speakers. [78081]

Mr. Michael: I have personally received no such representations.

Since I took office, my officials have received one such representation. My Department has also dealt with one representation made to the Deputy Prime Minister, and is dealing with one made to the Prime Minister.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

National Assembly (Transport)

24. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what transport facilities will be provided to Ministers in the National Assembly. [78082]

Mr. Hain: It will be for the Assembly to determine what transport facilities if any it provides for its elected members.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Trade Relations

25. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he next plans to meet representatives of the CBI Wales to discuss trade relations with Europe. [78083]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend and I and my officials regularly meet with representatives of the CBI Wales to discuss a range of issues.

Arts Funding

26. Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the funding of the arts in Wales. [78084]

Mr. Michael: I am pleased that, as part of the Internal Review settlement, I was able to provide the Arts Council of Wales with the first increase in its budget for five years. Decisions on the grant aiding of individual projects are matters for the Council itself.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Employment (Parents)

27. Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the progress in introducing employment policies to encourage parents to take up employment opportunities in Wales. [78085]

Mr. Hain: Good progress is being made with a range of policies to help parents take up employment. The National Childcare Strategy in Wales will create many more childcare places and the Early Years Development and Childcare Partnerships and the New Opportunities Fund are now getting into their stride to deliver the strategy. The New Deal in Wales is proving very effective. Take-up of the New Deal for Lone Parents is increasing and already over 800 people have obtained jobs through this programme. The Government's Employment Relations Bill contains important new provisions for family-friendly employment practices and the Welsh Office will play a full part in promoting these practices among employers in Wales.

Following the transfer of functions, most aspects of this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Aerospace Industry

28. Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for developing the aerospace industry in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [78086]

Mr. Hain: Welsh Office officials are regularly in touch with the aerospace companies in Wales. My right hon. Friend and I take a keen interest in its future and have met some of the companies. Officials together with the WDA and the TECs are working with the South Wales Aerospace Group to develop effective solutions to the skills needs of the sector. A study of the Group's recruitment and training needs was completed in 1998, with Welsh Office support, and the results of this, together with the recommendations of the Future Skills Wales survey are being used as the basis for taking forward action to ensure that the aerospace industry has the skilled personnel it needs.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Welsh Assembly (Devolution of Powers)

29. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what (a) representations he has received on and (b) plans he has for further devolution of powers to the Welsh Assembly. [78087]

Mr. Michael: I and my department have received several thousand representations on all aspects of the Welsh devolution settlement. It would be possible to determine how many of those advocated a transfer of further functions only at disproportionate cost.

As to plans for the Assembly to gain further powers, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Arundel and South Downs (Mr. Flight) on 3 March 1999, Official Report, column 779–80.

National Minimum Wage

30. Sir Raymond Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the prospective impact of the national minimum wage on the Welsh economy. [78088]

Mr. Hain: The national minimum wage is a UK wide policy. No separate assessment of the impact on the Welsh economy has been made, however, latest research shows that 109,000 people in Wales will benefit from the national minimum wage.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the total number of occasions when (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity since 2 May 1997. [76820]

Mr. Michael: Between 2 May 1997 and 28 February 1999, special advisers made visits overseas on two occasions in an official capacity. All travel complied with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Primary Schools

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the primary schools he has visited in his Ministerial capacity in the last four months. [77460]

Mr. Michael: During the last four months I have visited Evenlode Primary School and Grangetown Infants School in the constituency of Cardiff, South and Penarth and Cornist Park County Primary School in the constituency of Delyn. I have also visited Croesyceiliog Comprehensive School, Cwmbran; Mold Alun School, Mold and Newport Duffryn Comprehensive School, Newport as well as Llandrillo College (Rhyl campus), Bridgend College and Coleg Glan Hafren.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for what purpose he used his ministerial car on Monday 15 March. [78003]

Mr. Michael: I used my ministerial car to travel to and from official engagements on Monday 15 March. I started the day with visits to a number of homeless projects in Cardiff followed by speaking engagements in the city, the opening of a new Housing Association Development in the city and in the evening I visited Carmarthen where I took part in a public question and answer session on my role as Secretary of State and on the future role of the Welsh Assembly.

New Deal

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people have entered (a) full-time jobs and (b) further education under the New Deal to date; and if he will make a statement. [78958]

Mr. Hain: The latest data published by the Department for Education and Employment shows that, between 5 January 1998 and 29 January 1999, almost 4,400 people had been helped into work in Wales through the New Deal and more than 2,300 others had entered full-time education or training (some of whom had subsequently also moved into jobs). Within these totals, separate information is not available on the number of jobs which are full-time or the number of people undertaking further education as distinct from training.

I am very pleased with the positive start which the New Deal has made in Wales, and the tremendous support it has received from employers and partner organisations. I am also delighted with the enthusiasm of the New Deal participants themselves.

Rail Services

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he had taken to improve rail services in Wales, with particular reference to the Wrexham-Bidston rail line; and if he will make a statement. [78952]

Mr. Hain: I am keen to see high quality rail services throughout Wales, and I have announced recently that the Welsh Office will be working closely with the North Wales Economic Forum to improve rail services between North and South Wales. The creation of the shadow Strategic Rail Authority is an important first step in ensuring that the train operators in Wales deliver the service which the public have a right to expect. This includes the Wrexham to Bidston line, where services are provided by First North Western with financial support from the Franchising Director and, for certain services, a consortium of local authorities.

Following the transfer of functions, responsibility for the regulation and financial support of passenger rail services will remain with the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

Drinking and Driving

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money was spent by his Department in 1998 to discourage drinking and driving. [79390]

Mr. Hain: In 1997–98 the Welsh Office spent £33,174 on measures to discourage drinking and driving using the medium of Welsh. The Department of Environment Transport and the Regions is responsible for measures to discourage drinking and driving in Great Britain.

Following the transfer of functions, this issue will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Social Inclusion

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to promote Social Inclusion in Wales; and if he will make a statement on his Department's programmes to protect and promote the interests of (a) children and (b) other vulnerable groups in Wales. [80120]

Mr. Michael: As part of the Comprehensive Spending Review I have established a Social Inclusion Fund that will provide £48 million over three years to tackle some of the most intractable problems in deprived communities across Wales. It will work alongside mainstream programmes, all of which are being harnessed to promote social inclusion in support of my Department's corporate aim: to increase economic prosperity and improve the quality of life for all of the people of Wales, to promote social inclusion, to extend democratic accountability and to deliver better services throughout Wales. The initial tranche of money from the Social Inclusion Fund, totalling £8 million for 1999–2000 will be targeted at three key areas;

> £5 million will go to a new Children and Youth Partnership Fund, to promote local initiatives to life youngsters educational attainment, engage them in creative activities in their communities and to encourage them away from crime, drugs, vandalism and truancy;
> £1.5 million will go to support drug and alcohol treatment services, improving access to treatment particularly for vulnerable younger people; and
> £1.5 million will go to encourage people to participate in their communities through joining in the work of local voluntary sector initiatives.

It is important to recognise the cross-cutting nature of this work. In targeting their proposals for action, local authorities and their partners will be expected to draw out the relevant conclusions from the local crime and disorder audit as well as specific measures of deprivation. They will need to be clear about the intended outcomes and to highlight both their targets and their measurements of success.

In addition, I am making available £1.5 million for 1999–2000 and for each of the following two years to continue and expand the People in Communities programme, which is aimed at tackling social exclusion in disadvantaged communities. £1 million has been allocated to support the existing eight projects and £750,000 will be available for new projects in 1999–2000. I want to see the new projects being brought forward by local partnerships, including partnerships led by the voluntary sector and development trusts, and I have asked my officials to consult the WLGA, WCVA and other key players as they develop this proposal.

I am also making available £25 million over three years through Sure Start to give Welsh children the best possible start in life. The programme, which has been developed in consultation with local government, the health service and the voluntary sector in Wales, will provide extra services to boost the development of very young children especially those from the most deprived communities. It will complement existing mainstream programmes and link with other social inclusion initiatives including those developed under my People in Communities programme. It will also work closely with the initiatives for early years development and child care for which I have announced over £2.5 million to support local partnerships in 1999–2000.

In addition to targeting these new funds on particular groups at risk of becoming socially excluded, I am also placing a greater emphasis on social inclusion within mainstream programmes. As one example of this I am also announcing today a £4.5 million Classroom Support Fund. This will provide £1.5 million over each of the next three years to provide additional classroom assistance for those schools that have the furthest to travel to meet the national targets for Wales.

I expect the support provided under this heading to take a variety of forms, reflecting the differing needs of LEAs. Some may choose to recruit classroom assistants to support work on literacy and numeracy. Some may wish to give a priority to raising levels of achievement within ethnic minority communities. There will also be flexibility to provide support for teachers in other ways.

I have also introduced a new element with a focus on social inclusion within the Grants for Education Support and Training (GEST) programme. The new School Improvement Fund will be worth £1.5 million during 1999–2000. It is designed to enable authorities to bring a new focus to the work of achieving the targets set out in their Education Strategic Plans. I would expect authorities to give a particular emphasis to work aimed at bringing standards in the lowest performing schools up to the level of the best.

Taken together these programmes will provide a foundation of seamless services for children and their families, to enrich children's lives and enable them to fulfil their potential.

Further details of my analysis of the challenges facing Wales and the approach my Department is taking to ensure they are addressed effectively are set out in a statement "Building an inclusive Wales: tackling the social exclusion agenda". This will provide the National Assembly with a useful starting point from which to develop its own policies. I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

In addition local authorities have a key part to play in responding to the needs of children who require specialist support. Too often in the past, they have failed children in their care with the result that the lives of some of the most vulnerable of our children have been damaged. That is completely unacceptable. Much has been done to implement recommendations from the Children's Safeguards Review. To build on that work and to ensure key recommendations are carried forward I have made available £5 million within the local government settlement for 1999–2000 for 'Children First', a three year programme to modernise and transform local authority social services for children. This is an ambitious and far-reaching programme and one we are determined to see through.

My Department is writing to local authorities and others with responsibilities for children in their care to set out the details of the improvements we expect to see and the arrangements for the National Assembly to monitor progress. I am also writing to elected members to remind them of their personal responsibilities for children in the care of their authorities, to underline my commitment to improving services for children and to challenge them to use the extra resources being made available through all of these programmes to secure real and lasting benefits.

Planning Inspectorate Agency

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what performance targets he has set for the Planning Inspectorate Agency's work in Wales for the financial year 1999–2000. [80121]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: I have today set the following key targets for the Agency's work in Wales in 1999–2000. I believe these continue to be challenging, but realistic targets for the Planning Inspectorate to meet next year. I am confident that the Planning Inspectorate will continue to maintain the impartiality and quality and efficiency of its work. I have decided not to include a specific target for responding to inquiries and correspondence in Welsh this year as the Inspectorate now has its own Welsh Language Scheme in place which requires the Inspectorate to deal with inquiries and correspondence in Welsh and English within the same timescales.

Timeliness

(a) 80 per cent. of all planning appeals decided by written representations to be determined within 17 weeks;

(b) 80 per cent. of all planning appeals decided by hearings to be determined within 22 weeks;

(c) 80 per cent. of all planning appeals decided by inquiries to be determined within 30 weeks;

(d) to provide an Inspector for local plan inquiries in at least 80 per cent. of cases on the date requested by a local authority provided that the objection period has ended and at least 6 months' notice has been given;

(e) to deliver 90 per cent. of Inspectors' reports on local plan inquiries to local authorities according to timescales agreed under service agreements.

Financial

Unit costs of planning appeals decided by written representations not to exceed £839.

Efficiency

Contribute to the generation of a 3 per cent. efficiency improvement in the use of running costs for all the Inspectorate's work compared with 1998–99.

Quality

To satisfy the Advisory Panel on Standards, and thus the Secretary of State and the National Assembly for Wales, annually and following rigorous monitoring, that the quality of the Inspectorate's work is being maintained at a high standard with 99 per cent. of its casework free from justified complaint.

Information and Guidance

To carry out a customer survey of satisfaction with the inquiry and hearing processes for dealing with planning appeals, including the quality of Inspectors' reasoning in reaching a recommendation/decision.

Following the transfer of functions, the setting of targets for the Planning Inspectorate in Wales will be a matter for the National Assembly.

Departmental Cash Limits

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what changes he is proposing to make to the cash limits for his Department for the current financial year. [80122]

Mr. Michael: The local authority capital cash limit (WO/LACAP) will be reduced by £1,470,000 from £377,644,000 to £376,174,000; the cash limit on class XIV, vote 3 will increase by £1,470,000 from £469,689,000 to £471,159,000.

The transfer of £1,470,000 from the non-voted local authority capital cash limit to the vote 3 cash limit is in respect of work undertaken by Housing Associations on behalf of local authorities.

The above changes will not add to the overall level of public expenditure.

Cardiff Bay Development Corporation

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the winding-up of the Cardiff Bay Development Corporation, with particular reference to the main successor bodies and the Corporation's functions, assets and liabilities to be passed on. [79018]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 29 March 1999]: I have given careful consideration to the views of the CBDC Board, the Cardiff and Vale authorities, the Welsh Development Agency and other interested parties and I am able to confirm, as previously announced, that the Corporation shall wind up its activities on 31 March 2000 with dissolution taking place on 30 June 2000.

I regard it as essential that the momentum of development within Cardiff Bay is maintained. I have therefore decided that, from March 2000, as with other local authorities in the rest of Wales, Cardiff County Council and the Vale of Glamorgan authority should regain responsibility for the economic, social and environmental regeneration of the whole of their areas. As elsewhere, they will be able to rely on the services available from the WDA and other economic bodies on the basis of partnership. I have also discussed with those authorities the implementation of projects planned by CBDC which may not be completed within the lifetime of the Corporation, including the Penarth Link, Hamadryad Park, a significant environmental upgrade in the Bay area and an access road to the Cardiff Yacht Club. I have also considered the provision necessary for the new responsibilities and liabilities which each authority will inherit: and transitional support for certain local services in South Cardiff. For these purposes, I shall be making available over a period of 3–5 years a total of up to £13 million to Cardiff County Council and up to £8.2 million to the Vale of Glamorgan. Copies of the understandings reached with the local authorities will be placed in the Library of the House.

The Corporation's non-development assets and liabilities will be transferred to Cardiff County Council and to the Vale of Glamorgan Council respectively. Development assets and liabilities, including management of the proposed Bute Avenue PFI, will be transferred to the Welsh Development Agency. I shall invite the parties to discuss together and agree with me the timing and terms on which these transfers will take place. Land currently held by CBDC at the Ferry Road Peninsula will be transferred to Cardiff County Council, subject to terms and conditions to be agreed between the Department and the Council and taking into account the relevant provisions of the Development Agreement between CBDC and Associated British Ports.

Future sponsorship of the Techniquest organisation will transfer to my Department. Responsibility for the operation and maintenance of the Gwent Levels Bird Reserve will pass to the Countryside Council for Wales.

I attach particular importance to the efficient and safe operation and maintenance of the Barrage and to the exploitation of the impounded lake for the public benefit. These responsibilities, including groundwater monitoring and control and management of water quality in the Bay, are also of direct and significant interest to the local communities in Cardiff and the Vale. As foreshadowed in the Cardiff Bay Barrage Act 1993, I propose to establish a dedicated body with responsibility for the operation, maintenance, and management of the Barrage, the outer harbour and the inland Bay. I shall enter immediate discussions with the Corporation regarding the purpose, functions and funding of such a body and will also fully explore the opportunities for partnership between the public and private sectors. I shall consult with local authorities and other interests before final decisions are taken.

On the basis of a thorough review of Barrage costs, I have decided to increase the financial cap for the project from £191 million to £197 million, subject to settlement of any unresolved and future claims. This is the best available estimate of the final outturn cost, subject to settlement of any unresolved and future contract claims. The increase is mainly attributable to the increased cost of the Bird Reserve on the Gwent Levels and additional costs arising from new legislation. A Budget Review report on the Barrage will also be available shortly and I shall place a copy in the Library of the House.

I am also pleased to announce a public consultation on the Corporation's proposal to install a dewatering network in the area of South Cardiff most at risk from rising groundwater. Copies of the Corporation's submission, including a report by Professor Stoner, can be obtained from Mr. D. Lowe at CBDC, Baltic House, Mount Stuart Square, Cardiff CF1 8DH. Comments should be sent by Friday 30 April to Mr. G. A. Fagan, Regional Development Division, Welsh Office, Cathays Park, Cardiff CF1 3NQ.

Finally, I should like to place on record my personal admiration for the great achievements of the Chairman, Board and staff of the Corporation, in removing the legacy of dereliction in South Cardiff, transforming it into an area internationally acclaimed as a major development success and in the first rank of investment locations. I am confident that the successor arrangements I have announced today will secure the continued successful regeneration of Cardiff Bay.

Cardiff Bay Barrage

A breakdown of the costs, including a comparison with the estimates that formed the basis for the previous announcement on 24 April 1995, are in the table.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Trainees (Tax)

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if a young person on non-employed status training is liable for (a) income tax and (b) national insurance contributions. [78726]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Young people who are participating in employment and training programmes funded by the Department for Education and Employment, on a non-employed basis, are not liable for income tax on any training allowance. They are, however, able to attract a credited National Insurance Contribution through their benefit claim.

Employment on Trial

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if a jobseeker's allowance claimant who has used Employment on Trial but returned to jobseeker's allowance can qualify again for Employment on Trial after 13 weeks of further unemployment; and whether such a claimant would subsequently be eligible for extended payments of housing benefit and council tax benefit. [78727]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Peter Collins to Mr. John Healey, dated 26 March 1999:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked Leigh Lewis to reply to your question about eligibility for Employment on Trial and its linked eligibility to extended payments of Housing Benefit and Council Tax benefit. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to Mr. Lewis as Chief Executive of the Agency. I am replying in his absence.

It may be helpful if I begin by confirming that Employment on Trial can only be considered when a jobseeker accepts a job having being unemployed for a period of at least 13 weeks. The job must be for at least 16 hours a week and the jobseeker must stay with the employer for at least four weeks, but no more than 12 weeks, to be eligible. Jobseeker's Allowance regulations, can qualify again for Employment on Trial after a further period of 13 weeks unemployment.

To be eligible for Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit extended payments, the jobseeker must have been continuously registered as unemployed and in receipt of Jobseeker's Allowance for at least 26 weeks before starting work. If someone has a second Employment on Trial period after having been unemployed for the minimum of 13 weeks, they will not have had the period of unemployment of at least 26 weeks which is required to re-qualify for extended benefit payments.

In such circumstances, people who do not re-qualify for extended benefits may still be eligible for Housing Benefit and Council Tax reductions. This will depend on the amount of earnings and the individual's personal arrangements. Advice can be sought through the local council offices of Employment Service adviser.

I hope this is helpful.

Carers

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how he intends to inform all of his Department's and Employment Service staff of the developing policies towards carers outlined in the National Strategy for Carers. [78549]

Ms Hodge: Earlier this month my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, the DfEE Board and the ES Chief Executive issued a message to all staff in the Department and the Employment Service letting them know what was happening on childcare and family friendly policies in DfEE and ES and emphasising their commitment to continue to make progress in this area. The message has been placed in the Library.

Both the Department for Education and Employment and the Employment Service have a programme of work in hand which will provide support for carers. This includes developing family friendly policies to meet the needs of staff with a range of caring responsibilities. We will be taking account of the National Carers Strategy as we develop our own family friendly policies. We will be keeping staff informed of progress through a variety of internal communications.

Departmental Staff (Ethnic Origin)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will provide a breakdown, in numerical and percentage terms, of the ethnic origin, at 1 March, of (a) his private office, (b) Government special advisers, (c) his Policy Unit and (d) staff in total. [78510]

Mr. Mudie: (a) Private office The ethnic origin of staff in the Department of Education and Employment's Private Office as at 1 March 1999 are as follows:

Category	Numbers	Percentages
White	45	85
Black	[—]	[—]
Asian	[—]	[—]
Other	[—]	[—]

[—] Represent numbers of 5 or less and percentages which correspond to numbers of 5 or less. This presentation of the statistics is in line with the DfEE code of practice on disclosure of ethnic origin to maintain confidentiality of the data for individuals.

(b) Government special advisers The numbers of special advisers are so few in the Department that I should like to refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office to my hon. Friend the Member for Brent, East (Mr. Livingstone) on 22 February 1999, Official Report, column 39.

(c) Policy unit This area is not applicable to the Department.

(d) Staff in total My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office will provide a response to this part of the question for all Departments.

New Deal

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the proportion of under-25-year-olds on the New Deal for Young People who sign off without known destination at the point when they have to choose one of the four full-time options in benefit offices in the parliamentary constituencies of (a) Newcastle upon Tyne, East and Wallsend, (b) Copeland, (c) Islington, South and Finsbury, (d) Hamilton, South, (e) Sheffield, Brightside, (f) Kingston upon Hull, East, (g) Livingston, (h) Holborn and St. Pancras, (i) Blackburn, (j) Birmingham, Ladywood, (k) Redcar, (l) Derby, South, (m) Glasgow, Anniesland, (n) Edinburgh, Central, (o) North Tyneside, (p) Sedgefield, (q) Dunfermline, East, (r) Darlington, (s) Dewsbury and (t) Cardiff, South and Penarth. [78542]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The information is not available in the form requested and Government Statistical Service figures are produced for Employment Service Units of Delivery which cannot currently be disaggregated to individual constituencies. The following table is drawn from all those who leave the Gateway. It lists the constituencies, the Unit of Delivery each forms a part of and those leaving the Gateway with an unknown destination expressed as a percentage of all Gateway leavers. As more data are collected the numbers in this category may subsequently be revised downwards.

Key Stage 2 SATs

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools in 1998, 1997 and 1996 by (a) local education authority and (b) by type of school entered no pupils for the level 6 (i) Science, (ii) English and (iii) Mathematics paper in Key Stage 2 SATs test. [79245]

Ms Estelle Morris: The number of schools that entered no pupils for the level 6 test in the Key Stage 2 National Curriculum Assessment tests broken down by subject and school type is shown in the following table.

Number of schools with no children participating in the Key Stage 2-level 6 tests by subject and school type

Grant-maintained Schools (Wandsworth)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the grant-maintained schools in the London Borough of Wandsworth. [79057]

Ms Estelle Morris: Grant-maintained schools in Wandsworth at March 1999 are as follows:

Eardley GM Primary School

Honeywell Junior School

Honeywell Infant School

Albemarle Primary School

Ethelburga Primary School

Hillbrook Primary School (GM)

Graveney School

Burntwood School
Elliott School (GM)
Salesian College
John Paul II School
Southfields Community College (GM).

Head Teachers

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to relieve the burdens on heads of small schools who teach full-time. [79078]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The funding arrangements for schools enable Local Education Authorities to take account of the particular needs of small schools. That will continue under the new funding arrangements.

In addition, in the Green Paper teachers: meeting the challenge of change we proposed the establishment of a Small School Support Fund to help encourage small schools to invest in shared resources and working together. This recognises that sharing services can relieve hard-pressed heads of small schools.

Teachers (Induction Year)

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much money will be available from the Standards Fund to cover the costs of introducing the induction year for newly qualified teachers; and if money will be made available directly to schools to cover the extra costs incurred. [79025]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 29 March 1999]: In 1999–2000 we have made available additional funds through the £251.5 million School Improvement Standards Fund grant to support activity designed to improve standards of pupil performance in order to meet school, local education authority and national targets. Support provided through this grant explicitly includes induction. We have made clear in the Standards Fund guidance (Circular 13/98) local education authorities' responsibilities to pass on adequate funds to schools in respect of such induction programme for newly-qualified teachers through devolvement of the School Improvement grant.

Nutritional Standards

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what progress is being made with introducing national nutritional standards for school meals and healthy eating initiatives in maintained schools; [79323]

(2) what guidance his Department issues to local education authorities regarding (a) the level of fat, (b) the proportion of sugar, (c) the amount of fibre, (d) the amount of fresh fruit and (e) the amount of fresh vegetables in the diet of schoolchildren; [79325]

(3) if he will make a statement on the impact of the Government's best value approach to local government on nutritional standards for school meals; [79326]

(4) to what nutritional guidelines local education authorities are required to adhere in delivering a school meals service to their school pupils. [79246]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The consultation period for Ingredients for Success has finished and the views we have received are helping us to draw up draft regulations setting out the standards. These will be the subject of a further consultation exercise. We are on target to introduce the new standards from Autumn 1999. Until then, local education authorities can decide their own nutritional guidelines for delivering a school meals service. The Government offer more general advice on healthy eating which applies to everyone over the age of five years. This is set out in The Balance of Good Health and Eight Guidelines for a Healthy Diet. We plan to issue further guidance to local education authorities and schools alongside the forthcoming regulations.

When the new standards take effect, local education authorities which provide meals will be under a duty to ensure that the standards are met and that prospective suppliers, selected in line with the best value legislation, can comply with them.

Staff Mileage Rates

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the mileage rates applicable from January 1999 to staff, indicating changes which have been made to encourage staff to switch from cars to public transport and other less polluting forms of travel. [79523]

Mr. Mudie: The standard motor mileage rates reimbursed to staff in the core Department are set out in the following table:

Engine size	Up to 4,000 miles	Over 4,000 miles
Up to 1500cc	35p/mile	20p/mile
1501cc+	45p/mile	25p/mile

The Department has strict rules to ensure that any travel on official business is only authorised when it is absolutely necessary and that cars may be used only when they are the most cost effective method of transport. The standard mileage allowances, which have stood without change since April 1997, are designed to discourage the use of cars with an engine capacity over 2,000cc.

A close review of travelling arrangements is planned as part of the Green Transport initiative. This will explore whether more could be done to encourage the use of cycling and public transport.

Medical Students

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many medical students are currently studying in the United Kingdom; and of these how many are of Afro-Caribbean origin. [79521]

Mr. Mudie: In 1997/98, the last year for which figures are available, there were 41,039 students studying medicine and dentistry in the UK of whom 118 were of Black Caribbean origin.

Individual Learning Account

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the progress he has made with individual learning accounts and plans for their future. [80076]

Mr. Blunkett: The Chancellor of the Exchequer, in his statement on 9 March 1999, Official Report, columns 173–190, announced a long term incentive structure for learning accounts. This proposes significant progress towards achieving a sustainable national framework from next year. Through the substantial development work undertaken over the last few months we have also learned some important lessons about the design of learning accounts.

Training and Enterprise Councils have led development by testing various options for accounts in 15 areas. These projects are reaching completion. We are also undertaking extensive market research to assess the reaction of individuals and other stakeholder to the design of learning accounts. We are consulting employers through projects led by National Training Organisations, and financial institutions about their potential involvement.

From April 1999 individuals will be able to open learning accounts with Training and Enterprise Councils; if people invest £25 of their own money they will receive £150 to set up their account.

I will be shortly publishing details of our progress on this work, and our plans for an national framework.

Consultants (Hackney)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he has appointed consultants to help to improve education services in Hackney. [80074]

Ms Estelle Morris: I am pleased to announce that we have appointed KPMG to work with Hackney LEA to secure urgent improvements in the education service in the light of the recent OFSTED/Audit Commission report.

KPMG will start work immediately on specifications which can be used as a basis for contracting out certain LEA functions, as set out in the Secretary of State's letter on 19 March to the authority.

In addition, KPMG will work with the LEA on revising its Education Development Plan and drawing up an Action Plan to address the other recommendations in the Ofsted Inspection report.

The decision to appoint KPMG was made on the basis of quality of their proposals, the calibre of their personnel and overall value for money.

Schools Adjudicators

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will announce the appointment of the adjudicators for schools organisation and admissions issues. [80075]

Mr. Blunkett: I announced the appointment of Sir Peter Newsam as Lead Adjudicator on 28 January 1999, and have now offered appointments to fifteen Adjudicators to work with him. They are Dr. Alan Billings, June Brown, John Clarke, Andrew Collier, Peter Downes, John Evans, Gordon Hainsworth, Ann Holt, Louise Kidd, Robert Lanwarne, Peter Neafsey, Professor David Newton, Dr Hilary Nicolle, Robin Squire and Anthony Webster. I am confident that their wealth of educational experience will ensure a professional and high quality service.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Live Animal Transport

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) sheep exported for slaughter, (b) sheep exported for further fattening, (c) sheep exported for breeding, (d) pigs exported for slaughter, (e) pigs exported for further fattening and (f) pigs exported for breeding were deemed unfit to travel in 1996, 1997 and 1998 by local veterinary inspectors when undertaking certification procedures of live animals destined for export; and if he will make a statement. [74325]

Mr. Morley: The figures available relate only to movements from Great Britain to other EU Member States and Northern Ireland. They relate to animals recorded by Local Veterinary Inspectors as being rejected as unfit when undertaking export certification procedures and are set out in the following table.

	1996	1997	1998
Sheep
for slaughter	447	146	536
for further fattening	3,720	6,796	13,003
for breeding	17	76	13
Pigs
for slaughter	—	1	—
for further fattening	—	120	113
for breeding	837	1,396	1,734

These statistics are for Great Britain, they are provisional and may be subject to amendment.

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the consultation document reviewing legislation on the live transport of animals to be issued. [78434]

Mr. Morley: We hope to undertake full public consultation as soon as possible, once the elections to the Scottish Parliament and Welsh Assembly have taken place.

Departmental Budget

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was his Department's budget in cash terms and at 1998–99 prices for (a) 1992–93 to 1998–99 and (b) his estimate for 1999–2000 to 2001–02. [77331]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 22 March 1999]: The information requested is set out in the following table:

£ million

Year	Cash terms	1998–99 prices
1992–93	701.2	816.5
1993–94	754.0	855.3
1994–95	705.1	788.5
1995–96	767.0	833.4
1996–97	880.4	928.1
1997–98	709.3	728.8
1998–99	768.8	768.8
1999–2000	765.3	746.6
2000–01	722.3	687.5
2001–02	760.3	706.0

Potatoes

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to encourage retailers to promote sales of organically grown potatoes; and if he will make a statement. [78930]

Mr. Morley: Decisions on the sourcing of produce at retail level are matters for the commercial judgment of the various food retail companies. It is not the Government's role to interfere in such decisions. However, Regulations were laid before Parliament on 11 March which will significantly increase aid for farmers in England converting to organic practices. We expect that this will result in an increase in the area of land being farmed organically and potentially more organic produce available for sale to consumers.

River Wye Conservation Area

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to draw up habitat regulations for the River Wye candidate special area of conservation. [78881]

Mr. Morley: The Conservation (Natural Habitats, &c) Regulations 1994 (SI 1994/2716) apply to all sites classified as Special Protection Areas (SPAs) under the Birds Directive and sites which have been put forward as candidate Special Areas of Conservation (SACs) under the Habitats Directive from the point when they have been agreed as Sites of Community Importance. As a matter of policy, sites such as the Rive Wye which have been submitted to the European Commission as candidate Special Areas of Conservation, are treated as if the Regulations apply when considering new proposals.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what plans he has to protect the traditional grasslands and meadows along the banks of salmon rivers, with particular reference to those of the River Wye candidate special area of conservation; and if he will make a statement; [78882]

(2) which national authority is responsible for regulating agricultural activities in respect of spring salmon fishing within the catchment of the River Wye candidate special area of conservation; and if he will make a statement. [78880]

Mr. Morley: The Countryside Stewardship scheme provides payments for farmers to conserve and enhance traditional grassland and meadows along rivers. The scheme is targeted to meet national and local priorities such as the protection of species rich meadows. The River Wye has been identified as a target area for the scheme in 1999.

MAFF is aware of the potential damage to salmon rivers and their spawning grounds which can occur as a result of sediment deposition caused by soil erosion. It has therefore recently produced a series of publications, including the revised Soil Code, aimed at helping farmers and growers to both protect the soil and prevent soil erosion.

In addition, MAFF officials are working closely with the statutory environmental agencies to develop workable proposals for implementation of the "uncultivated land or semi-natural areas" provisions in the EU Directive on environmental impact assessment (EIA). Projects to bring such land into intensive agricultural use will require an environmental statement if they are likely to give rise to significant environmental effects.

Dairy Processing Industry

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the competitive position of the dairy processing industry in each EU member state. [79082]

Mr. Rooker: None, but some information is available in publications such as "Europe's Dairy Produce 1998–99".

Illegal Fishing

Dr. Godman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many skippers of fishing vessels have been convicted in the courts for offences relating to illegal fishing activities in each of the past three years; what was the average financial penalty imposed; if he will list the nationality of the (a) skippers and (b) vessels; if the catch and gear were confiscated in all cases; and if he will make a statement. [78402]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 29 March 1999]: Substantial resources are devoted to fisheries enforcement and appropriate action is taken where infringements are detected.

Information about fisheries prosecutions in courts in England and Wales is set out in the following table:

	1996	1997	1998
No. of skippers successfully prosecuted for one or more infringements[1]	59	46	72
Average financial penalty imposed[2]	£4,663	£2,878	£2,126

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the species of genetically modified plants used during his Department's research into the safety of genetically modified crops; how many such plants were used; and what was the duration of the tests. [79328]

Mr. Rooker: Genetically modified varieties of the following species of crops plants have all been used in MAFF-funded research to assess the safety of genetically modified crops in the agricultural environment: sugar beet, maize, potato and oilseed rape. All of the projects have a duration of three years, in most cases the research is still on-going and for this reason it is not possible to say how many plants were used.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the independent scientists and institutions which his Department has consulted during their research into the safety of genetically modified crops. [79327]

Mr. Rooker: The following institutions have all carried out research for MAFF to assess the safety of genetically modified crops in the agricultural environment:

AEA Technology Consultancy Services

Central Science Laboratory

Institute of Arable Crops Research, Broom's Barn

Institute of Arable Crops Research, Rothamsted

Imperial College and Queen Mary and Westfield College

Institute of Freshwater Ecology

Institute of Grassland and Environmental Research

Institute of Virology and Environmental Microbiology

John Innes Centre

Morley Research Centre

National Institute of Agriculture Botany

Scottish Agricultural College

Scottish Crop Research Institute

University of Newcastle

University of Surrey

University of Wales.

Advisory Committee on Animal Feedingstuffs

Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made towards the establishment of the Advisory Committee on Animal Feedingstuffs; and if he will make a statement. [79855]

Ms Moran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made towards the establishment of the Advisory Committee on Animal Feedingstuffs; and if he will make a statement. [79988]

Mr. Rooker: I am pleased to announce the first appointment to this Committee. Professor Phillip Thomas, formerly Principal of the Scottish Agricultural College, has been appointed as Chairman of the new Advisory Committee on Animal Feedingstuffs. The full membership will be finalised within the next few weeks.

I believe that the Advisory Committee on Animal Feedingstuffs will play a key role in ensuring that animal feed is safe for both animals and the ultimate food consumer. Professor Thomas has considerable knowledge of agricultural issues and animal nutrition and has the personal qualities needed to build an effective committee drawing together new members from diverse background. I am therefore delighted that he has accepted the invitation to Chair this important new independent advisory committee.

Covent Garden Market Authority

Mr. Linton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the Covent Garden Market Authority to begin negotiations with market tenants concerning new leases. [79998]

Mr. Nick Brown: It is clear from the legislation which set up the Covent Garden Market Authority that is for the Authority to determine the length of leases offered to market tenants. I understand that the Authority will shortly begin negotiations on a basis which best meets the needs of the Market.

We will shortly be beginning discussions with all those with an interest on the future of the market.

Easter 1998 Floods

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress the Environment Agency has made in implementing its action plan in response to the independent report on the Easter 1998 floods. [79856]

Mr. Morley: The Chairman of the Environment Agency has provided a report of progress to date, copies of which are being placed in the House Libraries.

In line with the priorities I set out last October, the Agency has completed the checking of flood warning dissemination plans for errors and omissions. It has also been elaborating, in conjunction with other operating authorities and the Ministry, its current general supervisory responsibilities for flood defence matters.

In addition, the Agency has reported substantial progress with work scheduled for completion later in the year, including the development of a flood warning strategy and review of telemetry requirements. With financial support from the Ministry, the Agency has taken forward work on flood plain mapping, public awareness of flood warning arrangements and auditing the content of its current flood warning dissemination plans. The latter work is intended to lead to development of more standardised and effective plans.

I am pleased to be able to report such positive progress and will ensure that the House is updated on future developments.

Ms Moran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress the Environment Agency has made in implementing its action plan in response to the independent report on the Easter 1998 floods. [79987]

Mr. Morley: The Chairman of the Environment Agency has provided a report of progress to date, copies of which are being placed in the House Libraries.

In line with the priorities I set out last October, the Agency has completed the checking of flood warning dissemination plans for errors and omissions. It has also been elaborating, in conjunction with other operating authorities and the Ministry, its current general supervisory responsibilities for flood defence matters.

The latter work is intended to led to development of more standardised and effective plans.

I am pleased to be able to report such positive progress and will ensure that the House is updated on future developments.

Fish Landings

Mr. Paul Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to amend the measures to control landings by vessels of 20 metres and over landing whitefish and shellfish into the United Kingdom. [79986]

Mr. Morley: Following representations from the fishing industry, the Fisheries Departments have looked at the designated port arrangements which came into operation on 5 January 1999 to see whether any changes should be made in advance of the wider review to be undertaken this Autumn.

The main concern was over the lack of flexibility in providing notice of landings into non-designated ports and outside specified hours at designated ports. After careful consideration, we are allowing fishermen to give between 4 and 24 hours notice of landing and 4 to 72 hours notice where landings take place on a Sunday or Monday. The Department will also exercise discretion to waive the requirement to give 4 hours notice of landing in cases of force majeure or exceptional difficulty. Additionally, some adjustments are being made to the specified landing times for Brixham, Grimsby, Hull, Kinlochbervie, Lerwick, Lochinver and Oban and the specified landing location for Kinlochbervie.

As part of the Autumn Review, the Fisheries Departments will consider the role which satellite monitoring will play in the operation of the designated port arrangements from 1 January 2000 and the provision of satellite position reports as an alternative to the prior notification of landings at non-designated ports and outside designated landing times at designated ports.

The changes will take effect from 19 April and are being notified to the owners of all vessels of 20 metres and over.

Fishing Fleet

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he proposes to issue a consultation paper on the management of the under-10-metre fishing fleet. [79985]

Mr. Morley: A consultation paper on steps to improve the management of the under-10-metre fleet is being published today and copies have been placed in the Library of the House. The paper is being sent to inshore fishermen and other interests for comment by 30 June this year.

The paper confirms that the Fisheries Departments are looking at ways in which the management of quota allocations for this part of the inshore fleet can be developed with the objective of avoiding early or mid-year closures of fisheries. At the same time, it seeks views from fishermen and other interests on the steps that might be taken to constrain fishing effort. Action is also planned to deter unlicensed fishing activity, to prohibit the transshipment of fish between under and over-10-metre vessels, and to deal with vessels which have been shortened, re-registered and relicensed as under-10-metre vessels, and subsequently re-lengthened to fish as over-10-metre vessels without the necessary consequential adjustments to their registration and licence status.

The under-10-metre fleet is an important and integral part of the UK fishing industry. Its members hold wide ranging and diverse opinions, often reflecting local needs and conditions. The consultation process, which is now under way, will help to draw together these views so that informed decisions on the way forward can be taken later in the year in partnership with the newly devolved administrations. It is expected that any change in the present quota management and licensing arrangements will take effect during the year 2000.

Fishing Vessel Licensing

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he received the report of the working group announced by him in December 1997 to review the operation of the current fishing vessel licensing arrangements; and what action he is taking to implement its recommendations. [79984]

Mr. Morley: I have now received the Report of the Working Group, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. I am most grateful for the valuable contribution made by industry representatives in the preparation of this Report. They have had a difficult task to perform, balancing the complexities of the existing licensing arrangements against the wide ranging interests of fishermen throughout the UK.

I am also pleased to note that the primary recommendation of the Working Group is that the overall structure of the present licensing regime should be retained. However, having weighed the arguments carefully, I have concluded that there are grounds for two small changes to the current structure, to upgrade moratorium licences and those Category B licences to which are attached individual species licences to full Category A status. These changes will take effect from 1 May 1999.

Industry members of the Working Group have made a further 10 recommendations relating to various aspects of the licensing regime. These will be followed up by Fisheries Departments with one exception. The Group has recommended that there should be no further linkage between fishing licences and vessel safety certificates. This is a sensitive issue, and one which is the subject of on-going talks between Fisheries Departments and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions following the publication last autumn of the MAIB report into the sinking of the Pescado. I attach great importance to the safety of fishing vessels, and believe that it is essential that all ways of improving vessel safety are fully explored.

As a result of recommendations from the Group, three further changes to the present licensing rules will take effect from 1 April 1999. First, we are amending the provision whereby the capacity penalty may be waived where a vessel being replaced has been destroyed or permanently disabled as a result of fire, sinking or other accidental cause, so that it is no longer necessary for the age difference between the replaced and replacement vessel to be no more than seven years. The requirement for the capacity of the replacement vessel to be no greater than that of the replaced vessel (measured in VCUs) will remain.

Second, with regard to licence entitlements, the deadline for submitting a valid licence application to Fisheries Departments is extended from two years to three years from the date that the entitlement first arose. This will apply to all existing licence entitlements as well as to entitlements created after 1 April 1999.

Third, a new licence will be made available to owners of vessels fishing exclusively in external waters who have taken advantage of the arrangements announced on 31 March 1998 to replace the vessel with a vessel of larger capacity, without acquiring additional domestic water licences to cover the increase in capacity. This licence will allow them to continue to fish for non-TAC stocks in those parts of ICES Sub Areas VI, VII, VIII, IX, X, XII and XIV which lie outside Community waters. All other conditions relating to the licensing of the replacement vessel remain in force.

Finally, I have noted the Group's offer to give further consideration to measures to improve the present capacity penalty arrangements, and to act as a forum for the discussion of licensing issues in the future. I welcome this recognition of the value of constructive engagement of the industry in developing policy and envisage that this forum will be used in future. We shall be reconvening the Group later this year to look at the scope for improving the capacity penalty arrangements.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what were the results of the pilot study commissioned by him on tuberculosis in cattle; and if he will make a statement. [80072]

Mr. Rooker: Following the Krebs report, it is clear that TB in cattle is a complex problem with a multiplicity of causes. A wildlife reservoir is a significant factor, but we need to be clear why it is that some farms suffer TB incidents while others in the same vicinity do not.

In order to focus our efforts on understanding these processes, and to illuminate the detailed differences between farms, we are now launching the epidemiological investigation which was piloted on a small number of farms last November.

A new database will be compiled from information collected from all farms which have suffered TB incidents, and from a number of other farms. The pilot study has proved invaluable in enabling us to streamline the collection of this information. The public consultation held at the same time has produced a number of extremely helpful suggestions which we have also been able to take on board. Copies of the new questionnaire (form TB99) have been placed in the Library.

As soon as there are enough entries in the database, we shall start to analyse the information to try and identify those factors which, either individually or in combination, are associated with TB incidents. Information on cattle movements, husbandry and farm management practices, wildlife on farms and the local environment will be analysed alongside other data, for example on local weather conditions and patterns of badger activity. The results will be used to develop new control strategies and will feed through into improved guidance for farmers.

Import Sanctions

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has (a) made to the United States Government to secure a lifting of the import sanctions on United Kingdom products and (b) received from the Government of the United States of America following the imposition of trade sanctions on United Kingdom and European Union export products. [79157]

Mr. Wilson: I have been asked to reply.

As it is an external trade matter, responsibility for making representations to the United States over the EU/US banana dispute rests primarily with the European Commission, on behalf of the European Union. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I have also made a number of representations direct to the US Administration in the course of this dispute. In particular, the Secretary of State summoned the US Ambassador on 4 March to protest about the unauthorised American action of withholding liquidation on a range of UK and EU export products. For its part, the United States has made known its views on the banana dispute direct to HM Government on a number of occasions, including on 4 March.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about the monitoring of genetically modified crops. [74100]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 11 March 1999]: Monitoring is a key requirement for the safe release of GM crops. Monitoring enables the assumptions made in the risk assessment to be verified, and any unanticipated effects of GMOs to be identified. The legislation in place is quite clear: if evidence comes to light of harm to the environment, action must be taken to restrict or suspend the release.

All research releases of GM crops are monitored throughout the duration of consent, and in most cases post-trial monitoring is also required. This is carried out by the consent-holder on the basis of a monitoring plan which forms part of the application. At least once a year a monitoring report must be submitted to the Secretary of State, and a copy is placed on the statutory public register.

To date, authorisations to place GM products on the market under Part C of Directive 90/220/EEC have not included conditions requiring monitoring. The Directive is currently being amended, to include the introduction of provisions for post market monitoring. The Government strongly support the amendment of the Directive to incorporate these requirements.

Pending the revision of the Directive, EU Environment Ministers agreed in December 1998 to use the flexibility within the existing Directive to introduce with immediate effect new monitoring provisions, based on monitoring proposals in the draft amending Directive. These take into account direct and indirect, and immediate and delayed, effects of GMOs on the environment. Monitoring requirements would be set out on a case by case basis for each product authorisation and enforced by the relevant competent authority.

On top of the new EC requirements, the UK Government have introduced additional measures for the monitoring of GM crops. I announced the agreement reached with the plant breeding industry for a managed development programme for herbicide tolerant GM crops with my right hon. Friend, the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, before the House of Lords Select Committee on 21 October 1998.

Farm-scale evaluations will ensure that first commercial plantings of herbicide tolerant GM crops will be strictly limited and monitored for ecological effects alongside comparable plantings of conventional crops. The Government are funding ecological studies of the diversity and abundance of plants and invertebrates associated with the management of GM and non GM crops to test whether there are any significant differences, initially over a four year period. This will assist consideration of what effects GM crops may have on higher species and our agricultural landscape. If ecological monitoring reveals adverse effects then appropriate action will be taken.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the commercial approval of genetically modified crops is required before the farm-scale field trials into their ecological effects begin. [78477]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 24 March 1999]: Such approval is not necessary for the evaluations to begin. The farm-scale evaluations of genetically modified oilseed rape which will start this year are covered by an approval for research or other purposes issued under Part B of Directive 90/220/EEC. This year the gm oilseed rape will remain the property of the seed company concerned and will be destroyed at harvest.

The genetically modified maize, which is also to be studied, has Europe wide approval for general cultivation issued under Part C of the Directive by the French Competent Authority on 3 August 1998. However the maize has not yet been entered onto the National List of Seeds in the UK and so the seeds may not be sold. This year the gm maize will remain the property of the seed company concerned and will be destroyed at harvest.

In both cases experimental permits are also required for use of the herbicide, based on gluphosinate ammonium, on the genetically modified crop.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Government will allow the sale of products for (a) human and (b) animal consumption from the farm-scale field trials into the ecological effects of genetically modified crops. [78476]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 24 March 1999]: All genetically modified crops produced this year from the farm-scale evaluations will be destroyed. A decision on the fate of products in subsequent years has not yet been taken, but any sale for human or animal consumption will be dependent on the product receiving all the necessary consents and authorisations.

London Underground

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the level of Government grant to London Underground for the year 2000–2001. [78710]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government aimed to establish the public private partnership (PPP) for the Underground by 2000–01, removing the need for subsidy beyond that point. We have consistently made clear, that we will not be driven by an artificially imposed timetable. The Government's overriding objective is to secure the best value solution for London Underground. In the light of this, we are keeping funding for London Underground under review with London Transport and will take decisions in the context of LT's overall financial position.

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to expand the capacity of London Underground. [78711]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The immediate priorities of the Government and London Transport are to see improved reliability and increased service levels on the existing network, plus the completion of the Jubilee Line Extension. Service levels increased by 12 per cent. over the past five years, and London Transport plans a further 8 per cent. increase in 1999–2000.

In the longer term, capacity increases will be written into the performance specifications for contractors under the Public-Private Partnership, as signalling, trains and other key assets on individual lines reach the stage when they need replacing.

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will set out the forecast increases in fares on London Underground on a yearly basis, expressed as a percentage, for each of the years 2000 to 2005. [78712]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The forecast on which the financial modelling for the PPP has been based is for fares to rise by 1 per cent. above the rate of inflation in 2000 and 2001, and following that, for fares to rise by the rate of inflation.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the public-private partnership for London Underground. [78890]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Good progress is being made, as my right hon. Friend the Minister of Transport announced on 15 March 1999, Official Report, column 474, in response to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Thomas).

Brown-field Sites (London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many brown-field sites have been identified in the Greater London area; and if he will make a statement. [78935]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is being collected in Phase 1 of the National Land Use Database. Summary results will be published soon showing the amounts of previously developed land that may be available for redevelopment.

Overloaded Vehicles (London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many prosecutions there were for the overloading of goods vehicles travelling in the Greater London area in 1998. [78891]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Enforcement officers from the Vehicle Inspectorate weighed 3,983 heavy goods vehicles in the Greater London area in 1998 and 234 prohibition notices for overloading were issued. A prohibition notice may include more than one offence and not all offences are necessarily reported for prosecution. The Inspectorate prosecuted 239 defendants for 270 overloading offences as a result of 135 prohibition notices which were reported for prosecution. This resulted in 263 convictions.

Buses (New Delhi)

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions from which departmental budget the cost of providing New Delhi with the buses which he offered on his recent visit will be met; and how much they will cost. [79055]

Mr. Prescott: I made no offer of UK government funding for buses in New Delhi. However I offered to assist in any way I could in consideration by UK bus companies and the Indian authorities of ways of resolving the shortage of buses in the Indian capital.

Council Houses

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many council houses were sold in each English shire county in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99. [78906]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 26 March 1999]: I have placed in the Library a table presenting the latest available information, reported by local authorities, on sales of council dwellings in each English shire county (as in existence before the creation of unitary authorities), for the financial years 1996–97 and 1997–98. Not all authorities have provided full returns during these periods and so some totals for shire counties are incomplete, as indicated. Component figures for individual districts and unitary authorities are also presented.

National Bus Pensions Trustees

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he last met the National Bus Pensions Trustees. [79075]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met the trustees on 15 February 1999.

Regeneration Programmes

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much funding was received by (a) Government offices for the regions, (b) English Partnerships and (c) the Rural Development Commission for regeneration programmes by region annually over the last five years. [79494]

Mr. Caborn: (a) The table gives the breakdown of regeneration funding by Government Office Region. The figures include expenditure on programmes which formed the Single Regeneration Budget (SRB), excluding English Partnerships. A forecast figure has been provided for 1998–99.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what account will be taken of sparsity factors in determining the budgets for RDAs. [79495]

Mr. Caborn: Most of the funding for Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) in 1999–2000 will be in respect of the regeneration programmes which they will inherit. The distribution of those resources is determined largely by statistical indicators of need. While sparsity is not an explicit factor, regeneration funding to rural development areas has been on the basis of a formula designed to reflect rural needs.

For later years, resources will be allocated to RDAs in response to the corporate plans which they submit to the Secretary of State. Allocations will take account of the needs of the regions, the soundness of the RDAs' plans for tackling those needs and their performance in implementing their programmes.

A review is currently underway of the Index of Local Deprivation, which is used in the distribution of the Single Regeneration Budget. It will cover all aspects of the Index, including the methodology and the indicators which make up the Index. The review will explore the possibility of introducing a measure of sparsity. However, the key consideration in determining the content of the Index is that it is a good measure of deprivation and is based on robust data which are available on a nationally consistent basis for small areas across England.

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he intends to exercise his powers under paragraph 8(5) of Schedule 2 to the Regional Development Agencies Act 1998; and if he will make a statement. [79705]

Mr. Caborn: My Department has today issued a Dispensation under paragraph 8(5) of Schedule 2 to the Regional Development Agencies Act 1998. The effect of the Dispensation is that, in certain circumstances, members of the boards of Regional Development Agencies are not debarred from participating in the deliberations or decisions of the Agencies in respect of matters in which they have a direct or indirect interest. The purpose of the Dispensation is to ensure that, so long as the requirements of propriety are met, members are not debarred from participating in discussion or decisions for which they have a relevant expertise. I have placed copies of the Dispensation in the Library.

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance he will give to the regional development agencies on their strategies. [79706]

Mr. Caborn: Developing a new strategic vision for the English regions will be the first and most important task for the RDAs. I am today issuing statutory guidance to advise them on what Government expects of their strategies. The guidance has been prepared in consultation with all relevant Government Departments, in particular the Department of Trade and Industry and the Department for Education and Employment. Its publication follows a wide public consultation launched last October. The comments we received enabled us to refine the guidance and I am grateful to all those who responded to our request for comments.

The fundamental purpose of RDAs' strategies will be to improve regional economic performance and enhance regional competitiveness. The guidance stresses the need for RDAs to develop an integrated and sustainable approach in their strategies. The aim should be to tackle business competitiveness and the need to increase productivity and to address also the underlying problems of unemployment, skills shortages, inequalities, social exclusion and physical decay. By integrating economic, social and environmental issues in this way, the strategies will set the context for sustainable economic growth in the English regions.

We want the RDAs' strategies to support and enhance national policies while addressing the particular needs of regions. In this way they will be able to inform and influence national Government's economic policies and to provide a framework for the delivery of national and European programmes.

RDAs' strategies will provide focus and coherence not only to the RDAs' own work, but also to the work of their regional partners. The strategies should be the product of regional dialogue, and should identify priorities for action which regional partners can buy in to and help to deliver. Only through strong and effective partnership will the RDAs ensure that their strategies command support. Their relationship with the emerging regional chambers will be of particular importance.

I am also giving to the RDAs today a supplementary package of non-statutory policy and programme guidance to underpin the statutory guidance on their strategies. This will include material on regeneration, competitiveness, skills, sustainable development, rural policy, equal opportunities and working with the voluntary and community sectors.

Copies of all the guidance have been placed in the Library and will also be available on the DETR website.

Millennium Village

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many of the dwellings at the Greenwich Millennium village will be available for habitation by 31 December 1999; and how many will be available to accommodate visitors to the Millennium Experience. [79544]

Mr. Caborn: Subject to the necessary planning consents, at least 90 dwellings should be under construction by 31 December 1999. It is hoped that the first residents will be able to move in early in 2000.

A Visitor Centre should be open from September 1999 which will include two show flats and information on all aspects of the Village.

EU Transport Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the outcome of the Transport Council held in Brussels on 29 March; and if he will make a statement. [79768]

Dr. Reid: The Transport Council met in Brussels on 29 March. I represented the United Kingdom. The Council held policy debates on a number of legislative proposals. Council Conclusions were agreed unanimously on two other issues.

Two of the items on the Council agenda for policy debate—proposals for a regulatory framework for the Community's railways, and a proposed package of measures designed to promote combined transport—had already been considered at previous meetings, while two—a draft Directive to regulate working time in the road transport sector, and a Commission proposal to amend the transport Trans-European Network guidelines to include ports and inter-modal terminals—had not been discussed in detail by the Council before. In each of these debates, once Member States had given their views the Presidency invited the Committee of Permanent Representatives to undertake further work, with the aim of enabling decisions to be taken at the June Council.

Council conclusions were agreed on the position to be taken by Member States at the forthcoming Diplomatic Conference to modernise the Warsaw Convention on air carrier liability. The Council also agreed conclusions explaining its decision to delay adoption of the Regulation restricting the use of aircraft modified ("hushkitted") or re-engined to meet current noise standards. The Council agreed that the Regulation should be adopted, by the end of April, to allow time for discussions with affected third countries.

The Commission gave a presentation of its recent Communication proposing a new European satellite navigation and positioning system, which it has named "Galileo". Delegations identified a number of questions for further consideration at an informal meeting of EU Transport Ministers in April.

Under other business, the Commission reported on two legislative proposals on which it was working. One would amend the Second Directive on driving licences, to allow certain professional drivers who met the previous, but not the latest eyesight standards, to renew their licences. The other consisted of a replacement for the draft Directive on airport safety checks, on which the Council had reached a common position but which could not be adopted because of objections by Spain over its application to Gibraltar Airport. These proposals could not however be put forward formally until the new Commission was appointed.

Water Abstraction

Mr. Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what decisions he has reached about changes to the water abstraction licensing system in England and Wales. [79819]

Mr. Meacher: Together with the Welsh Office, my Department will today publish a document entitled "Taking Water Responsibly: Government decisions following consultation on changes to the water abstraction licensing system in England and Wales". Copies are available in the Library of the House. Those decisions reflect the Government's intention that the abstraction authorisation system should contribute to sustainable development by protecting and, where possible, enhancing the aquatic environment whilst facilitating economic growth and higher living standards with minimum impact on water customers' bills. These decisions relate to changes which:

provide the Environment Agency with additional tools for the conduct of its duty to manage water resources, whilst encouraging a voluntary approach to necessary changes by abstractors; increase the scope and public availability of information on water resources, enabling abstractors to review their present operations and plan ahead in an environmentally responsible manner; increase the system's flexibility, accountability and administrative efficiency, thereby increasing the ease of access to sustainable water resources for existing and new entrants to the sectors for which water abstraction is vital; and incorporate appropriate transitional arrangements, both for existing abstractors and for those who will be subject to controls for the first time.

The package of changes will also provide improved scope for the application of economic instruments in relation to water abstraction which might emerge from research work currently in progress and the further consultation thereafter to which the Government are already committed.

Many of the changes will be made within the existing legal framework, but the Government will bring forward the legislation necessary for other changes as soon as Parliamentary time allows.

Waste Exports and Imports

Mr. Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to review the policies in the United Kingdom Management Plan for Exports and Imports of Waste. [79820]

Mr. Meacher: Existing policies on exports and imports of waste are set out in the United Kingdom Management Plan for Exports and Imports of Waste, which came into effect on 1 June 1996. These reflect the long-standing UK commitment to self-sufficiency in waste disposal and the well-established proximity principle, namely that waste should be disposed of in, or as close as possible to, the country or origin.

Since the Plan has been in force, there have been a number of changes at national and international level which have altered the arrangements for transfrontier shipments of waste. My Department, along with other Government Departments, therefore intends to begin a review of the plan in the near future. We would aim to produce a document for public consultation in the Autumn of 1999.

Soil Conservation

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to publish the draft proposals of the committee chaired by Mrs. Pam Williams on soil conservation; and if he will make a statement. [79180]

Mr. Meale: The Soil Strategy for England and Wales will be published for formal public consultation later this spring.

Contaminated Land

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many acres of contaminated land are in urban areas. [78404]

Mr. Meale: The information requested is not currently available. When the new Contaminated Land regime under Part IIA of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 is brought into force later this year, local authorities will have a duty to inspect their ideas to identify, and require the remediation of contaminated land which is causing unacceptable risks, assessed in the context of the current use of the land. Part IIA will also place a duty on the Environment Agency to prepare a periodic statistical report on contaminated land, based on information produced by local authorities.

Vacant Land

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many acres of vacant land in urban areas are currently in (a) private ownership and (b) public ownership. [78405]

Mr. Meale: This information is not currently held centrally. My Department is, however, developing phase 1 of the National Land Use Database, which will provide estimates of vacant previously developed land in urban areas by public and private ownership.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many acres of public vacant land remain on the land registers; and when the registers were last updated. [78406]

Mr. Meale: All requirements for local authorities, government bodies and other public bodies to maintain and publish registers of unused and underused land were cancelled in 1996. The information requested is consequently not available. However my Department is currently developing the National Land Use Database Phase 1, collecting information on vacant previously developed land including that in public ownership.

Lobbyists

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish a list, including names and dates, of all meetings that (a) he, (b) his officials, (c) his advisers and (d) his PPS have held during (i) 1997, (ii) 1998 and (iii) 1999 with people who work for political lobbying firms or for businesses that are members of the Public Relations Consultants Association. [79650]

Mr. Prescott: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Prime Minister on 9 March 1999, Official Report, column 168. The requirements of the Ministerial Code also apply to Parliamentary Private Secretaries when attending any meetings in an official or semi-official capacity.

Regional Eurostar Services

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will publish a response to the Environment, Transport and Regional Affairs Committee's fifth report of Session 1998–99 into Regional Eurostar Services (HC89); and if he will make a statement. [79853]

Mr. Prescott: The Government welcome the Committee's report which contained a considerable number of detailed recommendations which have been invaluable in drawing up the terms of reference for the Government's independent review. We are today publishing our formal response which has been laid before the House.

Transport Safety

Jacqui Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to consult bodies with an interest in transport safety, as part of the review announced in the Transport White Paper. [79854]

Dr. Reid: My Department is today publishing a consultation document seeking views on arrangements for transport safety. Nothing is more important than safety, and I am determined that we will continue to work towards the highest possible standards of safety in transport. Part of that means making sure that transport safety is organised in ways which are modern, effective and efficient, and which are capable of delivering continued improvements.

The results of the consultation will form a key input to the review of transport safety arrangements which we announced in our transport White Paper.

The review is concerned, not with specific safety strategies or measures, but with the principles which should govern the organisational and institutional framework for ensuring safe transport. In our consultation we are asking for views on that, and on the relationship between accident investigations and inquiries, and the pursuit of legal proceedings.

The consultation document is being distributed widely to bodies with an interest in transport safety, and is also available on the Internet. The closing date for responding is 14 June 1999. Copies of the document have been placed in the Library, and are available in the Vote Office.

Airport Transport Forums

Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to publish guidance on the setting up of airport transport forums, announced in the New Deal for Transport White Paper; and if he will make a statement. [79994]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government's White Paper on the Future of Transport "A New Deal for Transport: Better for Everyone" (Cm 3950) indicated that all airports in England with scheduled services should establish Airport Transport Forums and prepare Airport Surface Access Strategies to feed into Local Transport Plans. The Forums should have three specific objectives:

to draw up and agree challenging short and long-term targets for increasing the proportion of journeys to the airport made by public transport; to devise a strategy for achieving those targets, including green transport plans to cover commuting and business travel for all employees based at airports; and to oversee implementation of the strategy.

Draft guidance on the setting up of Airport Transport Forums and on the scope, content and handling of Airport Surface Access Strategies has been published today as a consultation documents, and copies have been placed in the House Libraries. We propose that those airports which have 1,000 or more scheduled passenger air transport movements per annum should be required to set up Forums. It has been agreed that the requirements to set up Forums, and the guidance, will apply to Wales as well as to England. Separate guidance will be published in respect of Scotland.

A separate good practice guide with illustrations of surface access improvements which have been implemented at airports is in preparation and will be published alongside the final guidance note later in the Spring.

Rating Revaluation

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will continue to prescribe the rateable value of some industries at the 2000 rating revaluation; and if he will make a statement. [79995]

Mr. Meale: Most ratepayers have their rateable values assessed using conventional methods by the Valuation Office Agency (VOA) and the Assessors in Scotland. However, this has to date been problematic for certain industries. Instead, these industries have had their rateable values prescribed by Order by the respective Secretaries of State. The industries currently in prescribed assessment are:

Electricity generators

National Grid

Regional Electricity Companies

British Gas Transco

Railtrack

London Underground

the water companies

large docks and harbours.

The VOA and the Scottish Assessors' Association have been examining whether it would be feasible for these industries to have their rateable values assessed by conventional methods. Although they have concluded that conventional assessment would be possible, the results would be far from clear. Conventional assessment would lead to significant differences of opinion over possible values which in many cases, would be properly resolved by only the courts. The level of uncertainty is significantly above that which could be expected from most properties. Resolving this uncertainty could take several years.

Therefore, the Secretary of State has, together with my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales, concluded that the industries currently subject to prescribed assessment will continue to have their rateable value prescribed by the respective Secretaries of State for the 2000 revaluation. We will begin discussions with the industries in prescribed assessment with a view to agreeing their new rateable values for the 2000 revaluation. In Scotland, by 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Prescribed assessment is not an ideal way of setting rateable values but it is the best available at this time. We will continue to work towards ending prescribed assessment in the future.

Flooding (Huntingdonshire)

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will provide financial assistance to Huntingdonshire district council under the Bellwin scheme for costs incurred following the severe flooding on the weekend of 9 to 12 April 1998. [79996]

Mr. Meale: I am satisfied that financial assistance under the Bellwin scheme is justified in the case of Huntingdonshire District Council given the exceptional nature of the floods and the damage caused. A scheme will, therefore, be established under section 155 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Grant will be paid to the authority to cover 85 per cent. of eligible costs above a threshold and which have been incurred by the authority in dealing with the flooding.

Plant and Machinery Rating

Mr. White: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the report of the second Wood Committee on the Rating of Plant and Machinery currently subject to prescribed assessment; and if he will make a statement. [79997]

Mr. Meale: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, together with my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland, published the report of the Second Wood Committee as a Command Paper which has been laid before the House today. The Committee examined the Rating of Plant and Machinery in Industries currently subject to Prescribed Assessment.

The Committee has made a series of recommendations which we will consider in time for the 2000 revaluation in England, Scotland and Wales. The Government would welcome views on the report before considering changes to the plant and machinery regulations.

The Committee has recommended that a tools of the trade exemption should apply to generating plant and machinery belonging to the power generators, although such plant which was in the nature of a building or structure should continue to be rated. If accepted, this exemption would not extend to many Combined Heat and Power (CHP) plants which are used in wider industry. The Government are committed to encouraging CHP technology and, therefore, will consider extending the tools of the trade exemption to all CHP technology if the Committee's recommendations are accepted.

The Committee also recommended that sewers be brought into rating. We do not intend to end sewers' exemption in 2000: it would create a significant and unexpected burden on the water industry and would cause considerable uncertainties in the periodic review of water prices currently being undertaken by the Director General of Water Services and similar work in Scotland.

The Government would welcome views on the report by 14 May 1999.

Planning Procedures

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how he intends to proceed following the response to the improving planning appeal procedures consultation paper published in August 1998. [79999]

Mr. Caborn: I am pleased by the very positive reaction to the proposals in this consultation paper. The Government's objectives of streamlining appeal procedures and speeding up planning decisions, while safeguarding public participation and the fairness, openness and quality of decision-making, were widely welcomed. All the proposals were supported by a majority of the 122 respondents and there were also a number of helpful suggestions for improving individual proposals which are reflected in our final conclusions. I am grateful to all those who took the trouble to comment. Their views have been given careful consideration in deciding how to proceed.

The changes we have made to our published proposals are designed to introduce a measure of flexibility into the timescales proposed while delivering real reductions in the overall time taken to handle appeals whether by written representations, hearings or inquiries. It is incumbent upon all parties to co-operate with the Planning Inspectorate in introducing greater discipline into the procedures and observe the deadlines which are set.

I am putting in the Library a list of our proposals, showing the changes made following consultation. The Department is now preparing the necessary statutory instruments and guidance to implement the changes. As indicated in the consultation paper, we shall monitor the modified procedures, and review their effectiveness after the first 12 months of operation. If necessary, we shall consult on further measures to ensure compliance with procedures in the light of that experience.

Planning Inspectorate Agency

Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what performance targets he proposes to set for the Planning Inspectorate Agency for the financial year 1999–2000. [80000]

Mr. Caborn: I have set challenging Key Performance targets for the Planning Inspectorate for 1999–2000. These underline the importance I attach to the role of the Inspectorate in helping to improve the efficiency of the planning system as part of our drive for better public services. Business and the community want a system which combines good quality decision-making with speed and certainty. I have therefore set the Inspectorate especially demanding targets for handling planning appeals and these will become even more demanding in subsequent years. It is vital, however, that parties to the appeals process play their part by co-operating with the Inspectorate in meeting deadlines and agreeing dates offered for inquiries.

The targets for 1999–2000 are as follows:

Timeliness

(a) 80 per cent. of all planning appeals decided by written representations to be determined in 18 weeks;

(b) 80 per cent. of all planning appeals decided by hearings to be determined in 24 weeks;

(c) 80 per cent. of all planning appeals decided by inquiries to be determined in 36 weeks;

(d) to provide an Inspector for local plan inquiries in at least 80 per cent. of cases on the date requested by a local authority provided that the objection period has ended and at least 6 months' notice has been given.

(e) to deliver 90 per cent. of Inspectors' reports on local plan inquiries to local authorities according to timescales agreed under service agreements.

Financial

Unit costs of planning appeals decided by written representations not to exceed £839;

Efficiency

Generate a 3 per cent. improvement in the use of running costs compared with 1998–99.

Quality

To satisfy the Advisory Panel on Standards, and thus the Secretary of State and National Assembly for Wales, annually and following rigorous monitoring that the quality of all the Inspectorate's work is being maintained at a high standard, with 99 per cent. of its casework free from justified complaint.

Information and Guidance

To carry out a customer survey of satisfaction with the inquiry and hearing processes for dealing with planning appeals, including the quality of Inspectors' reasoning in reaching a recommendation/decision.

Future Targets for Appeals

The timeliness targets for appeals represent the first step towards achieving the very significant improvements in handling times for 2001–02 set out in the Public Services Agreement for DETR. These are that the Inspectorate should decide:

80 per cent. of all planning appeals decided by written representation within 16 weeks

80 per cent. of all planning appeals decided by hearings within 22 weeks

80 per cent. of all planning appeals decided by inquiries within 30 weeks

I am also setting the Inspectorate provisional targets for handling planning appeals for the interim year 2000–01. These are to decide planning appeals as follows:

80 per cent. by written representations within 17 weeks

80 per cent. by hearings within 23 weeks

80 per cent. by inquiries within 33 weeks.

I shall confirm the planning appeals timeliness targets for 2000–01 in the light of performance in 1999–2000.

Flooding (Shrewsbury)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will provide financial assistance to Shrewsbury and Atcham Borough Council under the Bellwin scheme for costs incurred following the severe flooding between 25 October and 1 November 1998. [80061]

Mr. Meale: I am satisfied that financial assistance under the Bellwin scheme is justified in the case of Shrewsbury and Atcham Borough Council given the exceptional nature of the floods and the damage caused. A scheme will, therefore, be established under section 155 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Grant will be paid to the authority to cover 85 per cent. of eligible costs above a threshold and which have been incurred by the authority in dealing with the flooding.

Haringey

Ms Ryan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent financial arrangements he has made to assist the London Borough of Haringey. [80062]

Mr. Meale: Haringey has serious short-term financial difficulties brought about by a variety of circumstances which have combined to put their revenue budget under severe pressure. After having regard to all the relevant factors, and in view of the fact that some of the Council's circumstances could not reasonably have been foreseen and planned for by the authority, I have concluded that Haringey should receive some form of assistance in order to protect the delivery of local statutory services.

The most appropriate form of assistance is the offer of a Supplementary Credit Approval (SCA) of £1.3 million in 1998–99. This, with a capitalisation direction, will allow the Council to spread some of its costs in 1999–2000 over a number of years and so bring its budget back to a manageable level. It will be for Haringey in the first instance to decide which costs they intend to finance through the SCA.

Greater London Authority

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what arrangements he is making to ensure that the Greater London Authority can discharge its responsibilities. [80063]

Mr. Raynsford: Subject to the passage of the GLA Bill now before Parliament, the GLA will assume its responsibilities on 3 July 2000. We have commissioned consultants, KPMG, to advise on transition arrangements for the GLA. KPMG have now completed their report and copies are being placed in the Library. Among their conclusions, KPMG recommend that a dedicated Transition Team be established under the leadership of a Head of Transition and that the latter should be recruited as a matter of urgency.

The Audit Commission has kindly agreed to second to my Department Dr. Robert Chilton, Director Local Government Studies at the Commission to be the Head of Transition. Dr. Chilton, who will report to Ministers through the Director of the Government Office for London, will work closely with my officials to plan a smooth transition for the GLA and to ensure that the necessary financial controls and administrative machinery are in place. He will also be available, should the Authority so decide, to act as statutory Chief Administrative Officer of the Authority and is in a position to make a permanent appointment. I am most grateful to the Audit Commission for making this assistance available. It will be for the GLA, once elected, to make its own arrangements for permanent appointments to senior positions.

London Taxi Fares

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about London taxi fares. [80065]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Secretary of State is making an Order increasing London taxi fares by 4.32 per cent. on average with effect from Saturday 24 April 1999. The new tariff will incorporate a minimum charge of £1.40 (including a hire charge of £1.00) for the first 438 metres (479.2 yards) or 96 seconds. The rate will then be 20p for every 219 metres (239.6 yards) or 48 seconds until the fare exceeds £10.00, and 20p for each 146 metres (159.7 yards) or 32 seconds thereafter.

In addition, the Order will increase the supplements for evenings, nights, weekends and public holidays, which have not been increased since the early 1980s. The supplement for hirings during weekday evenings and during the day on Saturdays will therefore go up from 40p to 60p; the supplement for night-time hirings on weekdays and hirings around Sundays and public holidays will increase from 60p to 90p; and the supplement for hirings over the Christmas and New Year period will increase from £2.00 to £3.00.

Ordnance Survey

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what performance targets have been set for the Ordnance Survey Department and Executive Agency in 1999–2000. [80066]

Mr. Raynsford: The following performance targets have been set for Ordnance Survey in 1999–2000:

1. To achieve a revenue target of £83.4 million (excluding the National interest in Mapping Service Level Agreement);
2. To achieve a return on sales (excluding the National Interest in Mapping Service Level Agreement) of not less than 5 per cent.;
3. To ensure that, by 31 March 2000, 98.8 per cent. of existing major detail is surveyed and available to customers in the National Topographic Database at any one time. The target will increase to 99 per cent. by the year 2001;
4. In order to provide a quality service to customers, to despatch 92 per cent. of small scale products within 5 working days.

These targets have been reviewed in the light of Ordnance Survey's change to a Trading Fund from 1 April 1999. They demonstrate the Agency's continuing commitment to customers whilst increasing the emphasis on key financial monitors.

Valuation Tribunals

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the conclusion of the financial management and policy review of valuation tribunals. [80067]

Ms Armstrong: I have today placed in the Libraries of the House copies of the FMPR report of Valuation Tribunals. The report has also published on the DETR's web site.

This is the second FMPR of the VT service. It covers the full range of judicial, management and procedural issues. It takes account of extensive consultations with the VT service, the Valuation Office Agency (VOA), local authorities and the private sector.

We have decided that VTs should remain lay, independent and local bodies. A move to the private sector is considered inappropriate for such quasi-judicial bodies. A national agency is also considered inappropriate at the moment, although an efficiency scrutiny might consider the scope for rationalising jurisdictions and support services for a range of similar services.

A new Management Board, supported by a new national office, is needed to set standards and spread best practice within the service. To raise the quality of the service requires a review of membership levels, new arrangements for their appointment, and a requirement for new members to attend appropriate training and to provide written certain undertakings.

Significant savings are to be made by the establishment of 14 administrative units to replace the 38 offices which existed at the start of the review. New staffing arrangements are needed to support the new administration structure. Consultants have recently been appointed to bring forward detailed proposals.

Effective administration needs the continued modernisation of the VT IT system, and better use of IT for communicating with the 'outside world'.

The appeal procedures need reform to reduce delays, improve information and guidance to rate and tax payers, and to address the existing culture of brinkmanship. The review recommends more effective incentives and a simpler system. These proposals are the subject of a further consultation paper, which I am also publishing today (copies of which have also been placed in the House Libraries and on the DETR's web site).

The aim is to implement recommendations on judicial management and staffing aspects by 1 April 2000. Changes to office accommodation and the establishment of the 14 administrative units will be phased in over a longer period. New appeal procedures need to be developed in time for appeals arising from the non-domestic rating revaluation on 1 April 2000, though implementation may need to be phased.

Waste Management

Mr. Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he intends to take in response to the consultation exercise for amending the Special Waste Regulations 1996 and Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994. [80068]

Mr. Meacher: The proposals set out in the consultation paper issued by my Department, the Scottish Office and the Welsh Office on 2 April 1998 were generally welcomed by both industry and the Environmental Agencies. Having analysed the responses, we intend to proceed with the proposed amendments to the Special Waste Regulations, together with some further minor changes to the format of the consignment note and to the schedule under which carrier's notify movements of multiple loads—aimed at assisting monitoring and enforcement. In response to representations from business, we also intend to amend the Regulations to enable registers of Special waste to be retained in exceptional cases at sites other than those from which special waste has been removed, subject to consent by the local Environment Agency. Two consequential changes will also be made. First, to update references in the Regulations to the latest versions of the Approved Supply List and Approved Classification and Labelling Guide. Secondly, the Government's powers to set fees in respect of Special waste will be repealed, in order to enable the Agencies to utilise powers to set charges under the Environment Act 1995.

A number of respondents to the consultation exercise said that lower fees should apply to wastes being recycled or recovered. Although it is not feasible to consider this issue as part of the current exercise, the Environment Agencies will in the longer term be reviewing the fees for Special waste in the context of making a charging scheme. This would be subject to consultation and subsequent approval by the Government. Later this year, it is also intended to undertake a general review of the Regulations.

Following advice from the Environmental Agencies, we also intend to proceed with a small number of adjustments to the Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994 aimed at encouraging the recycling or recovery of Special waste. Exemptions from licensing will be provided, subject to various conditions, to enable:

i. storage of up to 23,000 litres of unused (waste) household paint pending re-use;

ii. laundering of up to 250 tonnes of waste textiles contaminated with oil, together with associated storage;

iii. storage of up to 5 tonnes of nickel cadmium or nickel metal hydride batteries and up to 10 tonnes of lead acid batteries pending recovery;

iv. storage of up to 23,000 litres of silver-bearing waste from printing or photographic processing pending recovery.

The consultation paper additionally proposed that the existing exemption for operations recovering silver from waste should be extended to include Special waste. There was very little support for this proposal and strong arguments against it which we have discussed with the Environment Agency in the context of ensuring proper protection for the environment and human health. As a consequence we have decided not to proceed. The Government have been considering the introduction of regulations to set standards for oil storage installation on which an announcement is planned later this year. The proposal in the consultation paper to amend the exemption for temporary storage of Special waste to include a separate limit for waste oil will be considered in the context of that announcement.

A further announcement will be made when the amending Regulations for England are ready to be laid before Parliament. As a devolved matter, the amendments for Scotland and Wales will be for consideration by the Scottish Parliament and the National Assembly for Wales.

Small Cetaceans

Mr. Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he intends to take to minimise disturbance to small cetaceans in accordance with the United Kingdom's obligations under the agreement on the conservation of small cetaceans of the Baltic and North seas. [80069]

Mr. Meacher: I have today published two sets of guidelines aimed at minimising disturbance to cetaceans in UK waters. The first is aimed at those involve in whale watching, both tour operators and members of the public who participate in tours; the second at those involved in recreational activities in UK coastal waters who may incidentally encounter cetaceans.

The Government are committed to protecting all species of whales, dolphins and porpoises and to maintaining healthy population levels for our and future generations. Where guidelines do not already exist we hope that this initiative will stimulate the development of locally targeted codes of conduct based on the over-arching principles contained in these guidelines.

Works Notice Powers

Mr. Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects the works notice powers to come into force. [80070]

Mr. Meacher: I have laid before the House new regulation, the Anti-Pollution Works Regulations 1999, which will enable new powers for the Environment Agency to serve works notices on polluters or potential polluters to be brought into force.

The works notice powers will enable the Environment Agency to serve a notice on polluters or potential polluters requiring them to carry out works or operations to remedy or prevent water pollution. They represent a more direct regulatory measure for the Agency than its existing powers to carry out anti-pollution works itself and then recover costs from the person responsible.

Works notices provide an additional regulatory goal for the Agency that will help prevent pollution incidents which in the past have occurred when a potential polluter has failed to respond to an informal approach.

The Regulations are largely procedural and make provision for the content of work notices, appeals against works notices, compensation for rights of entry and entry on to the Agency's public pollution control registers of particulars relating to works notices.

The Regulations have been subject to wide public consultation. In addition to comments on procedural matters some concerns were raised about the service of works notices in relation to other regulatory regimes, in particular the contaminated land powers. As a result the Environment Agency has set out its policy on the use of the works notice powers in a statement which my Department has agreed. Essentially, where other powers apply, for example the contaminated land regime, action would be taken under those powers.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Staff (Ethnic Origin)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will provide a breakdown by ethnic origin and grade of (1) the judiciary, (2) members of tribunals and (3) the magistracy. [79049]

Mr. Hoon: The available information is as follows: (1) The Judiciary: the figures for the ethnic origin of judges are believed to be correct, but as the ethnic origin of candidates for judicial office was not sought before October 1991, the data may be incomplete. (see table).

2. Tribunals: this information is only available for the Employment Tribunal and Social Security Appeals Tribunal where it has been collected on the same basis as for the judiciary since October 1991. It is set out below. Information in respect of other tribunals has only been collected on a consistent basis since 1998. (see table).

3. Magistracy: complete information is not readily available. It is held on individual records and not yet collated centrally. It could therefore only be provided at disproportionate cost. However, an ethnicity questionnaire was sent out to Lay Magistrates in England and Wales (excluding the Duchy of Lancaster) in May 1997 to which there was a 93 per cent. response rate. The details are set out in the table.

Bus Employees

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department how much his Department spent on legal fees including those of the BEST trustees relating to the Bus Employees Superannuation Trust, (a) in total and (b) in connection with the High Court hearing of 1 March. [79541]

Mr. Hoon: None.

Performance Targets

Jacqui Smith: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what are the key performance targets for Her Majesty's Land Registry, the Public Record Office, the Public Trust Office and the Court Service executive agencies for 1999–2000. [79852]

Mr. Hoon: The following tables set out the key performance targets that the Lord Chancellor has set for, Her Majesty's Land Registry, the Public Record Office, the Public Trust Office and the Court Service for 1999–2000.

HM Land Registry Key Performance Indicators and Targets 1999–2000

[1] ROCE below 6% reflects agreement with HM Treasury to apply surplus income generated in 1993–95 (when ROCE exceeded 25% in each year) to fee reductions in 1996–99. The ROCE for 1999–2000 is subject to confirmation by HM Treasury.
[2] The inflation factor for the cost per unit in cash terms is derived from the GDP indices announced by HM Treasury on 9 March 1999.
[3] Denotes the aim in the Registry's Statement of 'Service First' Standards which are detailed in Annex C of the Business Plan 1999–2000.

Fuller details of the agency's targets are given in its Business Plan, which is available from Her Majesty's Land Registry.

Public Record Office Key Performance Indicators and Targets 1999–2000

Indicator	Target
1. Efficiency
Unit costs of key activities:
(a) selecting and preserving the public records	£107.64 per metre: i.e. limit increase to 5%
(b) giving access to records	£3.82 per information transaction: i.e. reduce by 50%
Backlog of records in departments reported as being over 30 years old and awaiting review.	Process backlog by:
(a) reviewing 480 metres
(b) preparing for review an additional 1,000 metres
Provision of acceptable storage conditions i.e. meeting the preservation and environmental standards recommended by BS 5454: 1989 Recommendations for storage and exhibition of archival documents (BSI, 1989).	Increase the proportion of records stored to the standards from 88.29% to 88.45%.

Public Record Office Key Performance Indicators and Targets 1999–2000

Indicator	Target
Management efficiency in running support services and projects. (b) increase the proportion of invoices paid within thirty days from 97.5% to 99%	(a) reduce the level of staff sick absence in 1999 by 4.3%
2. Quality of Service The achievement of Charter Standards (a) Charter Standard targets for answering letters, delivering documents to users and reprographic services	Achieve 98.5% against the targets.
(b) User satisfaction surveys	Achieve assessment of 'excellent' on 56% of survey forms returned.
3. Effectiveness Performance in achieving specified milestones towards strategic objectives in the light of emerging government policies.	(a) increase revenue by 3% against the 1998–99 target
(b) make our lists of records available on the Internet by 31 October
(c) complete and disseminate three quality standards to guide public record bodies on the selection of records in line with the new Acquisition policy

Note:
Full details of the Office's targets are given in its Business Plan, which is available from the Public Record Office.

Public Trust Office Executive Agency Key Performance Targets 1999–2000

Indicator	Target
1. To carry out accounting transactions within target times.	To bring to account at least 99 per cent. of receipts and payments transactions within turnaround targets by volume wrighted performance.
2. To achieve investment targets.	To pay interest on the special rate account at an annual rate at or above the average of the agreed comparator, and to pay at least 75% of that rate on basic rate accounts; to ensure that 92.5% of all funds which have a Dedicated Investment Portfolio[1] have a formal investment review[2] at least once a year.
3. To achieve Charter Standards.	To achieve 98% of the 19 Charter Standards of most importance to the Office's users
4. To meet the unit cost target.	To operate within a unit cost of £198.41.
5. Percentage of full costs recovered	To ensure that 100% of full costs are recovered.

[1] A Dedicated Investment Portfolio is one which has been constructed to accommodate the specific requirements of the client and has a sufficiency of funds and duration to allow it to be adjusted in line with stockmarket or client circumstances.
[2] The formal investment review is a full consideration of the overall investment strategy being pursued for a particular portfolio. It is complemented by PTO policies of unitising smaller funds and benchmarking larger portfolios against stock exchange models. The investment media held in the funds are subject to on-going review as company announcements or relevant research material becomes available and actioned at any time.
[3] The target includes two new standards for the review of receivership accounts, they are to: complete a review of 80% of receivers' accounts within 12 weeks of receipt; review 80% of the Receiver's accounts within 12 weeks.
These standards will be reviewed on receipt of the Committee of Public Accounts' recommendations on the Comptroller and Auditor General's report 'Protecting the Financial Welfare of People with Mental Incapacity'.
Note:
Fuller details of the Office's performance targets will appear in the PTO Plan, which will be available from the Public Trust Office later in the year.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Parliament (Costs)

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the initial budget for converting and fitting out the Church of Scotland Assembly Hall and adjacent buildings as a temporary home for the Scottish Parliament; and what is the latest estimate of the cost. [70210]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 15 February 1999]: The current estimates are:

Converting the buildings: £4.5 million

Fitting out (including IT, telecom, security equipment, furniture, office equipment): £3.1 million.

The initial estimate was given in my answer on 12 May 1998, Official Report, column 88, to the right hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley), and included rent and rates. This was a provisional estimate and I made it clear then that it did not include fitting out costs, which were still being assessed. The estimate of building conversion costs at that time was £2m. Full building condition surveys were carried out on the CEC office buildings when the Scottish Office took occupation at the end of November 1998. These surveys revealed that significantly more work would have to be carried out in these building than was previously envisaged. In particular, work was required to ensure that lighting throughout the office buildings complied with current statutory requirements and to improve electrical systems, fire alarms and emergency lighting to meet current building regulations. In addition special services to meet the needs of the Parliament such as IT networks, security measures and provision for broadcasters have had to be provided.

The costs of these items could only be properly assessed once the Scottish Office had occupation of the buildings.

All of these costs will be met from the financial provision made for the establishment of the Parliament in 1998–99 and 1999–2000.

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated cost of those roadworks made necessary by the siting of the new Scottish Parliament building. [77939]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 26 March 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him earlier today.

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated cost in relation to the new Scottish Parliament building of (a) VAT, (b) fees, (c) site purchase, (d) site clearance and preliminary works and (e) road works; and which of these are included in the £50 million cost referred to in his answer of 28 January 1999, to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell), Official Report, column 385. [77438]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 24 March 1999]: The figures requested (with the exception of (e)) are shown in the table, along with the estimated construction cost of £50 million (excluding VAT and fees) referred to in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) on 28 January 1999, Official Report, columns 385–86.

	Cost estimate £ million
Site Purchase	4
Site Preparation	1
Construction	50
Fees	10.5
VAT on construction and fees	10.6

The figures shown are estimates and subject to review in the light of the development of the detailed design for the building and, in due course, of the results of the competitive procurement of works packages. The costs for item (e) will be estimated once the proposals for the surrounding area have been developed further.

Reviews and Task Forces

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what (a) reviews, (b) task forces and (c) advisory groups have been established by his Department since 1 May 1997; what costs they have incurred to date; and what reports they have published. [71514]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 22 February 1999]: Details of reviews, task forces and advisory groups established since 1 May 1997 and of the reports they have published follow. Where the information is readily available, approximate costs incurred on matters such as members' expenses, publication of reports and consultation exercises are shown. Staff costs are not included as these are subsumed within the Department's running costs.

Hypothermia

Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many deaths, where hypothermia was mentioned on the death certificate as the main or contributory cause of death, took place in each (a) region and (b) parliamentary constituency of Scotland in 1997, amongst those (i) of all ages, (ii) aged 60 to 74, (iii) aged 74 to 84 and (iv) aged over 85 years; what were the winter mortality rates in each of those areas for (1) the population as a whole, (2) people aged 60 to 74, (3) people aged 75 to 84 and (4) people aged 85 years and over; and what the percentage increase was in each group in each area compared to non-winter deaths in 1997–98. [72593]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 1 March 1999]: The information requested is presented in the following tables.

There is no universally recognised definition of winter mortality. The information presented in the second table is based on a formula that has been used in recent years by the Office for National Statistics when presenting data for England and Wales. This defines 'excess' winter deaths as the difference between the number of deaths during the four months December to March and the average number of deaths during the preceding four months (August to November) and the following four months (April to July). A negative figure occurs when the average non-winter deaths exceed the winter deaths. As this is a crude measure of the increase in mortality associated with winter conditions the numbers of excess deaths have been rounded to the nearest ten.

Provisional

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many deaths, where hypothermia was mentioned on the death certificate as the main or contributory cause of death, took place in Scotland in (a) 1997, (b) 1992, (c) 1987, (d) 1982 and (e) 1977 amongst those (i) of all ages, (ii) aged 60 to 74, (iii) aged 74 to 84 and (iv) aged over 85 years; what were the winter mortality rates for (1) the population as a whole, (2) people aged 60 to 74, (3) people aged 75 to 84 and (4) people aged 85 years and over; and what the percentage increase was in each group compared to non-winter deaths in 1997–98, 1992–93, 1987–88, 1982–83 and 1977–78, respectively. [72594]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 1 March 1999]: The information requested in presented in the following tables.

There is no universally recognised definition of winter mortality. The information presented in the second table is based on a formula that has been used in recent years by the Office for National Statistics when presenting data for England and Wales. This defines 'excess' winter deaths as the difference between the number of deaths during the four months December to March and the average number of deaths during the preceding four months (August to November) and the following four months (April to July). As this is a crude measure of the increase in mortality associated with winter conditions the numbers of excess deaths have been rounded to the nearest ten.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 22 February 1999, Official Report, column 143, for what reasons he did not supply an estimate for spending on special advisers in 1996–97; if he will provide estimates of total spending on special advisers for (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98, and (c) 1998–99; and if he will make a statement. [74165]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 5 March 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 22 February 1999, Official Report, column 143. Details of costs relating to the Special Advisers in 1996–97 could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Special Advisers

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the total cost of special advisers in his Department for each of the years (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98, (d) 1998–99 and (e) 1999–2000; and if he will make a statement. [74240]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 3 March 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 22 February 1999, Official Report, column 143. Details of costs relating to the Special Advisers in 1995–96 and 1996–97 could only be supplied at disproportionate cost.

Scottish Executive

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the cost of funding the private offices of the First Minister and the other Ministers of the Scottish Executive in the Scottish Parliament. [74980]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 11 March 1999]: The number of Ministers in the Scottish Executive will not be known until after the election on 6 May 1999. However, the question of private office support for the First Minister and other Ministers is currently being considered as part of the general planning associated with devolution. No estimate of the cost of funding the private office has yet been made. The cost will be met from within the overall provision made for expenditure on administration of the Scottish Executive.

Student Finance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the annual cost, for each of the next 20 years, of replacing the university maintenance loan with a maintenance grant for Scottish students at United Kingdom universities; if he will set out the figures in terms of (a) their cash accounting and funding impact and (b) their effect in terms of resource accounting; and if he will make a statement. [74711]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 5 March 1999]: The information is set out in the table. Figures have been provided by statisticians from the Department for Education on a U.K. wide basis and the Scottish share has been calculated as approximately 11% of the total. Information is not available for each of the next twenty years. However a selection of years was modelled for illustrative purposes.

2015–16	308	236.5

Salmon Farmers (Compensation)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to pay salmon farmers compensation when they are required to slaughter their stock as a consequence of a List 1 disease. [76210]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 18 March 1999]: The Government have no plans to pay compensation but have proposed a financial aid package for the industry. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend to my hon. Friend the Member for Inverness, East, Nairn and Lochaber (Mr. Stewart) dated 8 February 1999, Official Report, column 62.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Schools

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (i) pupils and (ii) teachers there were in Scottish (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in 1998–99. [76625]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 19 March 1999]: The information requested is set out in the table.

Provisional numbers of pupils and full-time equivalent (FTE) teachers in publicly funded primary and secondary schools in Scotland in 1998–99

	Primary	Secondary
Pupils	435,518	311,277
FTE teachers	22,493	23,459

As from 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Highlands and Islands Enterprise

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the Scottish Office budget for Highlands and Islands Enterprise in cash terms and at 1998–99 prices for (a) 1992–93, (b) 1993–94, (c) 1994–95, (d) 1995–96, (e) 1996–97, (f) 1997–98 and (g) 1998–99; and what is his estimate for (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–01 and (iii) 2001–02. [76864]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 16 March 1999]: The Scottish Office Budget for Highlands and Islands Enterprise in cash terms and at 1998–99 prices for the years 1992–93 to 1998–99 and the plan figures for 1999–2000 to 2001–02 are as follows.

£ million

Year	Budget	1998–99 prices
1992–93	78.8	91.5
1993–94	79.2	89.5
1994–95	76.3	85.0
1995–96	77.7	84.2
1996–97	75.8	79.6
1997–98	79.1	81.1
1998–99	79.7	79.7
1999–2000 (plans)	78.7	76.8
2000–01 (plans)	77.0	73.3
2001–02 (plans)	77.0	71.5

Plan figures for 1999–2000 are subject to adjustment to reflect annual and in-year post CSR changes to baseline provision. The budget figure shown for 1999–2000 includes the £1.7 million recently announced for the purpose of attracting inward investment projects to the Highlands and Islands.

Future year plans reflect a realignment of Highlands and Islands Enterprise's existing training programmes to reflect the introduction of the New Deal, in which the enterprise network will play a key role. About £300 million of New Deal resources will also be available in Scotland over the lifetime of this Parliament by way of Employment Service spending. A proportion of this will be available for delivery of the New Deal programme in the Highlands and Islands.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Police Budget

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was his Department's policing budget in cash terms and at 1998–99 prices for (a) 1992–93, (b) 1993–94, (c) 1994–95, (d) 1995–96, (e) 1996–97, (f) 1997–98 and (g) 1998–99; and what is his estimate for (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–01 and (iii) 2001–02. [76861]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 16 March 1999]: The information is as follows:

£ million

Year	Cash Terms	1998–99 Prices
1992–93	537	625
1993–94	567	643
1994–95	626	700

Highers

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many pupils in Scottish schools gained passes in Highers at C or above in (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1992–93, (iii) 1987–88, (iv) 1982–83, (v) 1977–78 in (a) French, (b) German, (c) other modern languages, (d) English, (e) mathematics, (f) history, (g) geography, (h) modern studies, (i) physics, (j) chemistry, (k) biology, (l) art, (m) music, (n) graphic design, (o) computing and (p) Latin, Greek or classical studies. [77264]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 24 March 1999]: The information is shown in the following table, except for Graphic Design for which a Higher was not available. The figures will be affected by the overall increase in the number of S5 and S6 pupils from around 51,700 in 1977–78 to around 74,300 in 1997–98.

Consultancy Fees

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what fees to consultants have been paid or incurred in (i) 1996–97, (ii) 1997–98 and in (iii) 1998–99 so far by (a) each section of the Scottish Office, (b) each local enterprise company, (c) Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise, (d) each health board in Scotland, (e) each water authority in Scotland, (f) each of the Lottery-fund distributors in Scotland, (g) each local authority in Scotland, (h) the Scottish Arts Council and Scottish Sports Council and (i) Scottish Homes. [77420]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 24 March 1999]: Expenditure on external consultancy by The Scottish Office, its executive agencies and associated departments in the years requested, is as follows:

	£ million
1996–97	2.7
1997–98	2.5
1998–99	2.1

The information requested about expenditure by other public bodies is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Education Expenditure

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much (a) has been and (b) is planned to be spent in Scotland in each year between 1991–92 and 2001–02 on (i) early and primary education, (ii) secondary education, (iii) further education, (iv) higher education, (v) community education, (vi) special educational needs, (vii) other categories of education and (viii) education in total in (1) cash terms and (2) at 1998–99 prices. [77273]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 24 March 1999]: The actual and planned expenditure figures are set out in the following tables. It should be noted that planned figures cannot be compared with actual figures. The actual expenditure figures include local authority expenditure funded by both Central Government and council tax, whilst the figures for planned expenditure include only estimates of grant aided expenditure.

Notes:
1. A split of local authority expenditure in the categories requested is not available for 1997–98 and 1998–99.
2. Local authority plans for 1999–2000 to 2001–02 are not yet known. The table shows Government estimates of Grant Aided Expenditure for these years. Expenditure figures for earlier years include funding from council tax in addition to support from central Government.
3. Planned expenditure for 1999–2000 to 2001–02 has been adjusted to take account of 1999 budget decisions.
4. Local authority capital expenditure is not included. Nor are loan and leasing charges or capital funded from revenue accounts.
5. Figures for 1997–98 and 1998–99 include the proceeds of the sale of student debt.
6. Other includes the Careers Service; transport, residential accommodation and bursary assistance for school pupils; education administration costs; school meals and miscellaneous education expenditure.
7. Higher education includes student support costs.

Special Needs

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to change the current arrangements whereby employers are expected to pay a training allowance to special needs trainees in Scotland. [77422]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 24 March 1999]: Trainees in Skillseekers who are designated as having special training needs (STN) and who are on placement with an employer do not receive a training allowance from the employer. The training allowance is paid by the training provider at a level set by the LEC. An employer who is delivering the training under contract to the LEC and is, therefore, acting as the training provider, would be responsible for managing the training allowance. If an employer has chosen to employ an STN trainee, then he will pay the trainee a wage, not a training allowance.

As from 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

EU Subsidies

Mrs. Laing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total amount of EU subsidies paid to farmers in each year since 1992 in (a) cash terms and (b) 1998–99 prices. [77762]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 25 March 1999]: Outturn figures since 1992–93 for direct subsidies to Scottish farmers which are 100 per. cent EU funded (these include livestock premium schemes and arable aid payments but exclude HLCAs and agri-environment schemes) are given in the table at both current and 1998–99 prices.

Departmental Staff (Ethnic Origin)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide a breakdown, in numerical and percentage terms, of the ethnic origin, at 1 March, of (a) his private office, (b) Government special advisers, (c) his Policy Unit and (d) staff in total. [78507]

Mr. Dewar: Information on the ethnic origin of the civil servants is collected using a voluntary, confidential questionnaire. To protect the privacy of individual staff, data relating to fewer than five people are not disclosed in equal opportunities monitoring. Information is therefore not available for (a) my private office and (b) government special advisers in my department. My department does not have a separate Policy Unit.

As regards information on special advisers and staff in total, I refer to the answers given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office, as follows:

(b) special advisers—22 February 1999, Official Report, column 39;

(d) staff in total— 31 March 1999, Official Report, column 711.

European Structural Funds

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many claims for payment by objective 1 projects have been delayed for more than (a) three months, (b) six months and (c) one year since the inception of the Highlands and Islands partnership programme. [78252]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 24 March 1999]: This information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Since the beginning of the Highlands and Islands Objective 1 programme in 1994, more than 80,000 separate payment claims have been processed. The processing of individual claims may have been delayed for various reasons, including the need to clarify with the project sponsor the information provided in the claim. Until recently, payments could only be made when the relevant funds had been transferred from the EU Commission. New arrangements have now been introduced to ensure that payments are no longer delayed for this reason.

With effect from 1 July 1999, the administration of the European Structural Funds in Scotland will be the responsibility of the Scottish Administration.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many Objective 1 project claims for payment, and to what value, are currently awaiting settlement; and how many of these have been waiting in excess of (a) six months and (b) 12 months. [78251]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 24 March 1999]: 3001 payment claims with a value of £20,082,092 are currently awaiting payment. 106 of these, with a value of £1,817,145, have been outstanding for more than six months, while 69 payment claims, with a value of £470,847, have been outstanding for more than 12 months, mostly due to the need to seek additional information on the claims.

With effect from 1 July 1999, the administration of the European Structural Funds in Scotland will be the responsibility of the Scottish Administration.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on which dates the 1996 annual progress report in respect of the Highlands and Islands partnership programme was (a) submitted and (b) re-submitted to the European Commission; for what reasons the report was required to be re-submitted; and if he will make a statement. [78253]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 24 March 1999]: The Highlands and Islands 1996 Annual Report was first submitted to the European Commission on 21 September 1998. Following the Commission's request for amendments, it was re-submitted on 17 November.

The format of the 1996 Annual Report was originally based on the format of the 1995 Annual Report which was agreed by the European Commission on 3 July 1998. When the Commission initially received the 1996 Annual Report, it requested certain further changes to the format, which was why it had to be re-submitted.

With effect from 1 July 1999, the administration of the European Structural Funds in Scotland will be the responsibility of the Scottish Administration.

Multi-layer Democracy Report

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) on the basis of whose request the hon. Member for Inverness, East, Nairn and Lochaber (Mr. Stewart) agreed to let the Secretary of State see extracts from the Scottish Affairs Committee report on Multi-Layer Democracy (HC 460 of Session 1997–98); [79353]

(2) if he, other Ministers or advisers contacted any other members of the Scottish Affairs Committee seeking information on its report on Multi-Layer Democracy (HC 460 of Session 1997–98) prior to its publication; [79354]

(3) if he initiated the contact with the hon. Member for Inverness, East, Nairn and Lochaber (Mr. Stewart), which led to him receiving extracts from the Scottish Affairs Committee report on Multi-Layer Democracy (HC 460 of Session 1997–98); [79355]

(4) if he will list the people in his Department who saw the leaked copy of the Scottish Affairs Committee report on Multi-Layer Democracy (HC 460 of Session 1997–98) prior to publication and the approximate dates when this occurred; [79356]

(5) what use (a) he, (b) his Ministers and (c) his advisers made of the leaked copy of the Scottish Affairs Committee report on Multi-Layer Democracy (HC 460 of Session 1997–98) in briefing the press. [79352]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 30 March 1999]: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 24 March 1998, Official Report, column 324.

The Herald newspaper carried extensive extracts from the Select Committee's report on 26 November, together with a feature and a leading article on the subject. The newspaper confirmed to my office that it had a leaked copy of the entire report. The story was followed up by many Scottish and UK newspapers and by the broadcast media.

As a result of that coverage, I received many requests for a response from journalists and complaints from members of the Select Committee who felt that the press reports misrepresented their position. This led me to comment, when approached by journalists during an unrelated engagement on the morning of 26 November, that the report appeared to have been subject to selective quotation.

I spoke to my hon. Friend the Member for Inverness, East, Nairn and Lochaber (Mr. Stewart) later that day. Our conversation centred on his disquiet and that of other Members of the Committee about the leaking of the report and the omission from the quoted extracts of the sole conclusion, which he described to me.

At the time of our conversation, the report had already been made to the House, was at the printers, had been leaked in its entirety, had been extensively quoted and commented on in the press and was the subject of many requests for comments made to my office. It was already in the public domain, and the possibility of influencing its contents, which would have been wholly improper, could not arise.

My conversation with my hon. Friend was on that basis. To the best of my recollection, I asked him if he could confirm the accuracy of the quotations and findings of which I was already aware. Given the concerns which he had already expressed to me, my hon. Friend said that he was prepared to give that confirmation. He told me he would do so after consulting the report, which he did not then have to hand. Relevant extracts were sent by fax to my office a short time later. They were seen by no-one other than me, staff in my Private Office and my Special Advisers and no further use was made of them.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he asked the hon. Member for Inverness, East, Nairn and Lochaber (Mr. Stewart) to show him a pre-publication copy of the report of the Scottish Affairs Committee into Multi-Layer Democracy (HC 460 of Session 1997–98); and if he will make a statement. [79351]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 30 March 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer provided to the right hon. Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean) today, Official Report, column 796.

Registers of Scotland Executive Agency

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the prior options review of the Registers of Scotland Executive Agency. [80169]

Mr. Dewar: A prior options review of the Registers of Scotland Executive Agency was carried out recently for my Department. The review concluded that there will continue to be a need for a function to maintain a register of title to land with the power to make independent decisions in cases of dispute, and recommended continuation of both Agency and Trading Fund status.

Extensive recommendations on issues such as governance and target setting were made to enhance the strategic management of the Agency and to improve its commercial approach.

I have accepted the recommendations on Agency status and on improvements to the coverage and stringency of the Agency's targets, which will be revised as soon as possible.

I have not, however, accepted the review's recommendation that decisions on the Agency's accommodation strategy should be brought forward. As recently as last November, I agreed that the Agency should maintain its presence in its existing, or similar, locations in Edinburgh and Glasgow until 2007. This option will have the least impact on the Agency's productive capacity at a time when it will be undertaking the major task of completing the extension of the Land Register to the whole of Scotland.

The recommendations on Trading Fund status, governance arrangements and the future strategic management of the Agency will be considered by Ministers of the Scottish Executive and the Scottish Parliament. Interim arrangements have been made to continue Trading Fund status until 31 March 2000.

From 1 July 1999 this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Opencast Coal

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will issue finalised planning policy guidance on opencast coal. [80170]

Mr. Macdonald: The Government's planning policy for opencast coal is being published today in National Planning Policy Guideline 16: Opencast Coal and Related Minerals. This NPPG, which replaces NPPG 4: Land for Mineral Working as the relevant guidance for opencast coal and related minerals, indicates the considerations which planning authorities should take into account in framing development plan policies and in determining planning applications for the extraction of opencase coal and related minerals. NPPG 4 continues to provide policy guidance for all other minerals.

The new guidance takes account of the Ten Point Plan prepared by the Government before the Election, the outcome of the Energy Fuels Review and the responses made to consultation on the draft revised guidance which I announced to the House on 22 October 1998. The guidance ensures that a robust framework is in place to protect communities and the environment from any potential harm caused by proposed opencase coal developments. It will ensure that all proposals are subjected to tough scrutiny and if consent is granted the highest environmental standards will apply.

As a result of the new guidance, planning authorities will need to review existing development plan policies for controlling opencase coal and related mineral extraction. To ensure early action, the Secretary of State is issuing a direction requiring all the relevant planning authorities to prepare and submit an alteration to their structure plan policies to bring them into line with the guidance. The Direction relating to the notification of certain applications to the Secretary of State, issued on 22 October 1998, remains in force, although it will be reviewed once the new guidance is reflected in planning authorities' structure plans.

The Government do not envisage a prohibition on the working of opencast coal. However, NPPG 15 properly puts concern for communities and the environment at the heart of decision making by seeking to apply a sustainable approach in determining where extraction may take place. Full weight should be given to the effect and potential disturbance on local communities as well as other environmental considerations including nature conservation and the impact on the landscape. Where a proposal would cause demonstrable harm, the guidance is clear that permission should not be granted except where the benefits of the development proposal to the community would out-weigh the potential harm. The Government look to planning authorities to steer proposals to environmentally acceptable sites and, where necessary, to refuse consent where they judge such developments would not be in the overall best interests of the affected local communities and environment.

A copy of the guidance is being placed in the House Library. Copies are also being widely circulated to those with an interest including planning authorities, the industry and environmental interests.

From 1 July 1999 this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Packaging Regulations

Miss Begg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the outcome of the review of the operation of the Packaging Waste Recovery Note system to demonstrate compliance with the Packaging Regulations. [80171]

Mr. Macdonald: I have considered the conclusions of the Advisory Committee on Packaging together with representations made in the course of the review of the Regulations. Obligated parties are keen to see greater transparency in reprocessors' treatment of Packaging Recovery Note (PRN) revenue so that they know that the resources they are putting in are being used as intended. I therefore propose the following changes to the PRN system in Scotland:

(i) that as a condition of accreditation, reprocessors should provide an annual return to the Scottish Environment Protection Agency (SEPA) showing PRN revenue for the previous year; the proportion of PRN revenue that has been passed to others to develop the collection infrastructure; and what proportion was directed at either developing reprocessing capacity or at developing end-use markets for recycled materials. Details should also be provided as to what additional capacity is planned and what steps have been taken to develop markets for recyclate.

(ii) that PRNs should be issued to obligated parties only or to those representing them. In addition, individual businesses who are obligated members of the packaging chain and bring waste for reprocessing, should be given first refusal on the PRN when such waste is accepted for reprocessing.

Reprocessors should therefore make reasonable forward provision for such obligated parties who wish to have PRNs, and I would expect the obligated parties also to do what they can to ensure that the reprocessors are informed as soon as possible about their PRN requirements.

I will be asking SEPA to amend their Guidance Note to reflect these changes.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Scottish Parliament (Tax)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the proportion of expenditure on the set-up costs of the tax varying powers of the Scottish Parliament which will have been incurred before the end of the 1999–2000 fiscal year for the (a) Inland Revenue and (b) Department of Social Security; and if he will make a statement. [79551]

Mr. Dewar: Work is currently in progress to ensure that all the necessary arrangements are in place to allow the tax varying powers to be used with effect from 6 April 2000 if the incoming Scottish Executive wishes to do so. If that work continues, therefore, all of the set-up costs for Inland Revenue and the Department of Social Security will have been incurred by then. It will, however, be a matter for the incoming Scottish Executive to decide whether or not this preparatory work should continue.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 16 February 1999, Official Report, columns 644–45, on the Scottish Parliament's tax-varying powers, if he will update his answer to reflect the changes to income tax bands and rates announced in the Budget statement. [78523]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 25 March 1999]: Following the measures announced in Budget 99 it is currently estimated for 2000–01 that the yield from a decision to increase the basic rate of income tax by one penny for Scottish taxpayers would be as follows:

	£ million
Gross	230
Net	225

Net of Working Families Tax Credit and income related benefits: Income Support, Housing Benefit and Council Tax benefit

Social Inclusion

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the amount of resources to be made available to increase the level of social inclusion under (a) working families tax credits, (b) the national minimum wage, (c) general practitioners for deprived communities, (d) Listening To/Working for Communities and (e) New Deal for Communities Pathfinder projects for each of the next three years. [78714]

Mr. Macdonald: The estimated net value of the Working Families Tax Credit to families in Scotland is £170 million in 2000–01 and £180 million in 2001–02.

It is estimated that 157,000 workers in Scotland will benefit from the introduction of the National Minimum Wage. An estimate of the value of this initiative to workers in Scotland is in preparation, and a letter will be sent to my hon. Friend.

A total of £7.5 million in each of the next 3 years is being invested in payments to general practitioners working in deprived communities.

Investment in the 2 strands of the New Deal for Communities in Scotland (Working for Communities and Listening to Communities) amounts to £3.3 million in 1999–2000, £3.3 million in 2000–01 and £6.3 million in 2001–02.

From 1 July 1999, funding of health services in Scotland and the Working for Communities and Listening to Communities programmes will be matters for the Scottish Parliament.

Census (Religious Affiliation)

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what factors underlay the decision not to include a question about religious affiliation in the 2001 census form in Scotland; [79367]

(2) what representations he has received from church and ethnic minority groups requesting a question about religious affiliation in the 2001 census form in Scotland. [79368]

Mr. McLeish: The Government's proposals for the 2001 Census of Population set out in the White Paper (CM 4253) published on 4 March were made after extensive consultation. Potential users were asked to submit business cases setting out the uses and value of collecting information from the Census for each topic. The criteria against which these cases were judged included an assessment of the resources that are distributed on the basis of the information, the value of the information for very small areas (which the Census in particular can provide), the existence or otherwise of alternative sources, the acceptability of the question to the form-filler, the quality of the information obtained, and the costs of collection.

The main reason for the proposal not to include a question about religious affiliation in Scotland was that no strong case has been made by users in central and local government or elsewhere that the uses to which information from such a question would be put require a Census question (rather than obtaining the information from alternative approaches such as a sample survey). A change in primary legislation would also be required to ask a religion question in Scotland.

Although, during consultation, Action of Churches Together in Scotland and the Scottish Council for Racial Equality indicated that they would like to see a religion question in the Census, a strong case was not established.

Since publication of the Government's proposals, representations have been received from Bailie Bashir Maan and Councillor Hanzala Malik, both of Glasgow City Council and the latter in his role as Chairperson of the West of Scotland Community Relations Council.

Final decisions on the content of the Census in Scotland will be for the Scottish Parliament.

From 1 July 1999, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Sheriffs (Retirement)

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy regarding the retirement ages of (a) sheriffs and (b) temporary sheriffs and (i) what policy change in relation to the retirement age of temporary sheriffs he has made since May 1997, (ii) what consultation he had about such policy change and (iii) with whom such consultation took place. [78763]

Mr. McLeish: Retiral ages for all Sheriffs are set by statute and no changes have been made, or are proposed, in relation to permanent sheriffs. Temporary Sheriffs are appointed for one year at a time and commissions are subject to review annually in the light of the needs of the courts. On the recommendation of the Lord Advocate, a number of Commissions of older Temporary Sheriffs have not been renewed to make way for the appointment of younger recruits who can be tested on their ability to move on to permanent posts. This policy has been discussed on two occasions with the Temporary Sheriffs Association. Individuals affected by the ruling have been invited to make representations and some Commissions have been extended where exceptional cases have been put forward.

From 1 July 1999 this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Lobbyists

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a list, including names and dates, of all meetings that (a) he, (b) his officials, (c) his advisers and (d) his PPS have held during (i) 1997, (ii) 1998 and (iii) 1999 with people who work for political lobbying firms or for businesses that are members of the Public Relations Consultants Association. [79642]

Mr. Dewar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 9 March 1999, Official Report, column 168. The requirements of the Ministerial Code also apply to Parliamentary Private Secretaries when attending any meetings in an official or semi-official capacity.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Secondments

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff, at what grade and what cost, are currently seconded from Overseas Trade Services to (a) Government Offices and (b) Business Links as export development consultants. [78437]

Mr. Wilson: None.

Export Development Counsellors are employed directly by Business Links and are recruited from the private sector with recent overseas commercial experience.

There are currently 82 Export Development Counsellors (EDC) based at 69 Business Links. All Business Links require access to an EDC to obtain accreditation.

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the grades and locations are of the staff seconded from Government Offices to Business Links to act as access points for overseas trade missions as set out in paragraph 19 of Sir Richard Wilson's review of export promotion. [78441]

Mr. Wilson: I have placed copies of the information matrix entitled "International Trade Teams in Business Links" in the Library of the House. The information is kept by British Trade International.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people in the United Kingdom are currently employed in the production of electricity from (a) wind power, (b) solar power and (c) wave power. [73773]

Mr. Battle: The UK renewables industry currently employs some 3,500 people in 700 companies. The British Wind Energy Association estimate that of these there are around 2,600 full-time equivalent jobs currently engaged in the production of electricity from wind power. As I said in my recent announcement of the publication of our Renewables Review Document, on 30 March 1999, Official Report, columns 577–78, through creating an export drive, and by further developing the industry and the UK market, up to 45,000 jobs could be created.

Mr. Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the United Kingdom's energy needs were met by renewable energy sources (a) in 1979 and (b) in 1997. [73887]

Mr. Battle: In 1979 less than one third of a per cent. of the inland consumption of primary fuels in the United Kingdom were met from renewable sources, that is less than $\frac{1}{4}$ million tonnes of oil equivalent. This rose to 1.0 per cent. by 1997, equating to 2.3 million tonnes of oil equivalent.

Currently, approximately 2 per cent. of UK's electricity is generated from renewable sources. We expect this to rise to 5 per cent. by 2003.

The Government are working towards a target of renewable energy providing 10 per cent. of UK electricity supplies as soon as possible. We hope to achieve this by 2010.

Structural Funds

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much the UK has received in EU structural funds during the last five years; and what is his estimate for the next five years as a result of the Berlin summit. [79578]

Mr. Wills: The UK has received total allocations of 11,[illegible] meuro for the years 1995–99. At this time we cannot say what allocations will be for the next five years.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what ceiling for expenditure on structural funds in the period 2000 to 2006 (a) in cash terms and (b) as a percentage of GDP was agreed at the Berlin summit. [79569]

Mr. Wills: Following agreement at the Berlin Council, the overall allocations for the Structural and Cohesion Funds in the 15 Member States over the period 2000–06 will total 213 beuro. In 1999 prices this is likely to be about 0.35 per cent. of the EU-15 GDP for the seven years.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate the percentage of EU GDP which will be spent on EU structural funds in each of the next five years as a result of the agreement at the Berlin summit. [79570]

Mr. Wills: Following the agreement at the Berlin Council the allocations for the EU Structural and Cohesion Funds in the 15 member states is likely to be about the following percentages of the EU-15 GDP in each of the next five years;

Year	Percentage of EU GDP
2000	0.40
2001	0.38
2002	0.37
2003	0.35
2004	0.34

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) which areas in the United Kingdom which are currently in receipt of Objective 2 and Objective 5b structural funds will continue to receive funds throughout 2000 to 2006 as a result of the Berlin summit agreement; [79567]

(2) which areas in the United Kingdom which are currently in receipt of Objective 2 and Objective 5b structural funds will cease to be eligible as a result of the agreement at the Berlin summit; [79566]

(3) what proportion of the United Kingdom population currently resides in areas eligible for Objective 2 and Objective 5b structural funding; and what proportion will reside in such areas from 2000; [79565]

(4) what percentage of the population currently benefiting from EU structural funding under objectives 2 and 5b will continue to benefit as a result of the safety net agreed at the Berlin summit; [79563]

(5) what proportion of the population of the EU will be eligible for EU structural funds as a result of the Berlin summit; [79560]

(6) what arrangements for enabling the United Kingdom to have increased flexibility in designating eligible areas for assistance under the structural funds were concluded at the Berlin summit. [79564]

Mr. Wills: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for South Thanet (Dr. Ladyman) on 30 March 1999, Official Report, columns 576–77.

Cohesion Fund

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) which members of the EU which have been admitted to stage 3 of EMU will still be eligible for assistance from the Cohesion Fund; and to what extent after 1 January 2000 as a result of the Berlin summit; [79558]

(2) what was agreed at the Berlin summit in respect of the future of the Cohesion Fund. [79568]

Mr. Wills: Following agreement of the Agenda 2000 package at the Berlin Council of Ministers on 25 March.

It was concluded that the four current beneficiaries: Spain, Greece, Portugal and Ireland should continue to be eligible for funding in 2000 while they met the criteria. A review of eligibility based on 90 per cent. average GNP criterion will be undertaken at mid-term in 2003. In the event of a Member State becoming ineligible, resources for the Cohesion Fund will be reduced accordingly.

The Council agreed that the overall level of resources available to be committed under the Cohesion Fund for the years 2000 to 2006 should be 18 billion euros. On the financial management and control provisions in the regulation it was concluded that there should be consistency with the relevant provisions of the Structural Fund regulation, subject to taking due account of the specific features of the Cohesion Fund.

Timber Production Costs

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate what proportion of the differential in timber production costs between the Baltic States and the United Kingdom is attributable to lower wages. [74149]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 2 March 1999]: Recent information from UK industry sources, consistent with official data, indicates that in the UK an average wage in a modern sawmill is approximately an hourly rate of £7 (including employers' costs).

Information from official statistical sources in the Baltic States indicates that the daily average rates in the Baltic States industry are in the range of £7–11 (including employers' costs). However, information from UK industry sources suggests that wage rates in some individual mills, such as modern sawmills, may be somewhat higher. The range of £7–11 is broadly consistent with International Labour Organisation estimates for wages in the much broader agriculture and timber products industries in the Baltic States.

Assisted Area Status

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the working population of the United Kingdom is at present covered by assisted area status; and if he will estimate the percentage after 1 January 2000. [79559]

Mr. Wills: The Commission Guidelines designate levels of coverage in terms of residence-based population. The current level for the United Kingdom is 38.3 per cent. In December 1998, the Commission informed the UK that the coverage of its Assisted Areas designated under Article 92(3)a and 92(3)c after 1 January 2000 should be no more than 28.7 per cent.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish the criteria which are being used in drawing up the new map of assisted areas in the UK for submission to the European Commission. [79580]

Mr. Wills: The Government have not yet decided the criteria which it will use in drawing up the new Assisted Areas map. They will be published as soon as possible.

Nuclear Waste Storage Plants

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans his Department has to expand nuclear waste storage plants at (a) Winfrith, (b) Aldermaston and (c) Harwell. [79510]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 30 March 1999]: I have no plans to expand the storage of nuclear waste at Winfrith and Harwell as this is an operational matter for the UKAEA which is subject to independent regulation by the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate (NII) and the Environment Agency (EA) to ensure compliance with nuclear safety and environmental standards. I have therefore asked the Chairman of the UKAEA to write to my hon. Friend with the information required and to place a copy of his reply in the Library of the House.

Aldermaston is a Ministry of Defence establishment and I refer my hon. Friend to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence for information about that site.

Advisory Services

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what surveys he has undertaken of the provision of advisory services by (a) citizen's advice bureaux, (b) law centres, (c) local authorities and (d) voluntary bodies in each London borough; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on the level of provision. [76233]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 15 March 1999]: The level of support for advisory services is a matter for local authorities to consider in the light of local needs and priorities and the resources available to them. We are, however, concerned to ensure the provision of good quality, accessible advice to anyone who needs it. This is a central strand in our consumer strategy aimed at furthering our commitment to giving consumers a fair deal. A White Paper will be published in the summer.

Northern Cyprus (Exports)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the value of exports from the territory of the Turkish Cypriot regime in Northern Cyprus to the United Kingdom in each of the last three years. [79548]

Mr. Wilson: The information requested is not available. HM Customs and Excise collect statistics for UK trade in goods with Cyprus as a whole. These data do not separately identify Northern Cyprus. Information on trade in services with Cyprus is not available.

Company Law Harmonisation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to promote the harmonisation of company law in the EU. [78917]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 30 March 1999]: A number of harmonising Directives in the field of company law have already been adopted or proposed.

In addition, during its Presidency in 1998, the UK achieved significant progress on the proposal for a European Company Statute which will make it easier for companies with operations in more than one Member State to restructure their business.

European Space Agency

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much funding (a) Her Majesty's Government and (b) each other EU member state provided to the European Space Agency in the last year for which figures are available. [78945]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 30 March 1999]: The UK's commitment to the European Space Agency in 1998 amounted to 186 MEuros. Other ESA Member States' commitments, including those which are not EU Member States, were as follows (also in MEuros):

Member States	Amount
France	632
Germany	553
Italy	269
Belgium	125
Spain	93
Netherlands	78
Switzerland	72
Sweden	60
Austria	30
Denmark	24
Norway	22
Finland	14
Ireland	6

Export Licences

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 12 March 1999, Official Report, column 406, if he will give details of the four licences granted for the export of military equipment to the Rwandan Government since 1 May 1997. [78980]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 29 March 1999]: These licences covered communications equipment, as noted in the Government's Annual Report on Strategic Export Controls, published by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 25 March. Inquiries have been made under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, and I can accordingly disclose the following further details about these licences.

Issue date	Goods covered	Enduser

9 December 1997	2 HF transceiver 20 watt (export after repair)	Ministry of Defence

Insolvency Service

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the professional bodies with responsibility for the conduct of those acting for his Department's Insolvency Service. [79035]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 29 March 1999]: Under the Insolvency Act 1986, only authorised persons may act as insolvency practitioners. Authorisation may be granted either by a professional body recognised by the Secretary of State or directly by the Secretary of State. Professional bodies are recognised on the basis that they have rules to ensure that practitioners have appropriate educational qualifications and experience and that they remain fit and proper.

The recognised professional bodies are:

The Association of Chartered Certified Accountants

The Insolvency Practitioners Association

The Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales

The Institute of Chartered Accountants in Ireland

The Institute of Chartered Accountants of Scotland

The Law Society and The Law Society of Scotland.

Workplace Surveillance

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had about placing a legal obligation on employers to consult their employees on surveillance at work; and if he will make a statement. [78491]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 25 March 1999]: I have not had any such discussions.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of employers using surveillance cameras in the workplace; and if he will make a statement. [78490]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 25 March 1999]: I have not made any estimate.

Corporate Governance

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on when the consultation process on corporate governance will end. [78295]

Mr. Byers: The Department is playing an active role in promoting discussion on issues relating to good corporate governance both within the United Kingdom and in international fora. The rules on the governance of companies are, for example, being considered by the major review of company law announced by the Government in March 1998. The review is planning to publish a consultation document on key areas of corporate governance around the turn of the year.

Utility Regulation

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his plans to make progress with the proposals which appear in his Department's White Paper, "A Fair Deal for Consumers: Modernising the Framework for Utility Regulation the Response to Consultation". [78294]

Mr. Byers: Many of the proposals announced in the White Paper will require legislation. We will introduce this as soon as Parliamentary time permits. Other elements of the reform package either do not require legislation, or can be advanced ahead of legislation. Where this is the case, the Department is acting itself, or asking others to act. For example, the Department has appointed a single individual as both gas regulator and electricity regulator. The Department has also encouraged the regulators to carry forward work on the regulatory issues associated with multi-utilities.

Employment Tribunals

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will review the expenses paid to witnesses attending employment tribunal hearings. [80125]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The expenses payable to parties, witnesses and others attending employment tribunal hearings were reviewed in December and increases took effect from 1 February. The following expenses may now be claimed:

- travel expenses in excess of £5 including, exceptionally, the cost of travel from overseas where this is in the interests of justice;
- overnight expenses of up to £81 per night (previously £63.30) in central London and £71 (previously £54.30) elsewhere. Additional payment may be made to people with a disability where there is a shortage of suitable local accommodation within a reasonable price range;
- a loss of earnings allowance of up to £45 per day (previously £40);
- child and adult care allowances of up to £5 per hour (previously limited to child care and a limit of £2 per hour). Additional payments may be made where special needs are established;
- the cost of a helper where, because of a medical condition, a party/witness needs to be accompanied;
- reasonable charges for professional interpreters, including interpreters for the deaf/blind; and
- reasonable charges for the attendance of medical professionals or the production of medical reports.

These changes will be particularly important in responding to the needs of those with fa commitments or who have a disability. They will be of extra benefit to those who need the money most and will ensure that people can obtain access to the tribunals.

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to introduce a statutory right to time off work to serve as an employment tribunal wing member. [79009]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Section 50(2) of the Employment Rights Act 1996 provides the right to reasonable time off work for this purpose.

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he plans to take to increase the number of wing members of employment tribunals from minority ethnic groups. [79008]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government are reviewing the process of recruitment and appointment of employment tribunal wing members and a consultation paper setting out our proposals has been sent to the social partners.

A major aim of the review is to ensure that members are drawn from as wide a variety of backgrounds as possible, including the ethnic minorities. Measures to achieve this include placing advertisements which will foster applications from the ethnic minorities amongst others, and ensuring that all stages of the recruitment and selection process are in line with equal opportunities principles. We are taking advice on this from bodies such as the Commission for Racial Equality.

Competition Commission

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the establishment of the Competition Commission. [80123]

Mr. Byers: I am pleased to announce that the Competition Commission will be established on 1 April. The Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs made the relevant commencement and other necessary orders on 25 February and 2 March.

The current Chairman of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, Dr. Derek Morris, will become the first Chairman of the Competition Commission.

I am further pleased to announce, following consultation with my right hon. and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor, the appointment of Judge Christopher Bellamy QC, currently British judge at the Court of First Instance of the European Communities in Luxembourg, as the first President of the Appeal Tribunals of the Competition Commission.

Gas-fired Power Stations

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate his Department has made of the likely impact on the targets for emissions of gases agreed at Kyoto of (a) the lifting of the moratorium on gas-fired powered stations in the UK and (b) the lifting of the moratorium on gas-fired powered stations in the UK accompanied by the phasing out of coal-fired power stations. [79358]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 30 March 1999]: The White Paper of October 1998, 'Conclusions of The Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation and Government response to fourth and fifth Reports of the Trade and Industry Committee' (Cm 4071), set out the Government's programme of reform in the electricity market and introduced a stricter policy on consents for gas-fired stations to protect diversity and security of supply while the programme of reform was under way. The White Paper discussed the environmental aspects of the Government's policy in chapter 9 ('Achieving sustainable energy supplies'). An environmental appraisal was provided as Annex H.

Unfair Dismissal Claims

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list for (a) small and medium enterprises and (b) larger companies the number of claims for unfair dismissal that were made after (i) two, (ii) three, (iii) four, (iv) five and (v) 10 years employment, in each of the three most recent years. [76668]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 16 March 1999]: The information is not available in the form requested.

Parental Leave

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made for (a) small and medium enterprises and (b) larger companies of the extra number of employees who will receive maternity leave as a result of the reduction in the minimum employment period for eligibility to one year. [76673]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 16 March 1999]: The Regulatory Impact Assessment which was published alongside the Employment Relations Bill estimates that 23,000 mothers will take more maternity leave as a result of this change. The data are not broken down by size or firm.

Consumer Affairs Council

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish the agenda for the EU Consumer Affairs Council of 13 April. [79577]

Dr. Howells: The Consumer Council on 13 April 1999 will debate the following issues:

Exchange of views and adoption of a Council Resolution on the Commission Communication on the Consumer Policy Action Plan 1999–2001;

Policy debate on a Proposal for a Directive of the European Parliament and of the Council concerning the Distance Marketing of Consumer Financial Services and amending Directives 90/619/EEC, 97/7/EC and 98/27/EC.

Civil Servants (Appraisal)

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what were the appraisal performance markings awarded to civil servants in 1998 for (a) each agency in his Department and (b) the Department broken down by (i) grade, (ii) gender, (iii) ethnicity, (iv) part-time/full-time working and (v) disability; and for (1) each agency and (2) the Department, if the Cabinet Office's four fifths rule for detecting potential adverse impact was applied to the appraisal markings of civil servants in the 1998 report round. [78139]

Dr. Howells: The appraisal performance markings awarded to civil servants in Department of Trade and Industry headquarters in 1997–98 broken down by the various groups are given in the percentages.

The Department's statistics directorate was commissioned to analyse data for headquarters staff to ascertain whether there is evidence to suggest any potential adverse impact in box markings received. The technique of categorical modelling was used for this analysis, being far more robust than the 'four-fifths' rule and with the advantage of being able to identify any interrelationships between several factors, for example, ethnicity, gender, grades and box mark as opposed to the relationship between just two variables, for example, ethnicity and box mark received.

I have asked the chief executives of the DTI's Agencies to write to my hon. Friend direct. Copies of these letters have been placed in the Library of the House.

Race Discrimination Cases

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many race discrimination cases have been heard at employment tribunals in London since May 1997. [79006]

Mr. Ian McCartney: There are three employment tribunals which cover London and its surrounding areas, London North, Stratford and London South. Since April 1997 these tribunals have heard 1,889 race discrimination cases.

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many of those employment tribunals in London which heard race discrimination cases since May 1997, included a wing member from a minority ethnic group. [79010]

Mr. Ian McCartney: There are three employment tribunals which cover London and its surrounding areas. 391 lay members have been appointed to hear cases in these tribunals, 50 of whom are known to be from ethnic minority groups. In addition to member from ethnic minority groups there is a panel of special members who are available to sit on discrimination cases because of their experience and knowledge.

Information is not readily available to enable us to identify how many ethnic minority members have heard race discrimination cases and could only be supplied at disproportionate cost.

The Government are reviewing the process of recruitment and appointment of employment tribunal wing members and a consultation paper setting out our proposals has been sent to the social partners. A major aim of the review is to ensure that members are drawn from a wide variety of backgrounds as possible, including the ethnic minorities.

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the Low Pay Commission's Review of the National Minimum Wage Accommodation Offset. [80124]

Mr. Byers: During the drafting of the National Minimum Wage regulations 1999 the Government received a number of submissions from employers and intentional communities about the operation and amount of offset that may be allowed to count against the National Minimum Wage where a worker is provided with accommodation, and its long term future. The Government fully recognise that the offset is an important factor in pay in some sectors, such as hotel and catering, and that if set at the wrong level it would have a detrimental impact for those sectors and their employees.

Because the offset in the regulations reflects the recommendation of the Low Pay Commission, the Government asked the Commission to look again at this issue as a matter of urgency and report to Government. The Government is today publishing its report and copies are available in the Vote Office.

The Government would like to thank the Commission for looking at this matter so quickly.

The Commission has made three recommendations:

(1) There should be no immediate change to the rate of the accommodation offset in the national Minimum wage regulations, but the Commission should monitor the use and impact of the accommodation offset on business and employees.

(2) The Commission should monitor the administration of the accommodation offset and, in the light of practical experience, report on its future application in their second report.

(3) Members of intentional communities should be regarded as volunteers rather than workers, and not covered by the National Minimum Wage.

In considering the matter the Commission looked again at the evidence and basis for their earlier recommendation and took further oral and written evidence. They also looked at current practice through collective agreements, arrangements under the Agricultural Wages Boards, previous practice under the Wages Council and arrangements in other countries. The Commission concluded that there was little evidence at this stage that businesses could not cope with the level recommended and that therefore no changes should be made at this time.

However, it recognised that it would be important to monitor the operation of the offset in light of practical experience and the application of the National Minimum Wage Regulations. It proposes that it should do this as part of its remit to monitor and evaluate the introduction and impact of the national minimum wage. The Commission has agreed with the Office for National Statistics a trailer question to the 1999 New Earnings Survey which it is hoped will provide a clearer insight into the practice of providing an accommodation allowance.

The Government agree with the Commission's conclusions and accept their recommendations not to change the offset at this time. However, the Government are keen that the Commission should closely monitor the practical effects of its application. The Government also note the Commission's acknowledgement that the continuation of the offset is of significance for a number of businesses and workers and welcome its intention to undertake a full review of its next Report.

The Commission also looked at the position of individuals who follow a particular lifestyle living and working as members of a religious or charitable community—intentional communities—in receipt of board and lodging and a small amount of subsistence. The Commission concluded that the position of members of intentional communities was similar to that of volunteers, who are specifically excluded from the National Minimum Wage, and that they should be treated as such. The exclusion of volunteers in the National Minimum Wage Act 1998, which was agreed with the support of all parties and the voluntary sector, is drawn very narrowly and does not cover members of intentional communities. It will therefore be necessary to amend the 1998 Act to provide an exclusion.

The Government accept the Commission's recommendation that members of intentional communities should not be covered by the National Minimum Wage and propose to introduce a suitable amendment to the 1998 Act through the Employment Relations Bill which is currently before Parliament.

Kenya (Tear Gas and Rubber Batons)

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about licences issued to Pains-Wessex Ltd. and Haley and Weller Ltd. for the export to the Kenyan security forces of tear gas canisters and rubber batons. [80168]

Dr. Howells: I can confirm that a licence was issued to Pains-Wessex Ltd. on 16 December 1992 for the export to the Kenyan Police of 150 Mk 2 multi-purpose guns, 2,000 rubber batons and 1,500 CS gas grenades. Another licence was issued to Haley and Weller Ltd. on 22 July 1994 for the export to the Kenyan Police of 500 rubber batons and 500 CS gas grenades. I am disclosing this information in accordance with the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. Finally, my officials have been informed by the Chief Executive of Chemring Group plc, the parent company of both of these companies, that neither Haley and Weller nor Pains-Wessex Ltd. has supplied any further products of this type to Kenya, and also that Chemring Group plc is keen to establish an ethical policy and has had a meeting with Amnesty International on this matter.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Leyton and Wanstead (Mr. Cohen) of 12 March 1999, Official Report, column 407, on nuclear waste, what was the source of the advice on which he based his answer. [78989]

Mr. Battle: The answer in question reflected the situation at the time it was given, which remains unchanged. I also refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 23 March 1999, Official Report, column 140.

Trademarks

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the Government's policy in relation to trademarks and the effects on parallel imports; and if he will make a statement. [80126]

Dr. Howells: The Silhouette Judgment of the European Court of Justice last July confirmed as a matter of law that the European trade marks Directive does allow trade mark owners to use their rights to prevent import of their goods into the Community after they have been marketed elsewhere.

The Government are keen to ensure that European legislation gives high priority to the interests of consumers, whilst recognising the legitimate interests of producers in securing reasonable protection for their intellectual property. Parallel importing can apply downward pressure on prices in some markets to the advantage of consumers, but producers' investment in innovation and in developing product quality and reputation could be impaired to the detriment of consumers. Price differences in some consumer sectors now indicate that there is a need to consider the effects of the current law, and whether any change would be of benefit.

The effects of trade mark rights and parallel imports vary greatly between market sectors and this would have to be taken into account. In particular, there are sectors where special factors apply, for example where there are material differences between products for different international markets sufficient to lead to consumer confusion or where there is risk to health or safety.

The Government have considered the recent report from the European Commission on the results of a study it has had made into the economic effects of the present trade marks regime, and is pleased that this will be discussed at the next meeting of the Internal Market Council. We are also aware of recent research conducted in Sweden, which indicates net benefits from a change in the law. We will be looking closely at the methodology and results of this Swedish study, and will be analysing the benefits and costs that could accrue to the United Kingdom.

Exhibitions

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will reassess his Department's decision to delete the Nederlands Tuinbuow Vakbeurs Exhibition from the list of exhibitions to receive support in 1999; and if he will make a statement. [79848]

Mr. Wilson: No. My Department received three times as many bids for support from the available budget and I regret it was not possible to assist a group at this event in that year. We are ready to consider a bid for support in the 2000–2001 programme.

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what environmental appraisals of policy his Department has (a) completed, (b) started and (c) planned. [79623]

Mr. Battle: This information is being collated and a written answer will be forthcoming from a Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, following the Easter recess.

Trade Balance

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the United Kingdom's trade balance with other EU countries in each year since 1969. [78943]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 26 March 1999]: The information is in the following tables. Figures for trade in goods have been provided on an Overseas Trade Statistics (OTS) basis. Figures for trade in services are on a Balance of Payments (BOP) basis. The main difference between trade on an OTS and BOP basis is that BOP figures exclude goods not changing ownership. In 1998 this resulted in a difference of less than 1 per cent. in the export values. Import figures on a BOP basis also exclude the cost of insurance and freight. In 1998 this resulted in a difference of just under 3 per cent. in the import values.

Oftel

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what preparations are being made by Oftel in respect of his responsibilities under the Competition Act 1998; what increase in staff is required; and what action is being taken to co-ordinate policy with the Director General of Fair Trading. [77686]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 22 March 1999]: Oftel is a member of the Concurrency Working Party, which is chaired by the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) and is working to ensure that a consistent approach is being taken by all regulators. A guideline "Concurrent Application to Regulated Industries", which deals with how regulators work with the Director General of Fair Trading (DGFT) and with each other, has been produced by the Concurrency Working Party and issued by the DGFT. Oftel has also published draft guidelines on how the Competition Act will be applied in the telecommunications sector, and the final version is to be published in May. A compliance forum for the industry is to take place at the end of April 1999. In February, the DTI issued a consultation document, "Concurrency: consultation on the possible need and scope for regulations".

Oftel has put in place a structured training programme to ensure that staff are prepared for the coming into force of the Act, and is also participating in the training programme organised by the OFT. The issue of whether additional staff are required is reviewed regularly. Oftel has not yet bid for more staff.

Cassini Space Probe

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations have been made by the British Government to the European Space Agency about the environmental risks of the Cassini space probe; and when such representations were made. [77935]

Mr. Battle: The British Government have been in close contact with the European Space Agency in both the preparation and elaboration of the Cassini-Huygens mission and have discussed all aspects of the mission with ESA on a number of occasions.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the British Government have obtained a copy of the European Space Agency's evaluation of the Cassini space probe. [77936]

Mr. Battle: The Cassini-Huygens mission to Saturn and its moon Titan is a collaborative programme between NASA and the European Space Agency (ESA). Within this collaboration, NASA was responsible for developing the Cassini spacecraft. NASA commissioned two independent safety assessments and has produced a document summarising the findings which is available on the internet.

ESA was responsible for developing the Huygens space probe. Senior ESA Directors attended major NASA programme reviews during the development of Cassini and reported to member states on major milestones. These reports were given orally during the course of the Agency's normal programme board meetings.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations have been made by the British Government to the Government of the United States about the environment risks of NASA's Cassini space probe; and when such representations were made. [77933]

Mr. Battle: The BNSC has examined the two independent environmental impact statements commissioned by NASA prior to the launch of the Cassini-Huygens mission. Both of these endorsed the use of plutonium on the mission. In addition, under US law, NSA has a duty to minimise the risks associated with its work, as well as a responsibility to conform to the United Nations Principles on the Use of Nuclear Power Sources in Outer Space (1992), an initiative in which the UK took a leading role.

Miners (Compensation)

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if Scottish miners will be compensated for exposure to coal dust from 1947 onwards in any handling agreement concluded in respect of Scottish cases; [78758]

(2) by what date he expects that a handling agreement will be concluded in respect of bronchitis and emphysema care involving Scottish miners; [78759]

(3) if he will ensure that exposure to coal dust in the period before 1954 is not discounted for the purposes of compensation in any handling agreement concluded in respect of claims for compensation by Scottish miners for bronchitis and emphysema. [78757]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 26 March 1999]: Officials held constructive and positive talks with Scottish solicitors on 30 March, and are due to meet in April, to discuss handling arrangements for the 5,000 or so claims from Scottish miners. Although we offered the handling arrangements that were agreed on 26 March for England and Wales, we recognise that there are differences in Scottish law and we discussed with the Solicitors how those differences might best be dealt with in any Scottish handling arrangements. We hope to finalise the arrangements for handling Scottish claims shortly.

Multinational Companies

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which members of his Department had discussions with GJW, and on how many occasions and what dates concerning the wish by Cape plc to amend the Access to Justice Bill [Lords] to ban foreign workers of British companies obtaining legal aid; and whether the statement by officials that they would not be keen to see any developments which discouraged multinationals from locating their headquarters in the United Kingdom was made with the knowledge of Ministers. [78747]

Mr. Wills: One of my officials recalls receiving a telephone call in early March from a Mr. Weeks, who did not identify himself as being from GJW, about inward investment. During this conversation the point was made that HMG supports inward investment into the UK. Cape plc were not mentioned during the conversation and it was not reported to Ministers.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria he uses in relation to a multinational's conduct and working practices abroad to assess the desirability of the company locating its headquarters in the United Kingdom. [78743]

Mr. Wills: Multinationals who choose to locate their headquarters in the UK do so because the UK provides the right business environment in which they can flourish. Key features of top performing companies are the effectiveness and quality of their management and the commitment which that inspires in their workforce. Whilst the Government seek, through international bodies such as the UN, to improve working practices abroad they do not seek to vet the practices of individual companies that wish to establish headquarters in the UK. The Government are committed to creating a corporate culture in the UK where fairness is second nature. The National Minimum Wage Act 1998, the Working Time Regulations and the Employment Relations Bill will ensure that workers have minimum standards of protection.

Oil Spills

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the oil spills from BHP platforms in Liverpool Bay on (a) 2 March and (b) 6 March; and if he will make a statement. [77955]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 22 March 1999]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 17 March 1999, Official Report, columns 701–02.

The field remains shut in and the investigation continues. In the course of this investigation, on 15 March, BHP Petroleum also reported an oil spill from their Douglas installation that had occurred on 2 March. This is being investigated in conjunction with the spill of 6 March.

Pangea Resources Inc.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received concerning BNFL Ltd. investment in Pangea Resources Inc. [77096]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 16 March 1999]: My Department has received no representation concerning BNFL Ltd. investment in Pangea Resources Inc. However, I have received representations from the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hallam (Mr. Allan) on behalf of a constituent who expressed concern over the impact of the Pangea project on Aboriginal communities and lands.

HEALTH

Free Eye Checks (Pensioners)

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate how many pensioners in the Barnsley East and Mexborough constituency are eligible for free eye checks. [73374]

Mr. Denham: We are unable to make meaningful estimates for such a small area. Nationally, we estimate that about 21 million people are eligible for free National Health Service sight tests and, from 1 April 1999, some 6 to 7 million more people aged 60 and over will become eligible. The number of people aged 60 or over in 1997 in the North and Yorkshire Regional area was 1,321,000.

Nurses' Pay

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will forecast what the average weekly earnings of nurses will be in 1999–2000 using April 1998 prices. [74023]

Mr. Denham: Based on the Department's August 1997 Earnings Survey, uprated to take account of pay settlements up to and including 1 April 1999, the estimate of average gross earnings for all nursing and midwifery staff in 1999–2000 is £361 per week (equivalent to £18,800 per annum) and for qualified nurses alone £400 per week (equivalent to £20,800 per annum). It is not possible to express this estimate in April 1998 prices until inflation data are available for the 1999–2000 period.

Nurse Statistics

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many whole-time equivalent (a) bank, (b) agency and (c) contract nurses were employed, and at what cost, by each NHS trust for each year since their creation. [75038]

Mr. Denham: The information that is available centrally will be placed in the Library shortly.

Beta Interferon

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those health authorities which do not make beta interferon available on the NHS to patients suffering from multiple sclerosis. [78451]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 24 March 1999]: The information requested is not available. Guidance to the National Health Service was issued in November 1995 asking health authorities to develop and implement local arrangements to manage the entry of this drug.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those health authorities in the United Kingdom which prescribe beta interferon to treat MS sufferers. [78994]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is not available, since the majority of beta interferon prescribing should take place in hospitals and hospital prescribing and dispensing data are not held centrally.

A and E Departments (Wakefield)

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the allocation of additional funds for the accident and emergency departments at the (a) Pontefract and (b) Pinderfields hospitals in the Wakefield district. [78720]

Mr. Hutton: Pinderfields and Pontefract Hospitals National Health Service Trust has been allocated £115,000 from the Capital Modernisation Fund to improve the resuscitation, assessment and waiting room facilities in the accident and emergency departments at both Pinderfields General hospital and Pontefract General infirmary.

Waiting Lists

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the numbers of patients on waiting lists in each NHS trust and health authority in the north-west region (a) currently, (b) one year ago and (c) two years ago. [78786]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is shown in the tables.

Nurse Recruitment

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many calls from former nurses in (a) total and (b) Portsmouth have been received by the recruitment helpline since its inception. [78946]

Mr. Denham: As at 29 March, the number of inquiries to the response line for the national nursing recruitment campaign was 52,344. Our analysis of these inquiries shows that of these 4,972 were from former nurses and that 72 of these were form the Portsmouth area.

Allergies

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the five most frequent sources of reported allergies deriving from (a) food, (b) over the counter medicines and (c) prescription only medicines and the number of recorded cases in each category during the last 12 months for which figures are available. [78996]

Ms Jowell: It is not possible to list the five most frequent sources of reported allergies deriving from food because information on the number of cases is not available. However, foods which can induce allergic reactions in some individuals include peanuts and nuts, wheat, eggs, fish, shellfish, milk and seeds.

The five drug substances for which suspected allergic reactions to medicines have been reported most frequently through the Yellow Card Scheme since 1964 are: amoxycillin, diclofenac, trimethoprim, bacillus clostridium tetani and measles virus vaccine. These drug substances were included in both single constituent and multi-constituent products and are only available on prescription.

For drug substances which may be supplied over the counter, the five most common drug substances for which these suspected reactions have been reported through the Yellow Card Scheme since 1964 are: ibuprofen, pyridoxine, ascorbic acid, riboflavine and nicotinamide. These drug substances were included in both single constituent and multi-constituent products.

This information should not be used to compare the drugs. It is not possible to determine the incidence of a particular adverse drug reaction from spontaneous reporting data because neither the total number of reactions occurring, nor the number of patients exposed to the drug in known. The number of suspected adverse drug reactions reported for a particular drug substance depends on various factors, including the extent of use of the drug and the reporting rate for the drug.

Dental Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if dentists working in the general dental services will come within the remit of the Commission for Health Improvement. [79416]

Mr. Denham: It is not intended that individual dentists will be reviewed or investigated by the Commission for Health Improvement. However clinical governance arrangements will apply to all parts of the National Health Service including primary care and the Commission will have a leading role in developing advice and guidance for the NHS on clinical governance. We would expect dentists to have regard to this advice.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action is taken by local health authorities where the Dental Practice Board has made a reference to them on the grounds that the standard of work of a dentist is a cause for concern; and if he will make a statement. [79415]

Mr. Denham: Health authorities have the power to discuss the issue with the dentist, refer the matter to the local dental discipline committee or the General Dental Council, or prosecute, as appropriate.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many dentists were placed on a regime of prior approval by targeting in each of the last five years; [79418]

(2) how many dentists have been placed on a prior approval regime by the relevant dental service committee in each of the last five years. [79419]

Mr. Denham: The table shows the number of general practitioners in England and Wales subject to prior approval at the end of each financial year as a result of either action by the relevant dental service committee or targeting by the Dental Practice Board.

General dental practitioners subject to prior approval at the end of each year [1]

Year	Subject to prior approval by: Dental Service Committee [2]	Targeting
1993–94	3	1
1994–95	10	2
1995–96	7	1
1996–97	9	0
1997–98	3	0

[1] These numbers are as at the end of each year and so will exclude any dentists subject to prior approval regimes which do not last until the end of the year. Dentists who are on the regimes at the end of two successive years would be counted twice.

[2] Dental Disciplinary Committee from 1 April 1996.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists have been referred by the Dental Practice Board for England and Wales to (a) the police, (b) the dentist's local health authority and (c) the General Dental Council in each of the last five years. [79413]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is given in the table. Referrals are counted once, in the year in which they were referred.

Cases referred by the Dental Practice Board: England and Wales

Year	Referred to: Police	Health authority	General Dental Council
1993–94	5	88	1
1994–95	5	83	2
1995–96	11	100	2
1996–97	10	117	4
1997–98	13	231	0

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists have been referred to the National Health Service Tribunal in each of the last five years; and what was the outcome in each case. [79417]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is not available centrally. However, details of the total number of cases, for all practitioners, are published in the Annual Report of the Council on Tribunals, copies of which are available in the Library.

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will estimate the number of additional patients who have obtained access to NHS dentistry through the Investing in Dentistry initiative; [79529]

(2) what assessment he has made of the reasons for the underspend in the Investing in Dentistry budget; [79527]

(3) what funding will be made available for Investing in Dentistry in 1999–2000. [79528]

Mr. Denham: All the funding available for 1998–99 for investing in dentistry (IID) is expected to be assigned by the end of the financial year. Funding available in the first year of IID was not fully utilised, as most approvals during this period only became due for payment in the second year of the scheme.

To date, we have approved 279 Investing in dentistry funding requests, which should enable over 650,000 patients to register with an National Health Service dentist.

No decision has been made yet about the funding of another General Dental Services access initiative in the next financial year. However, funds will be available in the financial year 1999–2000 to meet the treatment costs and any outstanding grant payments arising from IID proposals which have already been approved, or which have been received and are subsequently approved.

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will be publishing his Department's strategy for NHS dentistry. [79526]

Mr. Denham: Our strategy for National Health Service dentistry will be published later this year.

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will extend assistance with travel costs under the health benefits scheme to visits to dentists in areas where there is a shortage of NHS dentists. [79530]

Mr. Denham: Patients receive help with travel costs only under the hospital travel cost scheme; it does not include primary care services such as general dental services. The situation will be kept under review.

Kidderminster District General Hospital

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he has received from the West Midlands NHS Executive regarding the future of Kidderminster district general hospital. [79579]

Mr. Denham: It is established practice under successive Administrations not to disclose details of confidential advice received by Ministers from civil servants.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mrs. McKenna: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish the seventh annual report of the national Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease Surveillance Unit. [79895]

Mr. Dobson: The National Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease Surveillance Unit's seventh annual report has been published today. Copies have been placed in the Library. The report documents the Unit's findings in relation to sporadic, familial, iatrogenic Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease (CJD) and new variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease (nvCJD) up to 31 December 1998.

Medicines Control Agency

Mr. Ivan Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the future of the Medicines Control Agency and the Medical Devices Agency. [80064]

Mr. Denham: Quinquennial reviews of both Agencies are now due. They will address the performance of each Agency and will re-examine the options ("Prior Options") which were considered before each Agency was established. They will look at all options, although they will be informed by the study which we announced on 9 December 1998 to investigate the longer-term organisational arrangements—including merger—which would best support the effective regulation of pharmaceuticals and medical devices. This study has just been completed and has recommended that the Agencies should not be merged at this time. The report of the study has been placed in the Library.

Schoolchildren's Diets

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department issues to health authorities regarding (a) the level of fat, (b) the proportion of sugar, (c) the amount of fibre, (d) the amount of fresh fruit and (e) the amount of fresh vegetables in the diet of schoolchildren. [79324]

Ms Jowell: The Department has not issued any guidelines to health authorities regarding schoolchildren's dietary needs. However, the Department offers general advice on healthy eating which applies to everyone over the age of 5 years. This is contained in "The Balance of Good Health" which shows the different types and proportion of five categories of foods, including fruits and vegetables, which make up a well-balanced and healthy diet. "Eight Guidelines for a Healthy Diet" extends this advice to cover the important dietary changes needed to eat healthily.

Fieldwork for the joint Department of Health/ Department for Education and Employment National Diet and Nutritional Survey of young people aged 4 to 18 years has been completed and the results are being analysed. A report is expected at the end of this year. We hope the report will help inform the way forward for health promotion initiatives and public health strategies to improve the diet of schoolchildren.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 23 March 1999, Official Report, columns 185–86, if he will place in the Library the documents disseminated through the NHS Executive's regional offices for those private finance initiative schemes which have reached financial close. [78986]

Mr. Denham: The National Health Service Executive does not prepare a formal written report on the lessons learned from each private finance initiative scheme. Any lessons that are to be learned are disseminated through training events, networking days or through ad-hoc guidance. All of the existing PFI guidance will be replaced shortly by codified advice, which will be disseminated to the whole of the NHS and will be available from the Stationery Office and on the Internet. Copies of the guidance will also be placed in the Library.

SOCIAL SECURITY

National Insurance Contributions

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the effects of the transfer of the Contributions Agency to the Inland Revenue. [80073]

Mr. Timms: I can confirm that from 1 April responsibility for National Insurance contributions (NICs) operations and policy will pass from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security to the Board of the Inland Revenue and the Chancellor of the Exchequer respectively. A new Executive Office of the Inland Revenue to be called the National Insurance Contributions Office (NICO) will be formed from those Contributions Agency (CA) units based in Newcastle, amounting to about 4,500 staff in all. Some 3,500 CA staff working in field offices in locations around Great Britain will be integrated into Inland Revenue regions.

This change is important in two ways. It marks a step towards more modern and effective Government and also towards improved service to the public. Our aims for this transfer are to reduce burdens on business; give better customer service; strengthen compliance; and over time promote greater alignment of the rules for income tax and National Insurance.

For instance from 6 April, through the New Enterprise Support Initiative based in the Inland Revenue, new employers will have access to a telephone helpline which will provide help and guidance on both NICs and tax. Other early benefits of the transfer include a new route for appeals against contributions decisions to the Tax Commissioners alongside tax appeals.

As a result of the transfer of responsibility for NICs policy to Treasury Ministers correspondence and parliamentary questions on NICs policy issues should in future be addressed to them. Parliamentary questions on NICs operational issues will also be for reply by Treasury Ministers. The Board of Inland Revenue will be responsible for NICs operations and, where appropriate, replies to correspondence on operational issues will be provided by Inland Revenue officials.

The Inland Revenue and Treasury Ministers will respond to correspondence and parliamentary questions on NICs in just the same way as they deal with their other responsibilities.

The Social Security Benefits Agency will continue to be responsible for contributory benefits and State Retirement Pension matters as now. Social Security Ministers retain responsibility for policy on the contributory principle and policy on non-State pensions.

The respective responsibilities of the two Department and their working relationship are set out in a Memorandum of Understanding between the Principal Accounting Officers. The Memorandum reflects share commitment to modern Government and improved public service across a wide range of complex arrangements. Copies have been placed in the Libraries and it is also available at the Internet sites of the DSS and the Inland Revenue.

Supported Accommodation

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about the outcome of the consultation exercise on the future funding arrangements for supported accommodation. [80071]

Mr. Darling: On 10 December we published the consultation paper "Supporting People: A new policy and funding framework for support services". This proposed replacing the current complicated funding arrangements with one single budget targeted specifically at support services for vulnerable people, which would be administered by Local Authorities. The new arrangements will encourage coherent planning at a local level to deliver more cost effective and high quality services to many thousands of vulnerable people.

Consultation ended on 5 February, and we received a substantial number of responses which have helped inform our decisions on the way forward.

We are pleased to announce that the consultation shows that there is strong support for the principles underlying the Supporting People proposals, and the fact that, for the first time, the provision of support services for vulnerable people is being given the priority it deserves. We have therefore decided to proceed with implementing the long-term proposals from April 2003.

Some respondents had concerns about whether the new arrangements were suitable for sheltered housing. We have looked carefully at these concerns and concluded that including sheltered housing in the new single budget will enable greater flexibility in service models, and bring the benefits of a joint commissioning approach.

In taking work forward, we will work closely with interested parties to develop the detail of the new arrangements to ensure that the long-term objectives become a workable and effective reality.

The new single budget will be preceded by a time-limited transitional Housing Benefit scheme. Although there was a convincing welcome for the proposed transitional Housing Benefit scheme, there were a number of concerns expressed about the date of its introduction. In direct response to these concerns, we have decided to extend the current interim scheme thereby delaying the introduction of the new transitional scheme until April 2000. Aligning the start date of the transitional scheme with the beginning of the financial year will help local authorities in their financial planning.

I am placing a list of the organisations and academic bodies who responded, excluding those who requested confidentiality, in the Library. Copies of the list and specific responses are available on request from the Department of Social Security, by contacting The Inter-Departmental Review of Funding for Supported Accommodation, 5th Floor, The Adelphi, 1–11 John Adam St, London WC2N 6HT.

Occupational Pension

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the size of (a) the occupational pension payments referred to in paragraph 5 of his consultation paper on bereavement support and (b) such payments currently. [76105]

Mr. Bayley: The information is not available in the form requested.

The average size of the occupational pension payments referred to in the consultation paper was around £80 for both of the financial years 1995–96 and 1996–97.

Notes:

1. These figures are estimates and are taken from the Households Below Average Income (HBAI) data set which is based on the Family Resources Survey (FRS). The FRS does not include Northern Ireland.

2. The financial year 1995–96 was the basis for the figures quoted in paragraph 5 of the consultation paper on bereavement support. The financial year 1996–97 is the latest for which data are available. Sample sizes for the requested cross-section of the population are small and therefore liable to a large degree of year on year variation due to sampling error. The estimate for both years is subject to this error.

3. The figures quoted refer to the gross amount of occupational pension payments where they are received by widows who are both under the age of 60 and in receipt of widow's benefit. All monetary values are given in April 1998 prices.

State Pension

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of women for each year from 1999–2000 to 2009–10 who will receive (a) reduced SERPS pensions and (b) reduced widow's pensions as a result of the changes in payments to beneficiaries being introduced in April. [77757]

Mr. Timms: Information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Forecast information on the average number of women pensioners and widows who could be affected at any one time in each year

Thousand

	Potential number of women pensioners affected	Potential number of widows affected
1999–2000	145	15
2000–01	430	50
2001–02	710	90
2002–03	1,010	130
2003–04	1,325	175
2004–05	1,650	225
2005–06	1,975	275
2006–07	2,335	330
2007–08	2,720	390
2008–09	3,090	450
2009–10	3,435	515

Notes:

1. Figures relate to the total number of women pensioners. Some will have no SERPS entitlement and will not be affected by the change.

2. All numbers have been supplied by Government Actuary's Department.

3. Numbers are given in thousands and are rounded to the nearest 5,000.

4. There is some double counting as widows over pension age appear in both columns.

5. The proposed new schemes for widows and widowers under state pension age have not been taken into account, nor have the half rate inheritance changes beginning in April 2000.

6. Figures are for GB only.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much would it cost to increase the old age pension to £75 per week for a single pensioner and £116.60 per week for a married couple; and what the net cost would be taking into account savings in respect of other benefits and tax revenue. [78894]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is not available. Such information as is available is in the tables.

Estimated gross cost of raising Retirement Pension rates to £75 per week for a single person and £116.60 per week for a couple from April 1999

£ million

	Excluding linked benefits	Including linked benefits
Gross cost (1999–2000)	3,580	4,280

Estimated cost net of tax of raising Retirement Pension rates to £75 per week for a single person and £116.60 per week for a couple from April 1999

£ million

	Excluding linked benefits	Including linked benefits
Cost net of tax (1999–2000)	3,280	[1]—

[1] Tax offsets have been provided by the Inland Revenue. Cost net of tax including linked benefits not available.

Notes:

1. Means-tested benefit offsets are not available as the Family Resources Survey which is used to calculate these cannot differentiate between married women who receive a Category A pension on their own insurance (and would require a 12.4 per cent. increase) and those who receive a Category B pension based on the their husbands' contributions (these would require a 4.1 per cent. increase). Offset calculations cannot therefore be made where, as here, different percentage changes are made to different categories of Retirement Pension.

2. Figures are rounded to the nearest £10 million and are expressed in cash terms.

3. Contributory benefit estimates have been provided by the Government Actuary's Department.

4. Linked benefits are those statutorily linked in value to basic State pension, for example widows' pensions.

Bereavement Allowance

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost of extending the Bereavement Allowance to unmarried partners. [78032]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 22 March 1999]: It is proposed that Bereavement Allowance will be paid for six months only to widows and widowers aged 45 or over on bereavement who have no dependent children. Entitlement to Bereavement Allowance will be based on the deceased spouse's National Insurance contribution record.

It would be very difficult to establish who were "partners". As a result, there is limited information available on the circumstances of cohabiting partners and we are able to provide only broad estimates of the gross costs of extending it to unmarried cohabiting partners. We estimate this would cost less than £5 million in the first year, and less than £25 million in 2020–21.

It is estimated that extending basic bereavement benefits to unmarried partners would cost around £100 million per year by 2020–21.

Notes:

1. The estimates are provided by the Government Actuary's Department and do not include means-tested benefit offsets.

2. The estimates are based on 1998–99 benefit rates. Estimates for 2020 are rounded to the nearest £25 million.

3. There would also be an additional cost to Retirement Pension (RP) which has not been estimated.

Family Credit

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of children aged (a) under five years and (b) five to 15 years from two-parent families in the United Kingdom were in families in receipt of Family Credit in each of the last five years. [78279]

Mr. Timms: The information is in the table.

Children in two parent families receiving Family Credit: Great Britain

	Under 5		5 to 15
	Thousand	Percentage	Thousand	Percentage
May 1994	238	7.6	451	7.1
May 1995	258	8.6	486	7.7
May 1996	286	9.6	555	8.8
May 1997	307	10.0	579	9.1
May 1998	293	9.6	566	9.0

Notes:

1. Numbers are based on a 5 per cent. sample of Family Credit awards and as such are subject to a degree of sampling error.

2. Caseload figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.

3. Children are defined as aged under 16.

Sources:

1. Family Credit 5 per cent. sample.

2. Office for National Statistics Labour Force Survey Household Datasets.

Departmental Staff (Ethnic Origin)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide a breakdown, in numerical and percentage terms, of the ethnic origin, at 1 March, of (a) his private office, (b) Government special advisers, (c) his Policy Unit and (d) staff in total. [78508]

Mr. Timms: Information on the ethnic origin of civil servants is collected using a voluntary, confidential questionnaire. The number and percentage of ethnic minority staff in Ministers' private offices in this Department are set out in the table.

	Number of Staff	Number of ethnic minority staff	Percentage of ethnic minority staff
Private Office	45	6	13.3

Note:
The number of staff is based on the number of respondents.

For information on staff total, my right hon. Friend, the Minister for the Cabinet Office will be providing a central response. For information on special advisers, I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Brent, East (Mr. Livingstone) on 22 February 1999, Official Report, column 39.

Family Resources Survey

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 18 March 1999, Official Report, column 799, regarding tabulations of the Family Resources Survey, if he will place copies of the tabulations in the Library. [78876]

Mr. Timms: Yes. Copies of the tabulations will be placed in the Library as soon as possible.

Benefit Payments

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate what the rates would be if they had been uprated in line with the increases in (i) prices and (ii) average earnings since they were introduced of (a) widow's payment, (b) capital limits for income support and family credit, (c) earnings disregard for income support, (d) earnings disregard for housing and council tax, (e) war pension disregard for income-related benefits, (f) income disregarded as income from a boarder, (g) maternity payment from the Social Fund, (h) capital limits for maternity and funeral payments from the Social Fund, (i) Christmas bonus and (j) 25p age additions to retirement pensions. [78793]

Mr. Timms: The information is in the table.

Asbestosis

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if any civilians employed in war-related work have received war pensions for asbestosis since 1969; [79038]

(2) how many civilians employed in war-related work have received war pensions for asbestosis since 1969. [78889]

Mr. Bayley: Questions on operational matters concerning the War Pensions Agency are for its Chief Executive, Mr. Gordon Hextall. I have asked him to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Gordon Hextall to Mr. Ben Chapman, dated 30 March 1999:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the number of civilians employed in war related work who have received War Pensions for Asbestosis.

Unfortunately, the specific information you have requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. In answer to your earlier Parliamentary Question on this subject (Official Report 22 February 1999, Vol 326, Col 175) The Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Social Security explained that as at 31 December 1998 (which is still the latest date for which figures are available), there were 3,183 civilians receiving a War Pension.

The War Pensions Agency does not keep statistics relating to the number of War Pensions in payment for specific medical conditions.

Although I cannot answer your specific questions, I have sought advice about these cases from our more experienced staff. I am told that it would be rare for a War Pension to be paid to a civilian for Asbestosis because a person would have to show that he was exposed to asbestos as a result of a specific incident involving enemy action during World War II. This type of incident would be rather unusual.

I hope this is helpful and if you need any further information, I will be happy to assist.

Task Forces

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will list all those task forces and policy reviews with external members established by his Department since May 1997 which have set up (a) sub-groups, (b) working parties and (c) other subsidiary committees; [79257]

(2) if he will list for all task forces and policy reviews with external members established by his Department since May 1997 (a) their dates of establishment, (b) those which have issued final reports and their dates of publication, (c) those which have been terminated and their dates of termination and (d) for those bodies still in existence, expected reporting and termination dates. [79280]

Mr. Timms: The information is in the table.

All Work Test

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were summoned for an all work test examination by the Birmingham Medical Services Centre in 1998; and what proportion of those were found to be exempt from such examination. [79046]

Mr. Bayley: The number of medical examinations undertaken in connection with claims for Incapacity Benefit in Birmingham in 1998 was 41,968. It is not possible to identify what proportion of the people examined were found to be exempt.

Income Support (Retired People)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action his Department is taking to encourage retired people to take up income support to which they may be entitled; and if he will make a statement. [79547]

Mr. Timms: We are currently considering a strategy on take-up action in the light of the emerging findings from the pensioner pilot projects and research which we undertook last year.

The Benefits Agency is also actively involved in several of the "Better Government for Older People" prototypes which will begin this April, looking at ways in which services for all pensioners, including access to benefits, can be better integrated.

Disabled People

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what his Department is doing to help disabled people get jobs. [79717]

Mr. Bayley: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 8 March 1999, Official Report, column 53.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 26 March 1999, Official Report, column 435, on disabled people, if he will list which of those individual respondents (a) felt that final decisions on whether to make interviews compulsory should await consideration of the results of piloting and (b) expressed concerns about the proposal to take account of occupational and personal pensions against incapacity benefit entitlement. [79780]

Mr. Bayley: All responses to the consultation were read and the results were fed into a qualitative analysis of respondents' views, which provided the basis for my previous answer to my hon. Friend. A record was kept of the policy areas on which each respondent commented but this did not include a record of the detailed points made in each case. To provide a list of individuals and organisations that made the particular points identified would involve re-examining every response and would incur disproportionate cost.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants for Jobseeker's Allowance in each quarter since October 1996 have had their claim rejected on the grounds of non-availability for work due to ill health or incapacity; and how many of those so refused were also deemed ineligible for incapacity benefit. [79716]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is not available.

A decision, following application of the all work test, that a person is capable of work applies across the Social Security system where capacity for work is an issue.

Claimants for Jobseeker's Allowance are required to be capable of, and available for, work. However, jobseekers may restrict their availability in any way if the restrictions are reasonable in the light of their physical or mental condition.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have had their incapacity benefit stopped in the last 12 months. [79701]

Mr. Bayley: When a claim for Incapacity Benefit is made, entitlement for someone with a recent work record depends on the person satisfying the Own Occupation Test for the first 28 weeks of incapacity. In most cases, this is satisfied by the provision of a GP's medical certificate. After 28 weeks of incapacity, or from the start of the claim if the person has no recent work record, the All Work Test applies (though in both cases benefit continues in payment on the basis of a medical certificate pending a decision under the test).

If a person is found capable of work under either the Own Occupation Test or the All Work Test, Incapacity Benefit is disallowed. The person may however be entitled to Jobseeker's Allowance.

During the period 1 March 1998 to 28 February 1999 there were 112,858 disallowances of Incapacity Benefit for the reasons set out.

Reason disallowed	Number
Failure to provide information	10,563
Failure to attend medical examination	8,587
Found capable of work (All Work Test)	91,038
Found capable of work (Own Occupation Test)	2,670

Notes:
1. It is possible that a person may be disallowed more than once during the period.
2. The figures do not take account of claimants who may appeal against the decision, and may have their benefit reinstated.
3. Figures are taken from a 100 per cent. count of the computer system, and exclude a small number of cases not on the system.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will introduce national guidelines to ensure incapacity benefit claimants' eligibility for income support six months after top-up ceases is made known to them by local Benefit Agency offices. [79695]

Mr. Bayley: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Andrew Stunell, dated 31 March 1999:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will introduce national guidelines to ensure Incapacity Benefit claimants' eligibility for Income Support (IS) six months after top-up ceases is made known to them by local Benefits Agency offices.

The current position is that anyone ceasing to be entitled to IS is given a formal decision which clearly indicates the amount by which their income exceeds the IS threshold.

New IB customers also receive leaflets and information on claiming benefit that indicate how their future entitlement could change should they remain incapable of work.

I will review existing procedures and information provided to customers to ensure that they receive appropriate advice.

I hope that this is helpful.

New Deal Interviews

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he intends to defer a decision on whether to make New Deal interviews compulsory until after the results of pilot schemes are known. [79781]

Mr. Timms: From April 2000, we plan to implement new legislation to make it a condition of receiving benefit that people take part in interviews to talk about their prospects of finding work. This requirement will initially affect only the 12 Single Work-Focused Gateway pilot areas and will be introduced in ways that take account of individual circumstances. The evaluation of the pilots will enable us to consider whether to extend this approach more widely.

Adapt 98 Scheme

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the operation of the Adapt 98 Scheme in the Yorkshire area; what is the reason for the delay in the introduction of CAPS; and by how much the private sector estimate of cost has exceeded the set target. [79179]

Mr. Timms: The ADAPT Partnership period ended on 12 November 1998. We are currently considering the way forward for this project.

The Customer Accounting Payment Strategy (CAPS) project is a Benefits Agency initiative that is developing the systems that will change the way the Agency records customer's details and accounts for benefit expenditure. It also supports payment of benefit by way of the payment card that is being introduced as part of a PFI project to automate Post Offices and benefit payments. The CAPS project has met all its contractual obligations and is proceeding to plan.

Information about the cost to the private sector of the payment card and Post Office Automation Project is confidential to the PFI supplier, ICL Pathway.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received on the eight day maximum application period for extended payments under the Housing Benefit Regulations; and if he will make a statement. [79692]

Mr. Timms: We have received a number of letters from members of the public about the eight day application period. We are currently considering ways of easing the transition into work. We know that worries about housing costs are crucial to people when thinking about moving into work. The Extended Payments scheme, which eases the transition from benefit dependency to working, is one of a number of areas which we are looking at with the aim of improving incentives provided by the Housing Benefit Scheme.

Staff Travel

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the mileage rates applicable from January 1999 to staff, indicating changes which have been made to encourage staff to switch from cars to public transport and other less polluting forms of travel. [79522]

Mr. Timms: For some years the Department has operated a single mileage rate based on the average of the bands set by the Inland Revenue Authorised Mileage Rates. This acts as a disincentive for the use of larger engine capacity cars (over 1500 cc).

The rates are payable irrespective of the type of fuel used thus benefiting staff driving alternative fuelled vehicles.

We are currently revising the pedal cycle rate to encourage the use of bicycles.

The tables give details of the current rates.

Lobbyists

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a list, including names and dates, of all meetings that (a) he, (b) his officials, (c) his advisers and (d) his PPS have held during (i) 1997, (ii) 1998 and (iii) 1999 with people who work for political lobbying firms or for businesses that are members of the Public Relations Consultants Association. [79641]

Mr. Darling: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 9 March 1999, Official Report, column 168. The requirements of the Ministerial Code also apply to Parliamentary Private Secretaries when attending any meetings in an official or semi-official capacity.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 328

SESSION 1998–99

22nd March—31st March 1999

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index to the daily parts and weekly Hansard is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Indexing Service (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes, and cannot, therefore, be used in conjunction with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There will, however, be headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one will find not only Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc., under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Contributions by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker and deputies'. Significant rulings and statements are indicated by the sub-heading 'Rulings and statements'.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, res = resolution, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
